At the same time, the East Germans refuted the antiabortionist theory that abortion would severely mar a healthy population growth. There may be a considerable number of abortions in the world, but this may be because there are more pregnancies. If availability of contraceptives including abortion were halted, the fear of pregnancy could force women to abstain from sex. Consequently, fewer women would become pregnant, and even fewer would give birth. Without contraception and abortion, the birth rate could actually be lower. Since East Germany's laws were liberalized (abortion becoming more accessible) the birth rate increased fifteen percent in the first eighteen months. East Germany is an example of how we can easily accommodate abortion in our way of life, allowing other laws to be responsible for inhibiting or prompting population expansion as needed. This would insure the personal freedom of women.

The hypothesis that abortion regulation is a communist scheme is invalidated considering the status of non-conformist European laws. Although the aforementioned countries have recently restricted abortion, countries which have just relaxed their laws are still no more liberal than communist countries. Further, Marxian theory does not allow for abortion. A state adhering to communism supposedly should not have to rely on abortion and birth control for population control.

In Great Britain, abortion laws were reformed in 1967 to give women the right to procure abortions when her physical or mental health is jeopardized by pregnancy, or there are indications of fetal defects. Switzerland allows abortion in these instances and if the mother is young or pregnancy has resulted from rape.

The German Abortion Reform Bill of April, 1974 legalized abortion up to the twelth week. After this three month limit, abortions are attainable with proof of fetal defect or endangerment to the mother's life.

The Scandinavian countries, despite their traditional association with sexual permissiveness, are as strict about providing for the consequences as other European countries. Abortion in Holland has been illegal in all circumstances since 1866. No attempt has been made by feminists to change this because the law is not enforced. Norway's statute permits discontinuation of pregnancy up to twelve weeks, if the mother's health is imperiled. The same is law in Iceland with the exception that Icelandic women can only abort until the eighth week.

Finland and Denmark have similar rulings. In both countries, abortion must be performed before the fourth month. Additionally, the 1950 Finnish jurisdiction grants abortions to women under sixteen while Denmark grants to mothers proved to be unfit.

Only a month ago, on Jan. 1, 1975, the May 1974 Abortion Reform Law in Sweden went into effect. It entailed giving women the right to abort through the eighteenth week. A Swedish woman petitioning for abortion can only be refused if abortion proceedings would endanger her life. Concerned about the women's psychological reactions to abortion of a pregnancy in later term, women must meet with a social worker for counseling to abort after the twelfth week. Further, consultation with the National Board of Health is mandatory after the eighteenth week.

France, the revolutionary country it is, is far behind in updating their laws. Feminists have been outraged that their efforts to legalize abortion have been fruitless. Finally, in 1967, France permitted contraceptives by prescription, and not to minors. Minors over eighteen, though, can obtain the diaphragm with parental permission.

India, a country plagued by overpopulation, has restrictive, yet not inflexible, laws. In 1969, Indian law would imprison the inducer of involuntary miscarriage up to three years, and the woman up to seven years. Faced with a large number of women subjecting themselves to crude abortions by 'quack practitioners,' officials designed the April 1972 Medical Termination Pregnancy Bill allowing abortion for medical reasons, but not on demand. It has been ineffective in its purpose.

Pregnant Israeli women are able to obtain abortions with committee approval provided they are over forty-five, their health is suffering, they were raped, or are under the state's legal marrying age of eighteen. Inducing miscarriage under other conditions is punishable by a five-year prison sentence. This is rarely enforced probably because the status of women in Israel is relative equal to that of men.

Severely contrasting Israel are the Arabian countries. The Egyptians, Lebanese, Syrians, Jordanians, and Iraquian people are oppressed by a rigid patriarch where the women are the property of the men. Until recently, it was immoral for women to unveil in public. The status of males is upheld in all circumstances. 'He' has the sole jurisdiction. 'She' has no legal recourse to his tyrannical activities. The Arab men are the epitome of the "Male Chauvinists", and are responsible for the suppresion of females they have rendered helpless for centuries. Consequently, Arab law, formed by Arab men, has been designed to insure the sovereignty of the family patriarch.

Abortion, therefore, is illegal except if necessary to preserve the dignity of the patriarch. If he decides she will have an abortion, she is bound. Were she to procure the same abortion without his permission and thereby cause him humility, she would be liable for legal punishment. Additionally, men legally may kill women in their family for committing disreputable sexual acts. Contraception is illegal excepting Iraq. Of the countries influenced by the Arabian ethic, only Turkey allows abortion, when to continue pregnancy would jeopardize the health of the mother, or when there is evidence of birth defects.

Japanese abortion law is not influenced by their patriarchalism, rather the liberalization of Japanese statute is a direct result of economics. The mountainous terrain of Japan, unsuitable for producing a large agricultural output, cannot support a growing population. Thus, in 1949, Japan legalized abortion for loosely defined 'economic reasons.' The Pill and the IUD are also legal.

China has an unusual stand on the issue of population control and abortion. As in Arab countries, the patriarch is the essence of the family. Confuscianism, the major religion of China, disapproves of abortion because it considers sacred the preservation of descendants. These two social factors have helped limit abortion in China. A woman may abort if she's already had one child. More preferable and acceptable than abortion is female infanticide. This insures that only women will be disposed of, where abortion doesn't pre-tell sex. Legal contraceptives include the Pill, the IUD, and a form of birth control not practiced in the US that involves three monthly hormonal injections.

Obviously, it is very hard to pin down the exact laws on abortion around the world. Not only are laws changing quickly because the topic is extremely controversial, but the laws are complicated by varying stipulations. Examining laws of different nations, it is easy to see how they reflect traditional modes of society, as well as modernization. Abortion is an issue that every civilization is forced to concern itself with. There have been many legal reforms which have helped to liberate the people of the world. Hopefully we are heading toward anti-abortion law repeal, and the guarantee that all women, rich and poor, will be entitled to their freedom.

Bratt's Club: Midnight At The Oasis

by Jay Jenkins

Most of you enjoyed last year's Cynic bar reviews. It's time now to clear the air about Burlington's restaurants. This can mean places to eat, places to dine, or just places to have an experience.

These are not the cryptic notes of a bar reviewer: one who necessarily finds an acid stomach and a headache as part and parcel of his trade. There is no late night trampling by those who are to be lucidly lampooned the next day. These are the confessions of Zeno, the world-weary diner whose aesthetic preoccupations preclude the decadent squalor of a Saturday night in the mainline quaffing district of town. This column is not to be a bottoms-up birds-eye-view of those establishments in question; it is not a front to debunk the short-range social migratory patterns of UVM students. My intent is to stick with objectives as much as possible and not to lavishly digress into a frontal attack on the poor naive clientelle. I refuse the temptation to lacerate their unsuspecting souls with my quivering quill.

Satire and humor are like two legs. Where they meet is the domain of much general entertainment. For gastronomical subject matter, I hope to elevate my sights somewhat. The subsequent reviews may border on obscurity and may be a product of mere whim or fancy, but they will be directed to you in the hopes that they may give you ideas on how to add an enjoyable hour or two to your day.

MIDNIGHT AT THE OASIS

The Oasis is a diner. You know where it is. That's right, just off Saturday afternoon rain-slogging Church St. You'll pay twice as much for a grilled special, coffee and pie as you used to, but it's still tops: it's a total experience. A midnoon's hour in the Oasis is a matinee where you are audience and actor at the same time and it's always the same. Fergy flips his burgers and westerns just like he did the first time you went.

What is it about the Oasis that is special? Nothing. It's democratic, public, impersonal. But it's personal if you let it be. It's a pot-boiling mood factory, a mongrel compost of American archetypes. What they shall assume, you shall assume.

As a damp windy gust pries you into the rarefied air of the Oasis you are initiated by eyes bent your way from hunched counterspaces. Testing glances, indifferent, curious. Even the manager peers down the counter over a coffee conversation with the milkman. White socks. Grey hair. Too many years in the business. Nancy, another cup for John here. Business goes on until you find your stool spot and you join the initiating eyes. Business goes on. A black and white clock over polished chrome and timeless formica peers down at you and saps your lunch hour silently, invisibly.

Settled and with your first cup, you pour in a whole milk bottle creamer because your heart is beating a little faster and you realize how hungry you are. First sip and it tastes as good as a hot dog at a ball game. Relax, a little. Leave your wet feet outside in the crepuscular gloom and give into heaving senses. Eyes shift left and right, glancing off mirrors and booth-private jukebox selectors. Faces composite in texture as you breathe deep in the perfume of humanity. Deep fat, grease-popping fries and an omelet grilling next to wax paper burgers. Fergy, what a man. He looks like a constipated Alan Arkin, but look at him move. Egg salad, Mayo, pickles and lettuce within reach. Fast. A clean grill and a sharp knife. Efficient. A stack of waiting sandwich plates. Nancy, a local girl, married, who has lost her figure and pays her dues by shuffling blue-plate specials and living in a Diane Arbus world. She'll be there 'til spring or until she's walked off an inch of rubber on the pounded floor. There's strength underneath that white uniform. You see her bra strap and dip and wonder what she thinks. It shames the silliness out of you. But not the appetite.

Senses mingle as you realize the intoxicating ingredients of the swirling swelling ambiance of the Oasis. Senses rise with the steam of pungent sauces to excite the membrane like yellow smoke that slides along the street, rubbing its back on the window panes. You enjoy womb-like warmth as the inexorable heartbeat of the place throbs on. Seats grow empty and full again. All speak the language of communal silence, even close-cropped dish-washing Red who sticks his head out from the back room to see how business is doing. Fergy says it's doing and a fresh jar of mayo please, Red. Any fries on that blue plate? Nancy, over her shoulder, yep, and one tuna toasted and one egg, Fergy. Key.

That counter top pattern. Someone took a line for a walk. Coffee cups and saucers look like all those you've ever seen on the road. Even the grounds in the empty bottom. You realize you've gobbled at your sandwich and pie. As you wipe your mouth with a dispenser napkin you try to remember it. What the hell, eat that soggy pickle, you're still hungry.

The register rings on until it's your time and you're on the street again. Maybe dyspeptic but not gloomy, because you've been served a slice of life, garnished with all the trappings that you can summon. Diners, like air terminals and bus stations, are temples for the transient. One must occasionally give in to the suck and flow of the street. If you're in the mood for wearing the fleur de place in your buttonhole, try the Oasis. While you're there, try their pumpkin pie. Dynamite.

All Things Considered: A Walk On The Inside

by Larry Selden

I was trembling as I walked the ice crusted New England night. The games of love were twisting my mind. The cold air, delivered in chilling sheaves, was spinning my visions that I used to steady myself. I've been through the how-do-you-do, can-I-put-the-make-on-you scene enough to be able to play the angles very professionally but tonight with a lady laying in the arms of sleep back in my bed, I walked towards the graveyard on the hill.

I tried to put order to my thoughts. I mean it should be like brushing your teeth, right. I've done it many nights before. We met in the dark, semi-moist bar downtown; a familiar story of romantic escapades paraded in the suds. I moved the question, as always, timely, delayed for the confronting last round (my treat). Being not a fool and not purely innocent, I realized the motives and interests of lingering souls scopping their way through the smoky haze of the bar. She said she was wondering why I hesitated for so long. "I must be sensitive to rejection," I offered for lack of blatant immediate intimacy.

We finished our drinks and scurried through the cold for my car. How convenient, her friends had left her long ago. "A school night is a school night," she added philosophically as I cursed the freezing vinyl of the seats. "Yeah, life goes on seven days a week," I ventured compounding the simplicity of her statement. To cover for the silence I asked what she was thinking. "I was just wondering what you were thinking," she said. At least we were meeting at a common point.

Not being in control of myself, true expedient control, I wore no wristwatch. "I wonder how late it is?" As empty a question as I've ever asked. "Why, you have a date this morning," she mused. "No, no, just being silly," I offered to cover for the slip of humanness. "Well here we are." I decided to forego the usual apology for the disrepair and untidiness of my domain; we were not here to nitpick my laziness or neurotic disrespect of cleanliness. We lingered in the living room to catch a few notes of the blues. My bedroom being upstairs, the obvious was getting more painful as the inevitable beckoned. "It's funny how we spend our whole night searching for company for our sleeping moments and then we leave so unaware of another's presence." "I know what you mean," she said and yawned. "I'm tired and I'd hate to start out cheating you of what you came for," I said it but I knew it was twice as evasive as it sounded. She knew it too, but now it was out of her realm and reach to do anything but agree.

We lay down together, snuggled close for warmth and promised each other it would be much better in the morning. The liquour finished her off before I could make my first calculated turn. She had gone away, I stopped nudging her and turned again and again until I decided I was too close to my fears to confront them on their home turf. I threw on some sweat clothes and sneakers in case I'd have to answer for my departure. She didn't stir as I snatched my coat from the other side of the bed. My head was hurting from games I'd forced myself to play in the name of honesty. Maybe I didn't know the meaning of the word, maybe nobody did and I was fooling myself. As the cold of the street embraced me, I wondered how many others before me made this walk to shake the guilt?

JUICY TIDBITS:

Future rumors in the Burlington area: Phoebe Snow, Jackson Browne, Eagles, Robin Trower and Mahogony Rush. The last two are president and vice-president of the Jimi-just-told-me-to-carry-on club. The one to watch out for is the godmother of soul, Ms. P. Snow... Everyone was Kung Fu dancing: If you want to be a big wheel on your next trip downtown try to dance like Caine or Bruce Lee. It's what happening at all the discos in New York. Look for the rest of us to be Kung Fu dancing in 2½ years at the Silver Keg or maybe in 3 weeks at Arthurs (ads claim it as Burlington's only true disco)... If you are interested in the elevated consciousness of a cop, Frank Serpico (the real one) has a six page letter to the rest of us in the February 3 issue of the Village Voice... The next time those two nerds they call security guards are at a concert and causing trouble let's pelt them with moldy marshmallows (sanctified violence)... I've been trying to ascertain how the Led Zeppelin concert in Montreal was. But all my friends mumble fragments about "Jimmy Page being the real Lord" or "Robert Plant, what a chest," what would Frank Zappa say?... Hey Ken Markowitz, the last time I looked, Jack "Tomatoes" Labobe was a gym teacher and basketball coach at John F. Kennedy H.S. in Bellmore, N.Y....

My telephone was ringin' and a voice came through the line and said it was time.

Happy Valentine's Day!

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Marshall Tucker And Bonnie Bramlett Bring Southern Rock To UVM

Bonnie Bramlett has enjoyed great success and stardom mainly because of past performance and association with some of the biggest names in rock talent (a list which is headlined by Eric Clapton and the late Duane Allman). Now, separated from husband Delaney, she must embark on a solo journey back to popularity.

On Sunday, February 23, she will perform as the back-up act for the Marshall Tucker Band.

Reprinted below are excerpts from an article by Fred Burger entitled "Sweet Bonnie's Rebirth" which first appeared in the January 16, 1975 issue of Rolling Stone. Prepare yourself for her performance by reading this description of some of the more personal aspects of her career.

Student tickets went on sale Tuesday, February 11 for the price of $4.50 at the UVM Bookstore and non-student tickets go on sale February 13 at Bailey's for the price of $5.50. Student tickets are ONLY available at the Bookstore; all tickets sold at Bailey's cost $5.50.

Macon, Georgia — "Bonnie Bramlett had been in town most of the week, and as Macon tucked off to bed, she was going to work in a Capricorn Sound Studios rehearsal room throbbing with musical talent which she hopes will start her on the road to a recording comeback."

"Even now it's difficult to place Bonnie Bramlett properly in the genre of rock music. For about five years she and her now estranged husband, Delaney Bramlett, toured the world with some of the recording industry's most renowned musicians and broke into the popular music scene as the Sixties slipped into the Seventies with such Top 40 hits as 'Soul Shake,' 'Only You Know and I Know' and 'Never Ending Song of Love.'"

"But look for mention of Delaney and Bonnie in virtually any source on rock music and there is little except for their association with other musicians: Eric Clapton, Duane Allman, King Curtis, Bobby Whitlock, Bobby Keys, Leon Russell. Delaney and Bonnie never quite made it as big as many expected, though no one downgrades either their importance or their contribution to rock.

"The Bramlett marriage broke up almost three years ago, though the couple, Bonnie says, has no plans to divorce. 'Ask Bonnie about Delaney,' one Capricorn executive says, 'and she'll tell you she still loves him.' Bonnie talks about the split reluctantly. Was the breakup because of personalities or professional rivalries?"

"That's getting too close," the 30-year-old singer said as she relaxed during a rehearsal break. 'We can't talk about that because there was more than one thing. I don't know if anyone could say. Nope, I don't think we'll ever get back together. Delaney and Bonnie was very good, but that's history. Regardless of whatever happened, though, Delaney's still the best daddy walking. He's my husband. We're still married (Leon Russell lent them $250 to get married), but we're separated. Nope, we won't get back together again."

"Before the split with her husband, some critics compared Bonnie with Janis Joplin, and there is a relative similarity in their voices and in their fondness for drink. 'She does like to drink,' says one Capricorn employee of Bonnie.

"But she's been real good. Each night at the studio, they've had a case of beer and a fifth of Scotch.' But Bonnie hasn't burnt herself out, much less destroyed her body on liquor and drugs. She still showcases that same gutty, rasping voice which has marked her concerts and albums.

About a year ago, Bonnie was released from her Columbia contract. Signing with Capricorn was a logical step. She had known executive vice-president Frank Fenter in England (he was European representative for Atlantic Records, which recorded Delaney and Bonnie). And she and Delaney had been close to Duane and Gregg Allman from the early Allman Joys days (Delaney sang at Duane Allman's funeral in 1971).

They became close and fast friends with Eric Clapton, who toured with them, King Curtis and Duane Allman. 'Duane was always playing with us,' Bonnie remembers. Both in sessions and in concerts. He'd be playing with us in New York, and the Allman Brothers Band would be playing the next night in Los Angeles. They never could find him.'

'Now, however, all that's in the past. Aging glories fade quickly, and Bonnie realizes it. 'I always knew I was going to be an entertainer,' she said confidently. 'I just always knew I'd be a singer and that I'd be good at it. Of course, I've sung at Carnegie Hall three times, Madison Square Garden. What more do you want? I've achieved more than I ever thought I would.'

'Right not,' she laughed, 'number one on my agenda is getting my shit together.'"

Like Bonnie Bramlett, the Marshall Tucker Band has been deeply influenced by the Allman Brothers through an intimate musical relationship.

The Marshall Tucker Band will appear with Bonnie Bramlett Sunday, February 23 in Patrick Gym.

To acquaint you with the band's historical background and style, excerpts have been reprinted below from an article by Cameron Crowe entitled "The South Also Rises" which first appeared in the March 14,1974 issue of Rolling Stone.

Remember that student tickets costing $4.50 apiece can only be purchased at the UVM bookstore; Bailey's is serving solely as an outlet for non-student tickets.

The band consists of Tommy Caldwell, bass guitar and vocals; Toy Caldwell, lead, steel guitars, and vocals; George McCorkle, rhythm guitar; Dong Gray, lead vocals and percussion; Paul Riddle, drums and percussion; and Jerry Eubanks, alto sax, flute and vocals.

Atlanta, Ga.—"It's Friday night and Richard's, the lively hot spot of Atlanta's rock-club scene, is jumping. On-stage, a local favorite is grinding out raucous blues standards. The dance floor is an euphoric mass of squirming young bodies.

"Welcome to the great lost teenage innocence. David Bowie may set the coasts afire with his 36 costume changes and the New York Dolls can mincingly sing of decadent trauma, but for this typically well-scrubbed Southern crowd, 'drag' is when you've waited too long to buy your Allman Brothers tickets.

"That glitter shit," drawls one sweat-drenched regular, "is for the people that don't care about the music, dont-cha think? Here in the South we got our own bands who don't need any of those ...gimmicks.

Like Lynyrd Skynyrd or the Marshall Tucker Band or, acourse, the Brothers. Man, they just get out there and fuckin' play!"

"Until just lately," said guitarist Toy Caldwell, focal point of the Marshall Tucker Band, "if you were a Southern band, the best you could hope for was work at a local bar playing the Top Forty. Before the Allman Brothers, hell, there wasn't anybody making it from these parts. Then came Wet Willie and Cowboy... and now even groups like Hydra and Lynyrd Skynyrd are finally getting their break. People are really starting to listen."

"We sold this band through our own constant touring. We went out there night—after—night and played our asses off."

"To coincide with the release of The Marshall Tucker Band, the group was temporarily assigned to an opening act position on Allman Brothers tours. 'It would be a flat-out lie to say those tours weren't incredibly important to us,' said Toy. 'It's the greatest exposure you could possibly have. The Allmans like to play with us; it's good for both of us because our music is somewhat linked. The audience is really gonna like what we do if they like the Allman Brothers.'

Gregg Allman is calling them 'a ferocious band, so good they're scary' and the record company is ecstatic over their 'new headliners.' Meanwhile Toy finds the whole thing... well, very nice.

"Everyone tells me that this rock and roll business is 'gonna fuck you over' and that it's a nasty way to earn a living. I don't know, everywhere we go we're treated like good old people. Everybody's been so kind to us, we feel at home just about anywhere we play. I can see how this business could make you crazy if you let it, but then I guess that's one of the advantages to living in Spartanburg.'"

Cassel Band Shines; Earl Outdone By Sons

by Bob DeNike

Patrick Gym was half filled Sunday night with kids whose expectant ears were waiting for a taste of the John Cassel Band and the Earl Scruggs Revue. At the end of 2½ hours, their musical appetite had been well quenched by an assorted menu of country, rock, pop and bluegrass.

The set-up of sound equipment was basic, consisting of three visible amps, 2½ speaker cabinets, 4 large PA speakers and six colored lights at the flanks of the stage. Yet the John Cassel Band, opening the concert, used the simplicity of the set-up as a tool for conveying music that in its intricacy reached out and firmly grasped audience attention.

From their first jazz/rock number, the band displayed a talent and togetherness that immediately qualified them as a band well worth sitting and watching. In a hot, smoky concert hall rather than in the hot, smoky bars where they are most frequently found performing.

The lead guitarist was given a chance to show his ability from the very outset by which he proved a master of the jazz guitar style.

He loosely rolled and swayed his head as he played, smiling a broad, wide open-mouthed smile. His eyes squinted from what must have been an extremely pleasurable sensation and the fluid, uninhibited enjoyment of his own musical expression easily rubbed off on the crowd.

The saxophone player was featured next and far surpassed all of his colleagues in musical ability. Whereas the band could survive adequately if other guitarists, trumpeters, drummers or keyboardists were substituted in place of those on stage, loss of the saxophonist would be irreparable and insufferable. In his solos, he made the horn squeak and squeal, even gobble in a way reminiscent of a real jazz master, like Coltrane.

John Cassel's face looks no older than thirty, yet is framed by strands of greyish-white hair giving him an overall ageless appearance.

His talent lies not in his piano technique (which much resembles the style of Jerry Lee Lewis), but in his song writing, composing and arranging ability, and vocal tone. Though more limited in range, Cassel's voice is as mellowed and clear as that of the Dead's Bob Weir. And his repertoire of songs ranges from hits made popular by the Duke and the Andrews Sisters back in the thirties to 1974's "It Ain't the Meat" by Maria Muldaur. The inclusion of Marvin Gaye's "What's Goin' On?", Willie Dixon's "Hallelujah, I Love Her So" and Fred Neil's "The Dolphin" (characterized by a style as spacy and hallucinatory as any Pink Floyd cut) gives you an idea of the degree to which Cassel's musical taste varies.

This band would give even Montreal Zeppelin freaks a hard act to top. The visual aspect of their performance was a spectacle in itself. Three female vocalists paraded on stage at one point to replicate the Andrews Sisters' "Boogie Woogie Bugle Boy" and completed a line of nine shaking, jumping musicians who stretched the length of the stage.

In addition to the piano, lead and bass guitars, trumpet, sax and drums which served as standard instruments, a clarinet, bass saxophone (nearly the size of a tuba) and trumpet cup mutes were featured by the band at intermittent times. Have you ever seen or heard anyone play The Rope before? Well, anyone at the concert did (though few understood how it produced the amplified Jew's harp sound), thanks to John Cassel and company.

Though Earl Scruggs remains the father of the banjo and the country picking style, he is now also the father of three musical sons, one of whose talent leaves Earl often in the shadows to serve only as a back-up artist.

Combined with the remembrance of Cassel's successful opening act fresh in the audience's ears, Earl's task of regaining his top billed status and shining through as a revelation in bluegrass banjo was made all but impossible.

Nevertheless, as Earl and sons walked on stage, they were greeted with thunderous applause and a standing ovation.

Earl took a stance appropriately in the stage's center but didn't last long as a focal point for undivided audience attention with lead guitarist Randy Scruggs vehemently picking his acoustic guitar nearby. Randy's highly developed country picking technique obliterated that of Earl and banjo as the guitarist displayed a precision and rapidity of tempo in the style of lightning-fingered rocker Alvin Lee or the chicken pickin' of Marshall Tucker's Toy Caldwell.

Gary Scruggs passed as bassist and lead vocalist, yet possessed none of his brother's virtuosity and lacked the vocal richness, range and tone flavor of John Cassel.

Even when Steve Scruggs, acoustic guitarist, took a hand to Earl's banjo, one could not distinguish from what was heard between father's and son's knowledge of the instrument.

The band's most redeeming feature lay in its ability to infinitely vary the standard G-C-D blues format by playing the archaic blues riff structure in every musical style they were capable of — rock and roll, country, bluegrass, pop, rock, and of course, unadulterated blues.

High points were reached with the performance of the "Beverly Hillbillies" theme (though the song quickly grew boring without the lyrics), "Foggy Mountain Breakdown" (from the movie "Bonnie and Clyde") and Liz Cotton's "Freight Train" (played as a duet on a single guitar. How?

Try this gimmick next time your act needs spicing... one person picks while another fingers the chords).

Though Earl failed to stand out as the banjo king everyone knows he is, he was satisfying and well complimented the evening of pure fun and good times.

Smet And Kampmann

Comedy Passes Over Sleepy Heads

by Jay E. Williams

The satire team of Kampmann and Smet performed alive and impromptu at the Billings Center Friday night. However, "performed" is an understatement in that they continuously appealed to an often unresponsive audience for participation.

Even their classic "Chick Therapy" sketch was just a shadow of what could have been if the audience had let their adrenelin flow. In "Therapy", Steve Kampmann as the psychiatrist and Jon Smet his inferiority complexed client bribed with M&M's to seek a date with any lady in our audience.

The result could have been chaotic if it weren't for the boring woman they selected. I believe they sensed this, for when the spontaneity lapsed they returned to the stage and the script to carry the act through.

Kampmann is definitely the dominant force within the team. His solo in "An Actor Prepares" aptly proves this. He combined straight Shakespeare, pantomime, and contemporary humor to portray a struggling actor rehearsing "Hamlet" in his bathroom mirror. Kampmann is well disciplined in theater arts.

Smet fills any gap with boyish whim and an ability to improvise seldom seen in the theater today. He is also a potential scene stealer, as was evidenced in "Georgie Rae and His Puppet Friend Sidley". He captured the hearts of those willing to reminisce. Before the show, they traditionally paced the floor and nervously straightened their props. Kampmann was eating a cupcake when Smet smothered: "Don't eat that. It has chemicals in it." That's satire and that's Steve Kampmann and Jon Smet.

Vermont Cynic
MOVIE GUIDE

Century I & II
DORSET STREET
I Young Frankenstein
II Towering Inferno

MERRILL'S SHOWCASE I & II
SO. BURLINGTON
I Freebie & The Bean
II The Front Page

STATE THEATRE
BANK STREET
ALL SEATS $1 Thursday
Roma & Shame
Starts Fri Walt Disney's
The Strongest Man in the World

FLYNN THEATRE
MAIN STREET
The Rolling Stones

ESSEX TWIN CINEMA
ESSEX JCT.
I Death Wish — Serpico
II Odessa File

CINEMA I & II
BURLINGTON PLAZA
SHELBURNE ROAD
I Murder on the Orient Express
II Ilsa

call theatres for times
Not Good for bargain nights
or special showings

CAINE MUTINY
FREE
Monday Night
Feb. 17
Cook B106
7:30 PM
Sponsored by the UVM Sailing Club

THE CANTINA
15 Center St., Burlington
Serving The Finest Chili
Also The Best Taco
In The North Country
Open Mon.-Wed. 10 'til 9, Thurs.-Sat. 10 'til 10

THE MOST DREADED NAZI OF THEM ALL!
She committed crimes so terrible ... even the SS feared her!
ILSA
Shows Evenings 7:10 & 9 PM
X RATED FOR VIOLENCE! ABSOLUTELY NO ONE UNDER 18 WILL BE ADMITTED AT ANYTIME
BURLINGTON PLAZA CINEMA 1 & 2
PHONE 862-6070 ANYTIME!

THE LAST CHANCE SALOON
ICE COLD DRAFT & DRINKS
DELICIOUS CHILI & HAMBURGERS
20¢ NIGHT MONDAY—THURSDAY
OLD TIME MOVIES SUNDAY NIGHTS
147 MAIN ST.
BURLINGTON

SA FILMS PRESENTS
THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 13
TOP HAT (1935) — Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers
101 Votey — 7:30 — Free
FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 14
COCONUTS (1929) — The Marx Brothers
A CHUMP AT OXFORD (1939) — Laurel and Hardy
101 Votey — 7:30 and 10:30 — $1
SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 15
THE PHILADELPHIA STORY (1940) — Kathryn Hepburn, Cary Grant
101 Votey — 7:30 and 9:30 — Free
MONDAY, FEBRUARY 17
THE CONFESSION (1970) — Yves Montand
101 Votey — 7:30 & 10:00 — Free

String Quar

The Quartetto Italiano, "the finest string quartet that our century has known," in the words of critic-composer Virgil Thomson, performs in the Lane Series on Tues., Feb. 18, at 8 p.m. in Ira Allen Chapel.

This will be the second appearance of the celebrated ensemble in the Lane Series; the first was in 1967.

The program of the Quartetto Italiano includes Boccherini, Quartet in E flat major; Beethoven, Quartet in F major, op. 135; and Brahms, Quartet in C minor, op. 51, no. 1.

The four musicians, who have played together, uninterruptedly for more than a quarter century, are Paolo Borciani, violin; Elisa Pergreffe, violin; Piero Farulli, viola; and Franco Rossi, cello.

The tour marks the tenth visit to this side of the Atlantic by the Quartet. Since its formation right after the close of the Second World War, the Quartetto Italiano has been regarded in every musical capital of the world as one of the handful of great chamber music ensembles of all time.

The Quartet's 1975 American tour begins and ends in New York; on arrival they play at the Frick Collection and at the end of the tour at the Morgan Library. In mid-tour they appear twice in Tully Hall for the Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Center.

In the nation's capital, they will be heard at the Library of Congress. They perform in Boston, at Yale University, in the Lane Series at the University of Vermont, in Baltimore and Bethesda, Maryland, in Miami and in Gainsville, Florida. After a concert in Toronto, the Quartet appears in a number of midwestern cities.

The Quartetto Italiano made its first American tour in 1951, only a scant few years

W.C. In Dickens

The film version of Charles Dicken's well-known film classic novel "David Copperfield" will be presented on Friday, February 14, in Marsh Life Sciences Building Auditorium under the auspices of the Lane Film Society Series W.C. Fields Festival.

There will be two showings of the film: at 7:30 p.m. and [illegible] p.m.

In addition to W. C. Fields as Mr. Micawber, the star-studded cast includes Lionel Barrymore as Dan Peggotty, Maureen Sullivan as Dora, Edna May Oliver as Aunt Betsey, Lewis Stone as Mr. Wickfield, Basil Rathbone as Mr. Murdstone and Freddie Bartholomew as the young David Copperfield.

When the movie first appeared in 1935 it was hailed by the New York Times Critic as being "in the great narrative tradition of the cinema" and as "a genuine masterpiece."

W.C. Field's portrait of Micawber, wrote the Times critic, is the "one performance that is able to remain predominant among such splendors of character acting as Lennox Powie's Mr. Dick, Edna May Oliver's Aunt Betsey, Roland Young's Urish Heep, Lionel Barrymore's Dan Peggorry and both Master Bartholomew as David the boy and Frank Lawton as David the man."

It is W.C. Fields as Micawber— the magnificent

ALL NEW MENU
NEW ATMOSPHERE • NEW SALAD BAR
THE BEST STEAKS
GREAT SEAFOOD TOO!
SIZZLING STEAK

ck To UVM

...audience ... what we do ...r Allman ... ...n is calling ...s, band, so ...y' and the ...ecstatic over ...e oldiners.' ...de the whole ...ilent. ...ld me that ...r business is ... 'gonna fuck you over' and that it's a nasty way to earn a living. I don't know, everywhere we go we're treated like good old people. Everybody's been so kind to us, we feel at home just about anywhere we play. I can see how this business could make you crazy if you let it, but then I guess that's one of the advantages to living in Spartanburg'."

utdone By Sons

...a tuba) and ...nutes were ...he band at ...s. Have you ... anyone play ... Well, anyone ... (though few ... it produced ...Jew's harp ... John Cassel

...rl Scruggs ...r of the banjo ...the father of ...ons, one of ...es Earl often ...n serve only as ... with the ... of Cassel's ...g act fresh in ...rn, Earl's task ...s top billed ...g through as a ...luegrass banjo ...impossible. ...as Earl and ... stage, they ...th thunderous ... a standing ... a stance ... the stage's ...last long as a ...or undivided ...on with lead ...dy Scruggs ... picking his ...arby Randy's ...pad country ...be obliterated ...d banjo as the ...ed a precision ...tempo-in the ...ming-fingered ... Lee or the ... of Marshall ...aldwell.

Gary Scruggs passed as bassist and lead vocalist, yet possessed none of his brother's virtuosity and lacked the vocal richness, range and tone flavor of John Cassel.

Even when Steve Scruggs, acoustic guitarist, took a hand to Earl's banjo, one could not distinguish from what was heard between father's and son's knowledge of the instrument.

The band's most redeeming feature lay in its ability to infinitely vary the standard C-C-D blues format by playing the archaic blues riff structure in every musical style they were capable of — rock and roll, country, bluegrass, pop, rock, and of course, unadulterated blues.

High points were reached with the performance of the "Beverly Hillbillies" theme (though the song quickly grew boring without the lyrics), "Foggy Mountain Breakdown" (from the movie "Bonnie and Clyde") and Liz Cotton's "Freight Train" (played as a duet on a single guitar. How?

Try this gimmick next time your set needs spicing... one person picks while another fingers the chords).

Though Earl failed to stand out as the banjo thing everyone knows he is, he was satisfying and well complimented the evening of pure fun and good times.

et And Kampmann

Passes Over Sleepy Heads

...Williams ...re team of ... and Smet ... alive and ...at the Bullings ...night. However, ...d" is an ... in that they ...ppealed to an ...nsive audience ...n. ...classic "Chick ...ich was just a ...hat could have ...udience had let ...lim flow. In ...ew Kampmann ...atrist and Jon ...ority complexed ...with M&M's to ...ith any lady in ... could have been ...weren't for the ... they selected. I ...ensed this, for ...ntaneity lapsed ... to the stage and ... carry the act ...

Kampmann is definitely the dominant force within the team. His solo in "An Actor Prepares" aptly proves this. He combined straight Shakespeare, pantomime, and contemporary humor to portray a struggling actor rehearsing "Hamlet" in his bathroom mirror. Kampmann is well disciplined in theater arts.

Smet fills any gap with boyish whim and an ability to improvise seldom seen in the theater today. He is also a potential scene stealer, as was evidenced in "Georgie Rae and His Puppet Friend Sidley". He captured the hearts of those willing to reminisce. Before the show, they traditionally paced the floor and nervously straightened their props. Kampmann was eating a cupcake when Smet mothered "Don't eat that. It has chemicals in it." That's satire and that's Steve Kampmann and Jon Smet.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 13
TOP HAT (1935) — Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers
101 Votey — 7:30 — Free

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 14
COCONUTS (1929) — The Marx Brothers
A CHUMP AT OXFORD (1930) — Laurel and Hardy
101 Votey — 7:30 and 10:30 — $1

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 15
THE PHILADELPHIA STORY (1940) — Kathryn Hepburn, Cary Grant
101 Votey — 7:30 and 9:30 — Free

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 17
THE CONFESSION (1970) — Yves Montand
101 Votey — 7:30 & 10:00 — Free

String Quartet To Play Lane Concert

The Quartetto Italiano, "the finest string quartet that our century has known," in the words of critic-composer Virgil Thomson, performs in the Lane Series on Tues., Feb. 18, at 8 p.m. in Ira Allen Chapel.

This will be the second appearance of the celebrated ensemble in the Lane Series; the first was in 1967.

The program of the Quartetto Italiano includes Boccherini, Quartet in E flat major; Beethoven, Quartet in F major, op. 135; and Brahms, Quartet in C minor, op. 51, no. 1.

The four musicians, who have played together, uninterruptedly for more than a quarter century, are Paolo Borciani, violin; Elisa Pergeffe, violin; Piero Farulli, viola; and Franco Rossi, cello.

The tour marks the tenth visit to this side of the Atlantic by the Quartet. Since its formation right after the close of the Second World War, the Quartetto Italiano has been regarded in every musical capital of the world as one of the handful of great chamber music ensembles of all time.

The Quartet's 1975 American tour begins and ends in New York; on arrival they play at the Frick Collection and at the end of the tour at the Morgan Library. In mid-tour they appear twice in Tully Hall for the Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Center.

In the nation's capital, they will be heard at the Library of Congress. They perform in Boston, at Yale University, in the Lane Series at the University of Vermont, in Baltimore and Bethesda, Maryland, in Miami and in Gainsville, Florida. After a concert in Toronto, the Quartet appears in a number of midwestern cities.

The Quartetto Italiano made its first American tour in 1951, only a scant few years after beginning to play together. They met with superlatives from the press and the greatest enthusiasm from capacity audiences.

The London Times recently described the Quartet's present playing. "One might expect that the Quartetto Italiano, after 25 years together, might be showing signs of staleness or routine. Not a bit of it. To judge from their concert... their playing is now at the peak of its technical assurance and commitment. Still young, they bring a youthful tang to their performances and add to it the mature musicianship that comes from long acquaintance with one another and their repertory."

Paolo Borciani and Elisa Pegoffi (Mr. and Mrs. Borciani in private life), Piero Farulli and Franco Rossi hail from different parts of Italy; the Borcianis from Reggio Emilia and Genoa respectively; the other two from Florence and Venice. The two violinists and cellist Rossi met in 1940 when all three won prizes at the National competition in La Spezia. Instead of pursuing individual careers as solo artists, the young musicians decided to form a quartet, and violist Piero Farulli joined them a short time later.

A month later, the Quartetto Italiano was born in Paolo Borciani's home in Reggio. Its rise coincided with the rise of its country; thus, the Italian Quartet became a symbol of Italian revival. Their first performance took place on Nov. 12, 1945 in Carpi, a little town near Modena. After more appearances in smaller cities the Quartet began to tour the major music centers of Italy and soon the music capitals of Europe. By 1949, it was recognized as the major string quartet of Italy when it was selected to perform a memorial concert at La Scala, Milan.

The Quartetto Italiano is known around the world for the wealth of recordings made on the Philips and Angel labels. Among their popular discs are albums of Mozart, Beethoven, Schubert, Schumann, and Brahms Quartets, the Borodin No. 2 paired with the Dvorak "American" Quartet, the Debussy and Ravel Quartets and an album of the complete works for string quartet by Anton Webern.

Tickets at $3, $5, $6, are available in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman. For reservations, telephone 656-3418.

The next concert on the Lane Series is the Intimate P.D.Q. Bach, Feb. 22, at Memorial Auditorium. Led by Prof. Peter Schickele and the Semi-Pro Musica Antiqua, the group presents a "glorious spoof on serious music." It promises to be one of the funniest musical shows ever to appear in Burlington.

W.C. In Dickens Classic

The film version of Charles Dicken's well-known film classic novel "David Copperfield" will be presented on Friday, February 14, in Marsh Life Sciences Building Auditorium under the auspices of the Lane Film Society Series W.C. Fields Festival.

There will be two showings of the film: at 7:30 p.m. and [illegible] p.m.

In addition to W. C. Fields as Mr. Micawber, the star-studded cast includes Lionel Barrymore as Dan Peggotty, Maureen Sullivan as Dora, Edna May Oliver as Aunt Betsey, Lewis Stone as Mr. Wickfield, Basil Rathbone as Mr. Murdstone and Freddie Bartholomew as the young David Copperfield.

When the movie first appeared in 1935 it was hailed by the New York Times Critic as being "in the great narrative tradition of the cinema" and as "a genuine masterpiece."

W.C. Field's portrait of Micawber, wrote the Times critic, is the "one performance that is able to remain predominant among such splendors of character acting as Lennox Powie's Mr. Dick, Edna May Oliver's Aunt Betsey, Roland Young's Uriah Heep, Lionel Barrymore's Dan Peggorry and both Master Bartholomew as David the boy and Frank Lawton as David the man."

It is W.C. Fields as Micawber— the magnificent Micawber, the indigent aristocrat, the tool of circumstance— who dominates that most splendid scene in the film in which the sniveling Uria Heep is brought to account for his treacherous conduct toward Mr. Wickfield.

The screenplay of Hugh Walpole has been arranged with such uncanny correctness, and each of the myriad episodes has been performed so perfectly, that the film slips by in an unwearying cavalcade.

Tickets, $1 each, are available in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman, and at the door. For reservations, telephone 656—3418.

The next movie in the W.C. Fields Festival is "Evening with W.C. Fields," Feb. 21.

"Been A Long Time"

by Joe Walsh

Two years is a long time, and for Zeppelin fans it seemed an eternity. The much-waited-for return of Led Zeppelin to the Montreal Forum Thursday night opened with greetings of how great it was to be back in Montreal to the fitting sound of "Rock and Roll."

Sounds of ooh-yea, echoed from the stage throughout the night as Robert Plant tried to instill in the crowd the image of the Zeppelin of years ago.

This tour which Zep is using to promote their newest album seemed to lack the excitement everyone was expecting. After their lively medley off their fourth album, Zeppelin settled down to showing off their newest creations. Guitarist Jimmy Page flew off into another world as he captivated a spacy audience with his smooth and flowing style using no less than four different guitars.

Unfamiliarity seemed to be the problem, as a capacity crowd was never really able to get into Zep's new music. The new songs seemed for the most part long and dragged out, marked by repeated instrumentals which did little more than space out the dazed crowd.

Dazzling lights and a rainbow of colors kept all eyes transfixed throughout the three-hour concert. Look out for a few new tunes which ought to be good: "Hypertension" and "Cashmere" ("better than Moroccon; smoother than Lebanese," in the words of Robert Plant), both rock and rollers that woke up the crowd that night.

Swirling lights and a continuous haze of ever-changing colors provided scenery throughout the concert. The light show added

(continued on page eight)

Book Review:

A Heartbeat Away'

A Heartbeat Away (Richard M. Cohen and Jules Witcover, Bantam Books, paperback $1.95)

by David Mandell

Spiro T. Agnew. Spiro T. who? Surely no one has forgotten the undistinguished former Vice President. How could we ever forget the dynamic voice of virtue who put "pusillanimous pussy footers" and "hysterical hypochondriacs of history" in their rightful places?

In their recently published book, A Heartbeat Away, two Washington Post journalists, Richard Cohen and Jules Witcover, trace the story behind the stunning discovery that Spiro T. Agnew, defender of law and order, was no more than an old-fashioned political crook. Neither Cohen or Witcover is ever going to be remembered as an American Dostoevsky or Tolstoy. They have, however, written a first rate account of the Agnew case, which is both stimulating and informative. The supreme compliment to Cohen's tenacity as a reporter came when Agnew threatened to jail him for refusing to release his sources. In retrospect, having a crook a heartbeat away from the Presidency hardly seems a terrible prospect after we found that the heart of the President was as impure as his Vice President's. Agnew's criminal sagacity however enabled him to hide his actions for many years, and the possibility of a President Agnew was not a remote one. For this reason the Agnew case certainly merits an investigation.

In the course of investigating Anderson, the prosecutors discovered several of Agnew's cronies were willing to provide documentary evidence against him. There was now almost conclusive proof that the paradigm of morality had been receiving kickbacks on almost all contracts doled out during his tenure as governor, even accepting bribes as vice president. As the authors phrase it, the ring was closing around Agnew. Elliot Richardson, Attorney General at the time, supported the prosecutors, letting Agnew know there would be no cover-up of his case. Here the authors tend to romanticize Richardson, an unfortunate deviation from their journalistic traits.

Once word of Richardson's cooperation with the prosecutors was known, Agnew panicked. Galloping around the nation, he indignantly denied all charges. Privately however, Cohen and Witcover report he was bargaining to save his neck. Angew's main desire was to avoid a tour of duty in the Baltimore slammer. Finally striking a deal with Richardson, Agnew resigned his office in return for the dropping of most charges and no prison sentence. In his final day as vice president, Agnew pleaded no contest to tax evasion charges, thus making "nolo contendere" a household word.

Politicians in Maryland can generally be assumed corrupt until proven innocent. In the past few years, that state has seen its U.S. Senator convicted of bribery, its governor cop a plea of tax evasion, a congressman commit suicide while under investigation, and a state representative, accused of selling heroin, murdered in a tenement. As we can see, Agnew felt right at home.

Cohen and Witcover begin their book with a description of the initial Baltimore investigation that eventually caught Agnew with his hands in the till. The authors stress that the Baltimore investigators had no intention of inquiring into Agnew's past and were openly skeptical about rumors concerning him. On the contrary, they were interested in Agnew's successor as Baltimore County executive, N.Dale Anderson. To quote Mr. Nixon, the prosecutors were not interested in a big enchilada. Probing deeply into the investigation, the authors manage to provide an in-depth study of a prosecution force, without losing the reader in a sea of detail.

Cohen and Witcover effectively combine an exciting story, which makes fascinating reading with a stark note. Agnew wasn't the clumsy oaf many thought him to be. On the contrary, this totally corrupt man came within one heartbeat of the presidency. After Richard Nixon, he may seem a comic relief, but the danger of future Agnews is indeed very real. The authors demonstrate that Agnew was not the exception in politics life? he was the rule.

A Heartbeat Away gives a far more practical portrait of the political scene than the typically sterile political theory and political science works. It is highly recommended.

Surrounded By Sound

Dr. Thomas Read, innovator of a new spatial music

A Mozart quartet in the round, contemporary spatial music performed inside and outside the audience circle and a Brahms trio in conventional setting — the February 12 concert of the Con Brio Chamber Ensemble in Commons 115 Living/Learning Center at 8:00 p.m. promises an adventurous combination of modern and traditional forms.

The star attraction is the premier performance of Thomas Read's "Variations for Eight Instruments (Isochronism number 4)," written especially for the Con Brio Ensemble with spatial considerations for their Living/Learning Center concert room.

Instruments encircling the audience will be xylophone, bassoon, violin, clarinet, piano and trumpet. Trombone and viola will be placed within the audience circle, with the conductor in the very center.

"Most of our pieces have to be done in a group on a stage," explained Dr. Read. "But this one puts the instruments into and around the audience so that music is happening all around and through the room. It's a different performance wherever one sits.

"I call the piece 'Variations' because the five movements progress from the very abstract to a very melodic and rhythmic final movement, with the material of the first carried all the way through."

According to the composer, "isochronism" simply means "same time." The work is based on the principle that any musical component from largest to smallest may be treated isochronally: the temporal distance between successive statements of any pitch may be fixed, and changes in intensity, register, and timbre may occur periodically. Variety and changes are brought about by the combination of various periodicities.

"The first movement is based on this concept," continued Dr. Read, "with small duets occurring among the eight instruments across and around the room. It gives an initial impression of being quite automatic, almost mechanical, but with tremendous energy.

"In the second, everyone plays different things at different tempo. We'll be using stopwatches for this, since each performer times his own entrances.

"The third movement is extremely soft. Everyone has very short things to do, with short motifs being exchanged and traveling around the hall."

"In the fourth, everyone plays the same pitches together so there's a single melodic line passing around the room.

"The last movement is the most conventional of the five, melodic and rhythmic. It's a kind of rondo, and could even be danced to."

Curtain time is 8:00 p.m. Wednesday, February 12, in Commons 115 at the Living/Learning Center.

Tickets at .75 for students, and $2.50 general admission, available at the door.

ALL NEW MENU
NEW ATMOSPHERE — NEW SALAD BAR
THE BEST STEAKS
GREAT SEAFOOD TOO!
SIZZLING STEAK
WILLISTON ROAD
S. BURLINGTON, VERMONT

THE SILVER KEG
YOUR ENTERTAINMENT DOLLAR BUYS MORE AT THE SILVER KEG!
★★ OUR SPECIALS ★★
MONDAY THRU THURSDAY
NO COVER
★ FEATURING ★
FEB. 10-15 BRIGHTON ROCK
FEB. 17-19 PEACH HILL
FEB. 20-22 SPLASH
THE FANTASTIC BONNIE PARKER
FEB. 25,26, 27

BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE
Retail outlet
FANTASTIC SELECTION OF BEERS, ALES, AND AMERICAN & IMPORTED WINES
AT GREAT SAVINGS

LIVE ENTERTAINMENT AT CARBURS
The Best Place For The Late Night Hungries
CARBURS
FAMOUS SINCE 1874
OPEN SUNDAY 1:00 - 9:30 PM
THURSDAY TROY ROAD TRAVELING CIGAR BAND
FRIDAY "ROSE"
SATURDAY FRANK WILLIAMS
MONDAY AUDITION NIGHT
TUESDAY JOHN CASSELL—SOLO
WEDNESDAY DON ROSE
119 St. Paul St. 862-4106

ROCK FOR ALL AGES
Q 99
WQCR—FM BURLINGTON

COUPON
"The Den" with NO lines...
"The Den with NO noise...
Is "The Den" on Sundays.
This Sunday only—
Present this coupon and have a pretzal on us for every purchase over $1.00!
The Den
COUPON

Authentic Chinese Cooking Taught At UVM

As many of the residents over at Living /Learning can attest, a wide variety of tantalizing fragrances spread through B Building these days from the kitchen presided over by Mrs. Margaret Tong Berninghausen. Since arriving from Hong Kong in the fall to join her husband, Prof. John Berninghausen, who teaches Chinese language and literature here, she is a faculty resident of L/L. Mrs Berninghausen has been actively involved in introducing the joys of authentic Chinese cuisine to friends, students, and members of the community.

Born and raised in Hong Kong, Mrs. Berninghausen (whose maiden name was Tong Moon-mui) came to America at the age of eighteen to attend college. As a native Cantonese, she first learned the principles of Cantonese cuisine at a very young age by watching the family chef at work.

Although she still specializes in Cantonese cooking, she has since branched out into the cooking of other Chinese regions. While living in Taiwan in 1970-71, Margaret studied Szechuanese and Northern Chinese cooking with Tuan Feng-ko, a famous chef and cooking authority there. Just before returning to her adopted country last fall, Mrs. Berninghausen earned her diploma from the Tak Sun Institute of Cantonese Cuisine, perhaps the leading professional cooking school in Hong Kong.

Her reputation as a serious practitioner of her native cuisine having preceded her, she arrived to find many people interested in studying authentic Chinese cooking here in Vermont. In the fall semester, Margaret taught two courses in basic Chinese cooking at L/L, but she says that the demand for more courses and more sessions has grown steadily since then and she is now offering three different courses: basic, vegetarian and gourmet.

Each session is taught in her kitchen and is limited to seven students to enable each participant to receive individual instruction in the use of the Chinese cleaver and the 'wok' (the round Chinese frying pan). Three different dishes are taught at each session and of course, Margaret adds with a smile, "the students get to eat each dish as it is prepared."

The course in Basic Chinese Cooking is two hours per session, six weekly sessions, and includes such mouth-watering treats as sweet-and-sour pork, fried rice, soy sauce chicken, shrimp and cashews, beef and broccoli, fried dumplings and many others.

Vegetarian Chinese Cooking has been planned by Mrs. Berninghausen to meet the needs of people interested in that aspect of Chinese cooking and draws heavily on the traditional dishes prepared in Buddhist temples and monasteries in China (no animal products, eggs, or milk used). Margaret says that she and many other Chinese who are not vegetarians like to cook vegetarian dishes for the variety of flavors that they offer and notes that they are a very economical way to eat as are many of the dishes she teaches in the basic course since they make a little meat stretch a long way.

The vegetarian course is four weekly sessions of two and a half hours each. Among the dishes included are vegetarian spring rolls, onion pancakes, sweet-and-sour cabbage, bean curd (doufu), Chinese fried vegetables, vegetarian dumplings and others. Both of these courses use locally available ingredients for the most part.

Gourmet Cooking (the Chinese Way) offers somewhat more exotic and demanding dishes, the kind one would eat in a real Chinese banquet in China. Four weekly sessions of three hours duration, everybody has to pitch in and work in this course. Stuffed crab claws, scallops in lobster sauce; Chinese barbeque pork and spareribs, chicken buns, steamed shrimp dumplings, sizzling rice soup, spring rolls, candy spun apples and the dish that is becoming a favorite of those lucky enough to taste it – Peking Duck – and many many more.

Not only knowledgeable and talented, Mrs. Berninghausen is animated and friendly in the way she teaches. "It's very important to have a relaxed and congenial atmosphere for the proper preparation and enjoyment of food," she says.

"One of the nicest things about teaching cooking here," Margaret continues, "is that I get a chance to meet so many different people of different ages and different walks of life and we all enjoy trading recipes, sipping Chinese tea, chatting and sampling together." When asked about the cost, Margaret laughed and said, "it's inexpensive enough that some people feel it's worth it just to eat the food without being all that eager to cook themselves. The cost is from $30 to $38 depending on the course and that includes everything."

The next vegetarian course will run on Monday nights beginning February 17, the next basic Chinese cooking course will be on Thursday and Sunday evenings, starting February 20 and 23 (six weeks each) and the next gourmet courses will be on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, beginning March 11 and 12. All classes are held in B170 Living & Learning Center and places in the course are reserved by payment of the fee in advance. Mrs. Berninghausen can be called for information or further details at 656-4303.

What Kind of Medication Did You Say That Was?

You may have a friend who does it or have heard about it over the radio. You may have read about it in newspapers or magazines, or overheard people talking about it on the bus. But the chances are that unless you've been to a lecture on it you don't really know what Transcendental Meditation is all about.

"Some people even ask if it's some sort of dental medication, they're so unfamiliar with the term. And about 50 per cent of the people that come to introductory lectures still expect us to show up in white robes," says Susan Seifert, local teacher of Transcendental Meditation (TM). "However, the 'far out', quasi-mystical/-religious image of TM couldn't be further from the truth."

Transcendental Meditation is a simple mental technique practiced for 15-20 minutes morning and evening. It doesn't require any exercises, unusual postures, diet, changes in life-style, dress, or religious beliefs.

Although the experience in meditation is described as "extremely pleasant and relaxing", meditators are quick to point out that the purpose of TM is "not to just have a groovy experience, but a more rewarding and productive day after meditation."

UVM sophomore, Mariella Blais, reports a usual benefit of TM: "Before TM my moods tended to fluctuate a lot now I always seem to feel good. My friends have noticed the change and I think that this has prompted many of them to start."

Other meditators report more energy and alertness ("I'm really awake in class now and my schoolwork is much more interesting to me.") and research at the University of Hawaii has shown that overall academic performance improves due to TM. In another study done on long term meditators (6 months - 4 years) from several American universities, those who started TM raised their grade-point average from a mean of 2.5 to 3.4 with no extra work.

Also, meditators say that they are more relaxed due to the technique, are healthier, enjoy themselves more, are more creative, and more at ease with friends.

But perhaps most impressive is the huge body of scientific research done in the past five years on Transcendental Meditation. Sixty-four charts of different studies are printed in a booklet published by the Students' International Meditation Society, the non-profit organization that teaches TM. The research was done at universities, hospitals, prisons and laboratories independently of S.I.M.S. and documents benefits of TM ranging from faster reaction time to improved resistance to disease, development of personality and improved mental health. Spokesmen for the organization say that the 64 studies represent a fraction of research available and that studies are received by their international headquarters at the rate of one per day.

The technique is practised by approximately one out of every 30 UVM students. The Students' International Meditation Society is a non-profit educational organization with over 350 centers nationwide. Its sole purpose is to teach Transcendental Meditation. There is an active chapter on campus which holds regular introductory lectures, and the Vermont State Center is just down the street, at 308 Main Street. The lectures are free.

Interested in hearing more about TM? The next introductory lecture on campus is on Wednesday, Feb. 19 at Billings Marah Lounge at 8 p.m. If you can't make it at that time, the Vermont State Center at 308 Main St. also has a free introductory lecture every Wednesday at 8 p.m.

UVM Debators Do Some Fine Talking

This past week the University of Vermont Debate Team participated in the Invitational Bloomsburg Tournament at Bloomsburg, Pennsylvania, and came away as the winning school. In the varsity division, with five wins and one loss, were James Swift and Mark Fitzsimmons. This record won them second place in the varsity division. In the novice division, with five wins and one loss, were William Darrow and Robert Zorn. This record was good enough to get them first place in the novice division. With Vermont, placing first in the novice and second in the varsity, the sweepstakes winner of the tournament was the University of Vermont. The varsity team met and defeated Bloomsburg College, Concord College, Army, Edinburg College and Clarion College. Their one loss was to Bridgewater College of Virginia. The novice debaters won over Catonsville College, Concord College, Shepard College, Wilkes College, and the University of Pennsylvania. They lost to Army. William Darrow, in his first tournament, won the remarkable distinction of rating fourth highest in the novice division, unusual for a beginning debater. They were accompanied on the trip by Robert B. Huber and they were debating the topic of "Resolve that the powers of the Presidency should be significantly curtailed."

University of Vermont debaters left to right – James Swift, Mark Fitzsimmons, William Darrow, Robert Zorn.

... Death Penalty

(continued from page one)

"The first time a person commits a murder you attempt to rehabilitate. The second murder should not be free."

Another important part of the Criminal Code will be the drug laws, especially those concerning marijuana. As to the decriminalization of possession of marijuana, Diamond was not pushing any reforms but said he would not object to decriminalization (removing the maximum six month sentence) if at the same time a minimum sentence of one year was placed for the selling of hard drugs over the amount of 100 dollars and that more money be appropriated for drug law enforcement.

"No one has ever gone to jail for the possession of small amounts of marijuana... in a sense you have a 'de facto' decriminalization anyway."

The office of Attorney General has also been requested to give a legal opinion to the Vermont Senate concerning their investigation of the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU). Diamond said that the opinion was still being researched but stated that no private organization can be forced to divulge their membership lists.

Concerning the shooting of Luis Ponce by a Burlington detective, Diamond said he was not in a position to comment as long as the U.S. Justice Department was investigating the incident.

Also he mentioned that the Consumer Fraud division of his office would concentrate on matters concerning food, fuel, finance cost and substandard housing.

...Dartmouth Carnival

(continued from page twelve)

national team race at Pat's Peak. Kirk Dice was sixth and Bill Rathbone eleventh. In a GS Sunday at Middlebury, Brown and Dave Dodge came in first and third.

This weekend the skiers go down to Williamstown for the Williams College Winter Carnival. Potter and Trygve Rolseth will, however go to Westby, Wisconsin to jump on a ninety meter jump. The Alpine team gets reshuffled looking for the right combination for the Eastern Championships at Middlebury next weekend.

... Led Zeppelin

(continued from page seven)

a dazzling mood to the concert which featured songs off all their previous albums except their third. Perhaps the finest light display of the night came at the end, when a solid blue background was filled with moons and spinning stars shooting across the stage and into the Forum audience, providing the backgrounnd for "Stairway to Heaven." Sweet music filled the air as Jimmy Page lifted the smoke-filled crowd into another world.

Vocalist Robert Plant, reknown for his extremely high, childlike voice, never seemed to reach the high notes that in Zeppelin. Nevertheless his singing was clear and only hurting when he strained to reach the high ones. Either he had a cold (why not? Everyone else has had it), or puberty has finally set in.

Individual performances by Page and drummer John Bonham were nothing short of spectacular. The crowd never really started to get into it until the encores. "Led Zeppelin" spelled out in flashing lights across the whole back of the stage announced their encore to a quick-paced medley off their second album.

The return of Led Zeppelin left most in awe and everyone wanting more. Memories of Plant playing his mike to the guitar of Jimmy Page will long be in the minds of Zep fans in Montreal until their next tour, which hopefully is a lot sooner coming than this one.

THE COMPANY STORE

presents...

Chicken Noodley

a FREE package of soup Everytime you

Stop — Visit

THE COMPANY STORE

lower Church St., Burlington

royal christy

Burlington's only specialty Ski Shop

SKI EQUIPMENT SALE

20% to 50% OFF

Skis by	OLIN	DYNAMIC
	DYNASTAR	ATOMIC
	LANGE	FISCHER
Boots by	RAICHLE	SCOTT
	LANGE	NORDICA

ALL X-C EQUIPMENT ON SALE

862-7472 royal christy Shelburne Road

Located within Ski Shop

CLASSIFIED

1 Pair of Skis: Kasle; 1 pair boots: Henke; 2 pair poles (Head) and 1 ski cover. $30. 862-4634, Rubba.

For sale – VW Ski Rack. Like new, $5.00. Phone 655-2608.

Found: silver necklace in front of College St. YMCA, 2 weeks ago. Call after 6 p.m., 864-5912.

For Sale: Two Bias-Ply snow tires, studded & mounted, for VW Squareback (6.85 x 15). Used 1 winter. Cost $70.00. Selling for $35.00. 864-4231 after 7 p.m.

Wanted or for sale? Anyone break a ski recently? I have a 210 cm Splitkein/Bass Mountaineering (x-country) ski which needs a mate. Please call 864-4231 after 7 p.m.

For Sale: Dynaco A-35 Stereo Amplifier, 17½ watts RMS per channel, high filter, loudness contour bought new for $120.00. Sell now for $60.00. Excellent condition. Call Mike at 862-4684.

RESEARCH

Thousands of Topics
$2.75 per page

Send for your up-to-date, 160-page, mail order catalog. Enclose $1.00 to cover postage (delivery time is 1 to 2 days).

RESEARCH ASSISTANCE, INC.
11941 WILSHIRE BLVD., SUITE #2
LOS ANGELES, CALIF. 90025
(213) 477-8474 or 477-5493

Our research material is sold for research assistance only.

Women In R

by Wendy Pearce

Our world is changing with ever increasing speed, and campus life is no exception. Among other changes, women are for the first time making substantial societal advancements that are being generally acknowledged and even encouraged.

Many facets of our basically conservative establishment are making the concession that women can and must play a vital role in areas other than "the home". It is especially surprising to see that even a traditionally conservative organization like the Army ROTC is beginning to accept and prepare for the movement of women into their ranks.

In 1972, women were officially invited to enroll in the Army ROTC Senior program. It was not, however, until this fall that any strong interest was expressed by co-eds here at UVM. Suddenly, there has appeared an increased enthusiasm for Women's ROTC. This enthusiasm is found represented by one freshman in particular, Miriam McCarthy.

Mimi is a friendly, energetic cadet from Sudbrey Mass; one who always favored sports, backpacking and an outdoors way of life. Arriving at the University, she found the

ROTC progra experience these and Rappelling, skiing an "maneuvers"
under the cusp
It is upon rather than,
ROTC seems may see that countryside ar to this orient in a Pre-Med also found opportunitie enticing. Thus of twenty w join the Batta University of

Along wi curriculum semesterly re
two credit Studies, as w in a Wednesd lab is primari teaching lea physical fi requirements from those participate assignments decking out with the guy

It is now the famous the Pershing qualified. Th
this organiz

Quench You

(CPS) – While many areas of the world are gripped in famine-producing drought, a few scientists have begun plans to free two-thirds of the world's supply of fresh water that lies entombed in ice Antarctic ice.

According to Rand Corporation think tank, harvesting icebergs could double the US water supply without depleting the bergs or doing damage to the Antarctic.

In the current fantasy, the bergs would be roped with nylon and towed into trains up to 50 miles long. This is possible, the scientists have said, since Antarctic icebergs, unlike their Arctic cousins, are relatively small and flat on top.

To avoid refueling problems, the berg caravan's 12-month trip from Antarctica to Southern California would require atomic powered tugs

accompanie launches, a

Once
new home machines continent used to into an u would c along the plant on la

A Ran

MAGI

Say That Was?

...The research was done at universities, hospitals, prisons and laboratories independently of S.I.M.S. and documents benefits of TM ranging from faster reaction time to improved resistance to disease, development of personality and improved mental health. Spokesmen for the organization say that the 64 studies represent a fraction of research available and that studies are received by their international headquarters at the rate of one per day.

...The technique is practiced by approximately one out of every 30 UVM students. The Students' International Meditation Society is a non-profit educational organization with over 350 centers nationwide. Its sole purpose is to teach Transcendental Meditation. There is an active chapter on campus which holds regular introductory lectures, and the Vermont State Center is just down the street, at 308 Main Street. The lectures are free.

...Interested in hearing more about TM? The next introductory lecture on campus is on Wednesday, Feb. 19 at Billings Marsh Lounge at 8 p.m. If you can't make it at that time, the Vermont State Center at 308 Main St. also has a free introductory lecture every Wednesday at 8 p.m.

...tmouth Carnival

...twelve/ Carnival. Petter and Trygve ...at Pat's Roiseth will, however go to ...sixth and Westby, Wisconsin to jump on ...nth. In a ninety meter jump. The ...Middlebury. ...dge came Alpine team gets reshuffled ...skiers go looking for the right ...n for the combination for the Eastern ...Winter Championships at Middlebury next weekend.

...Led Zeppelin

...ge/seven/ had a cold (why not? Everyone ...the concert else has had it), or puberty has ...gs off all finally set in. ...ms except ...the finest Individual performances by ...night came Page and drummer John ...solid blue Bonham were nothing short of ...filled with spectacular. The crowd never ...inning stars really started to get into it ...e stage and until the encores. "Led ...audience. Zeppelin" spelled out in ...kground for flashing lights across the whole ...ven." Sweet back of the stage announced ...it as Jimmy their encore to a quick-paced ...smoke-filled medley off their second album. ...world. The return of Led Zeppelin ...bert Plant, left most in awe and everyone ...s extremely wanting more. Memories of ...voice, never Plant playing his mike to the ...he high notes guitar of Jimmy Page will long ...Nevertheless be in the minds of Zep fans in ...ar and only Montreal until their next tour, ...strained to which hopefully is a lot sooner ...ell. Either he coming than this one.

CLASSIFIED

1 Pair of Skis: Kade; 1 pair boots: Henke; 2 pair poles (Head) and 1 ski cover. $30. 862-4634, Rubba.

For sale - VW Ski Rack. Like new. $5.00. Phone 655-2608.

Found: silver necklace in front of College St. YMCA, 2 weeks ago. Call after 6 p.m., 864-5912.

For Sale: Two Bias-Ply snow tires, studded & mounted, for VW Squareback (6.85 x 15). Used 1 winter. Cost $70.00. Selling for $35.00. 864-4231 after 7 p.m.

Wanted or for sale? Anyone break a ski recently? I have a 210 cm Splitkein/Bass Mountaineering (x-country) ski which needs a mate. Please call 864-4231 after 7 p.m.

For Sale: Dynaco A-35 Stereo Amplifier. 17½ watts RMS per channel, high filter, loudness contour bought new for $120.00. Sell now for $60.00. Excellent condition. Call Mike at 862-6684.

RESEARCH

Thousands of Topics
$2.75 per page

Send for your up-to-date, 160-page mail order catalog. Enclose $1.00 to cover postage (delivery time is 1 to 2 days).

RESEARCH ASSISTANCE, INC.
11941 WILSHIRE BLVD., SUITE #2
LOS ANGELES, CALIF. 90025
(213) 477-8474 or 477-5493

Women In ROTC-Not All Combat

by Wendy Pearce

Our world is changing with ever increasing speed, and campus life is no exception. Among other changes, women are for the first time making substantial societal advancements that are being generally acknowledged and even encouraged.

Many facets of our basically conservative establishment are making the concession that women can and must play a vital role in areas other than "the home". It is especially surprising to see that even a traditionally conservative organization like the Army ROTC is beginning to accept and prepare for the movement of women into their ranks.

In 1972, women were officially invited to enroll in the Army ROTC Senior program. It was not, however, until this fall that any strong interest was expressed by co-eds here at UVM. Suddenly, there has appeared an increased enthusiasm for Women's ROTC. This enthusiasm is found represented by one freshman in particular, Miriam McCarthy.

Mimi is a friendly, energetic cadet from Sudbrey Mass; one who always favored sports, backpacking and an outdoors way of life. Arriving at the University, she found the ROTC program offered much experience and practice in these and related areas. Rappelling, cross country skiing and woodland "maneuvers" are all offered under the auspices of "tactics." It is upon military tactics, rather than drill, that UVM ROTC seems to focus. One may see that the climate and countryside are uniquely suited to this orientation. Interested in a Pre-Med program, Mimi also found the scholarship opportunities particularly enticing. Thus, she became one of twenty women cadets to join the Battalion here at the University of Vermont.

Along with their regular curriculum, cadets are semesterly required to take a two credit elective. Military Studies, as well as participate in a Wednesday night lab. This lab is primarily concerned with teaching leadership, drill and physical training. Women's requirements are no different from those of men. They participate in all drills, assignments and maneuvers, decking out in fatigues along with the guys.

It is now possible to join the famous military fraternity, the Pershing Rifles, if one is qualified. The UVM chapter of this organization is rigorously tactical.

The regiment competes with others in the New England area, testing their ability for good leadership and decision-making under simulated combat conditions.

Anyone may pledge, but they must prove themselves capable of keeping up and pulling their own weight on maneuvers.

Here again, Miriam is outstanding. She stood up under the trials of pledge season and has become the first woman on campus to participate in this once female exclusive fraternity.

For those co-eds less physically adept, there exists a newly formed group called the Green and Gold. The purpose here is to prepare women for leadership, with more emphasis placed on drills than on tactics.

Another addition this year is something known as the Adventure Program, which sponsors such outdoor activities as rappelling and rafting.

On the lighter side, cadets usher at hockey games, present the color guard at football games and attend such social functions as the 107th Annual UVM Military Ball, to be held this Feb. 15.

How did the guys react to this feminine invasion of their once segregated domain? My curiosity was piqued. According to Mimi, opinions were varied, though never hostile. Some, aware that her interest was not in "Women's Lib" but in the experience itself, encouraged and congratulated her. Others were skeptical, refusing to believe a women could ever keep up or stand the less than cleanly conditions. She and others equally determined have proved them wrong, however.

It is evident, even to an outsider, that these girls have won the respect, friendship and equal standing of their male counterparts. It is exciting that in an age when women are struggling for equal footing and recognition in a male dominated society, there exists an area in which men and women may cooperate on an apparently equal level towards a common goal and interest.

Though Army ROTC is far from every woman's interest, it presents intriguing possibilities for developing those characteristics typically assigned to the male, i.e. leadership, opportunity to practice these qualities through interaction with both women and men, thereby better equipping oneself for a career and life in the outside world.

Quench Your Thirst With An Iceberg

(CPS) - While many areas of the world are gripped in famine-producing drought, a few scientists have begun plans to free two-thirds of the world's supply of fresh water that lies entombed in ice - Antarctic ice.

According to Rand Corporation think/tank, harvesting icebergs could double the US water supply without depleting the bergs or doing damage to the Antarctic.

In the current fantasy, the bergs would be roped with cables and arranged into trains up to 50 miles long. This is possible, the scientists have said, since Antarctic icebergs, unlike their Arctic cousins, are relatively small and flat on top.

To avoid refueling problems, the berg caravan's 12-month trip from Antarctica to Southern California would require atomic powered tugs accompanied by an array of launches, and helicopters.

Once the ice reaches its new home, huge strip mining machines anchored off the continental shelf would be used to scoop chunks of ice into an underwater pipe that would carry them, melting along the way, to a storage plant on land.

A Rand scientist admitted that, although simple, the plan did have a few bugs.

"It would take the largest mining machine that we know of... thousands of them to harvest the ice from just one of these large bergs," he said. In addition, the disposal of nuclear wastes from the yet-to-be developed atomic powered tugboats would pose another stumbling block.

Nevertheless, the scientists claimed that iceberg water could cool the throats of millions for a mere $25 an acre foot, as compared with $65 for aqueduct water and $100 for desalinized sea water.

SAGA Sez

Where's The PB And J

Beef Board activity in the dining halls is picking up lately. We appreciate the time and effort spent communicating with us this way. If anyone feels they haven't received an adequate answer to a question or comment they should seek out the respective dining hall manager in person and discuss it.

This column is aimed at answering questions, and speaking about the people who work in the dining halls. We'll get to questions later on - but first - a few words about the Folks who earn their daily bread preparing and serving yours:

The Full-time staff in the dining halls consists of 66 regular and 46 part-time employees. In addition 236 UVM students work in the dining halls. Some of our regular staff has been working at UVM for many years. Maggie Kingsley has the longest record of service, she cooks at Waterman Dining Hall and began her employment in 1954.

A very important ingredient in our program is our student staff. The hundreds of students who work daily provide a vital link between the dining halls and the customers. This is one of the few employment opportunities where the employee is also the customer.

We are in a service business, a service which is provided to people (customers) by other people (dining hall staff). Thus we are in the people business and the business of people never lets up. It has been said that the people business is like trying to scrub an elephant with a toothbrush. As soon as you've cleaned one spot, you move on. By the time you get back to the original spot, much time has passed and it is in need of scrubbing again.

All of us - both dining hall staff and customers - must be aware of how much we rely on each other. Customers will only get the service they expect if the staff is tuned in and happy about providing the service. The staff will only be able to provide the service if there are appreciative customers to serve.

Lately, we've been thrashing about, trying to find the right combination of hours, menus, programs, and facilities to best deliver the Vermont Plan to the student customers at UVM. It has been a trying time for all and it continues to be less than successful in some areas, mainly, food temperature, menu choice, and line speed.

I would urge our customers to consider the following, as we, jointly, continue to do the best we can with the resources at our disposal:

(1) Not one of the staff believes food should be served at the wrong temperature, slowly or in an unsmiling manner. When these things happen it is not a deliberate effort to provide bad service, instead it is a condition of human, people-type, problem which can be corrected with time and patience. Please help us to improve in these areas by reminding us of your beliefs in the importance of them.

(2) On the other hand - remember to speak to and ask questions of our staff when you're going through the cafeteria line. Don't let the stainless steel serving line become a barrier between customer and staff. Remember there are people over there who need positive reinforcement! from you to help them do their tasks as best they can.

(3) Get to know the dining hall managers personally. Don't wait until hours or days later to tell them something that's on your mind. Tell them right away and they can get started on the problem. Also - tell them when something is going well so they can try to keep it that way. The managers plan to be in the dining halls during most of the meals. If they're absent when you need them - speak with either a student manager, the first cook, or any other employee. The important thing is to not let a dilemma build up until it becomes a crisis.

Questions and Answers:

Question: I know times are tough but why can't I get a peanut butter and jelly sandwich at lunch like I used to?

Answer: It's always been, and still is, our policy to have PB and J available at all times. However, many customers were taking large amounts of PB and J from the dining halls. This became a problem of such size we decided to not put PB and J out on the condiment tables at lunch or dinner - all you need to do is ask one of the line servers and you'll be given access to enough to use at that meal.

As you know, the coupon price includes all you want to eat in the dining hall but doesn't provide for food to be taken to eat at other times.

Question: What can we do to help SAGA get back on track and return some of those "old-time" favorites to the menus?

Answer: I'm glad you asked that. Aside from people simply eating more when they come to eat this year, it appears much food is being wasted. At any given meal many glasses of milk, pepsi, etc. are returned to the dishroom. Uneaten second portions of desserts and salads are also returned in sizeable quantities. If everyone would only take what they plan to eat, we'd have some additional food dollars to use in upgrading the entree selections or, for example, bringing back ice cream at lunch time.

We'd also appreciate any comments and ideas from you concerning how we can best control unnecessary waste of food.

We'll close this week with a big "Thanks" to the student at Harris-Millis who, when offered her breakfast eggs, said, "I don't need that many - please give me a smaller portion."

Local Woodcarver Pays Tribute To Aiken

Chealsea - When Robert W. Huston, local woodcarver and signmaker, heard of the plans to raise $250,000 for the Aiken Lectures to honor retiring Sen. George D. Aiken, he wished to make his contribution.

In his own way.

The result, after more than 40 hours of work, is a 14 inch round rock maple lecturn medallion, carved carefully and lovingly. This will be displayed on the lecturn at Ira Allen Chapel, University of Vermont, when the first two Aiken Lectures are presented. Sen. Mike Mansfield will speak in March and Orville Freeman, former secretary of agriculture, will speak on March 5.

A 28-year-old native of Ohio, Huston started out as a sign-painter, gradually moved into sign-carving and now has expanded into plaques and furniture carving. He has plied his craft in Chelsea for the past five years, living in a red house on a hill, and working in an adjoining small, neat shop kept warm by a pot-belly stove fed in part by the shavings of his carving.

Senator Aiken is familiar with the work of this young craftsman. A Vermont seal, also carved by Huston, hung in the Senator's Washington office for two years.

LITTLE PROFESSOR BOOK CENTER®
Downtown Burlington
Essex Junction

MAGRAMS
SALE

SPECIAL PURCHASE
INDIAN GAUZE SHIRTS
Sale $9.90
Regular to $14 and $16
Choose from the newest selection of fabulous plaids, stripes and solids. Sizes 5 to 15.
WAY IN SHOP

CLEARANCE SALE
At AUDIO DEN
Wednesday thru Saturday
February 12-15

AMPS-TUNERS & RECEIVERS

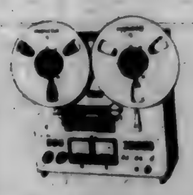
Qnty.	Item	Mfr. Sugg. List	SALE
1	Pioneer SX737	$400	$329
1	Pioneer SX 636	$350	$289
1	Pioneer SA 8100	$350	$289
1	Pioneer SA 5200	$140	$109
1	Pioneer TX 6200	$140	$109
1	Electro Voice Receiver	Used	$60
2	Harman Kardon 630	$350	$259
2	Onkyo TX 666	$470	$399
2	Onkyo A 7055	$240	$189
2	Onkyo T 4055	$220	$179
1	Superscope R 330	$230	$139
2	Sansui QR 500	$250	$149
1	Dynaco 80	Used	$65
1	Altec 710A	Used	$225

SPEAKERS

Qnty.	Item	Mfr. Sugg. List	SALE
2	EPI 100	$100	$79
4	EPI 60	$70	$49
4	EPI 110	$120	$99
4	EPI 201	$220	$169
2	EPI 400+	$400	$299
2	Altec 887	$89	$59
2	Altec 891A	$149	$99
6	Infinity 1001	$140	$89
2	Infinity POS 1	$98	$65
2	Infinity 2000A		$315 $239
2	KLH 33		$110 $78
2	KLH 32		$120 pr. $75 Pr.
4	Marantz 4G		$120 pr. $85 Pr.
4	Audioanalyst A100		$138 $99
2	Creative 22		Used $39 Pr.

TURNTABLES
All prices on turntables include base, dust cover and cartridge.

Qnty.	Item	Mfr. Sugg. List	SALE
3	Garrard 70	$142.00	$65
2	Garrard Zero 92	$248.00	$129
1	Garrard 40B	$80.00	$35
1	Garrard 42M	$90.00	$49
1	Dual 1215S	Used	$95
1	BSR 310x	Used	$29
1	Thorens 125 AB	$480	$295



TAPE DECKS

Qnty.	Item	Mfr. Sugg. List	SALE
1	Sony TC 353 Reel-to-Reel	$350	$289
1	Sony TC 280 Reel-to-Reel	$280	$209
1	Sony TC 129 Cassette	$150	$109
2	Teac 360S Cassette	$380	$339
1	Teac 160 Cassette	$260	$229
1	Teac 2300S Reel-to-Reel	$500	$399
1	Pioneer 1020L Reel-to-Reel	$650	$575
1	Ampex Micro 95 Cassette	Used	$65
1	Sony TC 377 Reel-to-Reel	$400	$319

MISCELLANEOUS

Qnty.	Item	Mfr. Sugg. List	SALE
12	Sanyo FM Radio	$35	$19
3	Sanyo Port. Cassette	$45	$29
4	Sanyo Clock Radio	$45	$29
4	Concord Dolby Adapter		$39
3	KLH 21 FM	$110	$89
6	KLH 21 AM-FM	$130	$99

Headphones From $10

All the above items, unless otherwise specified, are either new merchandise or demonstration models and are fully covered by manufacturer's warranty.

AUDIO DEN 100 DORSET STREET
SOUTH BURLINGTON
OPEN 9 to 9
Phone 863-4398

Swim Team Sinks UNH

The diesel powered cats went after the University of New Hampshire Swim team with all pistons pumping. The Vermont squad looked tough as they took all but one first place, and broke one pool and one varsity record during the meet. The cats were on the prowl to step up their record at three wins and three loses.

The meet began with a bang as the pool record in the four hundred yard medley record was broken. Mike Jacobs, Mike Kurt, Paul Jones and Ron Kirkwood put in a time of 3:48.1 bettering the old record by three seconds. The other record breaking performance was co-captain Mike Kurt in the 500 yard freestyle. Kurt, one of the Vermonters on the team, has been improving his times in every meet. We're hoping to see some high placing from him at the New England's championships this year.

Senior Cliff Johnson had a field day, scoring two first places and one second place. With his events being practically back to back Johnson was in the water more than he was out. Johnson swam to first places in the two hundred yard individual medley and the two hundred yard butterfly and placed second in the two hundred yard backstroke. Cruising in first in the two hundred backstroke was Gary Zibro. Zibro is a new member of the team from Lake George, New York. His performance qualified him for the New England Championships in March.

In the big distance event the one thousand freestyle another Vermonter was on top of the heap. Co-captain John Mahoney stroked way ahead of his New Hampshire rival to a standing ovation, and a well deserved first place. Mahoney primarily a flyer is working hard for the championships in March, he is going for all of the hardware he can get in the New Englands. Doug Jefferson placed second in that event swimming his best time of the year.

John Blake who until recently has been dormant is beginning to bloom. Blake was a double winner in the two and one hundred freestyle. His time in the one hundred free of 51.6 put him within reach of the fastest sprinters on the team. Right behind John in the one hundred was freshman Peter Andrews and in the two hundred was Trip Blair. In meets to come we will see a lot from them.

The fifty yard freestyle saw the combination of Kirkwood and Jacobs placing 1,2. In the diving events Dave Loury scored his first points of the season placing second behind Piche off the one meter board. Doug Piche again won the three meter diving event. In the two hundred yard breaststroke Dave Maccini made his first appearance on the scoreboard placing second in that event. Winning the four hundred freestyle relay was Mike Kurt, Doug Piche, Mike Brace and Dave Loury. That relay made up of one swimmer, the team manager and two divers swam to a respectable time of 3:52.7. The total score of the meet was Vermont ninety one and New Hampshire twenty two.

Next weekend there will be fierce competition down to the last event. The cats, in there last home meet, are mixing it up with the U. Maine Bears. The cats want to regain their honor after last years loss to the Mainers. There will be hard fought races and plenty of excitement in store, this Saturday at 1:00 at the Forbush Pool.

20% PURE, STRAIGHT & HONEST 20% DISCOUNT 20%
OFF ON MOST PARTS AND ACCESSORIES OFF
GORDIE'S UNIVERSITY TEXACO
WILLISTON ROAD ACROSS FROM GAYNES
863-9838
SHOW VALID UVM I.D. and IT'S YOURS!!!
ELECTRONIC TUNE-UP ON 8 CYLINDER CARS - 14.25
6 CYLINDER- 9.50
4 CYLINDER-9.50

Icecats Trounce UMass

by Richard Rottkov

The University of Vermont Icecats humiliated a surprisingly gesty Massachusetts team 8–1 at Amherst's Orr Rink Saturday night. Vermont exhibited its pride as it shook off the thrashing by Harvard just a fortnight earlier. The Cats put the game away in the second period, scoring three goals to provide them with a secure 4–1 advantage after two periods.

Vermont coach Jim Cross said, "We showed a lot of class tonight. To bounce back like this, despite having to get up for a Division III team. Realisticly, it's the mark of a good team. We were down during the first period maybe still feeling down after last nights game."

Having to play UMass maybe was just what the doctor ordered to get the Catamounts rolling again. It was an opportunity to rebuild their confidence in time for Wednesday's important Division I clash with St. Lawrence. Vermont has three Division I encounters remaining, all on the road against St. Lawrence, Clarkson, and New Hampshire. These games will likely determine if Vermont will have the important home ice advantage for the Division I playoffs.

Vermont appeared sluggish during the first period. UMass controlled the puck inside their blue line for much of the first period; and even outshot the Cats 17–15. Vermont goalie Tom McNamara, was called on to make some great saves.

The game was scoreless until 11:39 of the period when Bill Koch deflected in a slapshot by Ted Curtis. It was a fine example of Koch's ability to outmuscle the defended in front of the net and establish position.

The Minutemen of Massachusetts came right back at 12:35 to knot the score at one. The goal came on a wrist shot by Billy Harris from 12 feet out. McNamara was screened on the play and didn't see the puck until it was by him.

The first period concluded with Massachusetts able to skate with Vermont.

Midway through the second period the complexion of the game turned around. Roger Mallette, playing his usual outstanding game of forechecking and overall hustle, finally put the Cats in front for good at 13:36. Rogie was just able to deflect a slapshot from the point by Vermont captain John Murphy. The assist by Murphy gave him a career total of 80 points, breaking the career scoring record for a defensemen held by former UVM great Ted Yeates.

Murphy said after the game, "We were still tired and sore from last night's game. Once we warmed up, it was a different story."

Warm up they did. Andy Halford scored the first of five goals by the all–freshman line of Randy Koch, Halford, and Bill Reber, as he fired a slapshot from just inside the blue line. The puck hit the net high to the stick side of the UMass goalie, Dana Redmond. The goal coming at 14:20 less than a minute after Mallette's goal.

Randy Koch, on a scoring tear since the Norwich game, scored at 17:43 of the period. For Koch it was the first of his three consecutive goals, giving Vermont a comfortable 4–1 lead after two periods of play.

The third frame was completely dominated by Vermont. Vermont seemed to control the puck the entire period, even when UMass had a power play. Two quick goals by Randy Koch giving him the hat trick, Halford's second goal at 11:45, and O'Connell's at 18:26 finished off the scoring for the Cats.

Ski Area Review

Ski Cochran's: For The Fun Of It

THE RICHMOND SKI TOW AT COCHRANS: SKIING FOR THE FUN OF IT

by Chris Brown

There has been a revolt against the glamorous and the expensive aspects of skiing at all levels in recent years. Cross-country has really caught on as a result of this. More and more people are after fresh air and exercise at a reasonable price.

Cochran's Ski Area of Richmond

Way back, like around 1900, when my grandfather started skiing that's what people were after. And around 1930 when people started putting up rope tows in the east it was just to enjoy the outdoors, get some exercise and have fun skiing. Somehow between then and now lift ticket prices reached double figures and how much you spent on equipment has become as or is more important than how you used it. Down a back road in Richmond, Vermont, though, a few of us have found a place where we can go skiing for the same reason people started it, just for the fun of it.

It's a rare bit of luck that this place is also the closest ski area to the UVM campus. To get there you drive down the interstate to Richmond, go into the center of town and take a right, then take a left at the round church and you're on Cochran Road. Shortly after the road turns to dirt you'll see the training hill of champions rising above the Winooski River.

At first glance you may be a bit disappointed at the size. And if you've got the kind of ego that needs verticle drop in one piece you better add $10 to the price of a lift ticket and another hour to the day's driving and keep on going to Stowe. But if your ego can stand to take its verticle drop in small chunks pull into the parking lot, go into the warming shelter, get your stuff on, spend $2 on a day ticket and be prepared to find out how fast you can wear yourself out on that hill.

The Richmond Ski Tow got its start when Mickey Cochran (former UVM football team captain, current UVM alpine ski team coach, father of the famous kids etc.) moved from South Burlington looking for a house with a back yard better suited for ski training. This ended up to be an old farm house on the Back River Road which has since been renamed Cochran Road.

The lower tow, built as is the rest of the area mainly through Mickey's labors is powered by a flathead Ford taken from a 1936 truck. The runs it services have a total of one rock I am told; but in three years of skiing there I haven't hit it yet. In fact the hill is so well groomed that in the summer they mow the hill with a hand mower. It's the only area in the state where you can actually ski on a heavy frost, though I've seen several others try. Anyway that tow starts at 10 a.m.. Saturday and Sunday plus there are lights on it for training at night. The Upper tow starts at noon and features a longer run. Mickey has plans for a t-bar there next year. He is also working on some kind of snow making arrangement. Now that he is working full time on the hill watch out. You'll have to move quick so you can say "I skied there when..."

Although the hill is an excellent race training area it has been developed with all levels of skiing in mind. Just like every other major ski area in the state there is a ski school ($5 per lesson; Ginny Cochran director, the mother of the famous kids), ski patrol and hot dogs in the base lodge. There is gentle terrain for beginners to get started on, challenging pitches and transitions for experienced skiers to perfect their technique as well as alot of stuff in between.

They are open every week end. If you have a week day pass at another place and want to get out on a Saturday or Sunday without spending an arm and a leg or driving too far it would be a good hill to try. After you've mastered the Cochran's back yard well enough to make the U.S. Ski Team and compete in the World Cup for a few years you can move up to something bigger and more expensive but you might not want to.

THE SPORTS SCENE

by Norm Robinson

When someone thinks of boxing, a little known sport here in Vermont, they think of Muhammed Ali, Joe Frazier, and George Foreman. In Burlington however, the names that come up are the Lefebvre brothers, Jim Churchill, and yes, even Billy Looker.

I recently attended the Vermont Golden Gloves Championships at Memorial Auditorium and these were just a few of the growing list of fighters that appeared.

I wasn't sure what exactly to expect as I settled down at ringside because I had never seen a bout firsthand. A total of ten fights took place with classes ranging from the 112 pound class to the heavyweights. The bouts lasted three rounds and the winner picked after the third round.

As you watched the bouts progress, you knew you were watching some very serious fighters perform. I say fighters because few of the participants were what you could call boxers. Most of the action was a wild swinging affair except for a few instances. The fighters knew some of the basic moves, but when it came down to the nitty-gritty they usually just swung away. Jim Churchill, last year's champion in the 147 pound division was very impressive along with a kid named Allen Rainville (who knocked out his opponent at the 1:58 mark of the second round).

UVM's own Billy Looker lost his fight, but showed some good form and the patience to wait things out. The problem was that he probably waited too long.

Although the fighters were not overly skilled, the crowd really enjoyed themselves as they rooted for their favorites.

Most of the competitors are quite young and the poise and form will develop with each fight.

Leaving the Auditorium, I knew I had seen some serious competition, backed by knowledgeable fans and sponsored by a first class organization, the Vermont Athletic Association. Even with the lack of experience and form by the fighters, you could enjoy the bouts.

Boxing is an exciting sport and it should be promoted both in Vermont and here on campus. It doesn't have the drama and acting of Grand Prix Wrestling, but it does have some of the thrill of an Ali-Foreman fight.

UNIVERSITY STORE

ALL JACKETS IN STOCK
⅓ OFF
Starting Today -
For Seven Days Only
UNIVERSITY STORE
ON THE CAMPUS

DAVE'S AUTOMOTIVE
INCLUDING THE FINEST IN SEMPERIT RADIAL TIRES
FOREIGN CAR REPAIR SPECIALISTS
560 X 15 Snow Tires
FITS MOST BUGS & SAAB 96 and 96's
24.95 inc. FET & mounting
VW BUG BRAKE JOB $49.95
VW Beetle Exhaust Complete $29.95

SLOW DOWN!!!
if you're not riding on E&E Retreads!
Complete line of new and retreaded winter tires
Front end alignments
All U.V.M. students get 10% discount with this ad.
E & E TIRE CO., INC. 864-
152 RIVERSIDE AVE.7759

12 TPH
science and language majors
At NSA, our success depends on yours.

Harvard Ma

by Richard Rottkov

Harvard's display of hockey against the University of Vermont Catamounts clearly indicated that Love Story Oliver Barrett III was not missed. In fact, he could not even make this year's team.

Paralleling what was considered Harvard's finest game of the season, the 7-2 victory over Boston University on December 10th, the Crimson more than equaled that task Friday night, by massacring Vermont, 10-1 before an overflow crowd at the Donald C. Watson rink in Cambridge. Before many of the 2,281 fans were comfortably in their seats, Harvard shattered the hopes and aspirations of the optimistic Catamount fans. Harvard wrapped up the game in the first 3:30 by pummelling home four goals. From that juncture on it was largely a matter of watching in uncomfortable admiration, perhaps the countries' finest hockey team.

Any psychological pitch that may have been established by the Cats to start the game had to have been quickly destroyed. Before the Cats were able to rid themselves of their goose bumps, Harvard struck, just 58 seconds into the contest. The aura of playing "mighty Harvard" was certainly felt by the Vermont players, as Harvard let them know that any pre-game praise and their number two national ranking was genuine. Ted Thorndike deflected in the first goal following a 35 foot slapshot by Todd Nuland. In the midst of a host of players, Thorndike jammed home a puck that Vermont goalie Tom McNamara never saw.

Only twenty seconds after the game's initial goal, Harvard capitalized on a five on three situation. Ban Bolduc passed to Leigh Hogan, who slammed it home for a 2-0 lead. Two more quick goals by Steve Dadigar and Dave Gautier and Vermont appeared destined for their longest night of the year.

The awesome display by Harvard in such rapid fashion stipulated that the rest of the

Reinhardt

An assistant coach at the University of Vermont has been named UVM's head varsity mentor, replacing Donald Soderberg, who will step down this spring after five years at the helm.

Paul T. Reinhardt, 27, will guide the Catamount booters next fall, after serving three seasons as the freshman coach, two years as a varsity assistant and two campaigns as the head "B" coach.

A graduate of Cortland State in 1968, Reinhardt came to Vermont that fall and has been affiliated with the soccer program ever since. A three-letter winner at Cortland (soccer, swim, and tennis), he was considered one of the most versatile athletes ever to attend the New York State University.

Soderberg compiled a 25-26-10 mark in five seasons at Vermon, including a Yankee Conference co-championship in

Study in Guadalajara, Mexico
The GUADALAJARA SUMMER SCHOOL, a fully accredited UNIVERSITY OF ARIZONA program, will offer June 30 to August 9, anthropology, art, education, folklore, geography, history, government, language and literature. Tuition and fees, $190, board and room with Mexican family $245. Write to GUADALAJARA SUMMER SCHOOL, 413 Nav Psychology, University of Arizona, Tucson, Arizona 85721.

— EARN CREDIT —
10 MILES OUT AT SEA
at the
SHOALS MARINE LABORATORY
1975 Summer Courses:
• Introduction to Marine Science
• Introduction to Nautical Science
• Seagoing Apprenticeship (aboard a topsail schooner)
For information:
Natty Betz
202 Plant Science Bldg.
Cornell University
Ithaca, N.Y. 14853

The Fun Of It

Area at Richmond

day ticket to find out wear yourself

Ski Tow p. key Cochran football team
UVM alpine father of the moved from looking for a k yard better raining. This an old farm River Road
been renamed

, built as is area mainly
's labors is thead Ford 6 truck. The ve a total of told, but in ting there I in fact the med that in mow the hill wer. It's the state where s on a heavy seen several ay that tow
Saturday and are lights on night. The at noon and features a longer run. Mickey has plans for a t-bar there next year. He is also working on some kind of snow making arrangement. Now that he is working full time on the hill watch out. You'll have to move quick so you can say "I skied there when..."

Although the hill is an excellent race training area it has been developed with all levels of skiing in mind. Just like every other major ski area in the state there is a ski school ($5 per lesson; Ginny Cochran director, the mother of the famous kids), ski patrol and hot dogs in the base lodge. There is gentle terrain for beginners to get started on, challenging pitches and transitions for experienced skiers to perfect their technique as well as alot of stuff in between.

They are open every week end. If you have a week day pass at another place and want to get out on a Saturday or Sunday without spending an arm and a leg or driving too far it would be a good hill to try. After you've mastered the Cochran's back yard well enough to make the U.S. Ski Team and compete in the World Cup for a few years you can move up to something bigger and more expensive but you might not want to.

I had never seen a bout firsthand. A total of place with classes ranging from the 112 pound vy weights. The bouts lasted three rounds and ed after the third round.

ched the bouts progress, you knew you were very serious fighters perform. I say fighters - of the participants were what you could call of the action was a wild swinging affair except tances. The fighters knew some of the basic en it came down to the nitty-gritty they usually ay. Jim Churchill, last year's champion in the vision was very impressive along with a kid ainville (who knocked out his opponent at the he second round).

Billy Looker lost his fight, but showed some the patience to wait things out. The problem obably waited too long.

he fighters were not overly skilled, the crowd themselves as they rooted for their favorites.

ompetitors are quite young and the poise and op with each fight.

e Auditorium, I knew I had seen some serious acked by knowledgeable fans and sponsored by ganization, the Vermont Athletic Association.
lack of experience and form by the fighters, you bouts.

n exciting sport and it should be promoted both d here on campus. It doesn't have the drama
Grand Prix Wrestling, but it does have some of Ali-Foreman fight.

DAVE'S
UTOMOTIVE
INCLUDING
THE FINEST
IN SEMPERIT
RADIAL TIRES
FOREIGN CAR REPAIR SPECIALISTS
Snow Tires
T BUGS & SAAB 95 and 96's
24.95 inc. PET & mounting
G BRAKE JOB $49.95
VW Beetle Exhaust
Complete
$29.95

OW DOWN!!! re not riding
on E&E Retreads!
ete line of new and ed winter tires
nd alignments
. students get 10% discount
ad.
TIRE CO. . INC. 864-
IVERSIDE AVE.7759

Harvard Massacres UVM

by Richard Rotnov

Harvard's display of hockey against the University of Vermont Catamounts clearly indicated that Love Story Oliver Barrett III was not missed. In fact, he could not even make this year's team.

Paralleling what was considered Harvard's finest game of the season, the 7-2 victory over Boston University on December 10th, the Crimson more than equaled that task Friday night, by massacring Vermont, 10-1 before an overflow crowd at the Donald C. Watson rink in Cambridge. Before many of the 2,281 fans were comfortably in their seats, Harvard shattered the hopes and aspirations of the optimistic Catamount fans. Harvard wrapped up the game in the first 3:30 by pummelling home four goals. From that juncture on it was largely a matter of watching in uncomfortable admiration, perhaps the countries' finest hockey team.

Any psychological pitch that may have been established by the Cats to start the game had to have been quickly destroyed. Before the Cats were able to rid themselves of their goose bumps, Harvard struck, just 58 seconds into the contest. The aura of playing "mighty Harvard" was certainly felt by the Vermont players, as Harvard let them know that any pre-game praise and their number two national ranking was genuine. Ted Thorndike deflected in the first goal following a 35 foot slapshot by Todd Nuland. In the midst of a host of players, Thorndike jammed home a puck that Vermont goalie Tom McNamara never saw.

Only twenty seconds after the game's initial goal, Harvard capitalized on a five on three situation. Ban Bolduc passed to Leigh Hogan, who slammed it home for a 2-0 lead. Two more quick goals by Steve Dadigar and Dave Gautier and Vermont appeared destined for their longest night of the year.

The awesome display by Harvard in such rapid fashion stipulated that the rest of the contest would be a case of Vermont being forced to play catch-up hockey. Vermont plays a disciplined brand of hockey; effectively played when Vermont can control the puck. The Cats were forced to abandon their style by playing a "dump and chase" kind of game. There were many occasions when Vermont was unable to bring the puck out of their own zone and would be pressured into giving the puck up before a play could be established.

"We didn't have a two on one all night," said defenseman Johnny Glynne. "It's tough to come back after being down right from the beginning. We had trouble breaking out of our zone and were sloppy as hell. Harvard backchecked well and had four balanced lines. They are the best team we've played all year."

Vermont failed to capitalize on five power play opportunities in the first period. Close in attempts by Rogie Mallette and Bill Koch just missed as Harvard's outstanding goalie, Brian Petrsuek, thwarted any attempt when tested.

The Crimson were checking well and seemed to intuitively know where Vermont was going to pass. The Cats were unable to penetrate and were forced to shoot from far out.

Harvard's Jim Thomas scored at 17:46 to provide the Crimson with an insurmountable 5-0 lead at the conclusion of the first stanza.

Vermont's play improved a great deal during the second period – being outscored only 2-1. Though Harvard controlled the puck for much of the period, Vermont's defense tightened up. When a team is ahead by five goals, it can afford to take chances. In Harvard's case everything seemed to click, and the direct opposite was true for Vermont.

The Catamounts only tally was scored by center Tom Colby at 10:33 of the second period. Colby fought off a defender in front of the crease and poked the puck between Petrusek's pads, to make the score 7-1.

In the third period Harvard added three more goals and Vermont missed opportunities to score as the puck seemed to bounce in the wrong direction only when the Cats hit it. Indicative of how badly Vermont was devastated, Vermont did not have a shot on goal for a combined total of ten minutes of the second and third periods.

Despite trailing by a host of goals the entire game, Vermont skated hard and hustled throughout. Vermont showed a lot of pride and class even though the eventual final score was only academic.

"We were flat and they were flying," said Bill Koch. "They scored in the first period, after that it was catch-up hockey, and we had to abandon our style of play."

According to the Boston Globe's John Powers, "Harvard put together their finest effort of the season, even better than the B.U. game. The key to Harvard is they have four fast lines and a goalie they can take chances with." Match this with Vermont having perhaps their worst night of the year, and the 10-1 score speaks for itself.

Harvard coach Bill Clearly said, "We were so mentally prepared for this game. The importance of this game coupled with the Beanpot final against B.U. Monday necessitated that we come ready to play." Monday night's encounter between Harvard and B.U. will be an interesting indication as to whether anyone can derail high-flying Harvard.

Vermont coach Jim Cross commented regarding a possible future game with Harvard. "If we are fortunate enough to meet Harvard in the playoffs, it could be a different story. We can beat anybody. Harvard beat St. Louis 13-3 and St. Louis came back to win 5-4. This game is now behind us, possibly we've also learned something positive from it."

UVM Five Edges St. Mike's

by Mike Schwartz

Balanced scoring and hot shooting proved too much for the Knights of St. Michael's College last Wednesday evening at the Patrick Gym. UVM had six men in double figures and shot 57 per cent in gaining a 95-82 victory. Vermont swept the traditional series for the first time in the three-year reign of coach Peter Salzberg, upping its record to a formidable 14-6.

UVM experience and depth also played a big role in the victory. Coach Salzberg might have said "It was not a masterpiece" but the Cats played tough ball at important times. In the second half Vermont forced 17 Knight turnovers, despite the foul trouble experienced by Ron Gottschalk.

In the first half the Cats started off strong gaining an early 12-4 lead. The Vermont press foced two steals that led to baskets. They also penetrated the Knight 2-3 zone.

The Cats stayed on top by four to eight points for most of the half. A 64 per cent field goal accuracy kept them on top. The loss of Gottschalk in the first four minutes of the game with three fouls was compensated by a zone defense.

With four minutes left in the half and Vermont ahead, 42-34, St. Mike's closed the gap. They switched zone to man for man depending on the situation and were able to get inside. Ken Johnson, the bulky 250 pound center, hit a follow up and made the three point play. Ted Mauro who effectively hit short jumpers in the half, hit a lay-up. Mike Alston hit a jumper and two free throws to make it 42-42. At the half, both sides were 44-44.

The second half was close for the first eight minutes and then Vermont pulled away. Gottschalk was tagged with his fourth foul, inside the first minute of the half but Bernie Palmer played like a seven footer to take up the slack.

With the score 55-55, Palmer drove down the lane and missed a shot but felt he was fouled. He threw the ball away from the referee and was given a technical foul. However Johnson shot the technical at the wrong basket. This not only proved amusing but really charged up both teams and crowds. Johnson finally hit the shot at the correct basket but UVM now took control. Palmer, as he has all season, proved the key man. With the score 59-58, UVM outscored the Knights, 24-16, to take a 83-74 lead with five minutes to play. During this time, Palmer scored eight of his ten points, was a defensive terror, and rebounded over all the St. Mike's players. Warren Prehmus hit three jumpers during this stretch.

As time ran out, the Cat zone continued to force turnovers as the lead was stretched out to 95-82. Six of these points were on free throws by Terry Green.

As in most Vermont victories, balance was the overall factor. Prehmus had 18 to lead the club in scoring, and he also had 12 assists. Green scored 15 while Mark Cubit contributed 11 points and 6 assists.

Joe Greco did not play too much but had 13 points with 6 for 9 shooting. With Gottschalk on the bench, Kevin Kelly filled the middle and added 10 points while containing Johnson.

Finally, Bernie Palmer proved his worth. Coach Salzberg is never hesitant to point out Palmer's barketball instinct and smartness on the court. Against the Knights Palmer harassed the St. Mike's guards as a chaser in the zone defense, pulled down nine rebounds, continually knocked the ball out of the hands of opponent players, and scored 10 important points.

For the men from Winooski, Johnson had 25. Mike Alston, the freshman playmaker scored 15, but had only two points in the first second half. Alston hurt the Knights with 11 turnovers. However, in the first half his smart floor play helped St. Mike's tie the game. The Knights were hurt because they only played seven players. Their lack of depth limited alternatives in attacking the Catamount defense.

Women's Basketball Roundup

The UVM's women's varsity basketball team played Cortland on Monday, in a game whose final score was not totally indicative of the game that the team played. Only down by one point at the half, UVM was a contender until the last ten minutes of the second half when Cortland pulled away to win 82-52.

Center Chris Comeau was high for Vermont with 12 points, with forwards Gail McWilliam, Sue Murdock, and Marilyn Kinney scoring nine points, eight points, and eight points respectively. UVM was the only team so far this season to break Cortland's press.

In another game on Saturday night, the UVM varsity lost to the University of Maine at Orono, 70-65. Tied at the half, the Vermont and Maine teams exchanged leads throughout the game until UMO finally won it at the buzzer. Forward Sue Murdock had 14 points for Vermont, with forward Gail McWilliam and guard Sally Bremner each getting 12 points. The women's varsity is now 2-4 for the season with a big game coming up with UMass on Friday night.

The Women's junior varsity basketball team extended its winning streak by two more games this week as they beat St. Mike's, 58-44, and the University of Maine at Orono, 42-40. The St. Mike's game on Thursday was a close game at the half, Vermont leading 24-23, but Vermont extended its lead in the second half to win by a comfortable 14 points. A balanced offense and as usual, a strong defense helped Vermont.

It was a good team effort with forward Fran Fried high with 12 points, and guard Yvonne Quist and Khris Clayton with nine points.

Against UMO, Vermont was down 27-20 at the half, but outscored Maine 12-2 in the early minutes of the second half, and went on to win in the waning seconds, 42-40.

The junior varsity record is now 3-0.

Reinhardt To Coach Booters

An assistant coach at the University of Vermont has been named UVM's head varsity mentor, replacing Donald Soderberg, who will step down this spring after five years at the helm.

Paul T. Reinhardt, 27, will guide the Catamount booters next fall, after serving three seasons as the freshman coach, two years as a varsity assistant and two campaigns as the head "B" coach.

A graduate of Cortland State in 1968, Reinhardt came to Vermont that fall and has been affiliated with the soccer program ever since. A three-letter winner at Cortland (soccer, swim, and tennis), he was considered one of the most versatile athletes ever to attend the New York State University.

Soderberg compiled a 25-26-10 mark in five seasons at Vermon, including a Yankee Conference co-championship in 1971, his best season (10-2) at Vermont. The 44-year old Soderberg is expected to stay on at Vermont, continuing his duties as a physical education instructor.

In addition to soccer, Reinhardt will continus his assignments in the area of physical education instruction.

Study in Guadalajara, Mexico
The GUADALAJARA SUMMER SCHOOL, a fully accredited UNIVERSITY OF ARIZONA program, will offer June 30 to August 9, anthropology, art, education, folklore, geography, history, government, language and literature. Tuition and fees, $190, board and room with Mexican family $245. Write to GUADALAJARA SUMMER SCHOOL, 413 Bear Psychology, University of Arizona, Tucson, Arizona 85721.

—EARN CREDIT—
10 MILES OUT AT SEA
at the
SHOALS MARINE LABORATORY
1975 Summer Courses:
• Introduction to Marine Science
• Introduction to Nautical Science
• Seagoing Apprenticeship (aboard a topsail schooner)
For information:
Henry Bokn
202 Plant Science Bldg.
Cornell University
Ithaca, N.Y. 14853

MAZEL'S
Family Shoe Store
194 North St. Burlington
dunham
CONTINENTAL
TYROLEANS®

Also Available
In A 9" Boot
For Men
And Women

Tyroleans . . . the hiking, biking, camping, mountaineering or anywhere boots . . . You'll find 'em at Mazel's in Men's & Ladies' sizes . . . Comfort from first step to last . . . the boots for all outdoors and all seasons.

OPEN DAILY 9 ... FRIDAY ... 9

LAST SENIOR SITTING!!!!
Thursday & FRIDAY FEB. 20 - 21
ALL DAY
Please sign up ahead Monday,
Tuesday, Wednesday
FEB. 17, 18, 19
Come by or call 656-2056
ARIEL OFFICE HOURS
Mondays 1 - 3
WEDNESDAYS 1 - 4
THURSDAY 1-3

GIGANTIC
SKI
SALE

Entire Stock On Sale!!

SKIS
BOOTS
POLES MITTENS
GLOVES
SNOWSHOES
TURTLENECKS
AFTER-SKI
BOOTS
20% to 50% OFF
SOCKS
SKI PANTS
PARKAS
SWEATERS
WARM-UP
PANTS
CAR RACKS
ICE SKATES
UNDERWEAR

ALPINE SHOP
WILLISTON ROAD, SO. BURLINGTON
OPEN DAILY 9 A.M. TO 9 P.M.

Trygve Roiseth shows good landing form at Dartmouth.

Photo by Chris Brown

Plattsburgh Trips Footmen

The University of Vermont track team was outdistanced by Plattsburgh State, Saturday by a score of 67½ to 61½. Mike Bilsta and Billy Looker won two events each and UVM also had two more performers who qualified for the New England Championships in Mike Berry and John Partridge.

Mike Bilsta won the shotput with a distance of 47 feet, 4 inches, and won the 35-pound weight as well. Looker won both the long jump in 21 feet, 7¾ inches and the triple jump.

Mike Berry qualified for the New Englands in the 1,000 yard run with a time of 2:16.8. Northeastern and Tufts will host the championships on Feb.28 - March 1.

Partridge finished second to Bilsta in the 35-pound event but still managed to qualify for the championships.

UVM's next competition is on this coming Saturday in the Yankee Conference Championships at the University of Rhode Island.

THIS WEEK
SALE AT Pants Plus
50% off
FAMOUS MAKER PANTS
2 weeks ONLY SALE
ENDS SAT. FEB, 22
Pants Plus
12 N. WINOOSKI AVE.
BURLINGTON, VT.

Dartmouth Edges Vermont In Fouled Up Carnival

by Chris Brown

The alpine skiers failed to keep pace with the runners and jumpers as UVM finished second to Dartmouth at their 65th winter carnival. The carnival was marked by good conditions and an enthusiastic home crowd.

Stan Dunklee finished first with Morton Gaerun third, leading the UVM runners to what would have been a strong second behind UNH and ahead of a powerful Dartmouth team in the night race on Friday. Also finishing for UVM were Trygve Kjolseth 14th and Joe Lamb, 20th. The race under lights at the Oak Hill area was a difficult one for the officials to run. It was necessary for each skier to make six laps around the 2.5K course. With some forty racers starting every thirty seconds, the action resembled a roller derby and was exciting to watch. Unfortunately there was some confusion in counting laps and some competitors were waved in after their fifth lap. When the mistake was discovered, it was decided that the race would count for individual results, nordic combined results and the skimeister only and not count in the total team scores. This left Dartmouth with a three-event carnival.

Senior and co-captain Petter Kongsli before the usual large Dartmouth crowd won the jump for the fourth time in as many years. This was no surprise as Petter has held the hill record there since his sophomore year. Trygve Roiseth jumped to a third, Joe Lamb to a seventh and UVM took the event for the fourth straight year. Denis Lambert, competing in his first carnival, jumped to a respectable twelfth, beating many veterans from the other Division I schools.

The alpine events went less well. After an early lead with a second, third and sixth in the first run of the slalom Friday afternoon, the team fell apart and failed to duplicate the results of our own carnival. The first bad sign came when Brian Susslin, who had been skiing very well all season fell and badly injured his left shoulder. The best we could do was Chris Brown's third followed by a sixth by Brookie "the rookie" Dodge. This proved good enough for a weak second in the event behind Dartmouth who had first, second and fourth. The Giant Slalom Saturday morning went even worse for us. UVM favorite Dave Dodge eighth in the first run. Brown finished a disappointing ninth followed by Brookie Dodge thirteenth and co-captain Dick Erdman - seventeenth.

The Placid Lamb won the nordic combined beating out Tom Reaper of Dartmouth who finished third. Steve Kendall of New Hampshire, one of the few four event skiers left in the world, took the skimeister; UVM had no one competing for this award. Brown and Brookie Dodge finished fourth and eighth in the alpine combined.

In individual competition during the weekend, UVM's Jay Rand got the third leg on the $1,700 Magaus Satre trophy at the Eastern Jumping Championships and retired it. Petter Korgsli was third, Trygve Rolseth fourth and Joe Lamb fifth. Stan Dunklee led the Eastern x-c team to victory in the National Relays with the fastest lap time. Doug Bruce took a second in a

(continued on page eight)

PFG-Schedule

PATRICK - FORBUSH - GUTTERSON RECREATION SCHEDULE

Weekend of February 14, 15 & 16

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 14
GYM - Faculty-Staff 7-10:30 p.m.
POOL - Faculty-Staff 7-10:30 p.m. (7-8 under 15)
RINK - Faculty-Staff none.
TRACK - Faculty-Staff 7-10:30 p.m.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 15
GYM - Students 8:30-10 p.m.
POOL - Students 7-10:30 p.m.
RINK - Students none.
TRACK - Students 7-10:30 p.m.

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 16
GYM - Students 1-2 and 4-5 p.m.
POOL - Students 1-5 p.m.
RINK - Students 7:30 - 9:30 p.m.
TRACK - Students 1-5 p.m.

HANDBALL AND SQUASH COURTS: By appointment only. Call 656-3069. All recreation may be superseded by varsity activities or special events.

MONDAY through ~~THURSDAY~~
POOL - 8:30-10:30 p.m.
All other facilities - 7-8 p.m.

UVM SPORTS

Bill Rathbone showing great form in the UVM Carnival.

SPS Photo: Tom Rutz

Snowcats Ski Off With Carnival

by Jeff Green

After several years of not being able to hold a Carnival meet due to poor snow, the UVM ski team finally got theirs going again. The circuit consists of 4 carnivals. Traditionally UVM is first then comes Dartmouth's then Williams, and Middlebury which is the Eastern Championships. Appropriately enough UVM won their winter carnival by a comfortable margin of 33 points with UNH second, Dartmouth third and Middlebury fourth.

Action started on Thursday with the cross country. Originally planned to be held at Williston, it was moved at the last minute to Underhill for what else? - not enough snow. First place went to Chris Nice of Dartmouth (and a U.S. "B" team member). But UVM pulled strong finishes with Stan Dunklee third (also U.S. team member) Morton Garuud fifth, Trygve Kjolseth eighth, and Joe Lamb fifteenth. So, for combined totals UVM won the race.

Friday was Alpine with the slalom and giant slalom, a long hard day for all. UVM continued to dominate with second place to co-captain Dick Erdman, third Doug Bruce, fourth Brian Susslin, seventh to Kirk Dice. Bill Rathbone had a good first run, but fell in the second.

In the Giant Slalom we lost some of our momentum under cold gray skies. Peter Anderson of Dartmouth won while we scored with Doug Bruce fifth and Brian Susslin sixth. A word of praise must go out to all the UVM volunteer gatekeepers who braved the cold all day long tending gates. After the end of three events we still held the lead, with the jump coming up; also being one of our strongest events.

As of Friday there was barely any snow on the jump. Thanks to the help of a local construction company and the Nordic team, they imported the snow from parking lots. This was the first official meet to be held on this jump since it was re-designed two years ago with the help of Peter Kongsli. And it is only fitting that he win - which he did - to the enjoyment of a good crowd of spectators. Trygve Rolseth followed behind Kongsli by one point for second and Joe Lamb was sixth. This also gave Joe the Nordic combined title.

Many thanks go to the friends of UVM skiing who made it possible. Sights are now on the Eastern championships at Middlebury and then to the NCAA in Colorado, in which we were third last year. Watch for us.

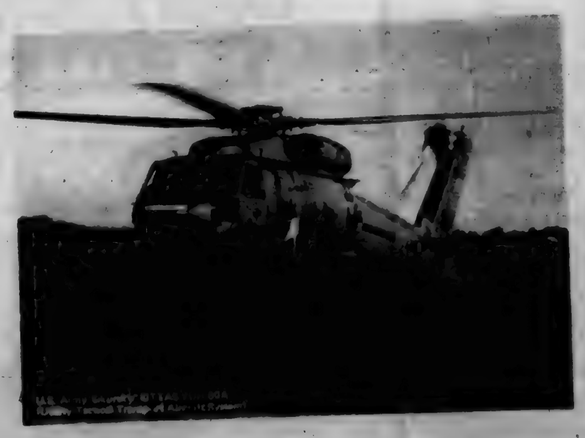
HOW TO MAKE
YOUR LAST TWO YEARS AT UVM
MEAN EVEN MORE

IF YOU ATTEND THE ARMY ROTC BASIC CAMP AT FT. KNOX, KY.
FOR SIX WEEKS THIS SUMMER, YOU MAY QUALIFY
FOR AN OFFICER'S COMMISSION IN TWO YEARS

TOTAL CASH BENEFITS
APPROXIMATELY

$3000.00

WHILE IN SCHOOL



FOR FURTHER INFORMATION, CONTACT MAJOR DON SAFFORD
MILITARY STUDIES DEPARTMENT - THIRD FLOOR WILLIAMS HALL

PRIOR TO 1 MARCH 1975

VOLUME XCIII
NUMBER 6
FEBRUARY 20, 1975

Dr. Wayn... Preside...

by Margo Howland

UVM Executive Vice President Dr. Wayne Patterson was appointed acting President by the University of Vermont Board of Trustees at their meeting Saturday. His position will take effect July 1, when outgoing President Dr. Edward C. Andrews, Jr., will become President of the Maine Medical Center. (Andrews announced his resignation in January.)

Patterson will not be a candidate for the permanent post.

"That's for a variety of reasons; personal reasons, and also because there are other things I'd like to do. At this time in my life I'm not willing to ... after five years in a position like ... willing to st... one," he ... interview.

Patterson ... makes him ... youngest acti... was another ... deciding aga... permanent ... would I do ... asked. Patter... university in ... of the psycho...

When a... reaction to h... presiden... responded: ... of what I ... don't find it ... overpowering Interstate 9... Transport...

by Stephen W. Tanner

At 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, February 11, the Vermont House Transportation Committee held its hearing for citizen input on the Transportation Advisory Board's Ten Year State Transportation Plan. About 100 concerned citizens gathered in the general assembly chambers of the Montpelier State House to air their views.

As was expected, the center of attention was not the Ten Year Plan in its entirety, but rather the fact that it deletes a plan for construction of the culmination of Interstate 93 at St. Johnsbury in the Northeast Kingdom of the state. This proposed 11-mile stretch would link I-91 which runs up the eastern side of the state through St. Johnsbury with already finished I-93 in Littleton, New Hampshire.

Governor Salmon has come out in opposition to construction of the highway. The Transportation Advisory Board recommends, in place of the I-93 stretch, a 4-mile spur to run from the I-91 Interchange at St. Johnsbury east to Vermont Route 18 which now runs across the Connecticut River to New Hampshire. The spur, in combination with Route 18, would link the two Interstates instead of the proposed I-93 highway.

The estimated cost of the 11-mile Interstate 93 would be $31 million. The estimated cost of the spur would be $10 million. Assuming the state can persuade the Secretary of Transportation to change the federal highway plans and accept the spur instead of the I-93 stretch, Vermont would only have to pay 10 percent of the total cost. The federal government would pay the other 90 percent. Thus the I-93 stretch would cost the state about $3 million. The possibility does exist that the state could receive only 70 percent funding from the federal government, in which case the spur would cost $3 million, the I-93 ... If th... the ... Transp... federal ... include ... of the ... Transp... has r... Vermo... pending ... courts ... of I-9... Notch ... decides ... part of ... I-93 is ... Notch ... Notch ... fought ... the F... Comm... highw... through ... take o... Mount ... carving ... is a gre... De... of th... effort... federa... Verm... Advis... reco... decisio... I-93 b... A... Gene... Tran... Board ... about ... St. ... when ... the ... imp... com... to. ... Tra... Tran... woul... the ... Verm... the ... Veh... $ o... tran... Thi... "we... rea... tran... bet...

FEBRUARY 13, 1975

PORTS

...ival. SPS Photo: Tom Rutz

...With Carnival

...fifth ...fth, and ...So, for ...won the ...with the ...m, a long ...ll. UVM ...nate with ...co-captain ...rd Doug ...Suslin, ...Dice. Bill ...first run, ...mi we lost ...um under ...Anderson ...while we ...Bruce fifth ...h. A word ...to all the ...stekeepers ...d all day ...fter the ...we still ...the jump coming up) also being one of our strongest events.

As of Friday there was barely any snow on the jump. Thanks to the help of a local construction company and the Nordic team, they imported the snow from parking lots. This was the first official meet to be held on this jump since it was re-designed two years ago with the help of Peter Kongsli. And it is only fitting that he win - which he did - to the enjoyment of a good crowd of spectators. Trygve Roiseth followed behind Kongsli by one point for second and Joe Lamb was sixth. This also gave Joe the Nordic combined title.

Many thanks go to the friends of UVM skiing who made it possible. Sights are now on the Eastern championships at Middlebury and then to the NCAA in Colorado, in which we were third last year. Watch for us

VOLUME XCIII
NUMBER 6
FEBRUARY 20, 1975

VERMONT CYNIC

'Tis a priviledge to live in Vermont

University of Vermont
Burlington, Vermont

Dr. Wayne Patterson Named Acting President By Board Of Trustees

by Margo Howland

UVM Executive Vice President Dr. Wayne Patterson was appointed acting President by the University of Vermont Board of Trustees at their meeting Saturday. His position will take effect July 1, when outgoing President Dr. Edward C. Andrews, Jr., will become President of the Maine Medical Center. (Andrews announced his resignation in January.)

Patterson will not be a candidate for the permanent post.

"That's for a variety of reasons; personal reasons, and also because there are other things I'd like to do. At this time in my life I'm not willing to ... after five years in a position like this, you're not willing to step into another one;" he said in a Cynic interview.

Patterson is 39, which makes him the University's youngest acting president. That was another factor in his deciding against seeking the permanent position. "What would I do when I'm 44?" he asked. Patterson came to the university in 1965 as a member of the psychology department.

When asked about his reaction to being named acting president, Patterson responded: "It's an extension of what I am doing now; I don't find it either shocking or overpowering. Best of all, it's temporary, so there's an end in sight even before the beginning.

"Basically, the problems of the next year or two are something I'd be working on anyway," he added.

Patterson said he had been invited to meet with the Presidential Search Committee to discuss the roles of the President.

"I will ask them to hold it in executive session. As acting president I have to work with everyone here ... I don't have any big secrets to tell them, but I myself would be much more comfortable; I wouldn't have to worry about someone taking a remark out of context."

Patterson discussed some of the views he intends to present to the committee. First of all, the ideal choice for president "should come with a very strong academic background," Patterson believes. "I think at this point President Andrews has built this institution into a distinctively high-quality institution in an academic sense," he added. "Obviously, the person has to have administrative qualities."

Physical stamina is very important, according to Patterson.

"You literally have to go nights on end with very little sleep. You can't afford to be overweight. If you don't stay in good physical condition you do the university a disservice," he declared.

"There are a lot of different ways you can run an administration," Patterson continued. "I know that this has been the most open administration the University has ever seen. I am committed to keeping this process open. I am concerned with the quality of the institution. I have seen it improve markedly.

"I want to look very carefully at this merger thing; I oppose it now because I think it would adversely affect the quality of the university. Without the quality, we're not going to get the students."

Patterson is very concerned about the condition of the Student Association's student government branch, the S.A. Senate. The Senate formally dissolved itself two weeks ago and at present the only existing legislative body is the Inter-Residence Association (IRA) which represents only residence halls.

Patterson emphasized the importance of some kind of communication and feedback between the administration and the students.

"Since there is no student government, I am very uncomfortable with that. I wanted to work with a group of students representative of the student body and get input... when you lose a distinct governing body like the student Senate you're at a distinct disadvantage."

Patterson mentioned the student Steering Committee that was involved in the budget cuts, and expressed the hope that S.A. President Peter MacAusland can pull the S.A. Senate together.

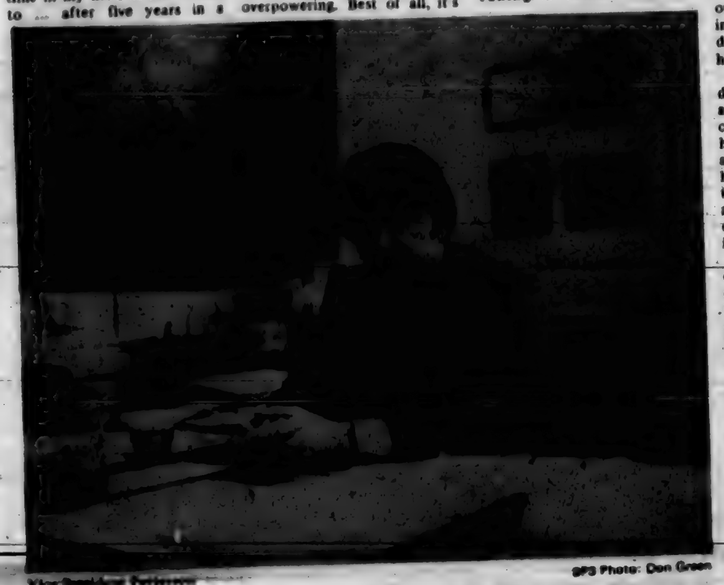
"What a time to be leaderless! An administrator cannot be effective administering in a vacuum," he exclaimed.

Patterson commented on the oft-quoted S.A. Senate complaint that "the administration never does what we say."

"They're misperceiving the role. In a sense, you can't delegate decision-making where there is no responsibility. On the other hand, there is a distinct advisory capacity...in the student Senate. You can listen and still disagree; the underpass is an example. Three years ago the students were unanimously in favor of an underpass. Today they appear to be unanimously opposed to it.

"I have always told the Senate that I would appear at any time to talk to them," Patterson continued. "The most they've invited me over to speak is once a year; whereas with IRA, I have visited with them several times... They are going to have to do something, or else we will open up [illegible]

(continued on page eight)



Vice President Patterson — SPS Photo: Don Green

Structure Of New Student Government Takes Form

by Mark Sawyer

The probable form of a new student government was outlined Tuesday night at a meeting of interested students.

Student Association President Peter MacAusland called the meeting to accept proposals concerning a new student government "from the general student body."

The meeting was poorly attended and only one concrete proposal was offered, but it was heralded as the foundation for a new government.

The proposal, offered by Dave Schwartz, would create a legislative body divided into six committees which would have specialized functions, each being involved in a distinct area of student concern.

Schwartz's proposal would create a finance committee, student activities committee, environment improvement committee, elections committee, special affairs committee, and student action committee.

Schwartz emphasized that although each committee would function in an autonomous area there would be considerable interaction between committees. Many issues, for example are an inextricable mixture of political and financial concerns which would require action by more than one committee.

Besides the elected representatives serving on committees, student input would come from meetings open to the entire student body.

Any student would be able to introduce legislation through one of the committees. The committee would then have the option of accepting, rejecting, or amending the legislation. If the bill is approved through the committee, it would be presented at the open meeting to be voted on.

Open meetings would be called when there were enough bills to be voted on at any open meeting would be published in the previous weeks' Cynic.

The bill would then be approved or rejected on the basis of a simple majority of the students attending the open meeting.

Schwartz was unsure about how elections would be conducted, but the number of elected representatives would remain at sixty, ten members serving on each of the six committees.

In essence, the proposal involves specialization of function of the elected representatives. Each representative would be concentrated on one area of student concern and not have to become involved in every facet of SA's activities.

It was felt that this kind of committee structure would also improve the attendence of representatives since each individual would be deeply involved in specific issues.

Provisions would also be made to impeach any representative that consistently missed his committee's meetings.

One concern raised about the proposal was the power of the committees to keep bills from being ramrodded by students at the open meeting.

Schwartz, however, reiterated that the proposal is only a rough outline and will be improved upon in specific areas.

MacAusland is preparing a referendum to be voted on by the student body, concerning the kind of government they desire. At this point, however, Schwartz's proposal seems to be the only alternative to no government at all.

Financial Crisis Forces Closing Of Day Care Center

by Randy Jansen

In a press conference, parents and staff of UVM's Day Care Center expressed their dismay and anger at the closing of the UVM Day Care Center. The Day Care Center was informed by Academic Vice President, Alfred Rollins that UVM can no longer afford to fund the Center and that it will close June 30.

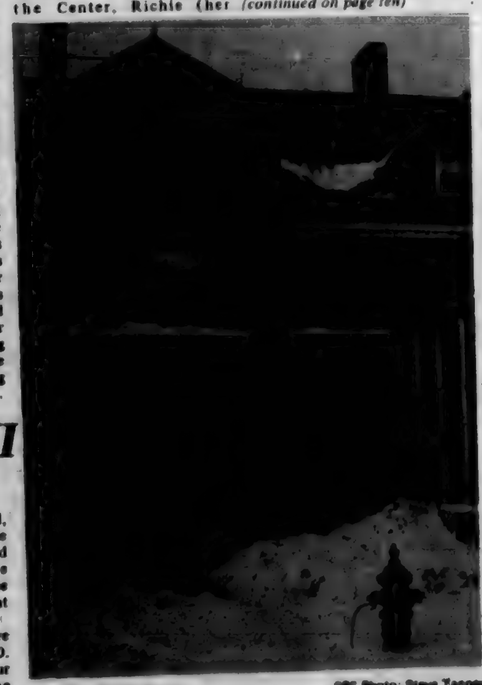
Dr. Rollins has supported the Center in the past, but felt that the University cannot support a "community service" in the current financial crisis. He was especially concerned about the deficit which this year amounted to $20,000. Stephen Schuster, parent and attorney, countered this saying, "Income to UVM would diminish. Grants now expended here probably would cease. This needed federal income upon which UVM depends would in all likelihood be reduced." The Center calculates that non-Center money for UVM was $40,000.

Helen Brink, parent and Day Care Center Board of Director, questions the method UVM used to calculate the deficit. She said that the building overhead (which equals the deficit) should be paid out of grant income as other UVM research projects are paid. "We justified our building cost to Rollins because of the educational and research grants." The Center claims that if building expenses, which form a large portion of the operating deficit, were included into the legitimate overhead formula, there would be no deficit.

UVM's Day Care Center provides service for approximately 90 children, ages 2-6 of which 60 percent are from low-income families, [illegible] percent are [illegible] and 50 percent are UVM affiliated. It is these special services that parents and staff fear they will lose most. Peter Huber, parent and staff member, emphasized that the Day Care Center children "receive early and vital health screening services with a special attention to children with handicaps or other individual developmental problems." Lesly Greene, another parent, added, "Since enrollment at the Center, Richie (her 2-year-old son) has received speech therapy in a two-to-one setting and in a group therapy program on a regular basis from a speech pathologist. Richie began receiving speech therapy at a crucial time in his development. I am sometimes [illegible] what might have happened had we waited another year before getting help."

In a Day Care Center fact sheet, many of the educational advantages were pointed out. Over 400 UVM students have used the Day Care Center for educational purposes of which 8 percent have been at the graduate level. The fact sheet stated that a large and "diverse interdisciplinary involvement" is involved in the Day Care

(continued on page ten)



UVM Day Care Center — SPS Photo: Steve Tanner

Interstate 93 Main Issue At Transportation Hearing

by Stephen W. Tanner

At 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, February 11, the Vermont House Transportation Committee held its hearing for citizen input on the Transportation Advisory Board's Ten Year State Transportation Plan. About 100 concerned citizens gathered in the general assembly chambers of the Montpelier State House to air their views.

As was expected, the center of attention was not the Ten Year Plan in its entirety, but rather the fact that it deletes a plan for construction of the culmination of Interstate 93 at St. Johnsbury in the Northeast Kingdom of the state. This proposed 11-mile stretch would link I-91 which runs up the eastern side of the state through St. Johnsbury with already finished I-93 in Littleton, New Hampshire.

Governor Salmon has come out in opposition to construction of the highway. The Transportation Advisory Board recommends, in place of the I-93 stretch, a 4-mile spur to run from the I-91 interchange at St. Johnsbury east to Vermont Route 18 which now runs across the Connecticut River to New Hampshire. The spur, in combination with Route 18, would link the two Interstates instead of the proposed I-93 highway.

The estimated cost of the 11-mile Interstate 93 would be $31 million. The estimated cost of the spur would be $10 million. Assuming the state can persuade the Secretary of Transportation to change the federal highway plans and accept the spur instead of the I-93 stretch, Vermont would only have to pay 10 percent of the total cost. The federal government would pay the other 90 percent. Thus the I-93 stretch would cost the state about $3 million. The possibility does exist that the state could receive only 70 percent funding from the federal government, in which case the spur would cost $3 million, the same amount as the I-93 stretch itself.

If the state cannot persuade the Secretary of Transportation to alter the federal Interstate plans to include the spur in replacement of the I-93 stretch, the Transportation Advisory Board has recommended that Vermont wait until suits pending in New Hampshire courts against the construction of I-93 through Franconia Notch are settled before it decides on whether to build its part of the Interstate. Presently I-93 is completed south of the Notch to Littleton, N.H. The Notch construction is being fought by local businesses and the Franconia Chamber of Commerce because, if the highway were to intrude through the Notch, it would take out "The Old Man of the Mountain," a natural stone carving in the rock face which is a great tourist attraction.

Depending on the outcome of those New Hampshire efforts to stop the planned federal Interstate highway, Vermont's Transportation Advisory Board has secondarily recommended that any decision on the construction of I-93 be postponed.

At the hearing, Robert Gensburg, Chairman of the Transportation Advisory Board, stated he was "sorry about the flak raised over the St. Johnsbury interchange" when so many other parts of the report were more important. He cited his committee's recommendation to:

(1) Create an Agency of Transportation and Transportation Board, which would assume the functions of the Dept. of Highways, the Vermont Aeronautics Board, the Department of Motor Vehicles, and the Public Service Board (in transportation matters only). This move, said Gensburg, "would create a focus of responsibility... coordinate transportation planning... and better utilize state employees" by using their expertise in more than one isolated department.

(2) Merge General and Highway Funds into one fund for transportation so that highway funds are not used to fund various offices while general funds are used to support highway ventures. Gensburg said the two were, in reality, merged, but that the "highway fund should be dissolved and be allowed to compete with other transportation problems for their allocations."

(3) Create the power to designate certain roads in Vermont as Scenic Roads, according to standards promulgated by the Highway Board.

(4) Make enabling legislation for local and regional transportation

(continued on page ten)

Andrews Speaks On Future Of UVM

by Randy Jansen

During a short interview last week, President Andrews spoke about issues concerning the University and his future. Andrews will resign this summer after five years as president of UVM. A new job awaits him in Maine, where he will become President of the Maine Medical Center.

Five years ago when Andrews became president, in 1971, he set a personal timetable of six years. He feels "very strongly that college presidents should have six-year terms." Andrews was offered his new position last summer, but he rejected it. However, when the offer came up again in October he accepted.

President Andrews is enthusiastic about his new presidency. "It's a tailor-made job," said Andrews. He explained that it was in the field he was most familiar with and the one he most enjoyed, medicine. The Portland area is another pleasing point as Andrews desires to work only in Vermont or Maine.

He emphasized that the financial crisis had nothing to do with his resignation. In fact, Andrews had planning to seek a new job when the budget situation came up forcing him to refuse the first offer from Maine. Andrews termed "nonsense" the AP report, which stated Andrews resigned because of UVM's financial difficulties.

Andrews was asked about how his resignation will affect his effectiveness with the Vermont Legislature. He replied, "I thought about that. I feel quite strongly it should not weaken my position with the legislature." At the present, the President only presents issues and facts to the

(continued on page ten)

Burlington Shooting Case In Review, Part II

by Peter Duquette

Editor's note: Last week, in the first of a series of investigative reports, Peter Duquette reported the events surrounding the Burlington shooting death in September of Luis Ponce Marin Rodriguez. This week he takes up the case where he left off, with the reaction from the Vermonters for Justice, the A.C.L.U., and the Vermont Bar Association.

During the last week in November, several public groups and agencies announced their interest and involvement in the Luis Ponce case. A coalition known as Vermonters For Justice circulated a petition demanding a public hearing on the circumstances relating to the case. At the same time, David Harrison, executive director of the Vermont office of the American Civil Liberties Union, stated that the A.C.L.U. would have something to announce "very soon." John Downs, head of the Vermont Bar Association, and a St. Johnsbury lawyer, called for a grand jury investigation of the case. And, in the political arena, Kimberly Cheney, Attorney General and candidate in an unresolved election dispute, announced that if the election were decided in his favor, he would order a probe into the shooting.

During the week of December 30, Vermonters for Justice announced a petition of over 2,000 signatures, demanding a hearing into charges of misconduct leveled against Miles in regard to the shooting. The petition was presented to Mark Kaplan, Chairman of the Burlington Board of Alderman.

Vermonters for Justice is a loose state-wide coalition which includes members of the Liberty Union Party and the Vietnam Veterans Against the War/Winter Soldiers Organization (VVAW/WSO). In a statement released to the press, the organization stated, "We feel that only when full disclosure is made of all facts relevent to Rodriguez's death, can the people of this community exercise their right to decide if there has been negligence or misconduct on the part of (Burlington) detective Harold Miles and the Burlington Police Department." It was reported that some members of the group are friends of the Rodriguez family in Rhode Island.

At this point in time, there had been five investigations into the shooting. There were two separate investigations by the Vermont State Police and seperate investigations by the Chittenden County State's Attorney's office, the Burlington City Police, and the State's Chief Medical Examiner, Dr. Lawrence Harris. All five investigations arrived at the same conclusions. They concluded, as did Patrick Leahy, that the shooting of the Rhode Island man was "justifiable homicide," and that police were justified in assuming that he was armed.

These conclusions were questioned by VVAW/WSO. They asked why, in four investigations, were the following questions left unanswered: (1) Why, with four officers present, was it necessary to kill the man? (2) Why was the man shot in the back of the head? (3) Were proper police procedures followed during the arrest? (4) Why weren't less violent means used to subdue the man?

On Tuesday, December 31, The Burlington Free Press reported that the Vermont Chapter of the A.C.L.U. was to file suit on behalf of Mrs. Ponce. At this time they declined to disclose the amount they were asking.

(continued on page ten)

Featured This Week

His First Gay Dance, Part II....p.5
At Long Last!!!! Doctor's Bag....p.8
Student Opinion Poll....p. 9
New Albums By Marshall Tucker And Bonnie Bramlett Reviewed....p.9

This paper is recyclable. Call Robinson Hall for more information. 656-3084.

- CALENDAR and ANNOUNCEMENTS -

Cynic Hosts Free Press Editor

The Vermont Cynic will host an editor from the Burlington Free Press to discuss journalistic technique and the role of a newspaper in the community. The discussion, open to all, will be held in Billings Roundroom next Thursday, February 27, at 6:30 p.m.

We encourage all interested members of the community to attend. Not only would this be a good opportunity to get a professional viewpoint on journalism as a form of mass media writing and its current state amidst the economic situation, but would be a good opportunity as well to air views on how well the Cynic serves the campus community.

B.B. King In Concert

B. B. King will appear in concert in Burlington on April 16, at the Memorial Auditorium. This giant of blues will certainly give you your money's worth. Tickets are $5.00 in advance, and $6.00 at the door.

VPIRG Trustee Elections

This year the elections for trustees to the Vermont Public Interest Research Group will coincide with the elections for S.A. President. Anyone wishing to represent UVM on the VPIRG Board may leave their name and address either at the Billings Center Student Activities office or at the VPIRG office on 49 N. Prospect Street, 863-3435.

VPIRG trustees basically set all policy decisions for the student run lobby group. For example, last year the trustees decided to work for more strict controls over nuclear power regulation and to present a children's health care program but decided not to take a stand on either the abortion controversy or the controversy over re-instatement of the death penalty.

Gates Hall Opens

Yes, there is a Gates Hall!

Formerly Gamma Phi Beta sorority, the house at 381 Main Street is now known as Gates Hall, honoring the family which built the imposing structure.

The University is renting the house from the sorority this semester, and it is home for 24 women students, including a resident advisor and a resident assistant.

Six of the women are from Converse, which is closed for renovations. Others are transfer students. The some 150 students who were housed in Converse during the fall semester are now living in other quarters throughout the campus housing system.

Resident advisor Cindy Blanchard says few people are aware that Gates Hall exists— if a student tells you that's where she lives, believe her! She's not making it up.

The house hopes to have a sign on the lawn soon, and the telephone number is Ext.4183. If you can't get through by calling the extension, there is a pay phone in the building too. It's 864-9642.

Karma Yoga

Ananda Marga Class in Meditation and Karma Yoga, 12 noon to 5 p.m., Sunday, February 23. Free of Charge. Call to Register: 862-1802.

Davis Brothers' Garage At WDW

WDW presents Davis Brothers' Garage and an open bar Friday, February 21 from 9 - 1 a.m. in Simpson Dining Hall. Cost is $2.50 per person. For tickets and information, see Barb (320 Wing, x-2695). Nikki (209 Wing, x-2693), or Hank (202 Wilks, x-3443).

Tickets will be sold at the door, but a ceiling will be put on, so BUY YOUR TICKETS NOW.

Women's Lacrosse Meeting

There will be an organizational meeting for all women interested in spring varsity Lacrosse or Softball on Monday, February 24 at 7 p.m. in Southwick South Lounge. Physicals, training, and schedules will be discussed. If you are interested but unable to make this meeting call Miss Schiller concerning Lacrosse and Miss Gurette about softball at 3240.

UVM Military Ball

One of the oldest collegiate military balls in the country is set for Feb.15, as the 107th University of Vermont's Military Ball is scheduled for the Marble Island Club on Mallets Bay, beginning at 9 p.m.

Tickets may be purchased in the Cadet Lounge located on the fourth floor of the Williams Science Building at the University.

Delta Delta Delta Awarding Service Scholarship

The annual Delta Delta Delta Service Projects scholarship competition is being held here at UVM. All full-time undergraduate women students on this campus are eligible to apply. Applicants should be well-qualified students, showing promise of valuable service in their chosen field. Academic record, contribution to campus life, and financial need are points to be considered.

Delta Delta Delta Sorority will be awarding a scholarship of $450. All local winners in the colleges/universities where there are Tri-Delta chapters will automatically be eligible for one of the $1000 awards to be made by Delta Delta Delta's National Service Projects Fund.

Application forms are available from the Director of Financial Aid or Delta Delta Delta Sorority.

Completed applications must be returned to Delta Delta Delta Sorority on 143 S. Williard St., or the Director of Financial Aid, 330 Waterman on or before February 25.

John Dewey Philosophy Club

The John Dewey Philosophy Club will present Gareth B. Mathews, Professor of Philosophy at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, on February 20 and 21. He will be speaking on the "Concept of the Soul". Professor Mathews will give three lectures on this topic.

FIRST LECTURE: The Souls of Animals: Are Human Beings Prejudiced Against Animals? (Thursday, February 20, at 4:30 p.m. in L/L Room D 107.)

SECOND LECTURE: The Soul of the Foetus: When is Abortion Justified? (Thursday February 20 at 8:00 p.m. in L/L Room D 107.)

THIRD LECTURE: The Souls of Machines: Might a Computer be Conscious? (Friday, February 21 at 3:30 p.m. in L/L Room D 107.)

All Are Welcome!!

Arab And Israeli Discussion

Friends of Vermont ETV are hosting a discussion group in conjunction with a series currently being broadcast on Vermont ETV entitled "The Arabs and the Israelis."

The group meets at A-161 Living/Learning Center on the UVM campus to watch the program, with a discussion group following. A group of OPEC nation and Israeli students participate in the discussion each week, and the public is welcome to join them.

The next showing of "The Arabs and the Israelis" is set for Wednesday (Feb. 19) at 8 p.m., and the program will also be seen on Feb. 26, with the group meeting on each occasion.

Coordinating the program is Carolyn Sokya of the Friends of Vermont ETV, with assistance from John Engroff of the UVM faculty.

At the Fleming Museum, the new American Plains Indians exhibit is on display in the Ethnographic Gallery along with the recently opened "Twentieth Century American Art: The First Four Decades" in the American Gallery. On Friday, Feb. 28, the museum will hold a gallery talk on "Travelling in Style" for members only. If interested in joining, call 656-2090 and talk with Bernice Cohen.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 20

12 noon, The Non-Academic Employees' Council meets in Waterman's Memorial Lounge.

12 noon, The UVM Women's Caucus meets at the Women's Center, Blundell House, Redstone Campus. Open to all.

4:30 p.m., The John Dewey Philosophy Club presents Gareth B. Mathews, Professor of Philosophy at the University of Mass. at Amherst, today and tomorrow in a series of three lectures on the "Concept of the Soul." Today: "The Souls of Animals—Are Human Beings Prejudiced Against Animals?" at Living/Learning, Room D, 107, which is near the Commons Area.

4:30 p.m., The Faculty Senate meets in 101 Votey.

7 p.m., The Intervarsity Christian Fellowship welcomes Rev. Andrew Friend, TEAM Missionary from Mozambique, as a guest speaker. For more information, call Gordon Cook at 863-4089.

7:30 p.m., SA Films presents the musical, "Flying Down to Rio", 101 Votey, free.

7:30 p.m., Prof. Allen Shepherd of UVM's English Department will lead a fiction reading in Dewey Lounge, Old Mill.

7:30 p.m., The Third World Organization sponsors an African Dance Workshop, instructed by Marta Jones in Southwick Ballroom. To register arrive at 7:15 p.m., with $2.

8 p.m., The second lecture in the series of philosophy seminars by Gareth B. Mathews, will be held in D 107, Living/Learning. Topic: "The Soul of the Foetus: When is Abortion Justified.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 21

3:10 p.m., An Engineering-Physics seminar will be held in A 531, Cook, dealing with the topic of "Fracture and its Physical Basis," a lecture by Dr. Robb Thomson of the Institute of Materials Research, National Bureau of Standards in Washington, D.C.

3:30 p.m., The third lecture in the series of philosophy seminars by Gareth Mathews, 107 D, Living-Learning. "The Souls of Machines: Might A Computer Be Conscious?"

4 p.m., Medical seminar led by Aaron S. Posner, Ph. D., biochemistry professor, Cornell Univ., "The Ultrastructure of Bone Mineral", 329 C, Given.

Baha'i Firesides, 7:30 p.m., 71 S. Williams St.

7:30 and 10:30 p.m., SA FILMS presents the return of the big film, "Day of the Jackal", 101 Votey, $1.

7:30 and 9:30 p.m., Lane Series offers "An Evening with W. C. Fields", Marsh Life Science, $1.

8 p.m., Folk dancing at Southwick Ballroom, all are welcome.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 22

9 a.m. to noon, Intervarsity Christian Fellowship is offering a seminar on evangelism which will include a bible study, discussion and informal talk on the motives and methods of evangelism. Held at 864 lounge. All are welcome.

9 a.m. to noon, and 1 to 4 p.m., The Church St. Center sponsores a one-day workshop dealing with "Value Clarification and Life Planning." Call 656-4221 for further details.

7:30 and 9:30 p.m., SA Films presents Kathryn Hepburn in "Adam's Rib." Free Admission, 101 Votey.

8 p.m., Lane Series presents "P.D.Q. Bach," Memorial Auditorium, 656-3418 for reservations.

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 23

12 noon, a workshop sponsored by the Center for Counseling and Testing will be held in the Center dealing with the topic "Stress Reduction". Group limited to 12 faculty/student members. Call 656-4221 to sign up.

6 p.m., Church St. Center's Legislative Study Group meets at 135 Church St.

8:30 p.m., County folk singers Jim Ringer and Mary McCaslin from California will perform in an evening of acoustic music at another Simpson Hall Coffee House. Admission is only 75 cents.

9 p.m., SA Concerts brings Southern Rock to Burlington with the Marshall Tucker Band and Bonnie Bramlett (formerly of Delany and Bonnie). Student tickets are priced at $4.50 and are available only at the UVM Bookstore; non-student tickets are $5.50 and can be purchased at Bailey's, as well as on campus.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 24

12 noon, Dr. Forrest Weight, Chief of the Section on Synaptic Pharmacology of the National Institute of Health, will speak on the subject of: "Mechanisms of Generation of Slow Synaptic Potentials in Sympathetic Ganglia." The lecture is held in C 219, Given Building.

2 to 4:30 and 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., Psi Upsilon representatives available for informal discussion in Marsh Lounge at Billings Center with any interested in becoming charter members of new chapter at University of Vermont. Participating in plans are undergraduate members from Amherst, Bowdoin, Dartmouth, Trinity, Union, and Wesleyan; alumni in Burlington; and officer from the Executive Office. Further information can be obtained from Director of Student Activities and the Billings Center, Bill Root, at 656-2060 and Frank W. Sanford at 656-2034.

7 p.m., The Living/Learning Nutrition Program meets in 115 Commons as an exercise class in nutritional counseling. All are welcomed.

7 p.m., The Military Studies Dept. lecture series entitled "Issues '75" presents Brigadier General Mildred C. Bailey, Director of the Women's Army Corps, who will speak on "Women in the Army: The Equal Professional", B 106 Cook. All are invited.

7:30 and 9:30 p.m., SA Films presents the French classic, "Playtime," 101 Votey, admission free.

8 p.m., The Cross Cultural Program Lecture Series presents Dr. Stephen L. Pastner who will speak on "The Cultural Ecology Nomads in Pakistan and Ethiopia", D 170, Living/Learning.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 25

9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Vista Peace Corps will be available through Thursday in Billings Center for all interested seniors. Sign up in the Placement Office, Mansfield House.

12 noon, Alice D. Outwater will NOT lead the study workshop today and next week. Instead, a tape on relaxing for exams will be featured and Janet Forgays will conduct the class.

12:15 p.m., A cross country ski class for faculty and staff member begins today. Register by calling Janice Lange at 656-3240.

4:10 p.m., Dr. George M. Blakeslee of UVM's Forestry Department will lead a biology seminar on the topic of "Mycorrhizae" in 105 Marsh Life Sciences Building. Coffee will be served at 3:55 p.m. in Room 107.

7 p.m., The Intervarsity Christian Fellowship group is holding a series of Bible studies on the book of Colossians every Tuesday evening. All are welcome to attend at 205 S. Prospect St., Apt. 2.

7:15 p.m., "Othello" will be shown in 101 Votey as part of the Shakespeare Film Series. Admission is $1.

8 p.m., Two Irish writer-poets, Tom MacIntyre and Deborah Tull, both of Inishbeffin, County Galway, will lead a public reading in Dewey Lounge, Old Mill. Sponsored by the English department, the presentation is open to the public and free.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 26

9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Vista Peace Corps will still be in Billings for interested seniors. Sign up at the Placement Office, Mansfield House.

12 noon, Nancy Koch from the Counseling and Testing Center will lead an hour of relaxation and meditation at the center.

12:15 p.m., This week's Lunch Bunch Film is "Kon Tiki", the story of Thor Hayerdahl's voyage across the Pacific Ocean. Admission is free and public is invited each Wednesday.

4 p.m., The Spanish Dept. is proud to announce the resumption of the weekly "Tertulia", an informal gathering of

(continued on page three)

IRA Endorses

The Inter-Residence Association at its weekly meeting Monday evening voted to endorse the use of United Farm Worker's lettuce by SAGA food service. SAGA had previously requested a decision on the issue.

The decision stated that SAGA "would buy only UFW lettuce and delete other items of equal cost from the (food) program when cost or yield of the lettuce is not favorable compared to other lettuce. General support of the Farm Worker's movement by UVM students prompted the boycott. The stipulation that other items may be deleted temporarily from the food program due to price difference was implemented with the understanding that the price difference is seldom large enough to warrant a deletion.

Anyone having suggestions, questions, or complaints about this action is requested to contact their IRA representative.

The CORNER BOOKSTORE

Osmiroid Pens make great gifts.

Ask any artist!

Osmiroid Pens are beautifully balanced and proportioned for fluid writing ease. Easy to fill. A pleasure to use. The ultimate tool for any artist who does hand lettering. Pens from $2.50. Sets from $7.50. Nibs from $1.25.

Art Shop — Lower Level
Corner Church & College Sts.
Downtown Burlington
658-4554

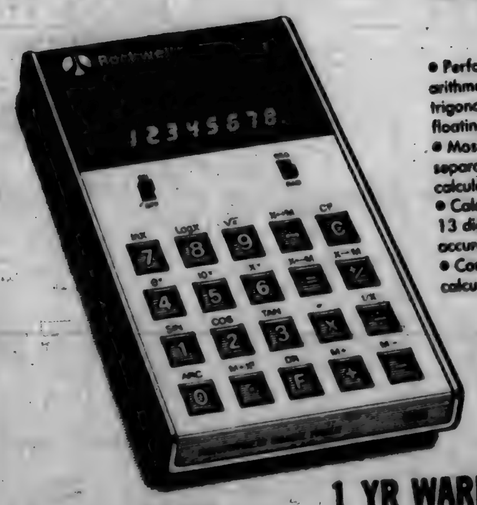
the corner bookstore

"One-stop shopping for books, stationery and art supplies"

The CORNER BOOKSTORE

ROCKWELL 61R

Full Scientific Slide Rule Calculator



- Performs all classical slide rule functions — simple arithmetic, reciprocals, factorials, expotentiation, roots, trigonometric and logarithmic functions, all in free floating decimal point
- Most functions process displayed data only — allows separate processing of data before entry in a complex calculation.
- Calculates answers to 13 significant digits; uses all 13 digits in subsequent calculations for maximum accuracy.
- Converts automatically to scientific notation when calculated answer is greater than 10^{10} or less than 10^{-10}

Complete with batteries!

Full Scientific Slide Rule

Regular 99.95 — 1 YR WARRANTY — Save $20.00

NOW 79.95

LAFAYETTE®

157 Pearl Street East Jct.

Burnham

Headquarters for CONTINENTAL TYROLEANS

MAZEL'S

194 North St.

...Calendar

(continued from page two)

all Spanish-American speaking students, fac... whatever the level of Spanish speech. The L/L C... D, 3rd floor, in the living area of the Hispanic ...

4 p.m., The School of Nursing presen... Kramer of the University of California at San ... will lead a discussion of the adjustment o... nursing graduates to the real world of work in ...

4:10 p.m., Dr. James A. Burns of the Rad... Lexington, Mass.'s Honeywell Inc., will disc... Charge-Coupled Devices" in a physics lecture... Cook. Coffee is served at 3:45 in Cook A 429.

7:00 p.m., Nancy Koch and Bert Butler o... and Testing Center will lead a workshop o... States of Consciousness", an exploration of ... with that part of yourself that says "Far Out"... L/L.

7 p.m., The second of two weekly meet... Nutrional Program is held in 115 Commons ... in nutritional food values.

7:30 p.m., The student chapter of the Am... Civil Engineers presents Cranston Rogers, D... of the National ASCE, who will speak on "Pr... Engineering Ethics". Open to all interested in ...

7:30 p.m., The Outing Club meets in 305 ...

La Ro...

College students can earn six credits in art while living in a 16 century monastery in the Italian hill country in a month-long program that combines art instruction with firsthand observation of Italian art history and culture.

La Romita School of Art offers this opportunity for 32 full days, June 22 to July 25.

Besides their stay at La Romita, located in Terni 70 miles from Rome, students will also spend one week in Florence and overnight in Siena; attend two events of Menotti's Festival of Two Worlds, Spoleto; and will tour a number of hill towns.

They w... instructi... drawing, ... architecture.

La R... picturesque ... an active C... until about ... modernize ... original cha... birds still ... groves ... buildings. ... Meals a... porch and ... as studio a...

Umbria ... little since ... Great wh... wagons ar...

Inter-Vars...

"Once there was a university and everybody came: upper class, lower class, 17-year-olds, and graduate students; blacks, whites, and Orientals; students from the adjacent country and some from countries as far away as Taiwan and South Africa.

There were agnostics, Jews, atheists, followers of the occult, some with Christian backgrounds...and a few who ...

believed in... Savior and... believing ... wanting ... command ... of all me... for a way ... some o... Inter-V... Fellowshi... them ... Christian relations... obedience...

Cunningham

WEEKDAY MASS SCHEDULE FOR LENT: 7:30 a.m. and 4:15 p.m.; Also each Tuesday evening at 10:00 p.m.

WEEKEND MASS SCHEDULE: Saturday: 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.; Sunday: 9:00 and 11:30 a.m. and 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.

A MORE MEANINGFUL LIFE SERIES: Exposition and exploration of the Catholic faith. Especially for non-Catholics interested in the Catholic tradition, and for Catholics interested in deepening their religious understanding. Each Monday evening at 8:30 p.m. at the Center.

SCR... evenings ... on the ... Church ... Jesus qu... importa... Himself. ... the po... theolo... Testamen... hearing ... Old Test...

PA... "Sprin... Benefit ...

Fash... Place ... Date: ... Time: ...

St. Anselm's C...

Sunday: Holy Eucharist, 9 a.m.; Tuesday: Holy Eucharist, 10 p.m.; Daily: Morning Prayer, 7:15 a.m., Evening Prayer, 5:00 p.m.

PROGRAMS:

Inquirers' Class — Monday night, 7:15 p.m.; Coffee House — February 23, Sunday at 7:30 p.m.

This Monday night the topic of the Inquirer's Class will be Church History and sacraments. All are welcome to attend.

This Sunday we have the privilege of having a Reader's Theatre production for the Coffee House. We'll be gathering around 7:30 p.m. and the program should start at 8:00 p.m. It's entitled "When the Thunder Rumbles," and is produc... Players... a fre... provok... This ... differe... the Tu... This ... one ... style... Eucha... which ... week ... That ... Chri... conti... great ... the c... There ... for o... all of ... come...

SAVE

SPE... AND...

10% ...

ON ...

CAM...

SAVE

...Calendar

(continued from page two)

all Spanish-American speaking students, faculty, and staff, whatever the level of Spanish speech. The L/L Center, Building D, 3rd floor, in the living area of the Hispanic Apartments.

4 p.m., The School of Nursing presents Dr. Mariane Kramer of the University of California at San Francisco, who will lead a discussion of the adjustment of baccalaureate nursing graduates to the real world of work in 103 Rowell.

4:10 p.m., Dr. James A. Burns of the Radiation Center at Lexington, Mass.'s Honeywell Inc., will discuss "Theory of Charge-Coupled Devices" in a physics lecture held in A-402, Cook. Coffee is served at 3:45 in Cook A 429.

7:00 p.m., Nancy Koch and Bert Butler of the Counseling and Testing Center will lead a workshop entitled "Altered States of Consciousness", an exploration of getting in touch with that part of yourself that says "Far Out", Commons 120, L/L.

7 p.m., The second of two weekly meetings of the L/L Nutritional Program is held in 115 Commons for all interested in nutritional food values.

7:30 p.m., The student chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers presents Cranston Rogers, District 2 Director of the National ASCE, who will speak on "Profeiilonalism and Engineering Ethics". Open to all interested in 209 Votey.

7:30 p.m., The Outing Club meets in 305 Votey.

Engineer's Week Coming Soon

On February 26, 1975 Wednesday, at 7:30 p.m. in room 209 Votey, the Student Chapter of ASCE will hold a business meeting. Following this meeting, Cranston R. Rogers, District II Director of the National ASCE, will speak on "Professionalism and Engineering Ethics." This is a topic which will be of stimulating interest to all engineers, civil, mechanical and electrical, and all students are urged to come. Mr. Rogers is more than able to give us a very enjoyable evening; according to Alvin Newman, Director of Student Services at National Headquarters, of all the District Directors in the United States, Mr. Rogers is probably rated number one or two in dynamic speaking ability. This should be a very thought provoking evening, and no one, student or faculty member, should miss this.

At our last meeting on February 12, Mr William H. Truex, Jr., of Alexander and Truex, Architects of Burlington, spoke to us on "How Architects and Engineers Work Together." Mr. Truex gave a very interesting lecture and slide presentation showing some architectual design projects, pointing out the engineer-architect relationship. This lecture was followed by a lengthy discussion.

Beginning on February 16 will be Annual Engineers Week. As part of the festivities of this week, the Vermont section of the American Society of Civil Engineers is holding a joint meeting Friday February 21, 1975, at the Ramada Inn in South Burlington. The evening begins at 6:30 with a social hour, followed by a buffet at 7:30; menu Seafood Newburg, cold turkey and ham with an assortment of vegetables and salad, beverage, dessert and tip included. Student cost, $3.00.

The theme for this year's Engineer's Week is "Exploring New Energy Frontiers." The guest speakers are Mr. Bruce Haskell, Deputy Director of the State Energy Office, and Dr. Elmer L. Gaden, Jr., Dean of the College of Engineering, Mathematics and Business Administration at the University of Vermont. Other special guests will include the "Engineer of the Year," the "Young Engineer of the Year," and the "Student Engineer of the Year."

The Exchange

Lightfingers Prowl Campus

An overwhelming percentage of replies this week concerned breakfast hours of Wright Dining Hall and a request that they be extended to 9:30 or 9:45 a.m. Get a petition going you later-morning risers; they can't be changed without this. In Simpson Hall the contact person is Jan Shinsheimer X3306, who reports a petition is on The Bulletin Board and has nearly 100 signatures. A tea lover is frustrated at having to ask for tea bags "why in the hell don't they keep them out?" The Living/Learning Center's cook, Gerry Greenland and his staff, gets kudos with meatless dishes rated as "consistently interesting and tasting good." This unnamed diner feels he prepares the meals with more choice and greater variety than the other cafeterias. How refreshing to have someone express their appreciation.

A difficult to read reply wanted "more pencil sharpeners in upstairs offices (his pencil was indeed blunt!) We wonder if students realize the amount of items that are stolen on campus. Word comes to us that the pencil sharpeners in Votey Building are consistently unscrewed and taken away; even the brass coat hooks in the bathrooms have been stolen. Now really! The sign has been removed outside Williams Science Hall, and as we were strolling about campus this very afternoon we noticed the sign by Redstone Campus has its wooden slates broken. It has such a forlorn look about it. Even our Counseling and Testing Center sign was taken (this hurts; we were VERY FOND of that one - it was our special identity.) More on this next week - we are doing a survey on the above. Meanwhile, you lightfingered types, try leaving items where they should be. It is costly for the University and a great inconvenience for the rest of us. It cuts into the quality of our life on campus.

Keep filling out THE EXCHANGE forms or call in your concerns (x2058). We are reading your replies with interest and directing them to appropriate people.

by Andrea Lehtonen '76
Alice D. Outwater Counseling & Testing Center

La Romita School Of Art This Summer

College students can earn six credits in art while living in a 16 century monastery in the Italian hill country in a month-long program that combines art instruction with firsthand observation of Italian art history and culture.

La Romita School of Art offers this opportunity for 32 full days, June 22 to July 25.

Besides their stay at La Romita, located in Terni 70 miles from Rome, students will also spend one week in Florence and overnight in Siena; attend two events of Menotti's Festival of Two Worlds, Spoleto; and will tour a number of hill towns.

They will also receive instruction in painting, drawing, Italian art history and architecture.

La Romita, in the picturesque Umbrian hills, was an active Capuchin monastery until about 1815. It has been modernized but retains its original character, with cuckoo birds still singing in the olive groves surrounding the buildings.

Meals are served on an open porch and the chapel doubles as studio and library.

Umbria has changed very little since the Middle Ages. Great white oxen pull farm wagons and straw is stacked in patterns that are centuries old. Medieval towns cling to startlingly steep slopes and monasteries nestle in the valleys.

In Florence, known as the City of the Renaissance, students can see palaces and villas of bankers whose wealth made possible its art and architecture.

Elmira College is offering six transferable credits, graduate or undergraduate - three in studio art and three in art history. Tuition costs are $35 per undergraduate credit, $60 per graduate credit.

Students are welcome at the school regardless of whether they are earning college credits.

Complete cost of the school is $1,648. This sum includes round-trip air fare from New York City to Rome, all meals, lodging, ground transportation, admissions and instruction.

It does not include art supplies, tuition nor personal expenses.

Director-instructors are Enzo Quargnali and Adabelle Hill. Enza (Mrs. Harold Benson in private life) was born and educated in Rome, earning a Fulbright Teaching Assistantship to the University of New Mexico where she completed her Master's in Fine Arts. Her home and private studio are in Taos, N.M.

Mrs. Hill has been a public school art teacher for 18 years. She received her M.A. in Art History from State University of New York at Binghamton. She is teaching Italian art history and architecture at Elmira College.

Applications with a $100 deposit must be received by March 15 with checks payable to La Romita School of Art. Those interested may write Mrs. Adabelle Hill, Continuing Education, Elmira College, Elmira, N.Y. 14901.

Applications should include name, address, phone, and whether or not credit is desired.

Upon receipt of the application and deposit, students will be sent a reading list and further details.

Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship

"Once there was a university and everybody came: upper class, lower class, 17-year-olds, and graduate students; blacks, whites, and Orientals; students from the adjacent country and some from countries as far away as Taiwan and South Africa.

There were agnostics, Jews, atheists, followers of the occult, some with Christian backgrounds...and a few who believed in Jesus Christ as their Savior and Lord. Those few, believing Matthew 28:19, and wanting to obey Christ's command to "make disciples of all men...," looked around for a way to do just that. And some of them came to Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship and found it helped them to grow in their relationships with Christ and in obedience to Him, and to share their faith with their non-Christian friends."

The University of Vermont Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship is an active chapter of the international Inter-Varsity which traces its spiritual foundations back to Cambridge University in 1877. Today there are over 400 schools in the U.S. with Inter-Varsity groups and international fellowship groups in more than 71 countries. The Nurses Christian Fellowship (NCF), a branch of Inter-Varsity, is active here as well as in many other schools.

The aims of Inter-Varsity are to lead others to personal faith in Christ as Lord and Savior, to help Christians grow toward maturity as disciples of Christ, by study of the Bible, by prayer, and by Christian fellowship and to present the call of God to the world mission of the Church.

Weekly meetings are held here at UVM on Thursday evenings involving a variety of activities including singing, prayer, sharing, speakers, etc. Also a Bible study in Colossians is held on Tues. evenings at 205 S. Prospect St., Apt. 2 at 7:00. Many other opportunities (prayer, partnerships, small groups, seminars, conferences, etc.) are available through Inter-Varsity for anyone interested. Announcements of the activities can be found on posters at various places around campus, in the Cynic or by calling Gordon Cook at 863-4089.

Cunningham Newman Center

WEEKDAY MASS SCHEDULE FOR LENT: 7:30 a.m. and 4:15 p.m.; Also each Tuesday evening at 10:00 p.m.

WEEKEND MASS SCHEDULE: Saturday: 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.; Sunday: 9:00 and 11:30 a.m. and 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.

A MORE MEANINGFUL LIFE SERIES: Exposition and exploration of the Catholic faith. Especially for non-Catholics interested in the Catholic tradition, and for Catholics interested in deepening their religious understanding. Each Monday evening at 8:30 p.m. at the Center.

SCRIPTURE: Monday evenings at 7:00 p.m. A series on the Prophet Isaiah for the Church's Lenten Liturgies. Jesus quoted Isaiah in His most important statements about Himself. Not to know Isaiah, the poet, philosopher and theologian of the Old Testament is to have missed hearing the heartbeat of the Old Testament.

FASHION SHOW: "Springtime on Campus" Benefit of the Newman Center

Fashions from Magrams' Place: Ira Allen Chapel
Date: March 6, 1975
Time: 7:30 p.m.

Donations for tickets $1.50; available at the Newman Center as well as in many of the dorms with students. We hope you will buy your ticket early and be with us. The Fashion Show will feature clothing for both men and women and many of our people fashioning will be students from UVM.

COMMUNAL PENANCE SERVICE: March 12, at 7:30 p.m.

SOCIAL ACTION: Are you interested in becoming active in our Social Action Group? Our topics include: Farmworkers and boycotts, Amnesty, and the Third World Problem.

St. Anselm's Chapel

Sunday: Holy Eucharist, 9 a.m.; Tuesday: Holy Eucharist, 10 p.m.; Daily: Morning Prayer, 7:15 a.m., Evening Prayer, 5:00 p.m.

PROGRAMS:

Inquirers' Class - Monday night, 7:15 p.m.; Coffee House - February 23, Sunday at 7:30 p.m.

This Monday night the topic of the Inquirer's Class will be Church History and sacraments. All are welcome to attend.

This Sunday we have the privilege of having a Reader's Theatre production for the Coffee House. We'll be gathering around 7:30 p.m. and the program should start at 8:00 p.m. It's entitled "When the Thunder Rumbles," and is produced by the St. Anselm's Players. Come along and bring a friend. It is a thought-provoking program.

This Lent we have four different priests celebrating at the Tuesday night Eucharists. This is a good opportunity for one to see several different styles of celebration. The Eucharist has a strong center which is a continuity from week to week, year to year. That center is the act which Christ instructed us to continue. But there is also great variation and the style of the celebrant is a part of it. There is no one way to do it for our Lord reveals himself in all of us. You are welcome to come and share.

Hillel

HILLEL

Sunday, February 23, there will be a Fireside Brunch starting at 11 a.m. Immediately following there will be a discussion, led by Professor H. Kahn, concerning the land of Israel and its place in the thought of Christians.

Friday evening, February 21, there will be a traditional, home-cooked Friday evening dinner. See Professor H. Kahn, in the German Dept., Waterman, immediately for a reservation.

...Katherine Hepburn

(continued from page seven)

And finally, on April 12, the series will be wrapped up with Eugene O'Neill's Long Day's Journey Into Night. Hepburn felt, "It's far damn well the best thing I ever did."

Others must have agreed. Kathryn Hepburn was nominated for her ninth Oscar.

These films are all being shown for Free at 101 Votey at 7:30 p.m. I suggest you get there early...

Rotary Club Study Scholarship

An opportunity for a year of study abroad is again being offered to qualified young men and women under a unique "ambassador of good will" program by the Foundation of Rotary International.

Graduate fellowships, undergraduate scholarships, technical training and teachers' awards are available to qualified students, technicians, and teachers of the handicapped.

The program has been designed to provide outstanding young people with an "opportunity to contribute to better understanding between the peoples of their home and host countries while pursuing their own career interests."

An award covers round-trip transportation, educational, living and miscellaneous related expenses for one academic year, plus in certain cases, a period of intensive language training in the study country prior to the commencement of the regular academic year. Awards are made for study in most any field in countries in which there are Rotary clubs.

A candidate for a Rotary Foundation educational award must:
(1) not be a Rotarian or a relative or dependent of a Rotarian by blood or marriage
(2) be both an outstanding student, technician or teacher and a potential "ambassador of good will"
(3) demonstrate personal qualities of leadership, initiative, enthusiasm, adaptability, maturity and seriousness of purpose.

Candidates must be sponsored by a Rotary Club. Interested persons should contact their hometown or nearest Rotary Club for detailed information. Applications must be made through a Rotary Club not later than 15 March 1975, for a 1976-77 award. Winners will be announced in September 1975.

Commencement 1975

Friday, May 16, 1975
9 a.m. Ira Allen Chapel - line forms at Votey Hall 8:30 a.m.
College of Agriculture; School of Home Economics; School of Natural Resources
1 p.m. Ira Allen Chapel - lines form at Votey Hall 12:30 p.m.
College of Education and Social Services
4 p.m. Ira Allen Chapel - line forms at Votey Hall 3:30 p.m.
College of Engineering, Mathematics and Business Administration
Saturday, May 17, 1975
10 a.m. Ira Allen Chapel - line forms at Votey Hall 9:30 a.m.
School of Allied Health Sciences; School of Nursing
2 p.m. Ira Allen Chapel - line forms at Votey Hall at 1:30 p.m.
College of Medicine
Sunday, May 18, 1975
10 a.m. Ira Allen Chapel - line forms at 9:15 at Votey Hall
Graduate College
2 p.m. Patrick Gymnasium line forms at Gutterson at 1:30 p.m.
College of Arts and Sciences

Employment Interviews

March 5 - Jordan Marsh Co., Executive Training Programs for careers in retail buying and merchandise management.

March 7 - Diamond International. Positions in retail and wholesale lumber and building materials industry. Mgmt training program.

March 10 - Data General Corp., Engineering and computer science, acctg, mktg. These positions in Southboro, Mass. Field sales in N.Y., Atlanta, Chicago, and Los Angeles.

March 11 - Abraham and Straus, Executive Mgmt. Program; Burroughs Corp., Accounting Positions; Xerox, Sales positions.

March 12 - Aetna Life and Casualty, Sales, possible Home Office assignments.

March 17 - Hartford Hospital; Staff Nursing Positions.

April 2 - Northwestern Mutual Life, Sales and Service leading to Field or Home Office positions.

April 11 - Harvard University Medical School, Positions in Biology, and Bio-Chem.

Sign up for these Interviews: Feb. 24,25,26 in Placement Office, Mansfield House.

Ralph's Exxon
on Route 7 Shelburne Road and Interstate 189
Complete Auto Service
Expert Tune up and Repairs
All Work Fully Guaranteed
Free pickup and delivery
Phone: 862-9200

MISS THAT SATURDAY STEAK?
FRET NO LONGER!!
ENJOY A STEAK ANY NIGHT AT WALTER'S SPLENDIFEROUS
SERVING AT 4:00 — SNACK BAR — SERVING AT 4:00
Steak
French Fries
or Salad
and Soda
Only 4 COUPONS or $1.60 limited supply

VALUABLE COUPON
SPECIAL TO STUDENTS AND FACULTY MEMBERS
(prescriptions excluded)
10% DISCOUNT
ON YOUR PURCHASES AT
CAMPUS PHARMACY
ACROSS FROM The Medical Center

Set $200
Set $150
Set $250
Femininity is the Keynote
of two matched sets with a delightful aura of youth and charm. Simply and beautifully executed, they have a feminine air in the daintiness of their designs, yet are wonderfully and beautifully effective on the hand.
Prices start from under $100
You are invited to open a Charge Account at Preston's.
A family of jewelers in Vermont since 1861
F.J. PRESTON & SON INC.
17 Upper Church Street
Member American Gem Society

IRA Endorses

The Inter-Residence Association at its weekly meeting Monday evening voted to endorse the use of United Farm Worker's lettuce by SAGA food service. SAGA had previously requested a decision on the issue.

The decision stated that SAGA "would buy only UFW lettuce and delete other items of equal cost from the (food) program when cost or yield of the lettuce is not favorable compared to other lettuce. General support of the Farm Worker's movement by UVM students prompted the boycott. The stipulation that other items may be deleted temporarily from the food program due to price difference was implemented with the understanding that the price difference is seldom large enough to warrant a deletion.

Anyone having suggestions, questions, or complaints about this action is requested to contact their IRA representative.

durham
Headquarters for CONTINENTAL TYROLEANS
MAZE
194 North St.

VERMONT CYNIC

Founded In 1883

Editor-in-Chief . . . . . Randy Jensen '77
Assistant Editor . . . . . Wyatt Kash '77
Managing Editor . . . . . Mark S. Valle '76
News Editor . . . . . Kathy Stannard '77
Assistant News Editor . . . . . Mark Brewer '77
Features Editor . . . . . Stephen W. Tanner '76
Arts Editor . . . . . Robert DeMeo '77
Sports Editor . . . . . Norm Robinson '77
Copy Editor . . . . . Sari Bogh '77
Advertising Manager . . . . . Debbie Powell '76

Editorial

Losing The UVM Day Care Center

While the economic situation of this university has demanded extensive financial weeding and pruning, the proposed shut down of the UVM Day Care Center is clearly a case where our man in the garden has snipped too far.

The UVM Day Care Center is currently providing service for approximately 90 children ages 2 to 6. That 55% of these children are from one-parent families only begins to give dimension to the potential loss involved if the Center is closed down. The Day Care Center provides early and therefore crucial health screening services and gives special attention to those children with individual developmental problems. By shutting down the Day Care Center, the University of Vermont will be severing a vital service not only to the community, but to the university itself.

The Day Care Center is not merely a communal baby sitter. Over 400 UVM students pursuing disciplines from early childhood education, nutrition, and art to nursing, psychiatry, and speech pathology have taken with them a very practical and enriching experience by generating an invaluable array of services to the community's children who attended the center each day.

The Day Care Center Board of Directors maintain that this university cannot fund the children attending the Center because the State does not pay 100% of the cost of state subsidized youngsters. While Academic Vice President Rollins may have a valid motive for the proposal, the method of calculating this year's deficit is still questionable. Nevertheless, we will ultimately lose more by shutting the center down than we could ever measure in terms of dollars and cents.

In this institution where memorization and recitation of readings and lectures still make up the general educational diet, we should not write off this invaluable opportunity for experience out of the momentum of financial wittling. And for the community this university serves, we should be wary of simply "locking out" its children. Recheck the figures and the analysis. Look at the financial alternatives available. The outcome of shutting down the UVM Day Care Center may ultimately be more of a social expense than a financial saving.

W.K.

Letters To The Editor

Education As A Commodity

To the Editor:

I wish to address myself to all the students at this institution. I solicit not only your immediate attention but your analytical powers.

It is obvious now, though possibly not before the S.A. senate dissolution, that we as students possess no vehicle of collective expression for effective change. I am not alone in the belief that the defunct S.A. senate embodied an inherent flaw, specifically its premise that this university operates under democratic principles. And yet the attempts being made to regain a foothold within the system are founded upon the same delusion. A modified version of the past senate would be doomed from its beginning.

We are no longer dealing with a noble "institute of higher learning" but with a capitalistic opponent. Education here has become a commodity which we purchase and the administration markets. The administration, an inanimate and inane entity, survives via our time and money. We gain credit hours and hopefully a diploma. The issues of discontentment among us are essentially a recognition of certain aspects of "their" education which lacks value to us. If we are to create and comprise a unity which could act decisively in face of these issues, we must think realistically. We ought to admit defeat in the political realm and approach their economic vulnerability. Incorporation is the necessary means.

There are students at this school versed in the field of economics. I say it is your turn, together with individual student support, to test the theories you have learned. We must take what we need, not what we are served. Raise a mirror against the repression. "A trusting and confiding character has more often than anything else spoiled a good cause." (Chernyshevski)

Richard Fischbeck

"Editorial Viewpoint" Viewpoint

To the Editor:

This letter is written as a very direct and personal response to the Editorial Viewpoint presented in the February 13 issue. I have been a participant in 5 meetings discussing the future of the student government (i.e. representation). Two have been held in Billings, and the theme of those gatherings would seem to indicate that those in attendance are anxious to institute a new form of student government to replace the defunct senate. The majority of those in attendance believe that without a government, the students are powerless, and therefore a new government should be created as quickly as possible. The majority believe that issues concerning the student body can not be attacked, unless there is a bureaucratic way to go about it. I have also attended three meetings held in Coolidge Hall. Those in attendance (a much smaller group than found at the Billings meetings) were not concerned so much with forming a new government, but rather in the discussion of those things which the majority considered to be wrong with the university. It is the belief of most at those meetings, that a new government should not be formed until the student body determines what they want to see changed, the theory being that change can not be effected until the right structure to effect that change is created. It might be argued that in the meantime, the students are unrepresented. I would personally offer two arguments to oppose that view. First, the students were not represented by the old Senate, and secondly just because there is no structural bureaucracy, that does not mean your views can not be represented. For instance, if the student body does not want the underpass constructed, why not hold an anti-tunnel rally? (Without a government, there is currently a petition campaign against the underpass).

Turning directly to the editorial, I would respectfully submit that the author has misconstrued the intentions of the "Coolidge crowd" (so named by Peter MacAusland who attended the second meeting). We do not pretend to speak for the student body, nor are we a unified group. Our interest is solely in discussing the issues on campus (some of which are found in a letter in the February 13, issue) and seeking ways to effect a change for the better at this university. We meet as an open forum, and speak only as individuals. In such a light, I was upset by the Cynic editorial. I do not wish to see factionalism among the student body. I simply wish to see a greater student interest and action for improvements in the university. To anybody who cares, I would advise them to start examining what is happening at this place, before they find it too late for themselves to enter into the scene.

I would suggest that anybody who has an interest in voicing an opinion attend either the Tuesday night meetings at Billings, or the Monday night meetings at Harris-Millis, or both.

Peace and best wishes to the Cynic.

Dallas Sacher

We Need A Student Government

To the Editor:

The dissolution of the S.A. was done in hopes of waking students from their slumber of apathy. This has not occurred.

It would be in the best interests of the students who still care to have some form of representative body. Due to the important issues coming up (S.A. appropriations, fee increases, proposed tunnel, etc.) it is imperative that we move on this matter immediately. We need a student government and we need it now. It's time to examine the proposals and make a decision, don't drag it out until it's too late for action. A student body without a student voice is a student body that will be ignored by the administration.

David Ryan, '77

Look Again

To the Editor:

In response to your editorial of Feb. 13, I should like to begin with one of your own statements: "Students should be aware and be cautious of a small group of other students who are supposedly working on student's behalf."

Assuming that R.J. and his affiliates on the Cynic are working on the students behalf, it is evident to me that students should be cautious of what they read in the boxed-in and large print section called the editorial. In a series of ill informed and apparently biss set of statements, our editor has not only contradicted his own purpose of finding cooperative effort, but also may have rendered serious damage to any possibility of student action.

First of all, he has denoted doubt as to whether the group in question was really interested by placing quotes around the word. The interest is obvious to me when such a group gets together on their own and encourages support and/or input from the rest of the student body. Secondly, it is ridiculous to say that this group eliminated competition when its very formation was a product resulting from the S.A. Senate dissolution, which would never have happened without majority support from the rest of the Senators. Thirdly, this group of students is not claiming to have a closed set of answers, to represent anybody, or to have student apathy as their main theme. Also, the editor's tagging of these people as the "Coolidge Crowd" is very misleading. The only thing that is "Coolidge" about them is that they used such a building to meet in. Maybe you should have been there, it would have helped the reliability of your sources.

In closing, I ask the students, faculty and staff to reread Rob Macgregor's letter to the editor and take note of the plea for your ideas, be they supportive or not. We're all in this together.

Finally (and in slight jest), Macgregor's name is Rob and not Bob, you Boob!

One of a bunch of interested students
Allen Northrup

Hocktitian Reconciliation

To the Editor:

I would like to differ with the "ideas" presented by the Dildoic scholar, Leon Wieseltier, in his recent article, In Defense of Dildoic Theory. His arguments, although on occasion sound, appear in general incongruent and weakly defended. However, one cannot blatantly criticize these views, because the impact of the Hocktilian Revolution has been a point of intense argument among scholars since the birth of Leonard, the Hockteil Boy. Advocates of the Hocktilian Theory maintain that his birth represents a significant break from the Dildoic Era, while their opponents argue that the change was gradual, rather than abrupt. The Hocktilian School believes that their revolution has brought about new and innovative changes in Impeachment proceedings, replacing the stagnant, old-fashioned traditions of the Dildoids. One of the major improvements has been the switch to white, refined Domino sugar, with the option of using Sweet 'n' Low (replacing sacharrin), without losing the desired effect upon Jo, namely rendering the Nose red and sore. They have also passed a resolution barring all herbectics from taking part in the Impeachment ceremony, protecting participants from the highly contagious Herbosis Syndrome. In a more humane vein, they have begun setting up nationwide herbectomy clinics after the model of the Pringle Herbarium.

I would suggest that Mr. Wieseltier adopt a less biased view, and attempt to reconcile his philosophies with the Hocktilians, rather than remain a hard-line, unbending Dildoid, thus leaving room for greater popular support for his programs.

Sincerely,
Joseph Wroblewski

The Cynic welcomes and encourages articles, columns, and letters from all interested students, faculty, and members of the community. All material must be submitted no later than Monday noon before the Thursday of publication. Material must be signed, names will be withheld upon request. If you are interested in writing or perhaps curious about how things are done, stop in — we are downstairs at Billings Center — or call 658-4911.

A Word From The Folks For UFW Support

To the Editor:

I would like to clear up some things about the letter you printed last week by one of the Gallo Brothers PR men. Due to the Cynic's deadline, I do not have the time to go over the Gallo letter point by point, this week. But I will deal with the main issue raised by Gallo, and next week I will have more specifics.

It's hard to decide where to begin to respond to the lies, distortions and misleading statements made by Mr. Joshua Simons. We can get into disputing the nitty gritty aspects of each contract, the day-to-day events and the telegrams and communications between the UFW and Gallo before Gallo signed the "sweetheart" contracts with the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, which I will get into next week. However, one clear point remains. In 1967, Gallo signed with the UFW on the basis of a card check election that was verified by the California Department of Labor. In 1973 Gallo signed with the Teamsters on the basis of petitions that were verified by no one but Gallo. The UFW asked Gallo for secret ballot elections, Fresno Bee, May 21, "Chavez asks for elections by Gallo". Gallo refused to hold elections. They did agree to a card check election. Sister Joyce Higgins sent a telegram to Robert Gallo telling him that out of 222 Gallo workers on the the payroll, there were 173 authoization cards signed as of April 18, 1973. Gallo did not acknowledge this. The main issue here is the right for workers to belong to the union of their choice. The workers want UFW, Gallo wants the Teamsters.

Gallo, out of the kindness of their hearts, signed with the Teamsters because "the workers wanted them". If the Teamsters genuinely represented the workers, as Gallo claims, a funny thing happened when the UFW called a strike on June 27, 1973. Most of the Gallo workers joined the strike, renouncing their Teamster contracts. In fact, 71 families living in shabby unsanitary Gallo provided housing refused to go to work, preferring instead to join the picket line. Gallo fired all those workers who went on strike and evicted these families, along with 400 children from their camp and brought in strikebreakers. However, on Sept. 6, 1974, even the strikebreakers went out on strike!

Don't swallow Gallo's line! Help farmworkers win justice.

Boycott all Gallo wines; including Boones Farm, Spanada, Tyrolia, Red Mountain, Thunderbird, Ripple, Paisano, Madria Sangria, and Josef Steuben and all wines from Modesto, California. For more information, (contract comparisons, day to day negotiations) or to help with the boycott call the UFW support committee, at 864-4661.

Jesse Clemens
UFW Support Committee

Freedom Of The Unborn Child

To the Editor:

In regard to Sue Perkin's column entitled "Abortion: How It Stands Around the World" in the February 13 issue of the Cynic, please define your use of the word "liberate". Do you really think that to "liberate the people of the world" means to give them the right to decide who shall be permitted to know the sunlight and who shall not; who shall live and who shall die?

You talk about "freedom." Whose freedom? "All women, rich and poor." What about the freedom of the unborn child? He has none? She has none? (That's what they are — he's and she's).

Let's think of ourselves. Legally, we are free to murder our children. "Murder is too strong, you say. Okay, legally we are free to medicinally dispose of our offspring. Legally... but who is free morally?

I believe that all "women, rich and poor", all men, rich and poor for that matter all human beings regardless of sex, race, economic prosperity, or religious beliefs are entitled to their freedom. But you are denying the unborn child his or her freedom and so you are denying them the designation "human". There are children alive today born at 24 weeks of age. Some are allowed to live and some are aborted. Just where do you draw the line on calling a life "human"? How do you decide who shall live and who shall not?

We are so protective of our "freedom". God help those who have no say in the matter.

And God help those who do.

Julie Fitzgerald
Class of '78

Courting Time

To the Editor:

A recent action by the administrators at Patrick Gymnasium reveals a lack of concern for the student body. This past Sunday afternoon the basketball courts were available for students from one to two and four to five with the basketball team using the facilities from two to four.

It seems rather absurd that it is not possible to give students two straight hours of playing time. One hour only gets you through the first half. With the two hour halftime break you can lose your shooting touch and blow a big lead.

Why couldn't the basketball team practice from one to three with the facilities being available to others from three to five. As it is, students pay a $30-a-year athletic fee and rarely can use the gym.

A twelve man basketball team should not dictate university scheduling. Granted, the basketball team has finally made its mark at UVM, but this should be at the expense of its opponents, not its supporters.

Sincerely,
R. Steinberg
M. Schwartz

My Gratitude

To the Editor:

"I am writing this letter as a public 'Thank You' to the many individuals who made every effort to help me last semester while I had difficulties with my vision. I could not have completed the fall semester without the assistance so generously given me by Misters Brogan, Hughes, and Lewis. If it were not for their help with my reading material I would not have completed my courses on time or with any competence. Also to Professors Greif, Tashmoo, Gross, and Schermerhorn I express my thanks for all your patience, concern, and help. Finally, to the many other people who were naturally helpful, both in the Business Department and on campus, I also express my gratitude.

Richard Crimmins

Earl Scruggs

To the Editor:

Earl Scruggs made it by the seat of his pants. His sons made it by the seats of TWA.

Ted Tiger

Thoughts And Reflections

by Ken Markowitz

It was just yesterday (1970), when Rocket Rod Laver strode into Lauriats on Tremont Street in downtown Boston to autograph his book, How to Play Tennis. He was the best then, the very best. A backhand like a whip, and a forehand like, well like a rocket. Bud Collins tried to steal away the show, but Laver was the man the people wanted. Laver, the Australian cowboy, was champ. Not at first sight though. At first glance you said to yourself, "How could that five-foot nine-inch red-headed runt be champion of the world; why a good six footer could bowl him over!" Then you looked again and it was apparent. His face told everything. It had that hard self-assured confidence which filled the room saying, "I am the best there is." Rod Laver lost the other day to Jimmy Connors. So now Connors is champ and the never ending cycle will begin on its turn once again. Rod Laver held that cycle back for five years. The rest is up to Jimmy.

Speaking of matches, the upcoming World Chess encounter between Bobby Fischer, and Anatoly Karpov of the U.S.S.R. has run into its usual snag. Karpov wants Milan, which has offered four hundred forty thousand dollars to the winner, while Fischer opts for San Marcos, which has offered nearly three million dollars. Can't fault Bobby on that. The wild yet purposeful genius of Fischer against the precise methodical play of the Russian should provide a memorable encounter if 'I ever comes off. Put your money on Bobby.

Many people have claimed that they have the cure for the world's ailments; but nonetheless, we were quite startled one day when an old high school teacher shouted out in the middle of a class, "I have the cure for the world's problems in three words." "Inflict no harm." Alas but for Human nature.

The Federal Highway Commission says one mile of country road in every five, and one bridge in every six are rated critically deficient. According to Donald S. Knight, executive director of the Road Information Program, farmers must truck their goods to market over six hundred thousand miles of rough, rutted roads and across eighty thousand aging, narrow bridges. This neglect, he claims, inflates food prices at the consumer level. That certainly has significance, especially for a more rural state like Vermont.

A recent report out of Harvard claims that the most important factor in really being a success is not education but good luck in being in the right place at the right time.

Luck, mazel, suerte, fortuno, la fortune, call it what you will, is a hard thing to define, but certainly an integral part of our lives. Consider this story: A group of soldiers battle-weary from the Invasion of Anzio and the Sicilian Campaign of the Second World War, catch a few moments of leisure time playing cards on a round table in a deserted apartment house in the small Italian town of Casino. Suddenly a bomb crashes through the ceiling and be ' as the table asunder. It does not go off, but weighing several tons rolls to the left and crushes two of the men. The men on the right are left unharmed. One of those men would later become my father.

Unemployment in the U.S. is nearly 8%

Hear the new Wolfman Jack commercial? A poor pimply-faced teenager asks the Wolfman to get the dope on whether Clearasil really works. "Ding-a-ling!" "Does it really work Wolfman?" the teenager asks perplexedly. "Man!," the Wolfman screams, "I been there and tried everything and its really cool! Dig it!" "Thanks Wolfman," the enlightened hopper says in profuse admiration. "Sure Man!," the Wolfman cackles in a way only he knows how,... "You got the dime, I got the time."

Saying for the week: If you mingle with people, no matter who, you can always learn a thing or two. —Hasan Ayalti

VERMONT CYNIC

NEWS: Vincent Arias, George Georgaklis, Andy Morse, Andrey Rothstein, Mary Gilbertson.
FEATURE STAFF: Paul Ajamian, Paul Cain, Carol Dufault, Mike Henry, Pam Hogarth, Andy Hunt, Sue Perkins.
ARTS: Amy Fisher, Barbara Freedman, Joe Kauffman, Adelaide Murphy, Paul Price, Marsha Wolosz.
COLUMNISTS: Peter Cobb, Elliot Freeman, Ken Markowitz, Scott McKay, Sue Perkins, Stephen Rice, Barry Seldon, Scott Skinner.
SPORTS: Randy Briggs, Gary Brooks, Rick Katz, Don Rose, Richard Rottkov.
PRODUCTION: Eileen Driscoll, Rick Steinberg, Elly Clay, Sarah Clay, Rick Barney, Barbara Brown, John Lunde.
ADVERTISING: Katherine Bowers, Stephen Lee Brown, Sherry Graneey, Debbie Powell.
BUSINESS MANAGER: Nancy Shenk.

Opinions expressed in editorials, cartoons, or columns in the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the University administration, faculty, or staff, or the State of Vermont. Opinions expressed by the columnists do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the majority of the members of the CYNIC Editorial Board.

Published yearly during the college year by the students of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College. Editorial and Business offices in the Billings Center, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone: 658-4911. Deadline for notices is one week prior to date of publication.

Founded in 1883. Subscription rate $8.00 per year, single copy ten cents.

S.A. Dilemma: T

by Knut Rostad

Recent developments concerning the for UVM student government clearly exemplify dilemma and basic misunderstanding representative form of government. Wh Association dissolved on Tuesday, January and justifications spread fast and furiou argued student disinterest and the senate's tr reasons for the move. Heated argument meeting the following Tuesday evidentally whether either student or senator apathy offender. Peter MacAusland reiterated the s blamed student apathy and senate decay Apparently, the source of the evil has been upon. The fascinating aspect of the proble the overall reaction and response to the sena quantity of excess verbiage that does not fundamental problem brings back memorie political contest one can remember.

The action is accused of being "hasty an
it ended an institution that had existed, MacAusland is evidentally responsible for "responsible conscientious student senate encouraged to blackmail the "SA into actio that their SA fee be refunded. Finally, th accused of giving the trustees and administra
the senators "no longer care about their own

Partll — Attenc

by Peter Campbell

'(Editor's Note: This is the second ha article which initially ran two weeks ago.)

The gym had about eighty people — were sitting and standing around the sides next to the walls. At the far end of proscenium stage, a tape player blasted A on each side of the stage hung a large ch nude woman in a reclining position. She ha body sketched in lines that owed Michelangelo's stony heroes and titans.
diagonally across from where Ernest sto women in red leotards talking among them Players, a women's theater group who wer performance called "Touchpoint" before turned his attention back to the mostly room. Pretty normal. A few looked ho Fellini types, but only two men in drag, an the polished beauty that Ernest had see roamed the streets of Provincetown. (He them for women, but a second glance
vampish look, a beauty that was too aesthe

Ernest sat down. He felt reserved and inside, but looking around he could see th feeling, and it put him at ease. A girl cal watch the Unity Players' performance. Sh seen them around the Burlington appearance that was clearly Lesbian.
women; in warm, supple tones. The pe depict someone's rise to a higher pla beyond the nuances of socia abstract than conventional theatre, the to be a group therapy technique, movements, which eventually became with dancing, singing, and ramblin gentle, tender, and very positive, exactl Ernest had previously conceived of behavior. It was somewhat flower powe yet the audience applauded with much girl sprang up and said with emotion: "N and Ernest became aware of somethin before. This was not a dance; it was a po

Ernest sat at the side and watched the floor, shaking to the continuous t wondered, again, why so many gay pe
How did that bold combination of f baby, I know I'm losing you] corre personalities. He was, again, reminded the raspy sound of pubescent music ec
the wallflowers and people dancing (except for one young man who was do wanted to dance, but it was soon appar
to take the initiative and find himself friend, and as they boogied around th that there would be no sexual fitmus te late twentieth century dancing styles, upbeat numbers. One nice thing, th amount of space to dance in, an effervescent than sensual dancing style the space to its full advantage. Af Ernest's partner had to go back to the sat down again. Exercise made the veins, and he felt good. There was a p the grand fireplace, a wilderness la landscape that Ernest thought existe imaginations of painters, until he mountains in northern California two recalled a similar wild valley, and a water rushed over the rocks and bubbl
Ernest was reading a book, waiting fo
He had lost his fishing line, and wa
When a Trout ventured into the poo Ernest had generously spread on the to throw a large rock into the po senseless. True hunger breeds patience a day, the same hunger made him tir mesmeric flashing of the sun on drifted into a fantasy about eating.
he saw a girl before him. His first hallucinating from hunger. The girl deer drinking at the stream, filling u Ernest.

He said hello. She looked up. H face as it slowly, calmly, met his gaz him, and he ate well that night...

Ernest wondered whether he watched them, he wondered what it that body, something he often did
His own body felt somewhat sore, very many people here seemed to questioned whether being gay was denominator. Again Ernest took th man next to him to dance. He had p eyes, but they had nothing in enjoyed dancing with people he d him of the times he used to go to pick-ups, except now he was no
Ernest danced with a girl he knew was better, but as usual, she intellectual things, and Ernest fo began to think about all the other that night; and he went out to sit watched the gay people leave, he ers

Editor

Viewpoint" Viewpoint

...ness as a ...personal ...d editorial ...m the ...ave been ...meetings ...of the ...n!" (i.e. ...ave been ...he theme ...ould seem ...thing in ...ssue to ...r student ...ace the ...majority ...e believe ...mself, the ...ion, and ...overnment ...quickly as ...y believe ...ening that ...not be ...here is a ...go about ...ded. Three ...idge Hall ...(a much ...found at ...) were not ...ch with ...ment, but ...mmon of ...hich the ...d to be ...rsity. It is ...at those ...a new ...d not be ...dent body ...y want to ...ory being ...e effected ...ucture to ...created. It ...at in the ...dents are ...I would ...arguments ...First, the ...represented ...ate, and

...wcondly, just because there is no structural bureaucracy, that does not mean your views can not be represented. For instance, if the student body does not want the underpass constructed.. why not hold an anti-tunnel rally? (Without a government, there is currently a petition campaign against the underpass).

Turning directly to the editorial, I would respectfully submit that the author has misconstrued the intentions of the "Coolidge crowd" (so named by Peter MacAusland who attended the second meeting) We do not pretend to speak for the student body, nor are we a unified group. Our interest is solely in discussing the issues on campus (some of which are found in a letter in the February 13, issue) and seeking ways to effect a change for the better at this university. We meet as an open forum, and speak only as individuals. In such a light, I was upset by the Cynic editorial. I do not wish to see factionalism among the student body, I simply wish to see greater student interest and action for improvements in the university. To anybody who cares, I would advise them to start examining what is happening at this place, before they find it too late for themselves to enter into the scene.

I would suggest that anybody who has an interest in voicing an opinion attend either the Tuesday night meetings at Billings, or the Monday night meetings at Harris-Millis, or both.

Peace and best wishes to the Cynic.

Dallas Sacher

...an Reconciliation

...differ with ...ed by the ...r, Leon ...ent article, ...tic Theory. ...though on ...appear in ...ment and ...However, ...ly criticize ...the impact ...Revolution ...of intense ...holars since ...onard, the ...ostes of the ...y maintain ...represents a ...from the ...hile their ...e that the ...rather than ...dian School ...revolution ...rt now and ...anges in ...proceedings, ...stagnant, ...tions of the ...f the major

...improvements has been the switch to white, refined Domino sugar, with the option of using Sweet 'n' Low (replacing sacharrin), without losing the desired effect upon Jo, namely rendering the Nose red and sore. They have also passed a resolution barring all herbectics from taking part in the Impeachment ceremony, protecting participants from the highly contagious Herbosis Syndrome. In a more humane vein, they have begun setting up nationwide herbectomy clinics after the model of the Pringle Herbarium.

I would suggest that Mr. Wieseltier adopt a less biased view, and attempt to reconcile his philosophies with the Hocktibians, rather than remain a hard-line, unbending Dildoid, thus leaving room for greater popular support for his programs.

Sincerely,
Joseph Wroblewski

...elcomes and encourages articles, columns, and ...interested students, faculty, and members of ... All material must be submitted no later than ...before the Thursday of publication. Material ..., names will be withheld upon request. If you ...n writing or perhaps curious about how things ...n – we are downstaire at Billings Center – or

...RMONT CYNIC

...Arun, George ...Andy Morse, ...stein, Mary

...TAFF: Paul ...Cass, Carol ...Henry, Pam ...y Hunt, Sue

...ther, Barbara ...ue Kauffman, ...ley, Paul Prior,

...Peter Cobb, ...emon, Ken

Markowitz, Scott McKay, Sue Perkins, Stephen Rice, Barry Seiden, Scott Skinner.

SPORTS: Randy Briggs, Gary Brooks, Rick Katz, Don Rose, Richard Rattiner.

PRODUCTION: Eileen Driscoll, Rich Steinberg, Elly Clay, Sarah Clay, Rick Birney, Barbara Brown, John Lundo.

ADVERTISING: Katherine Bowers, Stephen Lee Brown, Sherry Gramcey, Debbie Powell.

BUSINESS MANAGER: Nancy Harrell.

...inions expressed in editorials, cartoons, or ...s in the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the ...s of the University administration, faculty, or ...y the State of Vermont. Opinions expressed by ...mmists do not necessarily reflect the opinion ...majority of the members of the CYNIC ...rd Board.

...blished yearly during the college year by the ...ts of the University of Vermont and State ...ricultural College. Editorial and business offices in ...lings Center, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone: ...911. Deadline for notices is one week prior to ...publication.

...unded in 1883. Subscription rate: $8.00 per ...ingle copy ten cents.

S.A. Dilemma: The Problem Is In Ourselves

by Knut Rostad

Recent developments concerning the form and future of UVM student government clearly exemplify both a widespread dilemma and basic misunderstanding involved in a representative form of government. When the Student Association dissolved on Tuesday, January 28, explanations and justifications spread fast and furiously. Ed Pesqualm argued student disinterest and the senate's impotency as basic reasons for the move. Heated argument during an open meeting the following Tuesday evidentally centered around whether either student or senator apathy was the worst offender. Peter MacAusland reiterated the sentiment when he blamed student apathy and senate decay for the action. Apparently, the source of the evil has been universally agreed upon. The fascinating aspect of the problematic situation is the overall reaction and response to the senate's decision. The quantity of excess verbiage that does not direct itself at the fundamental problem, brings back memories of most every political contest one can remember.

The action is accused of being "hasty and irresponsible" as it ended an institution that had existed since the 1930's. MacAusland is evidentally responsible for the reelection of a "responsible conscientious student senate." Students are encouraged to blackmail the "SA into action" by demanding that their SA fee be refunded. Finally, the action has been accused of giving the trustees and administration the word that the senators "no longer care about their own rights."

The simple facts of the matter are that when only 50.87% of the senators show up at the last official meeting, their degree of interest or concern do not have to be ascertained by their vote to dissolve. The idea that Peter MacAusland is personally responsible for the creation of a new body that is more proficient is only more preposterous than the idea that Gerald Ford is solely responsible for the election of a congress that would balance the budget, stop recession and reduce unemployment. The suggestion that the student body should unite to demand a refund of their SA fee parallels a public demand for back taxes due to a Congressionally self-imposed pay raise.

In all the castigating of the senate and President, the real source of the problem remains unblemished. The student body has to be given part of the responsibility of rehabilitation. There is little reason to believe that a new structure will significantly improve the proficiency of a legislative body without a substantial input by the student body.

The Student Association did the university a favor by calling it quits. Perhaps a period without representation, or a vehicle to express an opinion will reactivate an appreciation for that which is taken so much for granted. Student involvement can not come by executive order or editorial persuasion, as effective representative government can not succeed amidst public apathy.

Part II Attending His First Gay Dance

by Peter Campbell

(Editor's Note: This is the second half of this two part article which initially ran two weeks ago.)

The gym had about eighty people – mostly men – who were sitting and standing around the sides of the gym floor next to the walls. At the far end of the gym, on the proscenium stage, a tape player blasted Aretha Franklin, and on each side of the stage hung a large charcoal sketch of a nude woman in a reclining position. She had a large, muscular body sketched in lines that owed an allegiance to Michelangelo's stony heroes and titans. In the far corner, diagonally across from where Ernest stood, was a knot of women in red leotards talking among themselves – The Unity Players, a women's theater group who were going to present a performance called "Touchpoint" before the dance. Ernest turned his attention back to the mostly men sector of the room. Pretty normal. A few looked homegoom aisles and Fellini types, but only two men in drag, and they had none of the polished beauty that Ernest had seen in the queens who roamed the streets of Provincetown. (He had often mistaken them for women, but a second glance would discern that vampish look, a beauty that was too aesthetic to be real.)

Ernest sat down. He felt reserved and slightly compressed inside, but looking around he could see that others shared this feeling, and it put him at ease. A girl called everyone over to watch the Unity Players' performance. Six women: Ernest had seen them around the Burlington area. They had an appearance that was clearly Lesbian. Yet they spoke like women, in warm, supple tones. The performance seemed to depict someone's rise to a higher plane of consciousness, beyond the nuances of social enforcement. More abstract than conventional theatre, the performance appeared to be a group therapy technique, set to modern dance movements, which eventually became church-like in structure with dancing, singing, and rambling proclamations. It was gentle, tender, and very positive, exactly the opposite of what Ernest had previously conceived of as typical Lesbian behavior. It was somewhat flower powerish for Ernest's taste, yet the audience applauded with much enthusiasm. A chubby girl sprang up and said with emotion: "Now we can all dance," and Ernest became aware of something he had not realised before. This was not a dance; it was a political event.

Ernest sat at the side and watched the people dancing on the floor, shaking to the continuous tape of soul music. He wondered, again, why so many gay people liked soul music. How did that bold combination of flash and pain, (Baby, baby, I know I'm losing you) correspond to their inner personalities. He was, again, reminded of Junior High dances: the raspy sound of pubescent music echoing through the gym, the wallflowers and people dancing a little awkwardly – (except for one young man who was doing cartwheels.) Ernest wanted to dance, but it was soon apparent that he would have to take the initiative and find himself a partner. He asked a friend, and as they boogied around the floor Ernest realised that there would be no sexual litmus test that night, thanks to late twentieth century dancing styles, and a preponderance of upbeat numbers. One nice thing, though, was the ample amount of space to dance in, and this meant a more effervescent than sensual dancing style, and people were using the space to its full advantage. After a couple of dances, Ernest's partner had to go back to the ticket table and Ernest sat down again. Exercise made the blood rush through his veins, and he felt good. There was a picture on the wall above the grand fireplace, a wilderness landscape – the type of landscape that Ernest thought existed only in the romantic imaginations of painters, until he had seen the Sierra mountains in northern California two years before. His mind recalled a similar wild valley, and a stream where ice cold water rushed over the rocks and bubbled into a pool, by which Ernest was reading a book, waiting for a fish to enter his trap. He had lost his fishing line, and was trying another method. When a Trout ventured into the pool to nibble at the worms Ernest had generously spread on the bottom, Ernest planned to throw a large rock into the pool, and knock the fish senseless. True hunger breeds patience, and he had not eaten in a day, the same hunger made him tired as did the warmth and meameric flashing of the sun on the water. Eventually he drifted into a fantasy about eating, when in a half awake state he saw a girl before him. His first thought was that he was hallucinating from hunger. The girl was very beautiful, like a deer drinking at the stream, filling up her canteen, unaware of Ernest.

He said hello. She looked up. He would never forget that face as it slowly, calmly, met his gaze. She killed three fish for him, and he ate well that night...

Ernest wondered whether he should dance again. As he watched them, he wondered what it would be like to be this or that body, something he often did when observing a crowd. His own body felt somewhat sore, and still compressed. Not very many people here seemed to know each other, and he questioned whether being gay was really such a valid social denominator. Again Ernest took the initiative, and asked the man next to him to dance. He had petite features and soft gray eyes, but they had nothing in common and Ernest never enjoyed dancing with people he did not know. It reminded him of the times he used to go to the Red Dog, looking for pick-ups, except now he was not even drunk. After that Ernest danced with a girl he knew from one of his classes. This was better, but as usual, she was always trying to say intellectual things, and Ernest felt himself getting tired. He began to think about all the other things he could have done that night; and he went out to sit on the marble steps. As he watched the gay people leave, he thought tentative an affair this had been. The organizers were social neophytes who were so involved with the newness of the event they had forgotten about the necessary ingredients for a good party. But then Ernest reasoned that it was a dance for gay people, and perhaps he was not gay. After all, Ernest did not play bridge, so he never went to bridge parties. Weren't gay parties the same difference? There was something specious in that argument, and besides, this was not even a "party," it was a political statement. It was still early enough to go home and read.

Ernest trudged back on top of the slush which had hardened into ice, and started to sort the events of the night into a new order.

He fell asleep with his boots on.

Month Of Concern For Political Prisoners

by Curt Koehler

(CPS) – How many political prisoners do Saigon's jails hold?

The answers to this macabre riddle vary drastically from "none" according to the U.S. Ambassador in South Vietnam, to more than 200,000 according to a South Vietnamese priest. Yet one thing is certain: political prisoners – the American Ambassador notwithstanding – are a cruel and usual fact of life in South Vietnam.

In view of the continued widespread imprisonment of South Vietnamese citizens, including former soldiers, priests, political activists and "thousands of students," the U.S. National Student Association (NSA) has designated February a "Month of Concern for South Vietnamese Student Political Prisoners."

At the same time NSA has called for defeat of President Ford's $552 million supplemental arms aid request for Indochina and a shift in funding priorities away from war funds and towards American higher Education.

"Thousands of students in this country are dropping out of college because of the inadequate financial assistance while our country spends millions of dollars on the Thieu government which arrests, imprisons and murders college students in South Vietnam," said NSA President Kathy Kelly. "We believe that this is an absurd and immoral set of priorities."

Kelly specifically voiced concern over the fate of Huynh Tan Mam, a former president of the Vietnamese National Student Union who has disappeared inside the Saigon prison system.

"We have conflicting reports," Kelly said "Some sources in Saigon say he has been assassinated by the Thieu government; others say he is being held and tortured at Con Son Island or the National Police headquarters."

Kelly has sent a letter to President Ford asking that he determine the location and physical condition of Mam.

The NSA President also charged that the U.S. is deporting Vietnamese students studying in this country who have spoken out against the Thieu government. Kelly said the students, currently on trial in Los Angeles, face imprisonment for their political beliefs if they return to South Vietnam.

The Political Prisoners Numbers Games

When a Catholic Bishop from Detroit visited South Vietnam in mid-1973 to investigate allegations that the Thieu government was holding and torturing political prisoners, he said he "instinctively wanted to believe that we and our allies don't do things like that."

After the visit, Bishop Thomas J. Gumbleton stated "unequivocally that there are political prisoners in Saigon's jails... not for any crime, but simply because they are in political opposition to the present government."

Bishop Gumbleton further said, "It is clear that these prisoners are subject to inhumane treatment, including deliberate and prolonged torture. I do not make that statement lightly," he concluded.

The ensuing year and a half has changed little.

"The existence of political prisoners in South Vietnam is beyond any reasonable dispute," said the Senate Appropriations Committee in its report on the 1974 Foreign Aid Bill. "Only the numbers are in question...Reliable and objective sources suggest there are between 40,000 and 60,000."

Higher estimates include Amnesty International which has claimed there are 100,000 political prisoners in South Vietnamese jails and a Catholic priest who has put the number at 202,000.

Prisoners? What Prisoners?

Whether or not someone is called a political prisoner is often a matter of semantics.

U.S. officials in the State Department and the American Embassy in Saigon have argued that there are no political prisoners as they define them: "individuals of non-communist, non-violent persuasion who are imprisoned only for expressing their criticism of the (Thieu) government."

According to this reasoning everyone in Saigon's jails is either a violent criminal or a communist.

South Vietnamese law, however, blurs the definition of the word "communist" significantly.

A special decree law states that anyone "shall be considered as Pro-Communist Neutralist...who commits acts of propaganda for and incitement of Neutralism."

Persons can therefore be lawfully arrested for simply being neutral in the continuing struggle between the forces of Thieu and the Communists.

Critics have charged that the Paris Peace Accords stand in stark contrast to the actions of the Thieu government, in that they protect not only neutralism but also pro-Communism.

The Accords "prohibit all acts of reprisal and discrimination against individuals or organizations that have collaborated with either side" and insures freedom of speech, press, meeting and organization.

Food For Prisons

If the exact number of political prisoners is in doubt, the extent of American involvement isn't.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D-Ma) has charged that the cummulative total of American aid to South Vietnam's police and prisons approaches $150 million, with most of the funds charged to innocuous "public safety" programs.

Other critics have said that still additional police aid is buried in Food for Peace and Commodity Import Programs. The Thieu government sells the food intended for the world's hungry, the critics have charged, and pumps the money gained into police and prison systems.

President Ford recently requested Congress to appropriate an additional $500 million for Food for Peace for South Vietnam, South Korea, and Chile out of a total worldwide appropriation of $1.4 billion.

For information on the "Month of Concern" contact the National Student Association, 2115 S St. NW, Washington, DC 20008. Phone 202-265-9890.

CIA Funded League of Women Voters

(CPS)—In a story certain to send more shock waves through the already shell-shocked Central Intelligence Agency, a group of intelligence-watchers in Washington has revealed documentation to prove that the CIA has secretly funded an overseas project of the League of Women Voters in order to spy on emerging women leaders in Third World countries.

The CIA has exerted its influence through the Overseas Education Fund (OEF) of the League, said the Organizing Committee for a Fifth Estate in a news conference held January 24 in the nation's capital.

The Fifth Estate is an independent organization formed several years ago to keep track of the encroachment of the government intelligence community into the lives of private citizens.

The first hint of CIA involvement came through an OEF employee, Ann Roberts, who became concerned when she noticed the group was receiving funding through the Asia Foundation, a conduit the CIA admitted it used in funding the National Student Association from 1951 to 1967.

Roberts also noticed that OEF reports contained large amounts of biographical data on women's leaders in South America and Asia. She investigated further and found that 70% of the group's budget came through the State Department and the Agency for International Development, agencies that the CIA has used in the past to mask its financial involvement with a group.

From documents provided by Roberts and other OEF employees, the Fifth Estate showed that the OEF Asian representative and the Latin American program director both regularly consulted with known CIA case officers in Panama, Malaysia, Korea and Kuala Lampur.

"In practice, the operation is a carbon copy of the CIA/NSA activity in the mid-60's" said the Fifth Estate. During that period, the CIA secretly provided funds to the international desk of NSA, in return for reports from NSA overseas travelers and representatives on student activists around the world.

"On the basis of interviews with OEF staff members, it is evident that knowledge of the CIA operation is limited to a very small number of people within the organization," continued the report. "It is now the responsibility of the women at OEF to root out the CIA cooperatives within their midst."

In a related report the Fifth Estate revealed the names and addresses of 100 CIA station and base chiefs operating in 85 countries.

The presence of these agents is well known to foreign governments, claimed the report.

"The United States and the Soviet Union, for instance, regularly swap names of intelligence personnel assigned to each other's countries for 'area familiarization' purposes," said the Fifth Estate.

"Since foreign intelligence services, host countries and other interested parties have an awareness of the CIA's world-wide clandestine presence, the American people have a right to know as much as those outside the U.S. do."

All Things Considered: Pigskin Confessions: or How I Cope With A Month Of Sundays

by Larry Seiden

Damnit, I didn't think I was that much of a spectator, not an armchair quarterback by any length, but a set of eyes glued religiously every Sunday to the 19-inch color screen. It's February and I still start to salivate around one o'clock every Sunday. Hockey, basketball, golf, tennis and even all those rich kids chasing each other through color war on Superstars (Madison Ave. style) cannot satiate me. I need defenses, stacked I's, a long field goal, and this seasons special deluxe—the timely coffin corner kick.

I guess it's time to admit it. I'm a pigskin junkie, a football freak, a Sunday six-pack man. But where can I get my fix now? It's still four months till training camp starts and unless the WFL can outrun the IRS, I'll be deprived of their spring training. Speaking of spring training, baseball has started theirs and watching baseball is going to give me the cold sweats in the summer.

Oh, do I miss the Patriots, they made autumn fall this year. How am I going to face the snow without Joe Namath to throw sparks on my set? Lord please grant me NFL Films, I'd be ever grateful if you flash me a replay of the past season. I'm not asking for much, just 372 games (counting playoffs and the all-star game). Oh how glorious, all those last second Giant's losses, able to be relived. I could even watch Joe tread through the swamps of Jersey to beat those stinkin' Giants in overtime. I could sit there and watch Franco prance through the vaulted Purple People Eaters. What pure unrestrained joy!

I guess you'd say I'm dreaming, but this dream is getting better and better. Imagine this, if you will; It's late into the fourth quarter. The Redskins lead the Cowboys by two, 26-24. The Redskins have just got the kickoff, (after Dallas' fieldgoal) on their own 35. They had Larry Brown run the kick back, sheer desperation for Bill Walton's brother, John, who is on the specialty teams for Dallas, and who bites Brown's foot off (according to Coach Landry's instructions). George Allen (Richard Nixon's right-hand advisor on Defense and Problems of the Elderly) calls Duane Thomas over and says in a quiet, godlike voice, "Duane I want you to run through that defense like a freed slave heading north."

Duane stands there mute, his eyes growing whiter than solar fire. Coach Allen says, like an angry parent awaiting a confession after the presentation of undeniable evidence, "Well?"

Duane, with all the speed the scouts said he had, grabs Allen's clipboard and stomps it into its component ingredients. He pulls George's favorite sterling silver whistle from his neck (the one he got for his Bar Mitzvah) and in startling fury swallows it, which causes him to warble like a hummingbird in heat. George goes into shock from which there is no return, his two most precious security symbols stripped from his quivering body. Duane runs onto the field to deliver the play but all he can do is emit amplified whistles which in turn, arouse the slumbering Kilgore Rangerettes who run onto the field and start their halftime show for the second time. Absolute panic ensues, Curt Gowdy chews away on Al DeRogatis' plaid jacket. Bob Lily and Lee Roy Jordon break Sonny Jurgensen in half and start eating him. Bob gets the top half where the beer belly is (that's where Sonny gets his power). Well the referees have no idea what's coming off so they go out for a beer to talk it over. The President will have to convene a joint session of Congress to straighten out the mess and the network switches over to their regularly scheduled broadcast of "Hotel."

I just gotta see more football: I'm starting to have divine hallucinations.

Revelation: "Mooseers can be seen in the dark corners of the deepest nights."

VPIRG: Capital Watch

Bottle Ban Amendment

by Peter Franchot, VPIRG Staff

H.93 has been introduced by Representative Stub Earle (R-Eden) and Representative Charles Stone (D-East Montpelier), to ammend the present bottle law. It is assigned to the House Natural Resources Committee whose chairman is Henry Carse of Hinesburg.

The bill provides a simple and strong solution to the controversy surrounding Vermont's bottle law. It would ban the sale of beer and soda in flip-top cans after September 1, 1975. It would also ban the use of throwaway containers for beer and soda after July 4, 1976.

The bill is important because it deals with the basic problem of the present law which is that most major beer companies continue to sell their beer in throwaway bottles and cans. Many Vermonters do not realize that the bottles and cans that they take back to the store are then simply shipped off to the dump. The grocers are understandably angry because they know that they are handling junk. H.93 would solve this problem by mandating refillables.

Also the bill would substantially improve the handling and sorting problems of the small grocer in Vermont. By eliminating cans and banning throwaway bottles, the bill would reduce the incredible variety of containers that grocers have to contend with.

Lobbyist for the brewers, beer distributors, can companies, and grocers will wage a strong fight against H. 93. The strategy will be delay and confusion. In addition, bottle law foes will introduce "recycling" proposals that would repeal the bottle law.

Bottle law opponents will blame the law for last year's drop in beer sales with a resulting drop in tax revenues to the state. In fact, however, tax records show that the drop in sales corresponds exactly with the disastrous tourist season experienced in fiscal 1974. Malt beverage tax revenues for recent months have returned to near normal levels.

Americans cannot continue to waste as if there were no end to our resources. Presently Vermonters alone throw away over 90 million soda and beer containers each year. Each year the pop-top ring accounts for 30 million pounds of garbage in America. This does not even include the tons wasted from the cans themselves.

H.93, if passed, will end much of the needless waste in Vermont and hopefully help set the stage for nationwide acceptance of re-useable containers. Supporters of the bill are urged to write to their local representatives and to members of the House Natural Resources Committee. For more information, contact VPIRG, 26 State Street, Montpelier, Vt, 05602.

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Son Of Bach Discovered

The wackiest and funniest musical show of the season hits Burlington on Saturday, Feb. 22, when the Lane Series presents the intimate P.D.Q. Bach, with Professor Peter Schickele and the Semi-Pro Musica Antiqua.

P.D.Q. Bach can be seen at Memorial Auditorium at 8 p.m. Life Magazine wrote that "the most original and satisfying expert at musical parody is named Peter Schickele."

Called a "very, very funny show - even for people who like music but don't know why" by the New York Times, Prof. Schickele's program brings to audiences the music of the heretofore undiscovered (for reasons that have never been made clear) son of the great Johann Sebastian Bach, and proves conclusively that "like father, like son" is not necessarily true. Certainly in the case of P.D.Q. Bach, blood does not run thicker than wine.

The program, which will include such infamous works as "The Toot Suite for Caliope, Four Hands," "Diverse Ayres" and "The Notebook for Betty-Sue Bach" (a group of simple piano pieces for simple pianists) will also feature the noted bargain tenor John Ferrante, who for some reason has been with the P.D.Q. Bach Show since its premiere in New York in 1965.

The group will also include an additional musician who, it is planned, will keep the tune (to say nothing of the time) when Mr. Ferrante and Professor Schickele lose it somewhere, as has been known to happen.

This all-new program contains comments on the life times of P.D.Q. Bach, fully illustrated by Prof. Schickele's collection of rare slides, manuscripts and other memorabilia. The Professor will also play and demolish such unique instruments as the Worm, the Snake, the Windbreaker, the unusual Baroque Caliope, the Foghorn, and the Lasso d'Amore.

Handling the responsibilities of the Stage Manager for the group will be the irresponsible Mr. William Walters, whose inspired bits of funny business have added immeasurably (though the artists have tried several times) to the hilarity of the concert.

(continued on page nine)

Chris Parkening: Superguitarist

by Bob DeNike

Christopher Parkening sat perched on a cushioned stool with his left knee elevated by a miniature foot rest and by allowing my imagination to wander with his music, I saw him tenderly cradling a cherished lover in his arms rather than the wooden guitar.

He massaged and caressed her gently, yet firmly, with such a precise knowledge and love of her. She responded by singing in an ethereal tone and timbre and in God-like delight.

Parkening demonstrated a virtuoso talent incomparable to that of any guitarist ever heard by most of those present in Ira Allen Chapel Thursday night. No guitarist you have ever seen in your life (with one possible exception) could have matched the knowledge and dexterity, possessed by this young artist of his instrument.

Only Andres Segovia, reputably the master of classical guitar technique who himself calls Parkening "brilliant," could have left the audience more spellbound that night.

Though Jimi Hendrix, Duane Allman, Eric Clapton or Leo Kottke are not practiced in the classical style, they would have brought young listeners by the droves to the chapel, had they appeared in Parkening's stead. Yet none of these pop/rock guitar kings could have neared the complexity Parkening displayed so freely and easily.

When comparing Parkening to Segovia, once it is known that Parkening's years of musical experience total between a mere third and half of Segovia's lengthy career, the young American guitarist can be seen as nothing but a prodigy and a living legend.

Dressed neatly and conservatively in a brown turtleneck and matching trousers, he bowed tersely as he walked on stage and likewise did so after each performed piece, smiling faintly with little or no detectable emotion. Just a man and his guitar were on exhibition and that man was careful not to allow his movements, facial expressions or clothes to divert any recognition of his professionalism.

Though Parkening employed the use of no equipment for amplifying his instrument, he produced a sound from the nylon strings as clear and resonating as any electrified or steel-stringed guitar.

When 1500 people will stifle every movement and their breathing as well, leaning forward on their seats to drink in and savor every note offered by a musician (as they did at Ira Allen that night), that artist possesses ability of international rarity.

It was immediately evident that Parkening effectively and necessarily used every finger except his left thumb to either pluck or establish key on the strings. All five fingertips of his right hand wore picks, of which few were rarely given rest.

Where most guitarists would be satisfied with including single notes to comprise melody, Parkening inserted entire six-note chords. Whereas the common guitarist prides himself with mastering melodies of single notes, Parkening could play scales of which each note was instead a chord.

Parkening's main strength lay not in picking scales at blinding speed as might be expected (though he was perfectly capable of thoroughly covering the entire neck of the guitar with scales in a matter of seconds). Instead, he showed an ingenious sensitivity in mingling chords with melody. Parkening far surpassed even folk/popplist Leo Kottke in the ability to simultaneously play lead melodies backed by a steady, equally as varying and complex, bass line.

There is always much to listen to when Parkening decides to give the listener a simultaneous combination of strumming and picking, chords and lead melodies. A conglomerate of notes is formed such that it becomes difficult to focus upon one of his multi-dimensional techniques. In this way, Parkening filled every moment of the concert to the brim with music.

Parkening employed techniques familiar to most guitarists with refreshing results. By bending the strings and sliding notes, he made the guitar whine and whimper. By rapidly tapping one note repeatedly, he made notes stutter at 1/16 their regular, whole value. Through these methods, plus the use of harmonics (an effect achieved by lightly touching a string but not fully depressing it), Parkening made notes ring out as if from a mandolin, harpsichord or violin.

The music of Bach, Debussey, Handel and other classical impressionistic composers often demanded Parkening to quickly change from a first position chord (played near the end of the neck bearing the tuning pegs) to a bar chord ten frets away. This involved moving the left, chord fingering hand from one extreme end of the neck to the other. Parkening accomplished this with a polished deftness that left not a trace of the squeaking, rubbing noises that plague even the most accomplished guitarists with distortion and interference during chord changes. Parkening overcame this imperfection by quickly,

(continued on page nine)

Lay Some Heavy Organ On Me

Burlington's Memorial Auditorium on February 27 will reverberate with the awesome sound of Johann Sebastian Bach's greatest music, played by a master of a mighty 56-rank electronic organ amplified by 144 speakers, while strangely revolving dancing images of light and color, projected onto a huge screen, will capture the varying moods of the music to provide an exciting new kind of "total" experience.

This concert, called "heavy organ," will be presented by UVM's Lane Series in a two-hour program that begins at 8 p.m.

Recorded live at the Fillmore - including Fox's pungent spoken introductions to each piece and shouted interpolations of "Go, Virgil, go!" and "Right on!" - and again at San Francisco's Winterland, "HEAVY ORGAN" has already become a smash hit for Decca. In fact, of Fox's three discs on the Billboard best selling classical charts, two are the all-Bach "Heavy Organ" programs.

The idea of combining Bach's organ music with a psychedelic light show to involve an altogether new concert audience in a new integrated sound-and- sight experience is but one of many breaks with tradition on the part of Virgil Fox, regarded as his instrument's foremost living virtuoso.

Although he was for 19 years organist at the great Rockefeller-endowed Riverside Church, under the ministry of Harry Emerson Fosdick (where he played a 5-manual, 10,561-pipe organ especially designed for him and rated one of the 5 greatest in the world), Fox's greatest renown is the concert and recording fields.

The phenomenal Fox virtuosity (people are flabbergasted to watch him play simultaneously on 3 and 4-manual keyboards with separate melodies for each hand, while his feet play 2 altogether different tunes on the pedal keyboard, and he manages at the same time unobtrusively to manipulate several hundred stops pre-registered in 40 to 50 combinations that have been committed to memory along with his music!) and his extraordinary sense of showmanship combine to generate a special brand of excitement in overflow audiences that invariably give him standing ovations.

The only American organist ever to play a paid-admission concert in Carnegie Hall, Virgil Fox was also chosen to inaugurate the new organ at Philharmonic Hall, in New York's Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts, and one month later earned a standing ovation for the first solo organ recital in Philharmonic Hall, where he also made the first recording of the new 98-rank, 5-manual organ.

During the 1969-70 season, he returned to Philharmonic Hall for an unprecedented one-man festival titled "Fan Fare For Organ," which turned hundreds away at the box office for 4 sold-out concerts.

His recitals are broadcast every other year over the British Broadcasting Company network, and he has been seen and heard in trans-US telecasts on Easter Day and Christmas Eve from the Riverside Church and the Church of the Holy Family in New York as well as on the popular Ed Sullivan and David Frost shows.

Voted America's "most popular organist" by the 17,000 subscribers to Choral and Organ Guide, Fox was chosen by the US State Department to represent our country at the First International Conference of Sacred Music in Switzerland.

Born in Princeton, Illinois, to a family rich in musical tradition (his father, a theater operator, played the harmonica at barn dances, and his mother was alto soloist in a choir), Virgil Fox began his musical studies on the piano, but soon succumbed to the charms of the organ, and at 10 already held the post of organist for the First Presbyterian Church in his home town. At 14, he played his first full-length organ recital before a cheering audience in Cincinnati, and at 17 was the first organist to win a biennial contest of the National Federation of Music Clubs.

Tickets, $3, $5, $6, are available in the Lane Office in 234 Waterman. For reservations, telephone 656-3418.

The next Lane concert is by Spanish Alicia de Larrocha, on Sunday, March 2, in Ira Allen Chapel. The concert will be at 2:30 p.m. in the afternoon (instead of at 8 p.m.).

Frankenstein Fun

by Jay E. Williams

Mel Brooks is back! Gene Wilder is back! Madeline Kahn is back! And they're all back to laughter in Young Frankenstein. This masterpiece from brainchild Brooks explodes on to the screen in [Transylvanian black and white] black and white?! Well, cheapskate Brooks insists it adds to the atmosphere of Mary Shelly's classic novel.

With Young Frankenstein, his first genre of a 3-picture deal with Fox, Mel Brooks displays an insane funniness unparalled by any other comedian on the current scene - even Woody Allen. Those Brooks one-liners are more defiant than before, attacking such institutions and phenomena as sex, old ladies, and mice. For instance, the Karloff flicks when a man and woman sheepishly walked down dungeon stairs by candle light? Then a mouse sprints across the woman's feet and she literally leaps into the man's (ah,ha) awaiting arms! He comforts her. Just be glad you're not with Gene Wilder in this scene, for he brushes Inga aside and quips: "It's just a rat. A filthy, slimey, s.o.b. of a rat."

Fine performances are delivered by the entire cast. Most notably though, is Gene Wilder. He captures Dr. Frankenstein brilliantly with the vitality of a child discovering his navel. His high-wire emotion keeps you dangling in your seat trying to decide if his character is insane or if you are. Mr. Brooks doesn't appear in Young Frankenstein and this could be his wisest professional move yet because he can't act.

Looks like another box-office hit and if Mel Brooks has his way, we'll never run out of Jewish monsters.

Potpourri of W.C.

The W. C. Fields Movie Festival continues on Friday, February 21, with An Evening with W. C. Fields, a ninety-minute compilation of ten films, including both shorts and scenes from features, all starring the great comedian W. C. Fields.

There will be two showings of the movie, 7:30 and 9:30 p.m., in Marsh Life Sciences Building Auditorium.

The shorts, some of which have never been shown before, are The Barber Shop, The Fatal Glass of Beer, California Bound, The Pharmacist, and The Big Thumb. W. C. Fields wrote some of these films, most of which were produced during the 1930's.

Tickets, $1 each, are available in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman, and at the door. Telephone reservations: 656-3418.

Vermont Cynic MOVIE GUIDE

Century I & II
DORSET STREET
I Towering Inferno
II Mel Brook's Young Frankenstein

MERRILL'S SHOWCASE I & II
SO. BURLINGTON
I Freebie & the Bean
II Play it Again Sam / Front Page

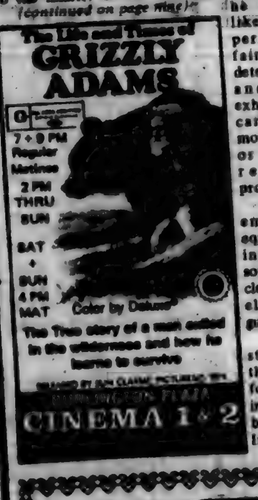
STATE THEATRE
BANK STREET
Strongest Man in the World

FLYNN THEATRE
MAIN STREET
Last Tango in Paris
Sunday Bloody Sunday

ESSEX TWIN CINEMA
ESSEX JCT.
I Herbie the Love Bug
II Life & Times of Grizzly Adams

CINEMA I & II
BURLINGTON PLAZA
SHELBURNE ROAD
I Murder on the Orient Express
II Life & Times of Grizzly Adams

call theatres for times
Not Good for bargain nights
or special showings



THE SILVER KEG
YOUR ENTERTAINMENT DOLLAR BUYS MORE AT THE SILVER KEG!
★★ OUR SPECIALS ★★
MONDAY THRU THURSDAY
NO COVER
except Feb. 25th, 26th & 27th
FEB. 25-26-27
3 NIGHTS ONLY
THE ELECTRIFYING
BONNIE PARKER
with lead guitar by former Climax Blues Bandman $1.00 cover and well worth it !

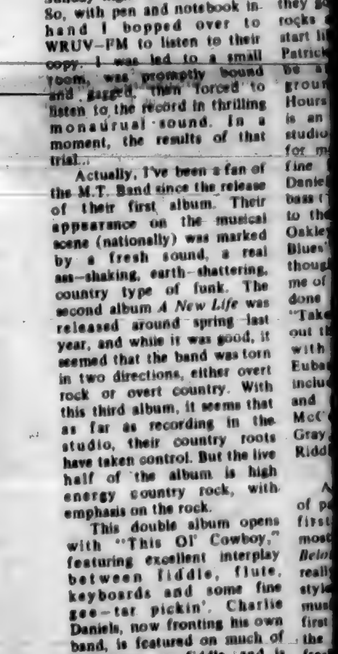
SPAGHETTI HUT
30 North St., Burlington 863-9893
SPECIAL
TUESDAY February 25, 1975
UVM vs. UNH HOCKEY GAME
Watch the game in COLOR and for $3.00 --
A pitcher of Beer & all the PIZZA you can eat.
Limited number of seats so come early

Enjoy our fabulous
CLAMBAKE
Special Nightly $5.95
Together Special
SURF n' TURF
$11.90 per couple
The BLACK CAT
160 BANK ST. 864-9723

Folk Singers

"Round House" will start off big this semester when Philo Records presents Mary McCaslin on Friday, Feb. 21 and Jim Ringer on Saturday, Feb. 22. The performances will begin at 9 p.m. each night and take place in the Roundroom in Billings. It is a free event, so why not come over and join us in two very special evenings.

Mary McCaslin has performed quite a bit around



Mary McCaslin

Tales From Th

by Paul Prior

MARSHALL TUCKER BAND— WHERE WE ALL BELONG

The Ace Arts and Entertainment Editor requested that I review the latest release by Marshall Tucker in anticipation of their upcoming appearance this Sunday night at Patrick Gym. So, with pen and notebook in hand I bopped over to WRUV-FM to listen to their copy. I was led to a small room, was promptly bound and gagged, then forced to listen to the record in thrilling monaurual sound. In a moment, the results of that trial...

Actually, I've been a fan of the M.T. Band since the release of their first album. Their appearance on the musical scene (nationally) was marked by a fresh sound, a real ass-shaking, earth-shattering, country type of funk. The second album A New Life was released around spring last year, and while it was good, it seemed that the band was torn in two directions, either overt rock or overt country. With this third album, it seems that as far as recording in the studio, their country roots have taken control. But the live half of the album is high energy country rock, with emphasis on the rock.

This double album opens with "This Ol' Cowboy," featuring excellent interplay between fiddle, flute, keyboards and some fine gee-tar pickin'. Charlie Daniels, now fronting his own band, is featured on much of the album on fiddle, and is very influential in the countryish direction both bands' studio work has taken.

The first side also features "In My Own Way", which is a fine example of what might be described as the typical Marshall Tucker song, starting off with a chugging drum and bass combination, then the rest of the instruments come in one by one, building up to the final crescendo. The bands' studio production has improved quite a bit too. As bad as the speaker I heard it through was, the bass came out loud and clear. What is evident also, is that the band has been developing its own style. The M.T. Band has been dismissed by some critics as being another Allman Bros. Rip-Off, but this complaint can no longer be directed at them as far as recording is concerned.

Side Two features "How Can I Slow Down" and "Where a Country Boy Belongs". The latter is good musically but suffers from the same problems any country rock group does, which is a general lack of meaningful lyrics. "Gotta Git mahself back tuh Tennahsee Tuh See Mah Lady." But people who are really into country music are into it because it doesn't really require meaningful lyrics, it just reaffirms the desire to go back to

ome Heavy Organ On Me

Memorial
February 27
e with the of Johann
's greatest
-master of a ictionic organ 44 speakers, revolving f light and onto a huge e the varying sic to provide nd of "total"

alled "heavy presented by Series in a n that begins

ive at the luding Fox's introductions and shouted
"Go, Virgil, at em!" - and Francisco's
"HEAVY
already become Decca. In fact, discs on the selling classical e the all-Bach
programs.
of combining music with a light show to altogether new ce in a new und-and- sight ut one of many radition on the Fox, regarded as s foremost living

he was for 19 at the great llowed Riverside
the ministry of n Fosdick (where a 5-manual, organ especially im and rated one est in the world), renown is the
ecording fields.
enomenal Fox (people are to watch him
eously on 3 and keyboards with elodies for each his feet play 2 ifferent tunes on eyboard, and he
the same time
y to manipulate undred stops d in 40 to 50
s that have been to memory along music!) and his inary sense of hip combine to special brand of excitement is overflow audiences that invariably give him standing ovations.

The only American organist ever to play a paid-admission concert in Carnegie Hall, Virgil Fox was also chosen to inaugurate the new organ at Philharmonic Hall, in New York's Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts, and one month later earned a standing ovation for the first solo organ recital in Philharmonic Hall, where he also made the first recording of the new 98-rank, 5-manual organ.

During the 1969-70 season, he returned to Philharmonic Hall for an unprecedented one-man festival titled "Fan Fare For Organ," which turned hundreds away at the box office for 4 sold-out concerts.

His recitals are broadcast every other year over the British Broadcasting Company network, and he has been seen and heard in trans-US telecasts on Easter Day and Christmas Eve from the Riverside Church and the Church of the Holy Family in New York as well as on the popular Ed Sullivan and David Frost shows.

Voted America's "most popular organist" by the 17,000 subscribers to Choral and Organ Guide, Fox was chosen by the US State Department to represent our country at the First International Conference of Sacred Music in Switzerland.

Born in Princeton, Illinois, to a family rich in musical tradition (his father, a theater operator, played the harmonica at barn dances, and his mother was alto soloist in a choir), Virgil Fox began his musical studies on the piano, but soon succumbed to the charms of the organ, and at 10 already held the post of organist for the First Presbyterian Church in his home town. At 14, he played his first full-length organ recital before a cheering audience in Cincinnati, and at 17 was the first organist to win a biennial contest of the National Federation of Music Clubs.

Tickets, $3, $5, $6, are available in the Lane Office in 234 Waterman. For reservations, telephone 656-3418.

The next Lane concert is by Spanish Alicia de Larrocha, on Sunday, March 2, in Ira Allen Chapel. The concert will be at 2:30 p.m. in the afternoon (instead of at 8 p.m.).

Enjoy our fabulous
CLAMBAKE
ecial Nightly $5.95
gether Special
SURF n' TURF
11.90 per couple
The BLACK CAT
60 BANK ST. 864-9723

Folk Singers Play Free Billings Concert

"Round House" will start off big this semester when Philo Records presents Mary McCaslin on Friday, Feb. 21 and Jim Ringer on Saturday, Feb. 22. The performances will begin at 9 p.m. each night and take place in the Roundroom in Billings. It is a free event, so why not come over and join us in two very special evenings.

Mary McCaslin has performed quite a bit around UVM and always puts on a great show. She has an exceptional new album, Way Out West, which everyone should hear. McCaslin's unorthodox guitar tunings create unusual, ethereal melodies of striking beauty. Combined with her clear, delicately affecting vocals, the effects are magical in all the songs she sings. She's a contemporary folk styled singer and it's well worth your while to hear her this Friday.

On Saturday night Billings Governing Board and Philo present another great singer and performer, Jim Ringer. If you think you know what makes country music and bluegrass so great, we suggest that you come listen to Jim Ringer's treatments, and be reminded of all you have forgotten in recent years. Jim's new album, Good to Get Home, contains new arrangements of a variety of material, both old and new and its blended together in a direct, forceful, yet simple way.

We hope to see alot of people here to help make our new ROUNDHOUSE a total success. Sponsored by Billings Center Governing Board.

Mary McCaslin

Jim Ringer

Tales From The Ozone

by Paul Prior

MARSHALL TUCKER BAND— WHERE WE ALL BELONG

The Ace Arts and Entertainment Editor requested that I review the latest release by Marshall Tucker in anticipation of their upcoming appearance this Sunday night at Patrick Gym. So, with pen and notebook in hand I hopped over to WRUV-FM to listen to their [illegible] was led to a small room, was promptly bound and gagged, then forced to listen to the record in thrilling monaurual sound. In a moment, the results of that trial.

Actually, I've been a fan of the M.T. Band since the release of their first album. Their appearance on the musical scene (nationally) was marked by a fresh sound, a real ass-shaking, earth-shattering, country type of funk. The second album A New Life was released around spring last year, and while it was good, it seemed that the band was torn in two directions, either overt rock or overt country. With this third album, it seems that as far as recording in the studio, their country roots have taken control. But the live half of the album is high energy country rock, with emphasis on the rock.

This double album opens with "This Ol' Cowboy," featuring excellent interplay between fiddle, flute, keyboards and some fine gee-tar pickin'. Charlie Daniels, now fronting his own band, is featured on much of the album on fiddle, and is very influential in the countryish direction both bands' studio work has taken.

The first side also features "In My Own Way", which is a fine example of what might be described as the typical Marshall Tucker song, starting off with a chugging drum and bass combination, then the rest of the instruments come in one by one, building up to the final crescendo. The bands' studio production has improved quite a bit too. As bad as the speaker I heard it through was, the bass came out loud and clear. What is evident also, is that the band has been developing its own style. The M.T. Band has been dismissed by some critics as being another Allman Bros. Rip-Off, but this complaint can no longer be directed at them as far as recording is concerned.

Side Two features "How Can I Slow Down" and "Where a Country Boy Belongs". The latter is good musically but suffers from the same problems any country rock group does, which is a general lack of meaningful lyrics. "Gotta Git Back" back bah Tennessee Tuh See Mah Lady." But people who are really into country music are into it because it doesn't really require meaningful lyrics, it just reaffirms the desire to go back to a rural pace. "Now She's Gone" is a definite boogie number, more like the band's live work.

Which brings us to the second half of the album, recorded in concert. "Ramblin'" opens the set, and this really amazed me- If they start out at that pace, how are they going to end? "Ramblin'" rocks and cooks, and if they start like this on Sunday night, Patrick Gym is going to have to be excavated down on the ground pretty firmly. "24 Hours At A Time" follows, and is an improvement over the studio version in that it allows for more improvisation. Some fine fiddle here by Charlie Daniels again, as well as fine bass (Tommy Caldwell) similar to the style of the late Berry Oakley. "Every Day I Sing The Blues" is an ass-shaker too, though parts of it do remind me of "You Don't Love Me" as done by those Allman Boys. "Take The Highway" closes out the album, another rocker, with fine flute by Jerry Eubanks. The rest of the band includes Toy Caldwell, electric and acoustic guitars; George McCorkle, the same; Doug Gray, lead vocals; and Paul Riddle, drums.

As an overall view, I'm kind of partial to Marshall Tucker's first album, probably their most even effort. Where We All Belong is a good album, but really isn't setting any new styles or directions in country music. When the Tucker Band first hit the concert scene in the East, they were definitely fresh and innovative. In their change towards a more countryish direction, they've sacrificed innovation and stuck to a steady formula, which becomes repetitive after awhile. They should be seen in concert to be appreciated, mostly because of the high energy level of the performance. So by all means get a wicked buzz on and boogie your tails up to the Gym this Sunday night—Hillbilly Rock at it's best.

BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE
FANTASTIC SELECTION OF BEERS, ALES AND AMERICAN & IMPORTED WINES AT GREAT SAVINGS

L.P. Review

EDSEL PEACOCK'S SHOWCASE

by Larry Seiden

"It's Time/Bonnie Bramlett

About five years ago I sat in a downpour on a rusting chair awaiting another Schaeffer concert in Central Park. It didn't turn out to be just another foray into New York City. Well, the rain didn't stop but I didn't care, Delaney and Bonnie-Bramlett and some exceptionally talented friends took me to a land where the sun shines and sweet voices sing gospel music until tomorrow rolls in. The friends standing on the sheltered stage included Duane Allman, Carl Radle and King Curtis, the last of whom would later that night be stabbed-to death outside his uptown apartment building. On a further mournful note, Delaney sang at Duane's funeral.

"It's a rebirth," Bonnie says in Rolling Stone. It's Time is a new lady returning to her southern roots to sing the righteous gospel blues. Macon, Georgia is southern, gutty funk; where the Allman Brothers, Cowboy (Boyer and Talton), Capricorn records (Bonnie's new label) and Sound Studios can be found. Capricorn went all out to welcome her home. They brought their best studio musicians, singers, scotch and Johnny Sandlin, their par excellence producer to make it one down-home affair.

There is something very special about Georgia that has everyone singing about it. I asked Fred, who spent 18 years there, what it is and all he replied is "Dunno". I guess he's too deep in it to see. For sure Bonnie knows it, "Atlanta, Georgia" the one song she contributes from her pen for this album, is the finest kicker on this very fine record. Bonnie's throaty all-out voice shines on the bluesy numbers. "Cowboys and Indians" and the late Ivory Joe Hunter's "Since I Met You Baby" are heart-wrenching. Her rendition of Greg Allman's "Oncoming Traffic" (with Gregory on organ) far surpasses his recording of it. Her voice, much stronger than his laid-back tones, brings the emptiness and torment of the lyrics home. Scott Boyer's title tune, with Coltrane style soprano saxes by Randell Bramlett (no relation), portrays the end of a good thing that nobody wants to end. "It's better being used than being burned." Maybe Bonnie knows, after all she is still married to Delaney though she says they will never perform together again. The only small complaint I can lodge against the album is trying to do Jackie Wilson's "Higher and Higher". It is a classic in every movement of the word. Only Strider's all-stops-out version can sit on the same shelf as the original. Bonnie will have to settle for a shelf below. Though her version is admirable, the laid-back Georgia air doesn't carry the energy to start the heat wave the song needs. The other ten cuts are absolute primo and primed to rip.

The level of musicianship deserves a few sweet words. Under Johnny Sandlin's expertise, the band, especially the horns, flies in overdrive throughout the entire album. The professionalism of Bonnie's take-charge manner inspired some of the finest backup performances out of the same region since Boz Scagg's first album came out. Needless to say, Guitarists Scott Boyer, Tommy Talton, Johnny Sandlin and Eddie Hinton (from Muscle Shoals), Allman Brothers, Butch Trucks, Chuckie Leavell, Jaimoe and Greg A., drummers Big Bill Stewart and Jerry Thompson (2 drummers are a Capricorn tradition), bassist Kenny Tibbetts all came to play. But enough can't be said about the horn section of Randell Bramlett, Earl Ford, Bullet Williams, David Brown, and Leo LaBranche. They sparkle as a single unit.

My mouth is watering at the prospect of Bonnie's arrival in Burlington. A little Southern sunshine will go a long way in all this snow. See ya there and try to catch some tunes first.

Previews Bonnie's Concert

Notes On Kathy Hepburn

by Ellen Holmes

When referring to the star of S.A.'s Saturday night film series, what more can be said than that she is a personality unique unto herself. Indeed it is hard to speak of Kathryn Hepburn without a tendency towards romanticism. She is the strong-willed, vibrant, independent, and, invariably outrageous First Lady of the Cinema.

"When I started out," she once admitted, "I didn't know that I wanted to become an actress. I just wanted to be famous." Flaunting convention with an "I don't give a damn" attitude, Hepburn refused to play anybody's game but her own. She wore baggy pants and old shirts at a time when doing your own thing was not only unacceptable but dangerous. Issue was taken on this subject when Kate was under contract to RKO. She was politely asked for the sake of public opinion to "dress like a lady." And Kate politely refused. The point was pressed however. Upon returning to her dressing room, she found her pants gone and in their place a note suggesting "wear a skirt." Hepburn immediately countered by threatening to walk throughout the entire set without pants OR skirt. Her bluff was called... and out she came attired in a blouse and underwear. Needless to say, Hepburn got her way and the point was never again mentioned.

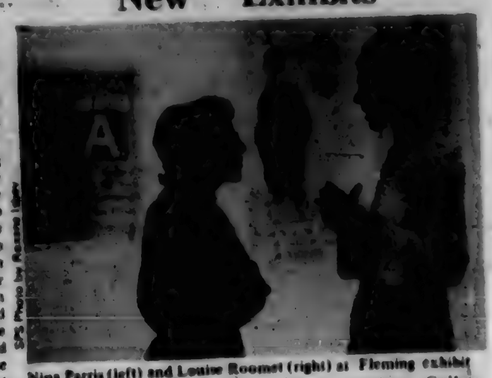
Above all else Miss Hepburn is an individual. Indeed this electric individualism runs rampant throughout all of her films. Never overexposed, Hepburn picked her scripts with care. This practice often led to difficulties with the heads of the studios and with the press in general. In fact, Hepburn had the notoriety of being placed on the "Box Office Poison" list. As a result Kate left Hollywood. She refused to commit herself to mediocre films. Instead she went back to the theatre and triumphed in Philip Barry's play The Philadelphia Story. Hepburn then bought the rights and promptly stuck them in the noses of her Hollywood adversaries. M-G-M pinced the highest bid and from this point her drawing power was never again in question.

Five more films will be coming up in the weeks ahead. On February 22 we have Adam's Rib which finds Kate opposite Spencer Tracy in an incredible plot about married lawyers who end up on opposing sides of the same case. On March 1, the classic African Queen with Humphrey Bogart as the hard-drinking, adventurer Charlie and Hepburn as the prim and proper Rosie. Pat and Mike will follow on March 8. This is perhaps the most successful high comedy of the Tracy-Hepburn team. Hepburn exhibits her ability as a natural athlete with Tracy as her tough, earthy manager. "She ain't got much meat on her," he says in a Brooklyn accent, "but what she's got is cherce."

In contrast to the lightness of Pat and Mike on March 15, The Trojan Women, a version of the play by Euripides, will be presented. Although referred to by one critic as "high class mediocrity," it's one of Hepburn's latest roles and her first attempt at Greek tragedy.

(continued on page three)

Fleming Opens New Exhibits



SPS Photo by Roxanne Udry

Nina Parris (left) and Louise Roomet (right) at Fleming exhibit

by Mark Seranick

On Monday, February 17, the University of Vermont's Robert Hull Fleming Museum celebrated Washington's Birthday with an impressive grand opening of two fine exhibits. In the Ethnographic Gallery (formerly the Primitive Gallery) "American Plains Indians" was unveiled. In the American Gallery, an exhibit entitled "Twentieth Century American Art: The first Four Decades" was also opened.

The opening was very important because it marks the institution of a new program of rotating exhibits drawn from the permanent collection. As Director Richard Janson outlined before opening the new installations, much of the Museum's collection cannot be shown at one time. In the past, much of the Museum's collection remained in storage, being used only for special exhibits or classes. With the present rotation plan, the public will see much more of notable depth in certain fields. The rotating exhibitions will be changed every six months with African, Oceanic, Pre-Columbian and American Indian materials planned for the near future.

The American Gallery displayed many of the most prominent American artists of this century. Although the pieces aren't their best, they represent the artists' styles and varieties of techniques and intentions of this century. The "Study for High Yaller", a watercolor by Reginald Marsh and most representational of his work is of special note. Other prominent painters shown are: William Glackens, Walt Kuhn, Charles Demuth, Thomas Hart Benton, Isabel Bishop, Yasuo Kuniyoshi, Arthur B. Davies, and John Marin. For the photo enthusiast, Alfred Steiglitz is also on view. Finally, an interesting group of posters from the early part of the century display the patriotic spirit of the times.

The opening was attended by a good sized crowd with more students than usual turning out. The museum staff should be complimented on their well-done presentation and redesigning of the American Gallery making for a much more enjoyable viewing area and using the space more efficiently.

SA FILMS PRESENTS

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 20
FLYING DOWN TO RIO (1933) — Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers
101 Votey — 7:30 — Free

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 21
DAY OF THE JACKAL (1972) — Directed by Fred Zinnermann
101 Votey — 7:30 & 10:00 — $1

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 22
ADAM'S RIB (1949) — Kathryn Hepburn, Spencer Tracy
101 Votey — 7:30 & 9:15 — Free

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 24
PLAYTIME (1967) — Directed by Jacques Tati
101 Votey — 7:30 & 9:30 — Free

LITTLE PROFESSOR BOOK CENTER®
Downtown Burlington
Essex Junction

Peace Corps and VISTA
Recruiters will be on campus at:
UNIVERSITY OF VERMONT
ON: February 25, 26, and 27, 1975
Seniors and graduate students sign up now with Placement for an interview. For more information, contact Placement Office.

THIS WEEK SALE AT
Pants Plus
50% off
FAMOUS MAKER PANTS
SALE ENDS SAT. FEB. 22
Pants Plus
12 N. WINOOSKI AVE. BURLINGTON, VT. 864-0181

Announcing . . .
EAR PIERCING CLINIC at LIPPA'S
FRIDAY, FEB. 21
4 PM to 9 PM
SATURDAY FEB. 22
10 AM to 5 PM

FREE EAR PIERCING by a registered nurse with the purchase of one pair of earrings at $8.95
Minors Must be Accompanied by a Parent.
JOIN LIPPA'S EARRING CLUB
After your 5th earring purchase, we'll average out the cost of your earrings and give you the 6th pair FREE!
LIPPA'S JEWELERS
46 CHURCH ST. Burlington
Open Friday evening

CLASSIFIED

For Sale: Authentic Handmade American Indian jewelry — rings, bracelets, necklaces, earrings, etc. Turquoise, obsidian, and coral in silver. Prices well below retail. Call 862-1916, David.

Fischer Superglass skis, good shape (200's), poles. Riechle Boots, size 10 and boot trex. Sacrifice for $60.00 (Marker Toe, roto mat heel). Call Bill or Glen or Gary at 658-1942

For Sale: 1974 Olin Mark II V.C.E., 210 cm Unmounted $100.00. Call 863-3063.

For Sale: Olin MK II Skis, 195 cm. Good condition. Recently refinished. Look Nevada Safety Bindings. Barely used. New $75. Skis $40. Bindings $60. Both $95. Call 656-3827 for Jack.

For sale: Volkswagon bug, blown engine, good trans-axle, camber compensator, speed shifter, misc. parts, Call Karen, ex. 4261.

For Sale: Earth Shoe Boots, excellent condition. Size: 7.25 w / 5.75 m. Best offer ($45.00 new). Please call 985-8575.

Hot deal: 2 panasonic 2-way speakers, good condition, 2 yrs. old, w/ Lafayette stereo level indicator. Yours for $30. Call Rob Waxman, 307 Buckham, ext. 2036.

Wanted: Free-lance photographer for photo-copy project involving b/w photocopying, enlargements, etc. Better suited for larger format cameras and enlarger. Will pay well. Reply to Box 5, Vermont Cynic, UVM, Burlington, Vt.

C.B. Parka — men's sm. Red-orange w/ navy cuff & collar. Brand new — will sacrifice for $50.00. Call 863-2751, Nancy.

RESEARCH
Thousands of Topics
$2.75 per page
Send for your up-to-date, 160-page, mail order catalog. Enclose $1.00 to cover postage (delivery time is 1 to 2 days).
RESEARCH ASSISTANCE, INC.
11941 WILSHIRE BLVD., SUITE #2
LOS ANGELES, CALIF. 90025
(213) 477-8474 or 477-5493

S.A. Films Presents "The Day Of The Jackal"

The schedule of SA Films for last week ran into a few problems and had to be changed. First, A Champ at Oxford did not arrive, and therefore this film had to be cancelled; Second, The Confession was late in arriving. This occurred due to a mix-up in dates with the distributor. The film has been rescheduled for March 5 when it will be shown as a double feature with Last Year at Marienbad, the film already scheduled for that date. The Film Bureau is sorry for the changes. But for those who want to see The Confession, keep the date March 5 in mind. The showing times will be listed in the Cynic that week.

This week the SA Film schedule begins with Flying Down to Rio, another Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers musical. This film, made in 1933, was one of a series of musicals made in the 1930's (one was made every year from 1933 to 1939) with this dancing couple. Their efforts coupled with choreographic helps from Hermes Pan and Robert Alton, and tunes from Vernon Duke, Cole Porter, Jerome Kern, Irving Berlin, the Gershwins, and Vincent Youmans catapulted them to top stardom. Flying Down to Rio will be shown tonight (Thursday) at 7:30 in 101 Votey.

On Friday night The Day of the Jackal, one of the biggest films of the semester, will be shown. This color film, made in 1972, stars Edward Fox, Alan Badel and Tony Britton and was directed by Fred Zinnemann. Having consistently failed in efforts to kill Charles de Gaulle, the French Secret Army (OAS) decides to hire a top foreign professional assassin to do the job. Experienced at his trade, having been successful at eliminating Trujillo and Lumumba... the assassin demands a price of one-half million dollars. His code name: The Jackal. The film traces the cat and mouse game between detective and assassin illustrating the eventual detection of the assassin, who fails in his effort to kill de Gaulle. The character parts are beautifully cast. Alexander plays the detective with disarming simplicity. The actor who plays de Gaulle is such an extraordinary look alike that it is as if de Gaulle had returned to life. Rex Reed calls the film "highly entertaining... Fred Zinnemann... moves the film along in short bolts of electrical current keeping us on our toes so we don't dare miss a thing." Day of the Jackal will be shown Friday at 7:30 and 10:00 in 101 Votey. Admission is $1.

Kathryn Hepburn and Spencer Tracy return on Saturday night in Adam's Rib, a 1949 film directed by George Cukor and also starring Tom Ewell and Judy Holliday. This is a comedy on the battle of the sexes. Tracy and Hepburn play married lawyers on opposite sides in a court battle. He is the district attorney and she is the defense attorney in a case involving a woman who has shot her two-timing husband. The film is very interesting as it discusses equal rights for women, as the issue was seen in 1949. The film will be shown at 7:30 and 9:15 in 101 Votey. Admission is free.

On Monday night the French Classic series continues with Playtime. This color film was made in 1967 and was directed by Jacques Tati. It presents the delightfully droll comic character, Monsieur Hulot, created and portrayed in mime by the internationally famous French director Jacques Tati. M. Hulot wanders through the film with characteristic absent-mindedness, totally unsurprised by any absurdity that crosses his path. His life is ruled by furies beyond his control. With an unsurprised and typical Gallic shrug of the shoulders, he accepts them. All totally pre-planned and the product of intense observation of his environment; Tati's films constitute the only modern comedy that can be compared to the silent classics. Basically a string of sight gags, they are cleverly designed to imply, without making, a social comment. Playtime finds M. Hulot tilting with the depersonalized steel-and-glass environments of modern civilization. He ambles through the maze of Paris, the endless convoluted corridors of Orly airport; the mammoth skyscrapers and an unbearably chic restaurant. By seeing the routine and the ordinary from a slightly different perspective, the familiar is changed into the somewhat surreal, such as the waiting room where the humor comes from the noises emitted from sitting in soft leather chairs. The film will be shown Monday night at 7:30 and 9:30 p.m. in 101 Votey.

The shoe that works with your body.

This shoe is different from any shoe you've ever worn. It's the EARTH® negative heel shoe. The shoe designed to work in harmony with your entire body.

The heel of the® Earth® shoe is actually lower than the toe. This allows you to walk naturally. Like when you walk barefoot in sand or soft earth and your heel sinks down lower than your toes.

The entire sole of the Earth shoe is molded in a very special way. This allows you to walk in a gentle rolling motion. And to walk easily and comfortably on the hard jarring cement of our cities.

But remember, just because a shoe looks like ours doesn't mean it works like ours. So to be sure you're getting the Earth brand shoe, look on the sole for our Earth trademark and U.S. Patent #3305947.

Your body will thank you.

Shoes, sandals, sabots and boots for men and women. From $23.50 to $42.50.

*EARTH is a registered trademark of Kalso Systemet, Inc. ©1974 Kalso Systemet, Inc.

earth shoe

139 BANK STREET

... Patterson President

(continued from page one)

communication of some sort."

Patterson also discussed the recent recommendations of the Board of Trustees to ask the legislature for more authority on determining residency status.

The trustees want the power to act on the residency laws "so that if we appeared in court and they found our residency rules inconsistent, the trustees would be able to make them more consistent," Patterson explained.

The trustees also want to have as many options as possible regarding tuition. Though it is not a state statute, the legislature has put a rider on the appropriation bill each year, stating that in-state shall not be more than 40 per cent of out-of-state tuition.

"It is in effect law on a year-to-year basis. As we look at a system which gives aid to students, what we need to do is charge more equitably," he stated.

Patterson noted that VSAC (Vermont Student Assistance Corporation) would effectively lower the tuition rate, yet, because it can be used anywhere, UVM is not getting the needed dollars.

Patterson was asked how his interim appointment would affect the office of Executive Vice President.

"Obviously we're going to have to shift people around and probably bring in some help from the faculty. I expect Dick Powers would assume some of my duties. There's a lot of flexibility... we'll have to look at how the groups of people here can share the responsibility and get everything done," Patterson replied.

SAGA Sez

Den Still Over-Crowded

Though the Beef Boards are still active, the present student concern over Billings Center makes the Den an appropriate subject. The Catamount Den is still located in the basement of Billings Center, but it is not the same place it was last year. This is due to the enormous increase in sales, approximately a 200% increase caused by the new meal plan.

What has this enormous increase in sales meant? Well, when you move from 1200 sales per day to 3600 sales per day things have to happen. First, they instituted the mini-Den, a small quick munchies line for the customer who wants to run-eat and run. Unfortunately, this failed since it could not carry a full product line. Price, the new manager, then tried adding a third cash register to move the sales line faster. A third register was a good idea, as it let Price know that the problem was not at the registers but rather in food production.

With these two learning experiences behind him, our boy wonder tried a few more successful ventures. The first step was to alter and to realign the staff. This was done with two ideas foremost: To have the fastest most efficient workers there, and organize their jobs for the maximum time on the line at peak hours. In conjunction with staff changes was the removal of all production from the Den kitchen to other units. Examples of this are the pre-wrapped sandwiches, all of which are made and wrapped in the Waterman kitchen and the pre-wrapped cookies and turnovers, baked in the central bakery in Simpson. What this means to the customer is the shelves stocked so the food is readily available.

A step that initially seemed very successful was the elimination of coupon acceptance for an hour at lunch time; however, the slack in coupon sales has been taken up in cash sales. Lastly was an implementation of a hot food or McDonald's corner. Using heat lamps to make pre-cooked foods available at rush times is the basic idea, but this is contingent on accuracy of predicting the customer flow which is difficult. Therefore it will take time to make this as useful a tool as it can become.

Even with these changes, the Den is still endowed with long, tedious lines; a path Price is trying to avoid but for the greater good he may have to take is the elimination of special orders from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., i.e., a swiss cheese, onion and tomato grill on bagel. Also there are other units open at lunch: Given cafeteria from 11:00 to 1:15, for cash customers, and Waterman from 11:00 to 12:30. Both are pleasant, uncrowded changes.

No article on the Den is complete without mentioning the crew who works there. At the grill are Dana (chef boy ordie) and Judie (the burger queen). While Dana or Judie are cooking up your order, Frank and Alice are stocking shelves and there to serve your special needs. Big over vigilant Ed is out front to take care of the dining area.

At the registers are head hauncho 'Jo", a legend in her own time and Di who eases the lanes from 1 to 3:30 p.m.

In the evening, Jimmy and David work at making the Den a quiet place to dine.

THE DOCTOR'S BAG

by Arnold Werner M.D.

QUESTION: The other day I noticed a small line of print on my box of salt: "This salt does not supply iodide, a necessary nutrient." Somewhat surprised, I had always thought that salt was still supplied with iodide. I noticed the same admonition on almost all the salt brands in the grocery store.

What gives? Does salt no longer supply our iodide requirements? If so, what food sources can one use to obtain this nutrient?

ANSWER: Once upon a time many people living in the Great Lakes area suffered from low thyroid function and developed goiters (large swellings of the thyroid gland). The problem stemmed from insufficient amounts of iodide in their food and liquid intake. Iodide is necessary for the production of thyroid hormone. Not only was there a lack of iodide in drinking water, but the land was very iodide deficient (something related to glaciers, I'm told) so that vegetables grown there were also deficient. As well, cattle and other animals whose feed came from the area also picked up little iodide so that no matter what one ate, there was a chance of becoming iodide deficient.

The problem was solved by states passing laws requiring grocery stores to sell at least one brand of salt in which trace amounts of iodide had been added to make up for this deficiency. In fact, most manufacturers for many years seemed to have made only iodized salt. The amount of iodide in the salt is very, very tiny and does not cause any harmful effects and probably was responsible for eliminating goiters from the Great Lakes basin.

It is unlikely that such a situation could develop today since we receive our food supplies from various regions across the country, and often our vegetables and meat have ample supplies of iodide in it. With a reduction in the problem, fewer people are concerned about iodide in salt and less of it appears in stores.

QUESTION: Would you please help us settle a dispute among my floormates and me? A couple of years ago a good friend of mine had an appendicitis attack. The doctor attributed the cause to popcorn lodged in the appendix. Is it possible for such stuff as popcorn, peanut shells, etc., to get caught in the appendix?

ANSWER: Although rare, the situation you inquire about can occur. Much more commonly, obstruction of the appendix is caused by fecal material either accumulating or lodging in the opening of this useless organ. In a fair percentage of cases, no particular cause can be found for the appendicitis.

The appendix is a three to four inch long skinny piece of intestine attached to the beginning of the large intestine. It serves no useful function in humans and is thought to be left over from the days when man's intestine was much longer than it is now. It is tucked away in the lower right part of the abdomen. Appendicitis is the commonest acute surgical condition of the abdomen. Interestingly, it was not until the very late 1800's before inflammation of the appendix was recognized as an important clinical condition.

There is no way to prevent the occurrence of appendicitis and I certainly would not advise one to stop eating popcorn and peanuts since this would be a trivial cause of the disorder. Appendicitis tends to occur less frequently as one gets older but still can occur even in the elderly.

••••••••••

QUESTION: I have had the fortune to do much travelling and the misfortune of using a lot of public johns. The tissue supplied in most public bathrooms, whether for sadistic or economic reasons, is as coarse as wrapping paper. One solution to the problem is never to go anywhere without vaseline. The other is to moisten the paper with the handiest liquid, my saliva. My question then, are there any harmful effects in depositing saliva containing food particles or bacteria in the rectal area?

ANSWER: We have grown soft, at least parts of us have. And Americans seem to have grown softer than Europeans. Not that it's all bad, because the old days of Sears Roebuck catalogs and corn cobs certainly couldn't have been fun. Among the things not on my library shelf is a history of anal hygiene but perhaps some conventional wisdom spiced with a few medical facts will help.

First of all vaseline is not the best thing for a sore anus. Greasy things like vaseline tend to trap moisture against the skin and can cause increased tenderness. A sore rear end is best treated with one of the preparations used (don't panic) for infants with diaper rash. Diaparene is a good one. The other thing that helps is bathing the bottom with warm water mixed with a little salt. (I suggest 1 tsp. per pint of water.)

Spitting on the toilet paper is inadvisable. The mouth and the anus are bacteriologic disaster areas and there is little reason to spread stuff from one area to the other, especially if the anal area is sore and vulnerable to infection. Wet toilet paper is weak and you might also poke your finger through it.

Benjie's BARGAIN Market

Denim Straight Leg Jean 9.39

4.99 Flannel and West Shirt
4.99 Levi Dress Pant
1.99 – 9.99 Shoes For All

Below Red Dog, Downtown
9:30 - 5:30

EVERY FRIDAY & SATURDAY

You've been there. Now you can help them.

They've got a long way to go. In a world that isn't easy. But with someone's help, they'll make it. What they need is a friend. Someone to act as confidant and guide. Perhaps, it could be you as a Salesian Priest or Brother.

The Salesians of St. John Bosco were founded in 1859 to serve youth. Unlike other orders whose apostolate has changed with varying conditions, the Salesians always have been – and will be, youth oriented. Today we're helping to prepare youngsters for the world that awaits them tomorrow. Not an easy task but one which we welcome.

And how do we go about it? By following the precepts of our founder, Don Bosco. To crowd out evil with reason, religion and kindness with a method of play, learn and pray. We're trying to build better communities by helping to create better men.

As a Salesian, you are guaranteed the chance to help the young in a wide range of endeavor . . . as guidance counselors, technical and academic teachers, as coaches, psychologists . . . in boys clubs, summer camps . . . as missionaries. And you are given the kind of training you need to achieve your aims.

The Salesian family is a large one (we are the third largest order) but a warm one. A community with an enthusiastic family feeling where not only our talents are shared but our shortcomings, too. If you feel as we do, that service to youth can be an important mission in your life, we welcome your interest.

For more information about Salesian Priests and Brothers, mail this coupon to: Father Joseph Bellisi, S.D.B. Room 8-

Salesians OF ST. JOHN BOSCO Box 606, New Rochelle, N.Y. 10802

I am interested in the Priesthood ☐ Brotherhood ☐

Name _____ Age _____
Street Address _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____
Phone _____
Education _____
Your Current Job _____

Survey Shou

by Alice Roy

A recent survey of UVM undergraduates indicates that students are dissatisfied with the present advising system at the University. The study also reveals attitudes towards the University budget crisis, student future plans, and differences in socio-economic backgrounds.

The survey was conducted by a group of sociology students under the direction of Ralph Underhill. The students working on the project were Christine Clark, Joanne Derfel, Kathleen Derrick, Keith Picard, Alice Roy, and Peter Sakash.

A random sample of 500 undergraduates was selected to ensure proper representation of students at UVM. Of these, 381, or 77% of the students returned the questionnaires. One part of the survey dealt with general attitudes toward the University as a whole... It was found that 56 per cent of the students like UVM or have a deep attachment to it. Findings showed that the answer students give to this question is closely correlated to how they rated the quality of teaching, the course offerings and programs, and the social life at UVM. In other words, how a student feels about UVM is directly related to how he views the teaching, courses, and social life. Variables such as faculty advisors, fairness of grades, and student housing had little or no effect on general attitudes toward UVM.

Another aspect of the survey concerned budget cuts for the University. The students feel that cutting back funds for new buildings is the best way to save money during the budget crunch. They also believe that the size of the administration should be cut back. (see table 1)

Students believe that high quality academic and cultural programs are essential and are willing to sacrifice new buildings and the size of the administration to preserve the quality of the programs. However, the majority of UVM's actual cutbacks will be made in academic and cultural areas and in faculty size. The smallest cuts will come from the administration and building.

Thirteen p
students favo
varsity athlet percent favor program. There strong suppo
programs amo

A studen average (GPA related to pro back and example, 59
students w
(3.6-4.0) f
the present fa only ten perc low GPA's (2 maintain the contrast, 25 with low continuing while none o with high continuing th

Another questions proposed ped
The students oppose the cent to 34 pe

A recent campus conc deficits invo of granting greater p
out-of-sta
students con chose to ass
there ma

Vermo
non-Vermon

The find differe socio-econo
in-state students were expec is extre
out of sta assumed th students families wi and probab educatio showed tha

1) 47% fathers education 15% of students' fa

2) 4 out-of-st were profe
33% of the

3) out-of-s from fa income

9PM

UVM PATRIC

ver-Crowded to realign done with

To have efficient' organize maximum eak hours.
with staff
evel of all the Den
r units are the hes, all of d wrapped tchen and ches and the central
What the stomer is e to keep o the food

ally wanted was the coupon hour at r, the clock been taken otly was an a but food ener. Using pre-cooked
ush times is but this is ccuracy of tomer flow
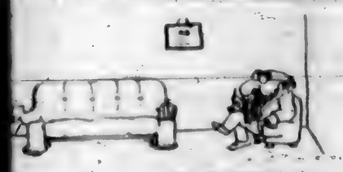
Therefore it will take time to make this as useful a tool as it can become.

Even with these changes, the Den is still endowed with long, tedious lines. a path Price is trying to avoid but for the greater good he may have to take" is the elimination of special orders from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., i.e., a swiss cheese, onions and tomato grill on bagel. Also there are other units open at lunch: Given cafeteria from 11:00 to 1:15, for cash customers, and Waterman from 11:00 to 12:30. Both are pleasant, uncrowded changes.

No article on the Den is complete without mentioning the crew who works there. At the grill are Dana (chef boy ardee) and Judie (the burger queen). While Dana or Judie are cooking up your order, Frank and Alice are stocking shelves and there to serve your special needs. Big over vigilant Ed is out front to take care of the dining area.

At the registers are head honcho "Jo", a legend in her own time and Di who eases the lanes from 1 to 3:30 p.m.

In the evening, Jimmy and David work at making the Den a quiet place to dine.



...d you please help us settle a dispute among ...d me? A couple of years ago a good friend of ...pendicitis attack. The doctor attributed (he ... lodged in the appendix. Is it possible for ...corn, peanut shells, etc., to get caught in the

...ugh fare, the situation you inquire about can ...e commonly, obstruction of the appendix is ...aterial either accumulating or lodging in the ...stem organ. In a fair percentage of cases, no ...an be found for the appendicitis.

... is a three to four inch long skinny piece of ...d to the beginning of the large intestine. It ...function in humans and is thought to be left ...ys when man's intestine was much longer than ... tucked away in the lower right part of the ...pendicitis is the commonest acute surgical ...e abdomen. Interestingly, it was not until the ...'s before inflammation of the appendix was ... important clinical condition.

... way to prevent the occurrence of appendicitis ... would not advise one to stop eating popcorn ...ce this would be a trivial cause of the disorder. ...nds to occur less frequently as one gets older ...ur even in the elderly.

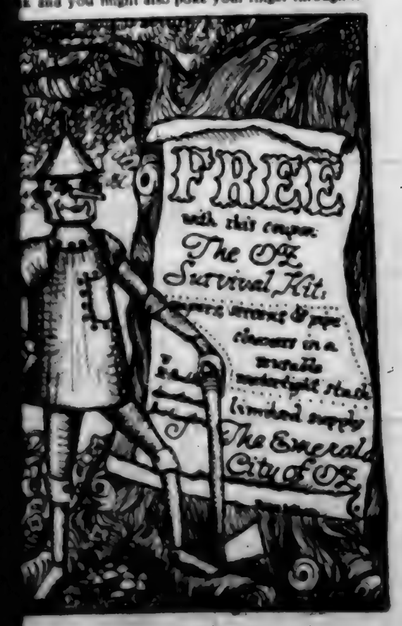
****

... have had the fortune to do much travelling and ... of using a lot of public johns. The tissue ...ost public bathrooms, whether for sadistic or ...ons, is as coarse as wrapping paper. One solution ... is never to go anywhere without vaseline. The ...oisten the paper with the handiest liquid, my ...estion then, are there any harmful effects in ...va containing food particles or bacteria in the

... have grown soft, at least parts of us have. And ...m to have grown softer than Europeans. Not ...bad, because the old days of Sears Roebuck ...corn cobs certainly couldn't have been fun. ...hings not on my library shelf is a history of anal ...perhaps some conventional wisdom spiced with a ...acts will help.

...ll vaseline is not the best thing for a sore anus. ... like vaseline tend to trap moisture against the ...cause increased tenderness. A sore rear end is best ... one of the preparations used (don't panic) for ...diaper rash. Diaparene is a good one. The other ...ips is bathing the bottom with warm water mixed ...alt. (I suggest 1 tsp. per pint of water.)

...on the toilet paper is inadvisable. The mouth and ... bacteriologic disaster areas and there is little ...read stuff from one area to the other, especially if ...a is sore and vulnerable to infection. Wet toilet ...k and you might also poke your finger through it.



Survey Shows Dissatisfaction With Advising System

by Alice Roy

A recent survey of UVM undergraduates indicates that students are dissatisfied with the present advising system at the University. The study also reveals attitudes towards the University budget crisis, student future plans, and differences in socio-economic backgrounds.

The survey was conducted by a group of sociology students under the direction of Ralph Underhill. The students working on the project were Christine Clark, Joanne Derfel, Kathleen Derrick, Keith Picard, Alice Roy, and Peter Sakash.

A random sample of 500 undergraduates was selected to ensure proper representation of students at UVM. Of these, 381, or 77% of the students returned the questionnaires. One part of the survey dealt with general attitudes toward the University as a whole... It was found that 56 per cent of the students like UVM or have a deep attachment to it. Findings showed that the answer students give to this question is closely correlated to how they rated the quality of teaching, the course offerings and programs, and the social life at UVM. In other words, how a student feels about UVM is directly related to how he views the teaching, courses, and social life. Variables such as faculty advisors, fairness of grades, and student housing had little or no effect on general attitudes toward UVM.

Another aspect of the survey concerned budget cuts for the University. The students feel that cutting back funds for new buildings is the best way to save money during the budget crunch. They also believe that the size of the administration should be cut back. (see table I)

Students believe that high quality academic and cultural programs are essential and are willing to sacrifice new buildings and the size of the administration to preserve the quality of the programs. However, the majority of UVM's actual cutbacks will be made in academic and cultural areas and in faculty size. The smallest cuts will come from the administration and building.

Thirteen per cent of the students favor cutting back varsity athletics, while eight percent favor maintaining the program. There seems to be no strong support for athletic programs among the students.

A student's grade point average (GPA) appears closely related to programs to be cut back and maintained. For example, 39 per cent of the students with high GPA's (3.6–4.0) favor maintaining the present faculty size, while only ten percent of those with low GPA's (2.0 or less) would maintain the faculty size. In contrast, 25 percent of those with low GPA's favor continuing varsity athletics, while none of the respondents with high GPA's favor continuing the program.

Another one of the budget questions concerned the proposed pedestrian underpass. The students overwhelmingly oppose the underpass, 66 per cent to 34 percent.

A recent controversy on campus concerning the budget deficits involves the question of granting admission to a greater percentage of out-of-state students. The students conducting the survey chose to assess any differences there may be between Vermonters and non-Vermonters at UVM.

The findings showed major differences in the socio-economic backgrounds of in-state and out-of-state students. These differences were expected because tuition is extremely high for out-of-state residents. It was assumed that the out-of-state students would come from families with better incomes, and probably higher levels of education. The findings showed that:

1) 47% of the Vermonters' fathers have no college education compared to the 15% of the out-of-state students' fathers.

2) 54% of the out-of-state students' fathers were professionals compared to 33% of the Vermonters.

3) 77% of the out-of-state students come from families whose annual incomes are over $20,000 compared with 29% of the Vermont students.

4) 72% of the out-of-state students' parents finance their education compared to 29% of the Vermonters' parents. Vermonters tend to pay for most of their education.

It was also hypothesized that out-of-state students would have to be better students in order to be accepted at Vermont for two reasons: First, UVM is a state school. And secondly, so many more out-of-state residents apply than Vermonters, making competition among out-of-staters greater.

In comparing grade point averages, it was found that 43 percent of the out-of-state students have GPA's of 3.1 or above, while 29 percent of the Vermonters have averages that high. It was also found that out-of-state students have higher aspirations for graduate school, perhaps because of better grades. 52 percent of the Vermonters plan to go on to graduate school, while 73 percent of the out-of-state students have such plans.

Other interesting results include:

(1) 48 percent of the Vermonters feel their chances for acceptance at UVM were excellent, compared to only 18 percent of the out-of-staters.

(2) 9 percent of the Vermonters said they never drink alcohol while only 3 percent of the out-of-staters indicated that. However, nearly equal percentages drink alcohol more than once a week.

(3) 51 percent of the Vermont students said that they never smoke pot, while only 32 percent of the out-of-staters never smoke pot.

(4) By a two to one margin, in-state students feel that admission standards should favor Vermonters, and by the same margin, out-of-staters feel that admission standards should be equal.

(5) There were generally no differences between in- and out-of-staters on the questions of political orientation and party preference.

(6) The mothers of both in-state and out-of-state students have about the same amount of education.

(7) Both Vermonters and non-Vermonters tend to have similar occupational goals.

The major thurst of the survey concerned the advising system. When asked to rate their faculty advisors, 35 percent of the students replied that their advisors were terrible or poor. Only 6 percent rated their advisors as excellent.

A majority of students indicated that their advisor is usually or always available. However, when asked if their advisor had posted office hours, 40 percent were unsure. 67 percent of the freshmen did not know if their advisors had office hours, while only 22 percent of the seniors did not know.

Another question concerned the usefulness of a student's present advisor. Only 23 percent rate their advisors as very helpful. 17 percent replied that their advisors are not helpful at all.

Finally, students were asked who has been the single best source of academic advice to them. Friends were the top choice, with upperclassmen being the second choice. Faculty advisors rated fourth out of nine choices.

More specifically, students were asked how frequently they saw their advisors for each of the six possible functions listed. The functions were categorized as follows: (1) Signing registration cards; (2) Discussing personal problems; (3) Discussing career plans; (4) Discussing academic problems; (5) Discussing possible courses; (6) Just talking with the advisor.

The results indicated that mainly students see their advisors for signing registration cards and discussing possible courses, and rarely for any of the other function.

Next, students were asked to rate their satisfaction with their advisors' performances of these functions. Since most of the students do not see their advisors for four of the six listed reasons, many students could not reply. Of those who did respond to the question, the breakdown of "very satisfied" replies is represented in Table 2.

When broken down by college, the student in the College of Home Economics had the highest percentage of being "very satisfied" with their advisor in each of the six categories.

While one of the main reasons students see their advisors is for signing cards, only 17 percent view this as a very important function of an advisor. By contrast, 80 percent think that discussion of career plans is very important. It appears that advisors do not discuss future careers nearly as much as students would like.

Discussion of possible courses is viewed as very important by 80 percent and 75 percent list academic problems as very important. Smaller percentages think that just talking (38 percent) and discussion of personal problems (28 percent) are very important.

Students were asked to make additional comments concerning their advisors. Many feel that their advisors either are not serious enough or do not have enough time for their advisees. Others commented that faculty advisors are too narrowly oriented toward their own field and do not know about other departments at UVM.

In summary, it seems that students feel that the listed functions are quite important. Yet they do not tend to see their advisors for these reasons and when they do, they generally come away not fully satisfied.

TABLE 1

Percentage of students favoring cutbacks or maintenance of certain Programs.

PROGRAM	CUTBACK	MAINTAIN
New Buildings	33 %	1 %
Administration size	32 %	2 %
Varsity athletics	13 %	8 %
Office of Volunteer Programs	6 %	8 %
Non-varsity sports	4 %	8 %
Building maintenance	3 %	7 %
Cultural programs	2 %	28 %
Faculty size	2 %	34 %
Other	5 %	4 %

TABLE 2

Percentage of students very satisfied with their advisors in each of six categories.

FUNCTION	PERCENT VERY SATISFIED
Sign registration cards	77 %
Discuss personal problems	38 %
Discuss career plans	36 %
Discuss academic problems	34 %
Discuss possible courses	38 %
Just to talk	45 %

E.P. Program Director Sees Decline In Education Alternatives

by Andy Morse

Morris Simon, Director of the Experimental Education Program said the Administration's attitude toward alternate modes of education was not reflected in its decision to drop his program. He cited the Living/Learning Center as offering the same sort of alternate education programs that the Experimental Program did for six years.

The Experimental Program was cut, explained Simon, when the Dean of Arts and Sciences had to choose between eliminating a professor from each department or dropping the entire Experimental Program. Simon did not condone the Dean's action, though he was sorry "to see the E. P. go."

Though the informal uniqueness of the Experimental Program will be lost with its elimination, some of its philosophies and programs can be found in the Living and Learning Center. Simon pointed out that such features as freshman independent study, self-designed programs and attending classes in the same building in which you live are available at Living/Learning. Simon explained that the mere existence of the E. P. encouraged thought and planning into different ways of education, the kind of planning now under study by the Faculty Committee on Alternate Educational Programs.

In a review of the Experimental Program's 6-year history, Simon said it started with an enormous amount of enthusiasm, but as with all new things it soon became "old hat" and interest declined noticeably. Though student and faculty interest quieted, Simon felt the Experimental Program still had a tremendous amount of potential. Simon cited the improvement of the independent study program and the opportunity for a student to control and direct his own education as two facets of the Experimental Programs that were strengthening in the last few years.

The Experiemental Program died without noticeable protest from students enrolled in it. The students seemingly apathetic action was explained by Simon. He pointed out that the cuts came at a time of economic depression when students are more concerned with vocational goals such as grades and a major and less concerned with other programs not essential to getting a job upon graduation.

...Intimate PDQ Bach Visits Burlington

(continued from page six)

Additional numbers on the program are "Hansel and Gretel and Ted and Alice" (an opera in one unnatural act), "Erotica Variations" (S.36EE. for banned instruments and piano) and other rib-tickling divertimenti.

At a recent concert in Omaha the critic of the World Herald reported that the audience cried from the sheer joy of this impossible and original attraction." With reviews like this, it might be very worth while to see this unlikely concert program.

Tickets, $3, $5, $6 are available in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman. Telephone 656-3418 for reservations.

Next concert on the Lane Series in organist Virgil Fox, with the Rodgers Touring organ, a rear-projection light show, and the music of Johann Sebastian Bach — a sound and light spectacular. The concert will be held Feb. 27.

...Chris Parkening

(continued from page six)

accurately and lightly placing his fingers upon the strings as he played.

Occasionally Parkening emitted heavily-breathed humming sounds that could be heard by those sitting close by. Rather than serving as signposts or aids in remembering the song, these exhaltations erupted spontaneously when the guitarist reached crescendoes or important high points. Parkening had probably been singing the melodies to himself from the start, yet the deep breaths emerged as spontaneously and naturally as the music itself.

Christopher Parkening can be called, without reservation, the second best guitarist in the world.

UVM S.A. CONCERTS
PRESENTS
THE MARSHALL TUCKER BAND
with special guest
BONNIE BRAMLETT

This Sunday February 23

9PM
UVM PATRICK GYM

Tickets:
$4.50 w/UVM ID
$5.50 Gen. Adm.

Available at:
UVM Bookstore,
at the door
(night of the Concert) and Bailey's
(Gen'l Admission Only)

S.A. ADS

Rollins: UVM Day Care Cut; "A Matter Of Priorities"

by Stephen W. Terrell

In an interview with Vice President of Academic Affairs, Alfred B. Rollins, the Cynic was told that the closing of the UVM Day Care Center was a "Matter of Priorities."

Rollins said that no one wanted to close the Center, but that because the Day Care Center could not pay for itself fully, it was felt that it was "not the particular mission of UVM to provide Day Care for the community." Undergraduate and graduate education were first priorities which superceded Day Care funding.

In a memorandum sent Jan 30 from Rollins' office it was recommended by the Day Care Center Board of Directors, Dr. R.E. Musty (Chairman, Dept. of Psychology), Dr. J.G. Weight, (Dean, College of Arts and Sciences), that the Center close because "many children who are in the Center are supported by state day care funds which pay only 60 to 70% of the actual cost per student" and that "the University has concluded that it simply cannot pay the remaining balance of costs which are not supplied by the State."

Dan Albert (Director of UVM Day Care) immediately denied that the Board was ever in on any decision to close and that the State supplied 88% of funding to state aid children.

Rollins said he was told by Dr. R.E. Musty that the Board had in fact decided. In a phone call interview, Musty admitted the Board did not participate in the decision-making process, but that they were kept informed all along.

As to the discrepancy in percentage figures, Rollins said it depended on how one calculates them. He thought Albert was using a higher percentage because he was adding in percentages of research grant money which are audited by the government and see hard to pay overhead. But, Rollins added, "even given that figure UVM still has to put $20,000 plus into the Center."

Opened in 1971, the Center serves 90 children ages 2-6 years. Rollins said the Center was originally set up through his office with no formal UVM approval. It was agreed that the Center would be self-supporting. However, the budget overran substantially the first three years and Rollins' office assumed the deficit.

Last August Rollins called a meeting of the Day Care Center Board and told them he would no longer let UVM assume the deficit for the school's budget. He told them that after October of 1974 he would not allow them to report to his office, that they would have to find a department to sponsor them or they would have to go it on their own.

On Jan. 1 of this year it was decided that the Psychology Department would take direction of the Day Care Center. The Psychology Dept. then decided it could not fund the school and thus it recommended its closure.

Dr. R.E. Musty said "no one wanted to stop day care" and added that the state "just doesn't pay 100%." He also said continuation of the school could mean a large capital investment in the building that the school now occupies, as it is an old house with safety problems.

Rollins said he and his office have been "quite patient and have tried to make the center work." But with three years of budget over-run on a program which was supposed to meet its own costs, it will have to go unless another department at the University is willing to take it on or some arrangement can be made whereby the deficit can be paid for.

When asked if he knew of any way to continue the program, Rollins said "we've tried just about every option possible," but he did not discount any that might arise and welcomed a solution.

"The basic problem," he concluded, "is that the Day Care Center just doesn't pay for itself."

....Burlington Shooting Case

(continued from page one)

damages. They did however release several new facts regarding the case. According to their sources, Miles "consumed a number of beers" on the night of the shooting. Miles was in plain clothes on the night of the shooting.

Chief Medical Examiner Harris responded to this point in an attempt to clarify the situation. Miles drank two beers on the night in question, and to quote Harris, "a person of Miles' weight would have no alcohol in his system at the time of the shooting." Also at this time it was reported that Kimberly Cheney might still call up a state grand jury on the case.

Several days later, the full particulars on the A.C.L.U. case were announced. The suit was for a total sum of 1.85 million dollars, and was brought on behalf of Mrs. Joanna Ponce. The suit was brought against officers Miles, Goodrich, Laroch, Moran and the City of Burlington. The suit described Miles as "allegedly acting under color of law, without provocation, and in a wanton culpable, and grossly negligent manner while under the influence of intoxicants depriving Ponce of life without due process of law." The suit goes on to say that at no time did Ponce make any threatening gesture toward any police officer. He did not use any force or violence, and did not turn or start to turn toward the officers.

In a related incident, it was reported that Burlington Mayor Paquette may postpone any public hearings on the incident until all litigation is over. It was also reported at this time that Kimberly Cheney would not order a grand jury to investigate the incident.

On January 8, 1975, a national police union made a statement about the case. According to the Union, the A.C.L.U. "blew the case all out of proportion," and called for an investigation of the A.C.L.U. by the Vermont and the American Bar Association. They responded to the charges of the A.C.L.U. with the following facts:

(1) Miles was not drunk. This was demonstrated by medical evidence.

(2) Miles did not deliberately shoot the man. It was a result of a reflex action.

(3) The police were forewarned that the man would be armed. (This tip had always been attributed to "a relative" of the dead man. At this point in time, it was revealed that the tip came from Mrs. Ponce, and substantiated by her father.)

(4) David Harrison has a vested interest in the outcome of the case since as administrator of the Luis Ponce Estate, he would collect in any settlement. Harrison dismissed these statements as unreasonable.

(Next week the series will continue with an update and further response from the participants in the case.)

... I-93 Issue At Hearing

(continued from page one)

authorities to form their own special districts for the purpose of providing public transportation.

(5) Pursue projects from the 20-year Vermont Airport System Plan, which Gensburg called "modest and achievable." This plan provides Vermont with a model for air transportation in the state for the next 10 years.

(6) Pursue a policy of acquisition of railroad rights-of-way for the purpose of lease-back to railroad operators. However, just released is the Dept. of Transportation's regulations for state rail plans required in the Regional Rail Reorganization Act of 1973 which will financially assist states in maintaining their railroad lines. Thus acquisition may not be necessary.

The report also contains a study by the Bicycle Study Advisory Committee which recommends that bike routes be built along existing roads. The Transportation Advisory Board recommends that such plans be undertaken by the individual towns with some assistance from the state. Gensburg said that his committee's recommendations deleting the plan for construction of I-93 "will not significantly improve economics of the Northeast Kingdom." He calculated the difference in travelling time between St. Johnsbury and Littleton would be 1.6 minutes if one could travel using an interstate highway instead of Vermont Route 18.

He said Route 18 is a "good safe highway" with a high sufficiency rating of 80. He stated $85,000 would be the additional burden of maintenance for I-93 should it be completed.

An attorney and speaker for the town of St. Johnsbury argued the departure from the 1967 highway plan "does not reflect any substantial change in the plan of the government" and therefore should not be altered. The attorney, along with Robert Baccini, President of the St Johnsbury Chamber of Commerce, argued the interchange would "help the economy of St. Johnsbury and therefore the state of Vermont."

Charles Carter, a Northeast Kingdom developer, argued that not to build the interstate "would jeopardize the entire investment planning for the Northeast part of the state." Carter also said it would not "complete the commitment Vermont has made to the rest of the nation."

Carl Bohlen of Vermont Public Interest Research Group argued that "the present policy of the state toward highway construction is self-defeating. New roads are built while the old ones deteriorate."

Bohlen stated maintenance costs on any new highway would be a major additional expense. Rebutting economic arguments and those defending the road as a part of military defense evacuation routes, he said "Interstate highways, as shown in the Huffman Report, do not provide higher employment for an area, except for temporary jobs it provides while being built" and that he was "at a loss to see how it would provide any defense benefit."

John King, UVM Robinson Hall Environmentalist, predicted a decline in the use of the automobile and subsequently a declining need for highways.

He was echoed by David Goldberg, spokesman for Vermont Tomorrow who charged the Transportation Advisory Board with a "failure to come to grips with alternatives to the automobile."

Goldberg said "We are locked into the automobile when other modes of transportation are more efficient and conservationist."

A bill was introduced this week by legislators which would end construction of all new four-lane highways. This embodies much of the policy recommendations made by the Transportation Advisory Board.

...Andrews On UVM

(continued from page one)

legislature and the resignation will have "no effect at all."

According to Andrews, the legislature will decide UVM's budget by the end of March. He has "sympathy and support" for the legislature because of the serious financial situation of Vermont. "The state cannot support us," added Andrews. "If level funding should occur," he remarked, "the University will be in a serious position with limited options to deal with the matter."

One of those options is to increase the tuition for the Medical School by $500. Another would be to renegotiate the amount other northeastern states pay to Vermont to send their students here. Also, an additional $5.00 on the application fee is being planned. Andrews projects tuition may rise an additional $50 from the already scheduled increase of $95 for Vermonters and $215 for out-of-state students. However, he thinks that "Tuition should be the last resort." A high tuition would lead to an "elitist" school which only the rich could afford, ended Andrews.

...Day Care Center

(continued from page one)

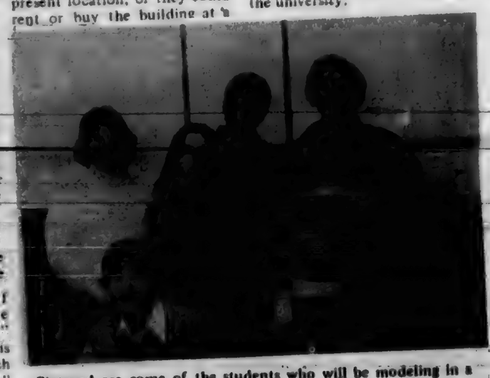
Center. These include early childhood education, nutrition, art, speech pathology, psychiatry, and nursing. The fact sheet also reports that sixteen research projects, representing six different departments, have been conducted at the Center. Peter Huber again states, "The Psychology Department (among many others) uses the Center as a child development research facility and operates their project from a grant made possible by our existence. It's the staff who provide much of the data in this research as we are moving with the children all day."

Parents and staff members are exploring several options in order to save the Center. They are seeking public support from the University and community and have already received 800 signatures in support. They are also prepared to go to the Trustees. But, since the Day Care Center is an unrecognized program, this makes it difficult to bring it to the attention of the Trustees, explains Don Albert, Director of the Center.

Several options have been proposed by the Day Care Center. They could stay at the present location, or they could rent or buy the building at a nominal fee. UVM only paid a $1 fee for the building, according to Albert. Another idea is to incorporate, thus going outside UVM's control. However, this action possesses many problems, says Albert. He explained that to find suitable space for 90 children at ground level, state licensed, and inexpensive is difficult. Also, the Center has already put $17,000 into the building. Public school space is another option. Outside funds would also be difficult to obtain.

A member of the Board of Directors, Helen Brink, stressed the importance of the community service the Center provides, and also the benefit to the University community of students, faculty, and staff. She also pointed out that the Center is a "drawing card for Vermont which a state like Vermont needs."

The parents and staff members say they will fight Rollins' decision to close the Center and will seek help from students, the community, and the trustees. They say that the analysis of the deficit is faulty and hope that their facts will prove them right. The theme of their struggle is "Don't lock us out," which is what they wish to avoid: being locked out of the university.



Pictured are some of the students who will be modeling in a fashion show to be held for the benefit of the Newman Center on Thursday, March 6, 1975 at 7:30 p.m. in Ira Allen Chapel. Backrow: (left to right) Mark Boland, Terry Green, Joe Greco. Middle row: Renee Stys, Maria Breault. Kneeling: Warren Prehmus, George Brunst.

Hewlett-Packard introduces a smaller uncompromising calculator: the HP-21 Scientific.

$125.00.*

Now $125.00 buys:

More power than our HP-35. 32 pre-programmed functions and operations vs. 22 for our HP-35. The HP-21 performs all log and trig functions, the latter in radians or degrees. It's our only calculator short of the HP-45 that lets you:

- convert polar to rectangular coordinates, and back again (→P, →R);
- do full register arithmetic (M+, M−, M×, M÷);
- calculate a common antilog (10×) with a single keystroke.

The HP-21 also performs all basic data manipulations (1/x, y^x, $\sqrt{x}$, %) and executes all pre-programmed functions in one second or less. In sum, it's designed to solve tomorrow's problems as well as today's.

Smaller size. 6 ounces vs. 9 ounces for our HP-35.

Full display formatting. The display key (DSP) lets you choose between fixed decimal and scientific notation and lets you control the number of places displayed. (The HP-21 always uses all 10 digits internally.)

If a number is too large or small for fixed decimal display, the HP-21 switches automatically to scientific. It never confuses a smaller number with zero.

Finally, if you give the HP-21 an impossible instruction, the Display spells E-r-r-o-r.

RPN logic system. Here's what this unique logic system means for you:

- You can evaluate any expression without copying parentheses, worrying about hierarchies or re-structuring beforehand.
- You can solve all problems your way—the way you now use when you use a slide rule.
- You solve all problems—no matter how complex—one step at a time. You never work with more than two numbers at once.
- You see all intermediate answers immediately. The HP-21 executes each function immediately after you press the function key.
- You can easily backtrack when you err. The HP-21 performs all operations sequentially.
- You can re-use numbers without re-entering them. The HP-21 becomes your scratch pad.

H-P quality craftsmanship. One reason Nobel Prize winners, astronauts, conquerors of Everest, America's Cup navigators and over 500,000 other professionals own H-P calculators.

Your bookstore will give you a demonstration today. Challenge our new HP-21 with your problems. See for yourself how much performance $125.00* can buy. If your bookstore doesn't have the HP-21 yet, call us at 800-538-7922 (in Calif. 800-662-9862) for the name of a dealer who does.

HEWLETT hp PACKARD

Sales and service from 172 offices in 65 countries.
Dept. 656, 19310 Pruneridge Avenue, Cupertino, CA 95014

*Suggested retail price excluding applicable state and local taxes—Continental U.S.A., Alaska & Hawaii.

MAGRAMS IT'S AN EXPERIENCE

THE WAY IN HAS
THE GREAT SLICKERS $7 & $13
MAGRAMS WAY IN HAS THE SWAMP SLICKER FOR YOU FROM THE REVERSIBLE JACKET TO THE SUEDISH ARMY COAT
THE YELLOW $7.00 THE REVERSIBLE $10.00
THE SUEDISH ARMY $13.00

Ski Team Finishes S

by Dick Erdman

The UVM Ski Team found their way to another second place finish at the Williams Carnival this past weekend. The Cats were narrowly edged out of first place by the Middlebury Panthers with a three point lead, while Dartmouth took third.

Again, UVM experimented with its numerous talents of depth and skied still a different twelve-man team than it did at our own and at Dartmouth's Carnival. Because of the team's tremedous depth, especially in Alpine, much shuffling and experimenting can be done from meet to meet to pick a strong and final team for the Eastern Championships at Middlebury this weekend, and finally, the NCAA's in Colorado.

Absent from the Williams Carnival were co-captains Petter Kongali and Erdman, Jumper Trygve Roiseth and Alpine star Doug Bruce. Still, the Cats managed a close second behind Middlebury's strongest team.

In the c cross-country even Team member St displayed his consi
on the hill filled another win.
Morton Garrud strong with a finish while Tryg ended up tenth.

Top alpiner f
was Bill Rathbu eighth in the Giant a superb win in thus giving him t title. Vermont's team, All-Americ freshman Brook
seventh places,
Giant Slalom, B
Slalom. Roundin performances we Kent Belden and

Special praise to freshman Br and Kent Beld outstanding ab managed to br boots and skis slalom, yet equipment Rathbone he w pull a seve
Meanwhile, Beld to last on an e and rutted

Electric Li

The University of Vermont hockey team faced two opponents Friday night and defeated both. Facing five below temperatures on an outdoor rink and the University of Connecticut, the Catamounts pulled out a 7-2 win.

Both clubs felt the effects of the freezing temperatures in the first period as the Cats led by a slim 1-0 lead at the end of one. With three second period goals Vermont pulled out to a lead they weren't to give up.

Sophomore Peter Reynolds, making his second start of the season, came up with an outstanding performance in net while making some crucial saves. The win is Reynolds' second in as many starts.

The effec outdoors mu strange to the once they got r
no stopping the Vermont g
of the first pe
Mallette beat a wrist shot f
In the seco
Swanson pick puck and Reynolds.
one past Reyn side and it wa

After the at one apa control and Mallette pick goal of the effort by Joh went around dropped the
at the Con

PFG -Sched

PATRICK FORBUSH GUTTERSON RECR
WEEKEND OF FEB 21, 22, an
FRIDAY, February 21
GYM – Faculty-Staff, none.
POOL – Faculty-Staff, 7-10:30 p.m. (7-
RINK – Faculty-Staff, 7-10:30 p.m. (7
TRACK Faculty-Staff, 7-10:30 p.m.
SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 22
GYM - Students, none.
POOL – Students, 1-5 and 7-10 p.m.
RINK Students, none.
TRACK – Students, 1-5 p.m.
SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 23
GYM – Students, none.
POOL – Students, 3-5 p.m.
RINK – Students, 7:30-9:30 p.m.
TRACK – Students, 1-5 p.m.
HANDBALL AND SQUASH COURTS: by
Call 656-3069.
All recreation may be superseded by special events.
MONDAY through THURSDAY
POOL – Students, 8:30-10:30 p.m.
All other facilities – 7-8 p.m.

DAVE'S AUTOMO
FOREIGN CAR REPA
SPECIALISTS
VW BUG BRAKE JOB
$49.95
COMPLETE VW
ELECTRONIC FUEL
INJECTION DIAGNOST SERVICE

ALL NEW MENU
NEW ATMOSPHERE - NEW SALAD BAR
THE BEST STEAKS
GREAT SEAFOOD TOO!
SIZZLING STEAK

...rrors On UVM

...one)
...resignation
...ll.
...rown, the
...e UVM's
...of March.
...thy and
...legislature
...financial
...nt. "The
...port us."
..."If level
...cut," he
...rently will
...tion with
...deal with

...ions is to
... for the

...y Care Center

...one)
...de early
...nutrition,
...thology).
...ung. The ...ports that
...projects,
...different
...ve been
...nter Peter
...es. "The
...partment
...n uses the
...velopment
...l operates
...ront made
...tence. It's
...e much of
...atch as we
...e children

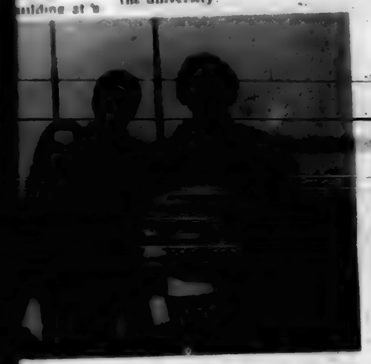
...members
...options in
...nter. They
...s support
...rsity and
...ve already
...natures in
...are also
...he Trustees.
...d are Center
...t program.
...uilt to bring
...on of the
...Don Albert.
...ter.
...have been
...Day Care
...stay at the
...they could
...uilding at a

Medical School by $500. Another would be to renegotiate the amount other northeastern states pay to Vermont to send their students here. Also, an additional $5.00 on the application fee is being planned. Andrews projects tuition may rise an additional $50 from the already scheduled increase of $95 for Vermonters and $215 for out-of-state students. However, he thinks that "Tuition should be the last resort." A high tuition would lead to an "elitist" school which only the rich could afford, ended Andrews.

nominal fee. UVM only paid a $1. fee for the building, according to Albert. Another idea is to incorporate, thus going outside UVM's control. However, this action possesses many problems, says Albert. He explained that to find suitable space for 90 children at ground level, state licensed, and inexpensive is difficult. Also, the Center has already put $17,000 into the building. Public school space is another option. Outside funds would also be difficult to obtain.

A member of the Board of Directors, Helen Brink, stressed the importance of the community service the Center provides and also the benefit to the University community of students, faculty, and staff. She also pointed out that the Center is a "drawing card for Vermont which a state like Vermont needs."

The parents and staff members say they will fight Rollins' decision to close the Center and will seek help from students, the community, and the trustees. They say that the analysis of the deficit is faulty and hope that their facts will prove them right. The theme of their struggle is "Don't lock us out," which is what they wish to avoid: being locked out of the university.



...me of the students who will be modeling in a ...be held for the benefit of the Newman Center ...March 6, 1975 at 7:30 p.m. in Ira Allen Chapel. ...to right) Mark Boland, Terry Green, Joe Greco, ...Renee Styn, Maria Breault, Kneeling, Warren ...e Brunet

...AMS IT'S AN EXPERIENCE

...S
...CKERS $7 & $13
...IS THE SWAMP SLICKER
...REVERSIBLE JACKET TO
...COAT
...HE REVERSIBLE $10.00
...H ARMY $13.00

Ski Team Finishes Strong At Williams

by Dick Erdman

The UVM Ski Team found their way to another second place finish at the Williams Carnival this past weekend. The Cats were narrowly edged out of first place by the Middlebury Panthers with a three point lead, while Dartmouth took third.

Again, UVM experimented with its numerous talents of depth and skied still a different twelve-man team than it did at our own and at Dartmouth's Carnival. Because of the team's tremedous depth, especially in Alpine, much shuffling and experimenting can be done from meet to meet to pick a strong and final team for the Eastern Championships at Middlebury this weekend, and finally, the NCAA's in Colorado.

Absent from the Williams Carnival were co-captains Petter Kongsli and Erdman, jumper Trygve Rolseth and Alpine star Doug Bruce. Still, the Cats managed a close second behind Middlebury's strongest team.

In the opening cross-country event, National Team member Stan Dunklee displayed his consistent power on the hill filled course with another win. Teammate Morton Gerred again skied strong with a fourth place finish while Trygve Rolseth ended up tenth.

Top skiiner for Vermont was Bill Rathbone, taking eighth in the Giant Slalom and a superb win in the Slalom, thus giving him the combined title. Vermont's own Dodge team, All-American Dave and freshman Brookie took two seventh places, Dave in the Giant Slalom, Brookie in the Slalom. Rounding out Alpine performances were Kirk Dice, Kent Belden and Jeff Darrow.

Special praise must be given to freshman Brookie Dodge and Kent Belden for their outstanding abilities. Dodge managed to break both his boots and skis prior to the slalom, yet on borrowed equipment from Billy Rathbone he was still able to pull a seventh place. Meanwhile, Belden, racing next to last on an extremely steep and rutted course, and pressured to stand for the team, skied confidently to a tenth place. UVM can look forward to a strong future with such prominent freshmen.

Although Vermont was missing the Norwegian two-thirds of its jumping squad, who were off competing in Wisconsin, it nevertheless made out quite well. Nordic combined specialist Joe Lamb took third in the jump, this giving him his third consecutive Nordic combined title. Freshman Dennis Lambert, son of we all know who, was a very credible seventh, and Tom Oddy rounded out the squad with a tenth.

Looking forward to the Eastern Championships at Middlebury this weekend, the UVM ski team hopes you are too. Only 30 minutes from Burlington, the Middlebury Ski Bowl is an ideal location for the spectator, with great facilities and extremely exciting competition. The Slalom and jump take place on Saturday. So come support your team for it will be the last chance you will have to do so.

Terriers Bite Cats

The high flying Catamounts ran into trouble in the name of the Boston University Terriers, Thursday night as they dropped a 95-87 decision down in Boston.

The loss dropped Vermont's record to 7-2 in the Conference and 15-7 overall as they fight to remain in first place in the Yankee Conference.

The Cats played even with the Terriers through the first half, going into the locker room at the half deadlocked at 46 apiece. As the second half opened, the Terriers bit into Vermont and pulled off to a quick 15 point lead. Their full-court and half-court presses gave the Catamounts fits with UVM turning the ball over a number of times.

Turnovers were the name of the game. The Cats couldn't keep their hands on the basketball in the second half as they turned the ball over 16 times. They had a game total of 22.

The Terrier lead wasn't as secure as many thought however as Vermont cut the difference to one point but couldn't get over the hump. Every time the Cats seemed to get an edge, a turnover, foul or hot shooting by the Terriers would stop them cold.

Sophomore sensation Ron Gottschalk had another great game for the Catamounts, bagging 25 points to win game scoring honors. Mark Cubit, Warren Prehmus and Mike Richbow also finished in double figures with 17, 12 and 10 points respectively.

Walt Chesley with 24 points and Curtis VanLandingham with 21 were the big guns for the 5-2 Terriers.

The Cats have two Yankee Conference games remaining on their schedule. Their opponents will be Boston University on Saturday afternoon and Rhode Island on Monday night. Both games will be played at the Patrick Gymnasium in what could be the deciding contests of the season. The Cats will need both these games to stay in the running for the title.

December Athletes

Ken Johnson and Tim O'Connell have been named December Athletes of the Month by the Vermont Sportscasters and Sportswriters Association. O'Connell's outstanding performance for the UVM hockey team and Johnson's play for the St. Mike's basketball team earned them this honor.

O'Connell picked two hat tricks in the Syracuse Invitation as well as two assists and led the Catamounts to a thrilling victory over Cornell in the final game of the tourney.

During the month of December O'Connell had 10 goals and six assists in leading the Cats to wins over four Division I teams.

O'Connell joins other Vermont players in the honor of Athlete of the Month. They are Bob Bateman, October Athlete, and November winner Billy Looker.

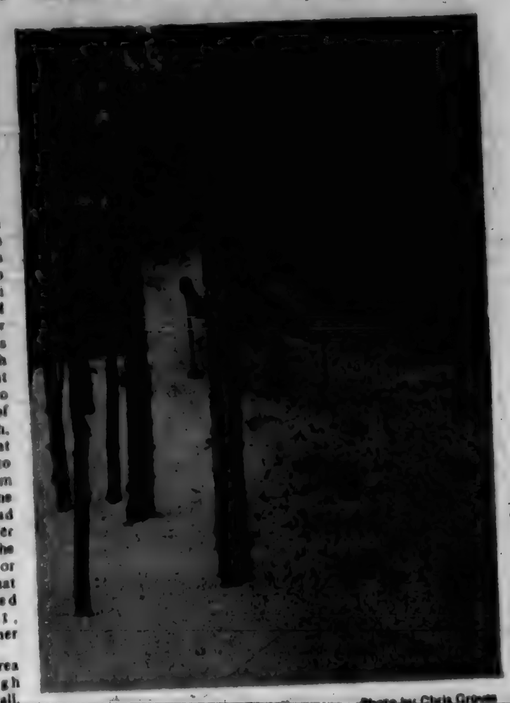
Ski Area Review

Mad River Glen: It's Different

by Wiet Stell

The new arrival at any mountain probably gives you an anxious feeling of uncertainty, which is influenced by a number of things: The weather, your state of mind (depending on the previous night), and most of all the quality of the mountain's reputation.

Mad River Glen, situated in Waitsfield next to Glen Ellen is an area which is many times thought of as that cold, steep mountain that's a drag to ski because not too many UVM students, or anyone else for that matter, ski there. Its trails are extremely difficult, with monster snow moguls that eat anything from ROL $50's to Scott Baskets. For those of you from Smuggler's Notch, Glen Ellen, and the rest that have finally made it over to check out "The River", I'm sure you'll have discovered the fantastic diversity that Mad River's wooded terrain offer coming down off of either the very challenging single chair or the three double chairlifts that contain a well-balanced mixture of expert, intermediate, and beginner slopes.



"Bushwacking at the River" Photo by Chris Groves

The personality of the area is translated through everything from the small, comfortable "baebox" lodge, and the very old (established in 1947), and unique single chairlift which quickly brings you up to the summit in a relaxing solitude, (unless of course the wire snaps and sends you on a bizarre roller coaster ride) right down to the friendly Vermont attitude, and easygoing pace that most of the employee's and skiers seem to have.

The double chairlifts fan up an easier grade of the mountain with well groomed trails for every possible class of skier. For those of you that like to ski the sides of the trails but never think you have room to venture off and nab the deep stuff, the woods off the double chair open up and offer you a chance to dance with the trees in knee deep snow (depending on our reliable monthly rainfall!!)

Bushwacking as it is collectively called is a favorite pasttime with many of Mad River's regulars. You can hear cries of joy and pain as they play with trees in search of untracked snow.

The Trails off the double chairs are also nicely exposed to the sun for warmer more relaxed skiing, while the single chair side faces north and never quite gets the direct rays of the sun. This is kind of a mixed blessing because the steep moguled trails don't lose their snow as quickly, yet the added temperature drop can chill even the bravest White Stag bunny.

One of the nicest attributes of Mad River Glen is their mid-week season's pass which goes for 70 dollars if purchased in the fall. By skiing only ten times you've made your money back. The weekday tickets are only eight dollars but unfortunately jump to $10 on weekends.

From UVM it takes about 30 minutes to get to Mad River, just get on I-89 south to the Waterbury exit and follow the signs to Waitsfield and Warren on route 100. Take the mountain access road (rt.15) in Waitsfield and you're there. Just get ready to get down to some seriously enjoyable skiing, and don't forget your Doobies!

The UVM Women's Ski Team will host the Division I Championships on February 27-28. The schedule of events is as follows:

February 27 - 12 noon, Slalom at Little Spruce, Stowe.

February 28 - 10 a.m., Giant Slalom, North Slope on Mt. T-Bar, Stowe. 2 p.m., Cross Country at Trapp Family Lodge.

Participating schools are Middlebury, Dartmouth, the University of New Hampshire, Colby of New Hampshire, Johnson State College, Plymouth State, St. Lawrence, New England College, Williams, UVM, plus the top two schools from Division II.

Electric Line Shocks Connecticut

The University of Vermont hockey team faced two opponents Friday night and defeated both. Facing five below temperatures on an outdoor rink and the University of Connecticut, the Catamounts pulled out a 7-2 win.

Both clubs felt the effects of the freezing temperatures in the first period as the Cats led by a slim 1-0 lead at the end of one. With three second period goals Vermont pulled out to a lead they weren't to give up.

Sophomore Peter Reynolds, making his second start of the season, came up with an outstanding performance in net while making some crucial saves. The win is Reynolds' second in as many starts.

The effect of playing outdoors must have been strange to the Catamounts but once they got rolling, there was no stopping them.

Vermont got the lone goal of the first period when Roger Mallette beat Lou Parker with a wrist shot from 30 feet out.

In the second period, Steve Swanson picked up a loose puck and broke in on Reynolds. Swanson flopped one past Reynolds on the short side and it was 1-1.

After the score was knotted at one apiece, UVM took control and that was that. Mallette picked up his second goal of the game on a fine effort by John Glynne. Glynne went around two Huskies and dropped the puck to O'Connell at the Connecticut blue line. O'Connell fed the puck back to Glynne, who went around the net and hit Mallette with a pass five feet in front of the goal. Rogie's shot went over a sprawled Parker.

Bill Koch tallied the next two goals to put Vermont ahead 4-1. Koch's first goal was on a wrist shot from close range and the second one was after he tipped in a Ken Yeates shot from the right point. Bill's value in front of the net is immeasurable.

Tim O'Connell added another record to his credit when he scored his 31st goal of the season in the third period. O'Connell broke the record of 30 goals in a season previously held by Patty Wright, on a blistering wrist shot that Parker failed to snare.

UVM finished its scoring with goals by Andy Rickard, prior to O'Connell's goal, and Randy Koch.

Michael Lebeau, moved from the fourth line to the third, played an outstanding game although he didn't score. He was head-manning the puck and forechecking very well throughout the entire contest.

Vermont is now 17-10 overall and 11-4 in Division I as they prepare for Division II foe Bowdoin on Saturday night and then tangle with the New Hampshire Wildcats in an all-important game on Tuesday at Durham. It appears as though this game could determine fourth place and the final home ice advantage spot in the playoffs.

Trackers Star

The University of Vermont track team finished in sixth place in the Yankee Conference Indoor Track Championships held at Kingston, Rhode Island on Saturday, but there were outstanding performances by several Catamounts.

Massachusetts upset Connecticut for the title by a score of 76-64, with Rhode Island third, Boston University fourth, Maine fifth, Vermont sixth, and New Hampshire taking up the rear.

Mike Bilsza who second in the shot put and Bilsza also finished second in the 35-pound weight with teammate John Partridge finishing fourth.

Peter Weith of UVM was third in the 1,000-yard run, and Vermont finished fourth in the two-mile relay.

PFG -Schedule

PATRICK-FORBUSH-GUTTERSON RECREATION SCHEDULE
WEEKEND OF FEB. 21, 22, and 23

FRIDAY, February 21
GYM - Faculty-Staff, none.
POOL - Faculty-Staff, 7-10:30 p.m. (7-8 under 15).
RINK - Faculty-Staff, 7-10:30 p.m. (7-8 under 15).
TRACK - Faculty-Staff, 7-10:30 p.m.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 22
GYM - Students, none.
POOL - Students, 1-5 and 7-10 p.m.
RINK - Students, none.
TRACK - Students, 1-5 p.m.

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 23
GYM - Students, none.
POOL - Students, 3-5 p.m.
RINK - Students, 7:30-9:30 p.m.
TRACK - Students, 1-5 p.m.

HANDBALL AND SQUASH COURTS: by appointment only. Call 656-3069.

All recreation may be superseded by varsity activities or special events.

MONDAY through THURSDAY
POOL - Students, 8:30-10:30 p.m.
All other facilities - 7-8 p.m.

THE LAST CHANCE SALOON

AMATEUR TALENT SHOW
THURSDAY FEBRUARY 27

SKITS, MUSIC, COMEDY
YOUR ENTRY WELCOME
GREAT PRIZES FOR BEST ACTS

147 MAIN ST.

DAVE'S AUTOMOTIVE
INC.
FOREIGN CAR REPAIR SPECIALISTS
INCLUDING THE FINEST IN SEMPERIT RADIAL TIRES
VW BUG BRAKE JOB $49.95
VW Beetle Exhaust Complete $29.95
COMPLETE VW ELECTRONIC FUEL INJECTION DIAGNOSTIC SERVICE

ALL NEW MENU
THE BEST STEAKS
GREAT SEAFOOD TOO!
SIZZLING STEAK

20% OFF PURE, STRAIGHT & HONEST 20% DISCOUNT ON MOST PARTS AND ACCESSORIES 20% OFF
GORDIE'S UNIVERSITY TEXACO
WILLISTON ROAD ACROSS FROM GAYNES
863-9838
SHOW VALID UVM I.D. and IT'S YOURS!!!
ELECTRONIC TUNE-UP ON 8 CYLINDER CARS - 14.25
6 CYLINDER - 9.50
4 CYLINDER - 9.50

Roam around Europe all summer for $180.

A Student-Railpass gives you two months of unlimited Second Class rail travel through 13 European countries.

Buy one, we'll give you a map, and where you go next is your own business.

All we'll say is that European trains are a sensational way to get there, be it Austria, Belgium, Denmark, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Luxembourg, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Sweden or Switzerland.

100,000 miles of track link cities, towns and historic, scenic and social attractions. Our trains are fast, modern, convenient, clean and comfortable.

And you'll discover there's very little second class about Second Class. You can sleep in a couchette for only $6.00 a night. And if you want to eat on a budget, inexpensive snacks are often available.

You can even take a cruise on the Rhine, if you like. Eurailpass is valid on many European ferries, river and lake steamers and hydrofoils. It also offers you substantially reduced fares on many side excursions you might want to take by motor coach.

And how's this for travel convenience? Many rail stations offer bikes for rental, and it's possible to pick up a bike at one station and drop it off at another.

All you need to qualify is to be a full-time student under 26. There's just one catch: You must buy your Student-Railpass here before you take off. They're not for sale in Europe.

If you have less time to travel, or want to travel First Class, consider Eurailpass. A two-week pass costs $130. Three-week pass costs $160. One month, $200. Two months, $270. Three months, $330.

Don't wait. It could be the trip of your life. See your Travel Agent or clip the coupon and we'll send you all the facts.

Prices subject to change.

Eurailpass, Box 90
Dept. 192-2056,
Bohemia, New York
11716
Please send me your free
☐ Student-Railpass folder
☐ Eurailpass folder
Name
Street
City State Zip
STUDENT-RAILPASS
The price of one trip could pay for all of Europe.

Minutemen Shoot Cats

Ron Gottschalk -- high scorer vs. UMass

Behind a last-half surge, the Massachusetts Minutemen defeated the University of Vermont basketball Catamounts 84-81, Tuesday night. With the loss the Cats record falls to 7-3 while Massachusetts goes into first place with a 7-2 mark.

For Vermont to tie for the conference title they must defeat both BU and Rhode Island in their remaining home games and hope for some help. The Minutemen have games with BU, New Hampshire and Maine left and one of these teams must beat Massachusetts. Boston University appears to be the only team that is capable of doing so.

The game was close through the first half with neither team taking control. Vermont went into a pressure defense from the tap and therefore started Bernard Palmer and Mike Richbow. Salzberg felt that Palmer and Richbow were a little quicker and could do a better job on the press.

A three point play by Joe Greco and a basket by Ron Gottschalk gave Vermont a 45-42 lead at the half.

Vermont had outstanding performances from Ron Gottschalk who had 16 of his 22 points in the first half, and Kevin Kelly who pick the net for 10 points in the first 20 minutes.

The Cats played well in the early part of the second half and managed to stay ahead 61-60 until Alex Eldridge hit a bucket to put Massachusetts ahead to stay.

UVM got in foul trouble and there were a few defensive lapses which hurt the Cats. Overall Vermont played a fine game but were beaten by a good Minutemen team.

In the battle of rebounds, Massachusetts beat out Vermont by a slim margin of 36-34. John Murphy of UMass and Joe Greco each had eight.

The real story is told in turnovers and foul shooting. The Cats had 26 turnovers to the Minutemen's 13. UVM's foul trouble gave UMass 36 free throws of which they made 24.

UMass just had too many free shots at the basket and although Vermont played well, they couldn't give up that many points to a team as good as Massachusetts.

UMass high scorers were Murphy and Jim Town with 22 and Alex Eldridge with 18. For Vermont Ron Gottschalk had 22, Mark Cubit and Joe Greco had 15 and Mike Richbow and Kevin Kelly had 12.

Vermont has had a fine season and although they are on a uphill climb now, there is still a chance for the title or a post season playoff berth in a tournament.

Good luck Cats, and good luck BU, New Hampshire, or Maine!

Hockey Team Flattens AIC 9-2

The University of Vermont hockey team, coming off a so-so first period, racked up five unanswered goals in the middle stanza to flatten the AIC Yellowjackets by a score of 9-2 at Springfield Mass. on Monday night.

The electric line came up with another outstanding performance in scoring five of Vermont's nine tallies. Tim O'Connell got his 32nd and 33rd goals of the season while Bill Koch found the net twice and Roger Mallette lit the lamp for the other goal.

Randy Koch kept up his scoring tear with a goal at the 1:12 mark of the first period on a backhand breakaway shot. Assists went to John Murphy and John Glynne.

After Steve Wright got the first AIC goal, the rest of the period was little action by either team.

Tom Colby scored at 3:24 of the second stanza and less than a minute later, Bill McAlduff added a second goal to make it 3-1.

Tim O'Connell got two more for the Cats in a span of 25 seconds and suddenly it was 5-1. Andy Rickard picked up the sixth Vermont goal to finish off the scoring for Vermont in the second period. Assists went to Colby and Glynne.

Lightning struck in the form of Rogie Mallette just 16 seconds into the final period to put the game entirely out of reach. AIC added one goal before Bill Koch finished off the night with two goals.

Tom McNamara started in goal for UVM and collected 16 saves. Peter Reynolds finished up and stopped seven shots. Ray Belisle was called on for 33 saves for AIC.

Vermonts is now 18-10 overall and remains 11-4 in Division I. The win was the Cats fourth in a row as they continue to keep pace in the tough Division I standings.

THE SPORTS SCENE

by Norm Robinson

In a recent hockey game between the Boston Bruins and the Philadelphia Flyers, there was one incident that could make one's blood boil. Boston's Terry O'Reilly had received a minor penalty against Dave Shultz, the Philadelphia bad-boy. With O'Reilly in the penalty box, it appeared as though the Flyers were about to have a power play. This was not to be however, as Schultz charged O'Reilly in the penalty box with his stick above his head.

Both players received misconduct penalties for fighting and Schultz also picked up a high-sticking penalty. Schultz sustained a concussion as well.

This incident is one of many that have occurred this season throughout the league. Clarence Campbell, the big-wig of the NHL, has complained for months now about the continuing and growing amount of fighting that is taking place in profesional hockey.

Not only fighting, but the use of the stick has become more prominent. The recent Dave Forbes-Henry Bouche incident is an extreme example.

It's accepted that ice hockey is a contact sport, but there is no justification for the use of sticks and fists in the game. If Campbell and the rest of the hierarchy are so worried about fighting, why don't they do something about it? Two players who tangle in a game receive a 10 minute misconduct penalty and then are able to continue their differences afterwards.

Perhaps the "geniuses" of the pro-circuit could learn something from their collegiate counterparts. In college hockey, under rule 8, section 2e; Any "fighting, slugging with fists, spearing or malicious use of the stick at any height, kicking or attempting to do so" will result in two penalties. The offending player or players will receive a major penalty and disqualification. The disqualification will be for the rest of the game and the next game of the season as well.

As many followers of college hockey will attest, there are few fights. The game is just as physical as pro hockey but on-ice battles are few and far between because the players know the consequences of their action.

The National Hockey League should follow suit and adopt this policy for all fighting cases. It's true that Dave Forbes received a 10 game suspension, and justly so, but suspensions are practically nil.

Hockey should be played like hockey and if these sluggers want to pursue their hobby, let them go into boxing. They will be justified for attempting to knock somebody's head off there.

It is true that at times a player has to stick up for his rights, but when so-called players go after somebody just to rouse their team, it's going too far. Strict penalties on all fighting, etc. will cut down on the slug fests and permit hockey to be played like it's supposed to be.

It's about time the NHL woke up and nipped this problem in the bud. Many teams are acquiring more bad-boys to handle the established head hunters and the problem can only get worse.

The NHL knows there is a problem; it's about time they got off their pedestal and did something constructive about it.

UVM SPORTS

Gary Zibro and Kevin Fidher (in striped suits) compete against Maine. SPS Photo: Mike Durkin

Aquacats Lose : Records Fall

Last weekend in a hard fought battle the UVM swim team bowed to the U Maine squad. During the meet 5 records were broken, 3 of which were broken by UVM swimmers. Ron Kirkwood broke the 200 and the 100 yard freestyle records during the meet. Kirkwood, an All American in High School, holds varsity records in the 100 and the 200 freestyle events. He also holds freshman records in the 500, 200, and 100 yard freestyle events. Ron is having a fantastic season with a lot more in store for him at the New England Conference meet in March. The other record that was broken by Vermont was the 400 yard Medley Relay pool record. Mike Jacobs, Mike Delaney, Paul Jones, and David Phalen swam to a time of 3:46.7, two seconds faster than the pool record set just a week before. This relay team placed third last year in the New Englands and judging from their performance may win it this year. Maine came up with 2 record-breaking performances of their own. In the 200 yard Backstroke, Donovan from Maine swam to a new pool record of 2:04.4 and in the 3 meter diving Warren sprang to a grand total of 282.9, another pool record.

Mike Kurl, alias the workhorse, swam the 3 most grueling individual events in the meet. Kurt's first event was the 1000 yard freestyle, 40 laps of the pool. Two short events later Kurt was back up on the starting blocks for the 200 Individual medley. This was not the end by any means, the 200 yard breaststroke was yet ahead. Kurt placed second in all of his events being ouched by fractions for first place in the Individual Medley and the breaststroke.

In the 50 freestyle Kevin Delaney and John Blake placed one, two. The last event, the 400 yard freestyle relay was won by UVM's David Phalon, John Blake, Ron Kirkwood and Mike Jacobs. Final score of the meet 64 to 49, U Maine defeating UVM.

Vermont has now won three of it's meets and lost four. Thus far the duel meet season has not reflected the talent of the Vermont squad. From the beginning of the year the members of the team have set their sights on the New England Conference Championship meet. With unquestioned single mindedness they have refined their techniques and tortured their bodies for one goal. This year the Northern Star of the New England Conference will make it's presence felt, by great performances from each swimmer, and a high standing over all, at the Championships in March.

The Intramural Wrestling Tournament will be held March 10,11,12. Registration is open to February 26. If you have not had a physical, you must get one before weigh-in which is March 7 at 4:00 p.m.

HOW TO MAKE
YOUR LAST TWO YEARS AT UVM
MEAN EVEN MORE

IF YOU ATTEND THE ARMY ROTC BASIC CAMP AT FT. KNOX, KY.
FOR SIX WEEKS THIS SUMMER, YOU MAY QUALIFY
FOR AN OFFICER'S COMMISSION IN TWO YEARS

TOTAL CASH BENEFITS
APPROXIMATELY

$3000.00

WHILE IN SCHOOL

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION, CONTACT MAJOR DON SAFFORD
MILITARY STUDIES DEPARTMENT - THIRD FLOOR WILLIAMS HALL
656-2966
PRIOR TO 1 MARCH 1975

VOLUME XCIII
NUMBER 7
FEBRUARY 27, 1975

New Tru

by Margo Howland

Last Thursday the House and Senate in joint session elected Senator Russell Niquette, D-Chittenden, Representative Alden Ballard, R-Georgia, and Representative John T. Morgan, R-Woodstock, to the University of Vermont Board of Trustees.

The elections were a long and involved process, involving twelve separate ballots. Thirteen legislators were nominated for the three six-year terms, and the vacancies were filled one at a time. There are nine members of the legislature on the board and the elections are staggered; three members are chosen every three years.

The three new trustees were contacted by the Cynic and responded to a variety of questions. The following profiles emerged:

Sen. Russel Niquette, 68, is a Winooski lawyer and Chairman of the Senate Health and Welfare Committee. Vice-Chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee and Vice-Chairman of the Senate Rules Committee. Niquette, a six-term legislator, cited his interest in "present affairs at the University of Vermont" as the reason he decided to seek election to the Board. "I believe it's a wonderful challenge for me. Because I live in Winooski, it will be very easy for me to make every meeting." Niquette also mentioned his background in law, business and real estate as useful assets to the Board.

When asked for his opinion of the controversial UVM pedestrian tunnel, Niquette replied, "I, along with the other Chittenden County senators co-sponsored a bill to halt construction of the tunnel. that, can I?"

Niquette feels very strongly that there should be a New England Veterinary College, preferably in Boston. "The states are unable to afford to maintain their own," he noted.

On the subject of a merger between UVM and the Vermont State Colleges, Niquette said: "It seems to me that it would be a way of saving money... however, my mind is wide open. If they show me that the majority is against it, and then show me some reasons why, then I'd change my mind. I'm not committed to a Yes answer." Niquette recalled that Rep. Robert Babcock, R-South Burlington, was in favor of merger two years ago. (Babcock is a former UVM professor.) "Now he's against it, and I'm sure he has a reason for changing his mind...I'm ready to listen very carefully."

Rep. Alden Ballard, a Franklin county dairy farmer, has been in the legislature for two terms. He is a member of the House Ways and Means Committee. (House Members serve on only one committee). Ballard was asked what prompted him to seek election to the Board of Trustees.

"I hadn't thought about it. Some of the younger members asked me to run, and of course I have an agricultural background, and it sort of

went fro
Comm
Ballard
underc Institutio over to expect report.
and I w until I've
On C Englan
Ballard that co
it's too right no student
Rep manag
Chair
Comm
indicat servin
Trustee
20 yea concer and s Univer
Mo

SA

GVP Pair

FEBRUARY 20, 1975

PORTS

e against Maine. SPS Photo: Mike Durkin

Records Fall

...up with ...r taking ...r own in ...ckstroke, ...e swam in ... of 2:04.4 ...er diving ...rand total ...ool record. ...lias the ...s 3-most ...events in ...event was ...estyle, 40 ...wo short ...ks for the ...ley. This ...my meant, ...stroke was ...ed second ...nts being ...n for first ...al Medley

...tyle Kevin ...ake placed ...event, the ...relay was ...id Phalon, ...Kirkwood

the meet 64 to 49, U Maine defeating UVM.

Vermont has now won three of it's meets and lost four. Thus far the duel meet season has not reflected the talent of the Vermont squad. From the beginning of the year the members of the team have set their sights on the New England Conference Championship meet. With unquestioned single mindedness they have refined their techniques and tortured their bodies for one goal. This year the Northern Star of the New England Conference will make it's presence felt, by great performances from each swimmer, and a high standing over all, at the Championships in March.

The Intramural Wrestling Tournament will be held March 10,11,12. Registration is open to February 26. If you have not had a physical, you must get one before weigh-in which is March 7, at 4:00 p.m.

VOLUME XCIII
NUMBER 7
FEBRUARY 27, 1975

VERMONT CYNIC

"To a privilege to live in Vermont"

University of Vermont
Burlington, Vermont

New Trustees Elected

by Margo Howland

Last Thursday the House and Senate in joint session elected Senator Russell Niquette, D-Chittenden, Representative Alden Ballard, R-Georgia, and Representative John T. Morgan, R-Woodstock, to the University of Vermont Board of Trustees.

The elections were a long and involved process, involving twelve separate ballots. Thirteen legislators were nominated for the three six-year terms, and the vacancies were filled one at a time. There are nine members of the legislature on the board and the elections are staggered; three members are chosen every three years.

The three new trustees were contacted by the Cynic and responded to a variety of questions. The following profiles emerged:

Sen. Russel Niquette, 68, is a Winooski lawyer, and Chairman of the Senate Health and Welfare Committee. Vice-Chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee and Vice-Chairman of the Senate Rules Committee. Niquette, a six-term legislator, cited his interest in "present affairs at the University of Vermont" as the reason he decided to seek election to the Board. "I believe it's a wonderful challenge for me. Because I live in Winooski, it will be very easy for me to make every meeting." Niquette also mentioned his background in law, business and real estate as useful assets to the Board.

When asked for his opinion of the controversial UVM pedestrian tunnel, Niquette replied, "I, along with the other Chittenden County senators co-sponsored a bill to halt construction of the tunnel. [illegible] that, can it?"

Niquette feels very strongly that there should be a New England Veterinary College, preferably in Boston. "The states are unable to afford to maintain their own," he noted.

On the subject of a merger between UVM and the Vermont State Colleges, Niquette said: "It seems to me that it would be a way of saving money... however, my mind is wide open. If they show me that the majority is against it, and then show me some reasons why, then I'd change my mind. I'm not committed to a Yes answer." Niquette recalled that Rep. Robert Babcock, R-South Burlington, was in favor of merger two years ago. (Babcock is a former UVM professor.) "Now he's against it, and I'm sure he has a reason for changing his mind...I'm ready to listen very carefully."

Rep. Alden Ballard, a Franklin county dairy farmer, has been in the legislature for two terms. He is a member of the House Ways and Means Committee. (House Members serve on only one committee). Ballard was asked what prompted him to seek election to the Board of Trustees.

"I hadn't thought about it. Some of the younger members asked me to run, and of course I have an agricultural background, and it sort of went from there."

Commenting on the tunnel, Ballard said, "It's my understanding that the Institutions Committee is going over to take a look at it...I expect they'll bring back a report. I've heard both sides, and I went to play it by ear until I've heard some more.

On the subject of a New England Veterinary college, Ballard responded, "We've had that come up before; I believe it's too expensive for the state right now...for the numbers of students that could go."

Rep. John Morgan, a management consultant, is Chairman of the House Commerce Committee. He indicated that his interest in serving on the Board of Trustees stemmed from "some 20 years interest in UVM...I'm concerned with the well-being and general condition of the University."

Morgan feels a New England veterinary college is very necessary, and mentioned his own background in agriculture.

"The main problem of establishing anything in this state would be absolutely overwhelming," Morgan declared. He expressed interest in "a reciprocal agreement with Cornell, but I don't see it possible right now. It is needed very badly."

Morgan stated frankly that he was not familiar with the pedestrian tunnel situation, and would not make any judgments on it.

A merger between UVM and the Vermont State Colleges is quite necessary, Morgan believes. However, he does not expect it to take place very soon: "Neither the economic nor the political climate will allow it. I think it would bring about tremendous savings, but I can't perceive it happening in the near future."

The new trustees will meet with the full Board in April.

SA Senate Reborn?

by Randy Jansen

Several proposals for a new student government were submitted last Sunday, when a group of interested students met at Billings. Most of the attention was devoted to a proposal offered by Dave Schwartz. There was much give and take in dealing with the details.

Schwartz envisions five committees that will deal with student problems, enact legislation and be a sounding board for student opinion. The committees are the Financial, Student Action, Special Affairs, and Student Action committee chairmen will be elected by the students. The Vice-President will head the Student Action Committee, while the Treasurer will become Chairperson of the Financial Committee, both elected positions. The other chairpersons will be chosen by their respective committees.

The Financial Committee will be responsible for allocating SA activities. Approximately seven representatives will be on the committee. Student Activities, with five members, will recognize student organizations and coordinate such groups as the Concert Bureau. With a staff of seven, Communications will become more involved in SA. They will be primarily a public relations committee, but will also publicize legislative bills, announce town meetings, run the Exchange, etc.

Special Affairs will be concerned with seasonal events like Winter Week, Orientation, Octoberfest, etc. Elections will also become a responsibility of Special Affairs. Many ad-hoc committees are planned for any special event that arises. Nine representatives will perform these duties. Probably the most important and largest committee, Student Action, will be the political arm of the S.A. The Vice-President, who will chair the committee, and the eleven members will confer with the administration, lobby for student interests, and pressure for student rights as they feel affect the students. The seven representatives on permanent Trustee committees will also belong to the Student Action Committee.

Representatives will be elected proportional to the student population as done at the present time. With a planned total SA of 39 representatives, 21 will come from the dorms, 15 from off-campus and 7 from the Greeks. The dorm representatives will be further divided between Redstone, Main Campus and East Campus. Elections will be held this Spring, but after this year, representatives will be selected in the Fall.

The Executive Branch will remain as it is now except that there will be a Vice-President. They will be elected in the Spring, so that they can perform the elections for the representatives in the Fall.

A unique perspective of this new proposal is that there will be a general town meeting, where any student present has a vote on the issues. This, Schwartz feels, will bring the government closer to the students. Student participation will also be more direct and hopefully become greater.

Schwartz feels that close co-operation between the committees is important and necessary. Students will also be encouraged to become involved in committee work. "The committee type thing," he commented, "will cut the talk about the Tuesday night assembly." Commenting on the Student Action, Schwartz added. "The Student Action Committee was totally lacking in the old SA. The SA couldn't act on anything political."

Another proposal in the form of an amendment was submitted by Larry Abel. He

(continued on page nine)

QVP Fair

Search For President Continues

by Margo Howland

The search for a permanent successor to outgoing UVM President Dr. Edward C. Andrews, Jr. is now officially underway. The 12-member Presidential Search Committee met last Thursday to begin what Chairman Robert Boardman of the Board of Trustees called "a herculean task at best."

Boardman said his role as Chairman would be to keep the committee "on track" as far as a schedule was concerned, and to act as spokesman for the group.

The committee is represented by Robert E. Boardman, Chairman, Board of Trustees; Dr. Norman R. Alpert, Department of Physiology and Biophysics, College of Medicine; Selma Bloomberg of the Non-Academic Employee's Council; Professor Sam Bogorad, English Department, College of Arts and Sciences; Joseph E. Corbett, Board of Trustees; Elizabeth "Teena" Heck, student, Class of '76; Paul R. Low, Board of Trustees; Professor Donald E. Moser, Department of Mathematics, EMBA; David Schwartz, student, Class of '77; Professor Robert O. Sinclair, Department of Resource Economics, College of Agriculture; Representative Louise Swainbank, Board of Trustees; and Richard Wolfe, President of the Alumni Council. Dr. John W. Moore is the secretary of the Search Committee.

The committee discussed the proper wording of the advertisement inviting nominations and applications for the position of the President of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College. The advertisement will appear in the Chronicle of Higher Education, the New York Times, the San Francisco Chronicle and the Los Angeles Times, and will be sent to a number of colleges and universities.

The approved advertisement listed qualifications and requirements in the following paragraph:

"...The University seeks a chief executive with demonstrated competence in academic administration, recognition as a teacher-scholar, the ability to work effectively with multiple publics, an understanding of State and Federal fiscal processes, and a talent for leadership in a complex organization. Candidates should hold the highest degree or the equivalent qualification in their professional field. As an affirmative action employer, the University of Vermont encourages women and minority candidates to apply."

Dr. Dolores Stocker, Assistant to the President for Human Resources, spoke to the committee regarding women and minority candidates. She raised a number of thought-provoking questions: "What are you going to do about women and minority candidates? How do you judge these qualifications? What are the ramifications in the State of Vermont in having a woman or minority member as President of UVM?"

Stocker said she didn't know of any other non-black institution with "two blacks on the staff and a woman Vice President for Development."

When qualifications were discussed, the point was made that woman and minority candidates were apt to be younger and less experienced in areas such as the budget.

"These are the very areas in which we are being kept out of; we must ask how important, how vital are these qualifications," declared Stocker.

Dr. John W. Moore expressed the need for documenting the rationale behind the choices that the committee makes. Stocker asked that the candidates brought to the final selection process--the "semi-finalists"--be compared to the minority and women candidates that applied.

Apparently she saw no need to compare the set of rejected non-minority male applicants to anything or to give any reasons why they were not acceptable.

Student Teena Heck felt that the committee was more concerned with qualifications than with the race or sex of candidates, but she acknowledged that "more explanations would be necessary to the public; the public would ask more questions," if a woman or minority candidate became President.

Dr. Norman R. Alpert of the College of Medicine asked, "Is there any reason why we shouldn't have a female or a minority candidate?" He noted the "uproar" in the College of Medicine when it was discovered that there were 35 women in the freshman class.

People wondered why there were "all those female doctors."

The search committee decided to conduct a series of "round-robin" interviews over the next two or three weeks for the purpose of acquiring input on the various aspects of the presidential role. They drew up a tentative list of individuals who would be invited to come before the group to present their perception of what is involved in being the President of the University of Vermont. Such testimony would be most useful when discussing qualification standards, the group decided.

Immediately mentioned in this category were the President and Mrs. Andrews, Governor Salmon, Vice Presidents Rollins and Patterson, Dr. Frank Smallwood of the 1202 Commission, Editor Gordon Mills of the Burlington Free Press, Robert Mitchell, owner and publisher of the Rutland Herald and the Times-Argus, former UVM Presidents Lyman Rowell and John Vey, and Secretary of Administration Robert Wilson were all suggested and tentatively agreed upon as individuals whose opinions would be of interest to the committee. Other names will be mentioned at tonight's meeting.

Student input was also felt to be necessary and a list of seven student representatives was drawn up: Peter MacAusland, president of the Student Association; Ken Bartlett, president of the Inter-Residence Association; Dave Platka, president of Fraternity Forum; Ruth Feldman, president of the Panhellenic Council; and a representative each from Third World, the Graduate students and the Medical students.

A great deal of discussion centered around whether the meetings should be held in executive session. Boardman had explained to the committee the serious nature of theri work, and warned them of the potential of jeopardizing someone's livelihood with a breach of confidentiality. "It isn't appropriate to talk about the process with your friends. What we say here stays here," he declared.

Boardman, finally decided that the meetings would be "open as long as we talk in generalities and not personalities." Later, when the committee begins the task of screening applicants, the meetings will be held in executive session. It was acknowledged that some individuals going before the board in the next two or three weeks would be more comfortable in the privacy of a closed meeting for part or all of their testimony. The committee decided that the conditions of the meeting would be spelled out to those invited to present their views, and if, partway through a meeting the need for an executive session became apparent, the committee would vote on it.

Daniel Against Underpass

by Kathy Stiasni

To build or not to build was the question facing the Senate Institutions Committee as they discussed the controversial pedestrian underpass. In a meeting on February 21, the Senate Institutions Committee voted 4-2 against a bill proposed by Senator Daniels of Chittenden County, which, if passed, would kill the plan to construct a tunnel connecting the north and south sides of the campus under Main Street.

Daniel's Bill, S 93, would put funds allocated to the underpass back into Vermont's capital construction fund. However, present expenditures of over $85,000 on the tunnel are a deterrant to the passage of S 93. "Ed Andrew's Foxhole" as the underpass was casually alluded to by an observer of the Senate committee meeting is more than just a ditch. The project involves a security building, relocation of utilities, and street construction.

Senators Smith from Washington County, Crowly from Chittenden, Souls from Franklin, and Alden from Windsor who opposed the bill expressed concern over the commitment due to these present expenditures on the tunnel's design and construction materials. Committee members in favor of S 93 were Senator Boylen and Senator Grady from Chittenden County. The Institutions Committee will make a recommendation to the legislature on the basis of their vote.

At an earlier meeting during the week which was attended by a collection of people from the University and Burlington's planning commission, several members of the seantors prodded members of the traffic commission to discuss who the real instigators of the tunnel were. A brief history of the underpass revealed that it had originally been mandated by the district environmental group who stipulated "grade separated crossing" as a condition of granting a permit for construction of the Living Learning center. One Senator commented that the Living Learning center seems to have functioned to date without the tunnel.

Bob Dawson from UVM's department of civil engineering who works closely with the planning commission, reported that only 24 per cent of those using the crossing pay attention to the present signal system. He commented that the estimated 10,000 pedestrians and the 21,000 cars using the crossing each day represent a figure well over the norms which indicate a safety problem.

The idea of an overpass has been rejected for several reasons. The need to walk up and down discourages usage, and is a problem for handicapped users. Furthermore, an overpass would be aesthetically undesirable. Larry Schneider, director of administrative resources at UVM added "we have, we think, examined every conceivable type of alternative."

Others at the meeting were dissatisfied with this conclusion. Senator Daniels, who introduced S 93, contended that there hasn't been a valid attempt to establish a viable on grade crossing. "The gaps must be frequent," he said, "if students are able to cross between lights." Peter MacAusland re-emphasized the inefficiency of the present system and has suggested numerous alternatives.

SPS Photo: Roxane Isbey

Newman Fashion Show See page 3

VPIRG Examines Energy Needs

by Stephen Tanner

Natalie Worthington, Vermont Public Interest Research Group volunteer, is beginning a survey of discount and other large stores in and on the outskirts of Burlington to examine their energy needs and suggest ways of cutting their consumption.

Architect Richard Stein says that reassessing areas of energy use in existing buildings, especially those built between 1965 and 1969, could lead to an approximate 25% reduction in consumption. This is considerable since buildings themselves consume about one-third of all energy used in the United States. Most of this energy is used for space water heating and cooling. About 24% of all electricity sold is for lighting.

"These figures are astonishing, but are obvious indications of expedient construction methods, in materials and design. A common method used by developers is to throw up a structure with the idea that it will either be sold in five years because of rising taxes and land value or that it will be torn down. We just don't have the energy or resources, and I use the word 'energy' broadly here, to generate such waste," said Natalie. She added, "It sounds trite, but the energy crisis is not over. The targets of our project are the blatant energy abusers."

"The philosophy generating this type of study is the fact that the electric power rate structure is set up to give large energy users a lower rate," explained the volunteer. "Such a policy discriminates against the lower energy consumer and encourages higher energy use."

"One aim of the 'wastehunt' will be to introduce legislation through VPIRG to the legislature which will propose changes in building codes with respect to energy loss, and thereby reducing energy use," said Natalie.

Federal Housing Authority accepted heat loss standards from a building are now set at 1000 BTU's per 1000 cubic feet. Government engineers say this figure could be reduced to 700.

Commercial and industrial sectors in the United States use 70% of all energy consumed per year. The Federal Energy Office has said that figure could be cut back 40%, according to its engineers and Bureau of Standards experts.

The group is concentrating on establishments which are space heated and will recommend installment of insulation, thermopane windows, revolving or double doors and curtains to cut heating consumption and costs as well.

When asked if the establishments under scrutiny wouldn't object that the modifications themselves weren't too costly, Natalie replied, "In terms of our environment, and long run costs which all of us as taxpayers, consumers, and merchants will have to pay, it is a small capital investment now for a large savings in the future."

Natalie plans to distribute a pamphlet that will suggest those ways to lower consumption levels which will be available at the VPIRG office soon.

"I've some areas some profound ideas, which if implemented, would use

(continued on page ten)

Featured This Week

Three Sheets to the Wind p. 5

Bomb Scare at Patrick p. 6

Doctor's Bag p. 8

Don't Swallow Gallo's Line p. 9

UVM-UNH Hockey p. 12

CALENDAR and ANNOUNCEMENTS -

Pre-Med Meeting: Mar. 6, 4:30, B-112 Cook

The Premedical/Predental Advisory Committee will hold a meeting to provide students applying to medical/dental schools this coming year with information regarding the procedures they must follow as part of their application process. Medical schools require an evaluation letter from the Premedical/Predental Advisory Committee. This is an extremely important part of your application materials; there are steps you must take this spring to ensure that the Committee has the required data to formulate this letter. This meeting will provide you with the opportunity to meet members of the Premedical/-Predental Committee, will ensure that you are aware of deadlines and required procedures and allow you to have any questions you may have answered. It is important that all premedical/predental students applying for admission to medical and dental schools in 1976–77 attend this meeting. If there are any questions call Kami Oliver–ex. 3380.

Academic Advising Comm. Prepares Questionnaires

A University-wide Committee, with Joseph Izzo as chairman, has been working on academic advising during the current academic year. Advising is viewed as a vital part of the academic process and the Committee would like to recommend an advising system which would provide students with the kind of advising that would be most helpful to them.

The Committee has prepared two questionnaires—one for students and one for faculty and administrators. The questionnaires are intended to serve two purposes: (1) to ascertain from students, faculty and administrators how they view the current advising practices at UVM and (2) to ask for suggestions as to how the advising system may be made more effective.

The questionnaires are being mailed on February 28 with the return requested by March 13. The Committee currently hopes that those who receive a questionnaire will be willing to take the time to complete and return it.

It is the hope of the Committee that some improvements in the advising practices at UVM may be implemented as early as next fall.

WRUV-FM Special

On Sunday, March 2, WRUV-FM will present a program of special interest at 7:00 p.m. The program is entitled "Courageous Sisters." It takes a look at some of the vibrant and exciting women of the 1800's who were in many ways responsible for beginning the Women's movement in the United States.

Produced in Berkeley, California at radio station KPFA, a member of the Pacifica Radio Group, "Courageous Sisters" was written, produced and directed by Deborah Janone, currently a graduate student in mass communications at UVM. The program was originally aired August 23, 1972 as a part of a special group of programs celebrating Women's suffrage.

We are sure that you will be entertained and enlightened by this hour-long stereo program on WRUV-FM Sunday March 2, beginning at 7:00 p.m.

Meditators Needed

Transcendental Meditators needed to participate in experiment. Help advance scientific knowledge by calling Jeff at Ext. 4244, or John at 862-7034.

I.D. Stickers

Anyone who has not picked up their receipt and validation sticker should pick it up in the cashier's office between 9 a.m. and 9 p.m., Monday through Friday.

VAAS Symposium

Saturday March 1 in the Chapel Auditorium at the Vermont College in Montpelier the Vermont Academy of Arts and Sciences presents "Winter Symposium on Accountability in Vermont Schools."

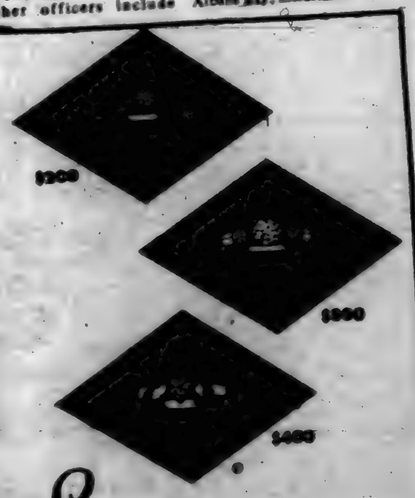
Free registration begins at 9:30 a.m. At 10:00 a.m., Allen Weiss, Deputy Commissioner of Education will speak on the "History of the Accountability Movement in Vermont and its Future." At 10:45 Donald Barr, author, critic, novelist, head of Dalton School, will speak on, "Counter-Accountability and Pseudo-Accountability."

Panel discussion will follow and in the afternoon, Jack Easterling, chairman of the Emma Willard School, will speak on "Accountability and Behavioral Objectives: the Arch without a Keystone." All interested people are urged to attend.

Phi Gamma Elects Officers

John B. Blankinship, III, of Barnet Center, has been elected president of the Beta Upsilon Chapter of Phi Gamma Delta Fraternity. A member of the Class of '76, he is an economics major at UVM.

Other officers include Robert A. Ladue, Jr., '76, of St. Albans, treasurer; Irwin M. Gold, '76, of Verona, N.J., recording secretary; Craig P. Manley, '76, of Burlington, corresponding secretary; and Gary R. Sweany, '77, of St. Albans Bay, historian.



Simplicity

In a mattress is a quality that has always been treasured. We have a fine selection of traditionally styled mattresses from which to choose. We cordially invite your inspection!

PRICES START UNDER $100.00
Illustrations slightly enlarged

You are invited to open a Charge Account or Budget.

A family of furniture to Vermont since 1849

F.J. PRESTON & SON INC.
57 Upper Church Street
Member American Gas Society

IRA Photo Contest

Attention: camera bugs, picture freaks and photography buffs. On March 15, in the L/L Commons, there will be a display of UVM talent. Open to all on-campus students, photographs may be submitted from Feb.10 through March 10 at the Main Desk of Billings.

There will be $85.00 cash in prizes. First place will be $50, second place $25, and third

Employment Interviews

South Windsor Public Schools, South Windsor, Connecticut – Tuesday, March 4 from 9:30 a.m. to 4:00 p.m.

They will be interviewing candidates for the following openings: Physical Education (grades 10–12), male or female; Mathematics Teacher (grades 10–12); Cooperative Work Experience Diversified Occupations (grades 10–12); English Teacher (grades 7–9); Industrial Arts Teacher (grades 8–9), power mechanics and metal shop; Social Studies Teacher (grades 7–9)

They will also be interviewing candidates for Elementary, Art, English, and Social Studies. To sign up for an interview, call 656-3477 at once.

"White Devil" Next At UVM

Rehearsals are now in progress for John Webster's classic Jacobean tragedy, The White Devil, to be presented March 7 through 11 at the University of Vermont's Royall Tyler Theatre. The White Devil was first performed in London in 1612. Since then it has enjoyed a wide popularity both for its superb theatricality and for the continued pertinence of its theme. Based on a notorious scandal of Webster's day, the play chronicles the Mafia-like struggle between two immensely powerful families in Renaissance Italy. Webster's view of the ultimately tragic influence of wealth and power is a deeply pessimistic one, and clearly relates to our own contemporary experience.

Nancy Haynes of the Communication and Theatre Department is the director of The White Devil. Her previous directing credits at UVM include Cymbeline for the 1974 Champlain Shakespeare Festival, and last season's successful The Lady's Not for Burning. Veteran student performers and some newcomers make up the large cast.

Tickets for The White Devil will go on sale February 24 at the Royall Tyler Theatre. For further information and ticket reservation call (802) 656-2094.

Billings Recess Schedule

Billings Center will maintain its normal operating schedule Saturday and Sunday March 1 and 2. Monday and Tuesday, March 3 and 4, it will keep Saturday hours 9:30 a.m. to 11:00 p.m.

The Catamount Den will be closed, as usual Saturday, March 1. Sunday through Monday it will keep normal Sunday hours, 4:00 p.m. to 8:00 p.m.

Inspector Who-??

Another Student Association production is in the making with the coming of Tom Stoppard's brilliant comedy The Real Inspector Hound (author of Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead), to be presented in the Round Room of Billings Center, April 9 through the 13. Co-directed by the University's actor-in-residence, John Milligan, and UVM student, Keith Gaylord, this light and flippant spoof on critics and opening nights calls for a well-rounded cast of three women and five men. Open auditions for anyone interested in performing are to be held at the Royall Tyler Theatre on February 27 from 3:15–5:30 p.m. and February 28 from 5:00–8:00 p.m. in Room 112. Scripts and audition selections are now available at the Royall Tyler Theatre for those who would like to pick them up. For further information, call John Milligan or Keith Gaylord, ext. 2096.

Currently on view at the Fleming Museum are two new installations in the Ethnographic and American Galleries: American Plains Indians, and Twentieth Century American Art: The First Four Decades. Both will remain on view until mid-summer.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 27

9 a.m. to 4 p.m., The Vista Peace Corps spends its last day at Billings Center, serving all interested seniors who should sign up first at the Placement Office, Mansfield House.

12:15 p.m., The second of two weekly cross country ski classes for faculty and staff members is held. Call 656-3240 to register.

7 p.m., Intervarsity Christian Fellowship is having a fellowship meeting in L/L B-162. Come clap your hands, all peoples! Shout to God with loud songs of joy!

7:30 p.m., Orlando Taylor, speech pathologist at the Center for Applied Linguistics at the Howard University in Washington D.C., will speak in Memorial Lounge, Waterman, on the subject of "Teaching Linguistically Different Children." He will also present the same lecture again on Friday, February 28.

7:30 p.m., The Medieval/Renaissance Program sponsors a slide-lecture by Prof. John Engroff, Dean of Students' Office at UVM, who will discuss the pilgrimage to Mecca, including places, meaning, the nature of the experience and relationship to western pilgrimages. L/L, A-180 is the site of the discussion.

7:30 p.m., SA Films presents that loveable Gene Kelly in one of America's all-time favorite musicals, "Singing in the Rain." Admission is free in 101 Votey.

8 p.m., The Lane Series presents Virgil Fox and his "Heavy Organ" in Memorial Auditorium. Call 656-3418 for ticket reservations.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 28

2 p.m., Math Seminar, undergraduates, "Memory Management and Virtual Memory," Room 305B Votey.

4 p.m., Math Seminar, graduates, "Dynamic Locality in Virtual Memory Systems," Prof. Gary Sager, University of Waterloo, Canada, Room 305B Votey.

7:30 p.m., seminar/slide show with Debra Ingalls, UVM dental hygienist, "How to Make the Most Out of Your Wasted Time," 213 Wilks Hall. Bring your own cushion to sit on.

7:30 p.m., Orlando Taylor, speech pathologist, will speak in Memorial Lounge on teaching linguistically different children.

7:30 p.m., Baha'i Firesides, 71 S. Williams St.

7:30 and 10:00 p.m., SA Films presents a frightening double feature, "Frankenstein" and "Wolfman" in 101 Votey. Admission is $1.

7:30 and 9:30 p.m., The Lane Series presents the W.C. Fields film classic, "My Little Chickadee" in Marsh Life Sciences Bldg. Admission is $1.

8 p.m., Folk dancing will be held in Southwick Ballroom for all interested.

8 p.m., The Fleming Museum holds a gallery talk with Richard Janson, Museum Director, for Museum Members only. Interested in becoming a member? Call Bernie Cohen at 656-2090.

SATURDAY, MARCH 1

7:30 and 9:30 p.m., SA Films presents "The African Queen," starring Katherine Hepburn and Humphrey Bogart. Admission is free in 101 Votey.

SUNDAY, MARCH 2

2:30 p.m., The Lane Series presents Alicia DeLarrocha in Ira Allen Chapel. Call 656-3418 for ticket reservations.

6 p.m., The Church St. Center's Legislative Study Group meets at the center.

8 p.m., Ira Allen Chapel, George Aiken Lectures. Welcomes by Dr. Edward C. Andrews, Jr., UVM President, Gov. Thomas P. Salmon and Burlington Major Gordon H. Paquette. Sen. Robert T. Stafford will introduce the speaker, U.S. Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, who will talk on "International Affairs" and Aiken's 34-year Senate term.

MONDAY, MARCH 3

Today is the first of the two University holidays ending Tuesday, March 4. No classes scheduled; most academic and administrative offices will be closed.

The Church Street Center sponsors many new courses beginning today. Find out about the varied subjects of Oriental rugs, French films, traditional music and the contemporary tax rebate by registering soon. Call 656-4221 for details.

12 noon, Dr. Forrest Weight, Chief of the Section on Synaptic Pharmacology of the National Institutes of Health, will speak on "Mechanisms of Generation of Slow Synaptic Potentials in Sympathetic Ganglia" in C-219 Given.

5 p.m., VPIRG meets in Billings' Conference Room C and all interested are encouraged to attend.

7 p.m., The Living/Learning Nutrition Program meets in 115 Commons, L/L, for a class in nutritional counseling and exercise. All are welcome.

7:30 and 9:30 p.m., SA Films presents "Last Year at Marienbad," a French classic. Because of the overwhelming success of SA's films, a second showing will be held each Monday and Saturday night from now on. Tonight, the late show features "The Confession." Admission is free in 101 Votey.

TUESDAY, MARCH 4

Town Meeting Holiday – no classes scheduled; most academic and administrative offices will be closed.

The Church Street Center initiates courses on the following topics today: "How to be Your Own Best Friend," "Basic Conversational Greek," "Conversation in English," "Increasing Your Reading Effectiveness," and "Calligraphy & Italic Handwriting." Call 656-4221 for details.

12 noon, Janet Forgays conducts the study habit workshop with a tape on relaxing for exams. Alice Outwater will be back next week at the Counseling and Testing Center.

2 p.m., Dr. E. W. Chamberlain speaks on "A Mean Value Theorem for Complex Function Theory" in Room 220, Votey Bldg.

7 p.m., The Intervarsity Christian Fellowship holds its weekly Bible study session on the book of Colossians at 205 So. Prospect St., Apt. 2. All are welcome.

7:30 p.m., VPIRG sponsors a lecture in Billings' North Lounge. Contact Peter Cobb at 863-3405 for details.

8 p.m., Prof. Kenneth Rothwell of the English Dept. leads a faculty symposium and slide-lecture on research in progress entitled "Shakespeare and London" in 115 Commons, L/L.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 5

Classes resume on the regular schedules and offices open at the regular time following the Town Meeting holidays.

Church Street Center courses begin today on the following topics: "Medicinal Herbs of Vermont," "An Introduction to Yoga," "Tai Chi," "Palestinians and the Arab/Israeli Conflict," "Basic French Cuisine," "Gateway to Spanish Culture," "Basic Darkroom Techniques" and "Introduction to the Subculture of Science Fiction," and "Contemporary Women's Fiction." Call 656-4221 for details.

The second day's program of the Aiken Lectures gets under way at 9 a.m. with concurrent seminars, "The Potential Use of Military Force in an Era of Shortage," chaired by Dr. Douglas Kinnard in Carpenter Auditorium, Given Bldg., and "Dynamics of World Population Growth: The Failure of Population Policy," with a major presentation by Dr. Edwin D. Driver, in Commons 115, Living/Learning.

The next seminars are at 1 p.m. – Commons 115 is the site of "World Food Production: Feast or Famine?" and at 1 p.m. in Royall Tyler Theatre, "Middle East, OPEC and the World Economy."

3:30 p.m., Senator George D. Aiken will introduce the speaker, Hon. Arthur J. Andrew, assistant Under Secretary of State for External Affairs, Canada, who will speak at Royall Tyler Theatre – "Canada Looks at the world Food Supply."

8 p.m., the second Aiken Lecture is held at Ira Allen Chapel when Mr. Orville Freeman, President, Business International and U.S. Secretary of Agriculture from 1961–69, talks on the "World Food Crisis."

12 noon, Nancy Koch leads an hour of relaxation and meditation at the Counseling and Testing Center.

12:15 p.m., The Lunch Bunch Film Series features "Silversmiths of Williamsburg" at the Church St. Center, 135 Church St. Admission is free and open to the public.

3 p.m., The Council for Exceptional Children meets in D-107, L/L. Joan Sylvester will be the guest speaker and will discuss "Normalization."

3:30 p.m., Swami Sarvagatananda of India, spiritual leader of the Vedanta Society of Mass. speaks on "Types of Meditational Systems Practiced in America Today." Sponsored by the Dept. of Religion and Asian Studies, the lecture is held in Billings' Marsh Room.

4 p.m., "Tertulia" is a group of students, faculty and staff interested in speaking Spanish. All are encouraged to attend these informal sessions in the Hispanic Upt., Bldg. D, 3rd floor, no matter what your speaking ability.

4:30 p.m. The Faculty Senate meets in B-106, Cook.

7 p.m., The Living/Learning Nutrition Program meets for a class in nutrition counseling and exercises in 115 Commons, L/L. All are welcome.

7:30 p.m., The Outing Club meets in 305 Votey Bldg.

8 p.m., Orville Freeman, former U.S. Agricultural Secretary, will speak on the world food crisis in Ira Allen Chapel as part of the Aiken Lecture Series. The lecture is free and open to the public.

THURSDAY, MARCH 6

The Church Street Center's courses on the following topics begin today: "Standard First Aid and Personal Safety," "Intermediate Hatha Yoga," "Basic Photography," "Pottery," and "Shiat-Su (Acupuncture Massage)" and "Career Exploration." Call 656-4221 for details.

12 noon, the Non-Academic Employees Council meets in Waterman's Memorial Lounge.

12:15 p.m., Faculty and staff members are invited to cross country ski during lunch break. Call Janice Lange at 656-3240 for details.

Speaker On Types Of Meditational Systems

Swami Sarvagatamanda of India, spiritual leader of the Vedanta Society of Massachusetts, will speak at UVM, Wednesday, March 5, 1975, in Marsh Lounge of Billings Center on "Types of Meditational Systems Practiced in America Today: Their Value for Personality Integration." The Lecture is from 3:30–5:00 p.m. with questions and discussion, and is open to the public.

The Swami's visit is being sponsored by the Religion Department and the Asian Study Committee. He will speak at the Religion Department's course on "The Theory and Practice of Meditation" Wednesday evening and at the "Hinduism" class Thursday Morning.

The Swami will discuss such meditational approaches as Transcendental Meditation (TM), Buddhist Meditation, and Devotional paths such as that taught by Guru Maharaji.

A senior Swami of the Ramakrishna Order of India, largest and most prestigious monastic group of that nation, Sarvagatamanda headed various hospitals, schools, and boys homes in India before coming to this country in 1954. He is a frequent lecturer in such New England colleges as Tufts, Boston University, Brown, and MIT.

For further information, contact Prof. Robert Guenon of the Religion Department.

Frat Honors Students Of Civil Engineering

The University of Vermont's Chapter of Chi Epsilon, Honor Fraternity for Civil Engineers, during the academic year 1974–75 continued in its quest to honor outstanding students in the field of Civil Engineering. On January 30,1975, our chapter initiated sixteen students. Those students initiated were: Craig E. Blake, Robert G. Abramson, Daniel N. Keat, Ronald R. Bourne, Jerry A. Gomez, Paul C. Buckham, Julia A. Guy, Paul V. Psiaki, Stephan R. Guy, Gary M. Shulman, Mark A. Cring, Timothy J. Morrisey, Norman J. Barbera, Richard S. Clark, Ronald D. Gray, and Patrick C. Jennings. Following the initiation ceremony initiates, guests, old members, and faculty were treated to a sumptuous steak dinner at the Clover House Restaurant in Malletts Bay. The New England District Councillor was our guest for the festivities and spoke to us on the importance of becoming involved in chapter and national activities.

This year the initiates choose to sponsor a Civil Engineering Day at the University of Vermont as their initiation project. Invitations were sent to all high schools in the state. Scheduled events included a movie on the Civil Engineering profession, talks from C.E. faculty, and guided tours of all laboratory facilities.

Other Chi Epsilon projects include EIT Review sessions, and building a concrete canoe in conjunction with the local ASCE chapter to take to the ASCE New England Conference in Maine in April.

Ralph's Exxon
on Route 7 Shelburne Road and Interstate 189
Complete Auto Service
Expert Tune up and Repairs
All Work Fully Guaranteed
Free pickup and delivery
Phone: 862-9200

AMERICAN BANKERS
Cordially Invites COLLEGE SENIORS
Interested in Career Positions to attend an OPPORTUNITY SEMINAR Mon. March 3, 1975 -
7:00 PM Ramada Inn - Burlington Vermont
THE SURE WAY TO MISS SUCCESS IS TO MISS THE OPPORTUNITY

VALUABLE COUPON
SPECIAL TO STUDENTS
AND FACULTY MEMBERS
(prescriptions excluded)
10% DISCOUNT
ON YOUR PURCHASES AT
CAMPUS PHARMACY
ACROSS FROM
The Medical Center

RESEARCH
Thousands of Topics
$2.75 per page
Send for your up-to-date, 100-page mail order catalog. Enclose $1.00 to cover postage. Delivery time is 1 to 2 days.
RESEARCH ASSISTANCE, INC.
11941 WILSHIRE BLVD., SUITE #2
LOS ANGELES, CALIF. 90025
(213) 477-8474 or 477-5493
Our research material is sold for research assistance only.

Universal Produ

by Cindy Theall

You may have noticed the addition to your peanut butter jar or magazine label – a series of thick and thin lines with numbers in a block about the size of a quarter. According to the February issue of Family Circle Magazine, these lines represent the new Universal Produce Code.

UPC represents the most important breakthrough in cutting retail costs since self-service shopping was introduced. The code replaces the individual price mark; the product price will appear on the store shelf under the product.

When checking out, coded items will be rung up by passing the coded symbol over or under an electronic optical scanning device. This is connected to a computer which looks up name and item price, flashes the information on a screen at the checkout and prints out a detailed sales receipt. T... listed by ... by 'brand ... should be ... to estimate ... Not ... informa... complete ... know ... selling an... wanted ... not have ... priced. ... require ... computer ... on the sh... It is ... five years ... all food ... checked ... Few st... systems ... will incre... are code... items w... The cod... five-year ... all are ... industry ... function...

Coolidge Triump

Saturday at 1 p.m. on the Redstone Green, three brave but foolhardy "Human dog sled" teams competed for the much sought after title of "Champion of the Northeast Kingdom" with "Nanook" eventually winning the title.

Braving sub-zero temperatures and near-blizzard snow, the three teams started, nearly simultaneously, from the Country Club house behind Gutterson. During the initial sprint, the "Nanook" team, captained by "lead dog" Al Couter, inched ahead of its nearest rival, the "Chinook" team, also from Coolidge. Nanook increased its slim lead by gracefully cutting off the "Chinook" team as they encountered the dreaded "tree obstacle."

"Chinook" was hampered by the fact that one of its "dogs" slipped and was nearly crushed by the oncoming runners of his sled. To make matters worse, "Chinook's" lead dog turned a delicate shade of green as he proceeded to "Blow chow." It was later reported that the only pre-race training the victim had subjected himself to was Mea... banner ... Pat wa... belabou... "Na... race b... victory ... pacing ... the st... Overtu... Coolidge ... well-de... watch ... second ... chocol... post ra... went ... captain... home ...

For... row, ... superio... techno... pull h... Once ... funds ... deviou... and M... winne... the fi... the "... gener... have ... tri... unos... cant...

A SM... CAN M...

First you have to und...
The family farm is go... been replaced by the gian... business corporation, a fa... in-the-fields with thousan... men, women and children ... food assembly-line style.

It's miserable, backb... work. And the people wh... are powerless and impove... Excluded from the victor... by their brothers and sist... the factories of the cities.

This is why the Farm... needed a union. To bring... into the Twentieth Centu... win for them the basic ri... most people who work fo... take for granted.

The union they have... is the United Farm Work... America. UFW for short...

The UFW has won f... people major victories th... changed their lives in the... years.

They got child labo... dangerous pesticides out... fields.

They negotiated fo... won, a decent, hourly wa...

They won medical ... and pensions.

They built schools ... care centers and retirem... villages.

Elected their own ... And established ... pride and purpose ... own people.

HEA...
"Thunderbird Red Mountain"

...ight from now on. Tonight, the late ...onfession." Admission is free in 101

...ESDAY, MARCH 4
...liday – no classes scheduled; most ...rative offices will be closed.
...Center initiates courses on the following ...to be Your Own Best Friend," "Basic ..."Conversation in English," "Increasing ...fulness," and "Calligraphy & Italic ...-4221 for details.
...ays conducts the study habit workshop ...e for exams. Alice Outwater will be back ...ering and Testing Center.
...Chamberlain speaks on "A Mean Value ...Function Theory" in Room 229 Votey
...versity Christian Fellowship holds its ...sion on the book of Colossians at 205 ...2. All are welcome.
...sponsors a lecture in Billings' North ...Cobb at 863-3405 for details.
...eth Rothwell of the English Dept. leads a ...nd slide-lecture on research in progress ...and London" in 115 Commons, L/L.
...NESDAY, MARCH 5
...the regular schedules and offices open at ...ning the Town Meeting holidays.
...ter courses begin today on the following ...erbs of Vermont," "An Introduction to ...Palistinians and the Arab/Israeli Conflict," ..." "Gateway to Spanish Culture," "Basic ...s" and "Introduction to the Subculture ... and "Contemporary Women's Fiction." ...tails.
...program of the Aiken Lectures gets under ...oncurrent seminars, "The Potential Use of ...Era of Shortage," chaired by Dr. Douglas ...peaker Auditorium, Given Bldg., and ...ld Population Growth: The Failure of ... with a major presentation by Dr. Edwin ...ons 115, Living/Learning.
...rs are at 1 p.m. Commons 115 is the site ...oduction: Feast or Famine?," and at 1 p.m. ...estre, "Middle East, OPEC and the World
...ator George D. Aiken will introduce the ...w J. Andrew, assistant Under Secretary of ...Affairs, Canada, who will speak at Royall ...Canada Looks at the world Food Supply." ...d Aiken Lecture is held at Ira Allen Chapel ...Freeman, President, Business International ...of Agriculture from 1961–69, talks on the ...
...y Koch leads an hour of relaxation and ...ounseling and Testing Center.
...The Lunch Bunch Film Series features ...illiamsburg" at the Church St. Center, 135 ...m is free and open to the public.
...ouncil for Exceptional Children meets in ...Sylvester will be the guest speaker and will ...ium."
...ni Sarvagatananda of India, spiritual leader ...Society of Mosai, speaks on "Types of ...Practiced in America Today" sponsored ...Religion and Asian Studies, the lecture is held ...room.
..." is a group of students, faculty and staff ...king Spanish. All are encouraged to attend ...ions in the Hispanic Dpt., Bldg. D, 3rd floor, ...ur speaking ability.
...Faculty Senate meets in B-106, Cook.
...ving/Learning Nutrition Program meets for a ...ounseling and exercises in 115 Commons, ...me.
...Outing Club meets in 305 Votey Bldg.
...ville Freeman, former U.S. Agricultural ...eak on the world food crisis in Ira Allen ...the Aiken Lecture Series. The lecture is free ...ublic.

THURSDAY, MARCH 6
...reet Center's courses on the following topics ...Standard First Aid and Personal Safety," ...tha Yoga," "Basic Photography," "Pottery," ...(Acupuncture Massage)" and "Career ...656-4221 for details.
...Non-Academic Employees Council meets in ...orial Lounge.
...Faculty and staff member, are invited to cross ...g lunch break. Call Janice Lange at 656-3240

... Types Of Meditational Systems

...atamanda of ...eader of the ...ciety of ...ill speak at ...y, March 5, ... Lounge of ...on "Types of ...ems Practiced ... Their Value ... Integration." ...e is from ...with questions ...nd is open to ...
...visit is being ... the Religion ...d the Asian ...tee. He will ...e Religion

Department's course on "The Theory and Practice of Meditation" Wednesday evening and at the "Hinduism" class Thursday Morning.

The Swami will discuss such meditational approaches as Transcendental Meditation (TM), Buddhist Meditation, and Devotional paths such as that taught by Guru Maharaji.

A senior Swami of the Ramakrishna Order of India, largest and most prestigious monastic group of that nation, Sarvagatananda headed various hospitals, schools, and boys homes in India before coming to this country in 1954. He is a frequent lecturer in such New England colleges as Tufts, Boston University, Brown, and MIT.

For further information, contact Prof. Robert Gussner of the Religion Department.

RESEARCH
Thousands of Topics
$2.75 per page
Send for your up-to-date 100-page mail order catalog. Enclose $1.50 to cover postage. Delivery time is 1 to 2 days!
RESEARCH ASSISTANCE, INC.
11941 WILSHIRE BLVD. SUITE #2
LOS ANGELES, CALIF. 90025
(213) 477-8474 or 477-5493
Our research material is sold for research assistance only.

Universal Produce Code

by Cindy Theall

You may have noticed the addition to your peanut butter jar or magazine label – a series of thick and thin lines with numbers in a block about the size of a quarter. According to the February issue of Family Circle Magazine, these lines represent the new Universal Produce Code.

UPC represents the most important breakthrough in cutting retail costs since self-service shopping was introduced. The code replaces the individual price mark; the product price will appear on the store shelf under the product.

When checking out, coded items will be rung up by passing the coded symbol over or under an electronic optical scanning device. This is connected to a computer which looks up name and item price, flashes the information on a screen at the checkout and prints out a detailed sales receipt. The purchase will be listed by name and sometimes by brand. Check out time should be cut in half, according to estimates.

Store inventory information will be more complete and managers will know more quickly what is selling and when to overstock wanted items. Products will not have to be individually priced. Price changes will require a change in the computer memory and the sign on the shelf alone.

It is estimated that within five years some 85 percent of all food products will be checked out in this manner. Few stores have the UPC systems now but the number will increase as more products are coded. Some 80 billion items will be coded this year. The code is the result of a five-year cooperative effort by all areas of the grocery industry for more efficient functioning.

Coolidge Triumphs Again

Saturday at 1 p.m. on the Redstone Green, three brave but foolhardy "Human dog sled" teams competed for the much sought after title of "Champion of the Northeast Kingdom" with "Nanook" eventually winning the title.

Braving sub-zero temperatures and near-blizzard snow, the three teams started, nearly simultaneously, from the Country Club house behind Gutterson. During the initial sprint, the "Nanook" team, captained by "lead dog" Al Couter, inched ahead of its nearest rival, the "Chinook" team, also from Coolidge. Nanook increased its slim lead by gracefully cutting off the "Chinook" team as they encountered the dreaded "tree obstacle."

"Chinook" was hampered by the fact that one of its "dogs" slipped and was nearly crushed by the oncoming runners of his sled. To make matters worse, "Chinook's" lead dog turned a delicate shade of green as he proceeded to "Blow chow." It was later reported that the only pre-race training the victim had subjected himself to was [illegible]

Meanwhile, carrying the banner for the "Greeks," Delta Psi wallowed in last place, belaboured by a 210 lb. rider.

"Nanook" climaxed the race by bringing home the victory, to Mother Coolidge, pacing lightly across the line to the strains of the "1812 Overture" eminating from Coolidge. The team enjoyed a well-deserved "retch" and then watched "Chinook" finish second. After 2 cups of hot chocolate and the swapping of post race stories, the two teams went out to watch Delta Psi, captained by Matt Jones, plod home in third.

For the second year in a row, Coolidge has wedded superior athletes with futuristic technology in sled design to pull home the Klondike title. Once again, thanks to the funds provided by IRA and the devious plotting of Al Coulter and Matt Jones, Coolidge Hall, winner of "Capture-the-Flag," the first annual "Tug-a-War," the "Bong-A-Thon," and the general beer consumption title, have proven their ability to triumph in the most unorthodox, yet stimulating contests to plague Redstone Campus.

Saga Schedule For Recess

MARCH TOWN MEETING
Holiday Dining Hall Schedule

Friday, February 28
Den closes at 5:00 p.m.; "Waiters" closes at 7:00 p.m.; All other units open on their regular schedule.

Saturday, March 1
Marsh – Brunch at 11:30–1:00; Dinner at 5:00–6:30.
Wright – Continental Breakfast at 8:00–8:30; Brunch at 11:00–12:30; Dinner at 5:00–6:30.
All other units closed.

Sunday, March 2
Same as Saturday.

Monday, March 3
Given open on Regular Schedule
Den open 9:00–5:00.
Marsh – same as Saturday and Sunday.
Wright – same as Saturday and Sunday

Tuesday, March 4
Given open on Regular Schedule
Den open 9:00–5:00.
Marsh – same as Saturday, Sunday, and Monday.
Wright – same as Saturday, Sunday, and Monday.
Living Learning – reopens for Dinner 5:00–6:00.
"Waiters" – closed.

Wednesday, March 5
All units reopen on regular schedule.

Coupon Bank will be closed Monday and Tuesday. Saga Office will be open Monday and Tuesday. The "Stores," Redstone Station, White House, "Waiters," Wright Snack Bar and Faculty Dining Room closed this weekend and reopen Wednesday March 5 regular hours.

St. Anselm's Chapel

The Chapel will be closed from the 1st of March through the 4th of March because of the Town Meeting Holidays. Our regular schedule will resume on Wednesday morning with Morning Prayer at 7:15 a.m.

Schedule, No Enquirer's Class this Monday, No Tuesday Night Eucharist, No Sunday Morning Service.

For those who will be here over the weekend, St. Paul's Cathedral downtown, invites all to their Sunday services (8 a.m., 10 a.m., 5:30 p.m.)

Cunningham Newman Center

As Lent continues, may we continue to be aware of our need to be Reconciled with the Father and persevere in the means we have chosen this Season to do just that. As we come closer to Holy Week, let us continue to remember that darkness does turn to light, that these 40 days and all 40 days will lead to the Joy of Easter if that's our goal.

WEEKDAY LITURGIES: Monday–Friday: 7:30 a.m. and 4:15 p.m.; Also: Tuesdays: 10:00 p.m.

WEEKEND LITURGIES: Saturday: 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.; Sunday: 9:00 and 11:30 a.m. and 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.

SCRIPTURE SERIES: Exploration of some of the Prophets such as: Isaiah and Jeremiah. Each Monday evening at 7:00 p.m. with Fr. Crowley.

A MORE MEANINGFUL LIFE SERIES: Exposition and exploration of the Catholic Faith. Especially for non-Catholics interested in the Catholic tradition, and for Catholics interested in deepening their religious understanding. Each Monday at 8:30 p.m.

FASHION SHOW: Benefit of the Newman Center. March 6, at 7:30 p.m. at Ira Allen Chapel. Tickets on sale at the Newman Center and in many of the dorms for $1.50. Fashions by Magrams for both men and women.

COMMUNAL PENANCE SERVICE: March 12 at 7:30 p.m. at the Center.

SOCIAL ACTION MINDED? Through a survey handed out last weekend we have close to 100 students who have indicated they will give at least 1 hour each week to some area of Social Concern. The main topics we are concerned with are: Third World and Hunger, Farmworkers and Boycotts, and Amnesty. Let Fr. Crowley or Sr. Lindora know if you are interested in [illegible]

VARIETY SHOW: A number of students have shown interest in having a variety show. So we will have one! It will be held in Southwick Auditorium on April 19. If you would like to be in it, please call the Center and let us know that. (862-8403)

TRIP TO THE WESTERN PRIORY: In April we will be taking a trip to Weston for Liturgy and a "Picnic" with the Brothers there. If you are interested in going with us, please sign up at the Center.

MUSIC ANYONE? As the year comes closer to an end we are still interested in involving more of you in our Music groups each weekend. Anyone interested with any Instrument, please contact Sr. Lindora or Lori Routhier at the Center.

FAITH COMMUNITY: Every other Wednesday evening at the Center, an evening experience of prayer and dialogue for young people in Graduate School, a part of our Worshipping Community. Interested? Contact Sr. Jeannine or Fr. Holland. Next evening: Wednesday, February 26 at 7 p.m.

In Memory of Lisa Rimmer

"She has taken her lighted candle
and is gone into another room
I cannot find.
But anyone can tell
where she has been
because of all the little lights
she has left behind."

November 14, 1955 - February 21, 1975

For information on the memorial service please contact Robinson Hall, 656-3085.

The Exchange

Thefts On Campus

by Andrea Lehtonen
Alice D. Outwater Counseling & Testing Center

Many fascinating items of information turned up in my quest about property being stolen on campus and these I now share with you. Certainly the attitude about what belongs to whom and taking responsibility has changed sharply. I wonder what your views are? Scott Smith of Security reports that thefts in all categories are up to 130% this year (unfortunately the total will be larger by mid–May.) Stealing from cars in the parking lots has increased – tape decks, skiis, boots, typewriters, cameras – you name it; but also students are stealing from each other in the dorms. He felt the University used to be considered a sanctuary, now transients and people from downtown are wandering into dorms, even sleeping on the couches in the lounges. They test the bedroom doors until they find one open and help themselves to the contents. Also the dorms used to be locked at night; now they are open 24 hours making access to no–gooders easier.

In the Main lounges comfortable chairs have been removed, the heavier butcher block ones are difficult to handle, so cushions are taken instead, making them rather unusable. Large rugs 20'–30' are removed– sometimes to students' rooms, often to apartments off campus. It's immaterial, very few are returned. Have you been in the Living/Learning Center lately? That was furnished with great pride and care not long ago, sixty handsome chairs in the Fireplace Lounge making it a special place to sit. Only four remain. Where have they gone? There seems to be real anger behind the actions, a getting-even type feeling. The dining room looked like a greenhouse with those delicious smelling tropical plants. Some were moved downstairs to the Commons area so more people could enjoy them and 50–75% of them were stolen from there. One droopy, half dead one appeared back–unrevivable.

Through the EXCHANGE we hear so many students saying they want the quality of their environment improved and take real pride in the campus. Any attempts towards this end are being seriously sabotaged. Billings had three fine wooden chairs in the balcony of the Apse and in three months all had gone. It must have taken a crane to get them down–never to appear again.

Windows get broken, hockey pucks through the glass. A student comes to retreive his puck, but claims he doesn't know who shot it and won't be responsible for the bill to repair the window. Interesting Psychology! I'm feeling depressed as I finish this– faculty are also stealing–especially calculators and expensive smaller items.

But I'll leave you with one last thought. The University of Mass. has had armed robberies in the dorms. Police patroled the campus but found angry students throwing chairs and heavy items out the windows at them. They now patrol safely on horseback– the students don't want to hurt the horses.

Fashion Show Next Week

A men's and women's fashion show, "Springtime on Campus," will be held for the benefit of the Cunningham Newman Center on Thursday, March 6, 1975 at 7:30 p.m. in Ira Allen Chapel. The fashions for the show will be provided by Magrams, with hair styles being done by O'Brien's and flowers by Sharon.

Among the students and friends of the Newman Center who will be modeling bridal, formal, and casual wear are: Mark Boland, George Brunst, Chuck Casella, Carl Clackum, Joe Greco, Terry Green, Tony Kurnick, Billy Looker, David Maccini, Tom McNamara, John Murphy, Tim O'Connell, Warren Prehmus, Bert Rayle, Tim Richard, Rocky Thompson, Bonnie Bishop, Sue Boardman, Maria Breault, Gayle Dunn, Debbie Feitelberg, Marykate Foley, Cheryl Gucciardi, Lise LaCroix, Beverly Michael, Wendy Norling, and Renee Stys. Also among the models will be Mrs. Saul Agel, Mrs Walter Dandrige, Mrs Mary Evelti, Mrs. Martin Flanagan, Mrs David Hill, Mrs. Lee Maynard, Ms. Jackie McGlenn, Mrs. Frederic Middleton, and Mrs. Timothy O'Connell.

There will be a donation of $1.50. Proceeds from the show will be used to augment projects of the Newman Center, among them trips by volunteers to Alabama to work in conjunction with Catholic Charities with the underprivileged in that state.

Door prizes will be awarded and refreshments will be served. Tickets are available in residence halls, at the Newman Center, and at the door the evening of the show.

Aiken Lecture Series

Students, faculty and staff who would like to attend either or both of the Sunday and Wednesday dinners planned in connection with the major speakers in this year's inaugural of the Aiken Lecture Series may obtain tickets (as the supply lasts) at Billings Center, at Living/Learning Center, or in the offices of the respective academic deans and directors.

The Sunday, Mar. 2 address of Senator Mike Mansfield will be preceded by a social at 5 and dinner at 6 at Simpson Dining Hall. Tickets are $8 per person. The evening lecture will be at 8 p.m. in Ira Allen Chapel.

The Wednesday, March 5 address of Orville Freeman will be preceded by a 5:30 p.m. social and 6:30 p.m. dinner at Given Medical Building dining hall. Tickets are $6.50 per person. The evening lecture will be at 8 p.m. in Ira Allen Chapel.

A SMALL CHANGE IN YOUR LIFE CAN MAKE A BIG CHANGE IN OURS.

First you have to understand. The family farm is gone. It's been replaced by the giant agribusiness corporation, a factory-in-the-fields with thousands of men, women and children picking food assembly-line style.

It's miserable, backbreaking work. And the people who do it are powerless and impoverished. Excluded from the victories won by their brothers and sisters in the factories of the cities.

This is why the Farmworkers needed a union. To bring them into the Twentieth Century. To win for them the basic rights that most people who work for a living take for granted.

The union they have chosen is the United Farm Workers of America. UFW for short.

The UFW has won for its people major victories that have changed their lives in the past ten years.

They got child labor and dangerous pesticides out of the fields.

They negotiated for, and won, a decent, hourly wage.

They won medical benefits and pensions.

They built schools and health care centers and retirement villages.

Elected their own leadership.

And established a sense of pride and purpose in their own people.

So . . . because the UFW is the people, it is not very popular with the growers.

Which led the growers to look for a union that saw things their way.

What they found was the Teamsters.

A union that neither invites nor allows its people to participate in the negotiations and decisions that affect their lives. A union that claims the support of the workers, but refuses to allow free elections to see if the workers really want it.

A union that hires highly paid thugs and goon squads to break lawful strikes and picket lines.

A union that is not above bringing illegal aliens into the fields to replace workers who are out on strike.

A union with a documented history of using violence as a means of settling disputes.

Does it look like the Farmworkers have two unions?

Perhaps.

They have one union that takes care of the growers, and one that takes care of them.

One that would die tomorrow if the people in the fields were allowed to vote.

And one that would survive as living proof that the people who produce the food and the people who harvest it can enter into a partnership to feed us all.

And each other in the bargain.

What's your part in all this? Well, as we said in the beginning, first you have to understand.

If you do understand, you will cast your vote for the Farmworkers, the growers, and yourself, by not buying grapes, head lettuce or Gallo wines.

Because the growers understand the power of the purse. And if people all over America support justice for Farmworkers, the growers will have to support it too.

Giving up grapes, eating some other kind of lettuce besides iceberg head lettuce, and buying another brand of wine won't make much difference in your life. But it'll make a big difference in ours.

I enclose $_____ to help the farm workers survive the coming weeks or months without a working wage.
☐ I would like to help with the boycott of Gallo Wine. Please send me more information.
Your Name _____
Address _____
City _____
Make Checks Payable to "United Farm Workers of America"
Mail to:
United Farm Workers of America
P.O. Box 62
Keene, Calif. 93531
Call (805) 822-5571 for further information.

DON'T BUY GRAPES, HEAD LETTUCE OR GALLO WINE!

dunham
Headquarters for CONTINENTAL TYROLEANS
MAZEL'S
194 North St.

ALL NEW MENU
THE BEST STEAKS
GREAT SEAFOOD TOO!
SIZZLING STEAK
1515 WILLISTON ROAD
So. BURLINGTON, VERMONT

Levi's
Pants Plus
12 N. WINOOSKI AVE.
BURLINGTON, VT.
05401
802 • 864-0181

Jobs For Summer Look Promising

Informed sources report that summer job opportunities for college students "look good" this year. National Parks, Dude Ranches, Guest Resorts, Private Camps, and other tourist areas throughout the nation are now seeking student applications.

Summer job placement coordinators at Opportunity Research (SAP) report that despite national economics tourist areas are looking for a record season. Polls indicate that people may not go for the big purchases such as new cars, new homes, furniture or appliances, but most appear to be planning for a big vacation.

A free booklet on student job assistance may be obtained by sending a self-addressed stamped envelope to Opportunity Research, Dept. SJO, 55 Flathead Dr., Kalispell, MT 59901. Student job seekers are urged to apply early!

20,000 SWEATERS
SPORTS WEAR
CHARLESTOWN MILL STORE
65 MAIN ST
OPEN DAILY 9-9
SATURDAY 9-5

night from now on. Tonight, the late confession." Admission is free in 101

UESDAY, MARCH 4
holiday – no classes scheduled; most trative offices will be closed.
Center initiates courses on the following to be Your Own Best Friend," "Basic ," "Conversation in English," "Increasing ctiveness," and "Calligraphy & Italic 6-4221 for details.
roup) conducts the study habit workshop
g for exams. Alice Outwater will be back porting and Testing Center.
Chamberlain (psych) on "A Mean-Value Function Theory" in Room 229, Votey versity Christian Fellowship holds its ession on the book of Colossians at 205

2. All are welcome.
G sponsors a lecture in Billings' North r Cobb at 863-3405 for details.
eth Rothwell of the English Dept. leads a and slide-lecture on research in progress and London" in 115 Commons, L/L.
EDNESDAY, MARCH 5
the regular schedules and offices open at owing the Town Meeting holidays.
nter courses begin today on the following Herbs of Vermont," "An Introduction to Politicians and the Arab/Israeli Conflict," e," "Gateway to Spanish Culture," "Basic es" and "Introduction to the Subculture
" and "Contemporary Women's Fiction." tails.
program of the Aiken Lectures gets under concurrent seminars, "The Potential Use of Era of Shortage," chaired by Dr. Douglas penter Auditorium, Given Bldg., and rld Population Growth: The Failure of with a major presentation by Dr. Edwin ons 115, Living/Learning.
rs are at 1 p.m. Commons 115 is the site oduction: Feast or Famine?" and at 1 p.m. eatre, "Middle East, OPEC and the World ator George D. Aiken will introduce the ar J. Andrew, assistant Under Secretary of Affairs, Canada, who will speak at Royall Canada Looks at the world Food Supply."

nd Aiken Lecture is held at Ira Allen Chapel Freeman, President, Business International of Agriculture from 1961–69, talks on the
."
y Kock leads an hour of relaxation and Counseling and Testing Center.
The Lunch Bunch Film Series features Williamsburg" at the Church St. Center, 135 on is free and open to the public.
Council for Exceptional Children meets in Sylvester will be the guest speaker and will tion."
ami Sarvagatananda of India, spiritual leader Society of the U.S., speaks on "Types of ms Practiced in America Today" sponsored eligion and Asian Studies, the lecture is held Room.
le" is a group of students, faculty and staff king Spanish. All are encouraged to attend sions in the Hispanic Dpt., Bldg. D, 3rd floor, our speaking ability.
Faculty Senate meets in B-106, Cook.
ving/Learning Nutrition Program meets for a counseling and exercises in 115 Commons, me.
Outing Club meets in 305 Votey Bldg.
rille Freeman, former U.S. Agricultural peak on the world food crisis in Ira Allen the Aiken Lecture Series. The lecture is free ublic.

THURSDAY, MARCH 6
Street Center's courses on the following topics Standard First Aid and Personal Safety,"
the Yoga," "Basic Photography," "Pottery," n (Acupuncture Massage)" and "Career ll 656-4221 for details.
Non-Academic Employees Council meets in orial Lounge.
Faculty and staff member are invited to cross
ng lunch break. Call Janice Lange at 656-3240

n Types Of Meditational Systems

gatananda of leader of the ociety of vill speak at y, March 5, Lounge of on "Types of tems Practiced
y: Their Value Integration."
e is from with questions and is open to visit is being the Religion nd the Asian ttee. He will e Religion

Department's course on "The Theory and Practice of Meditation" Wednesday evening and at the "Hinduism" class Thursday Morning.

The Swami will discuss such meditational approaches as Transcendental Meditation (TM), Buddhist Meditation, and Devotional paths such as that taught by Guru Maharaji.

A senior Swami of the Ramakrishna Order of India, largest and most prestigious monastic group of that nation, Sarvagatananda headed various hospitals, schools, and boys homes in India before coming to this country in 1954. He is a frequent lecturer in such New England colleges as Tufts, Boston University, Brown, and MIT.

For further information, contact Prof. Robert Gassner of the Religion Department.

RESEARCH
Thousands of Topics
$2.75 per page
Send for your up-to-date, 160-page mail order catalog. Enclose $1.00 to cover postage (delivery time is 1 to 2 days)
RESEARCH ASSISTANCE, INC.
11941 WILSHIRE BLVD., SUITE #2
LOS ANGELES, CALIF. 90025
(213) 477-8474 or 477-5493

Universal Produce Code

by Cindy Theall

You may have noticed the addition to your peanut butter jar or magazine label – a series of thick and thin lines with numbers in a block about the size of a quarter. According to the February issue of Family Circle Magazine, these lines represent the new Universal Produce Code.

UPC represents the most important breakthrough in cutting retail costs since self-service shopping was introduced. The code replaces the individual price mark; the product price will appear on the store shelf under the product.

When checking out, coded items will be rung up by passing the coded symbol over or under an electronic optical scanning device. This is connected to a computer which looks up name and item price, flashes the information on a screen at the checkout and prints out a detailed sales receipt. The purchases will be listed by name and sometimes by brand. Check out time should be cut in half, according to estimates.

Store inventory information will be more complete and managers will know more quickly what is selling and when to overstock wanted items. Products will not have to be individually priced. Price changes will require a change in the computer memory and the sign on the shelf alone.

It is estimated that within five years some 85 percent of all food products will be checked out in this manner. Few stores have the UPC systems now but the number will increase as more products are coded. Some 80 billion items will be coded this year. The code is the result of a five-year cooperative effort by all areas of the grocery industry for more efficient functioning.

Coolidge Triumphs Again

Saturday at 1 p.m. on the Redstone Green, three brave but foolhardy "Human dog sled" teams competed for the much sought after title of "Champion of the Northeast Kingdom" with "Nanook" eventually winning the title.

Braving sub-zero temperatures and near-blizzard snow, the three teams started, nearly simultaneously, from the Country Club house behind Gutterson. During the initial sprint, the "Nanook" team, captained by "lead dog" Al Couter, inched ahead of its nearest rival, the "Chinook" team, also from Coolidge. Nanook increased its slim lead by gracefully cutting off the "Chinook" team as they encountered the dreaded "tree obstacle."

"Chinook" was hampered by the fact that one of its "dogs" slipped and was nearly crushed by the oncoming runners of his sled. To make matters worse, "Chinook's" lead dog turned a delicate shade of green as he proceeded to "Blow chow." It was later reported that the only pre-race training the victim had subjected himself to was [illegible]

Meanwhile, carrying the banner for the "Greeks," Delta Psi wallowed in last place, belaboured by a 210 lb. rider.

"Nanook" climaxed the race by bringing home the victory to Mother Coolidge, pacing lightly across the line to the strains of the "1812 Overture" eminating from Coolidge. The team enjoyed a well-deserved "retch" and then watched "Chinook" finish second. After 2 cups of hot chocolate and the swapping of post race stories, the two teams went out to watch Delta Psi, captained by Matt Jones, plod home in third.

For the second year in a row, Coolidge has wedded superior athletes with futuristic technology in sled design to pull home the Klondike title. Once again, thanks to the funds provided by IRA and the devious plotting of Al Coulter and Matt Jones, Coolidge Hall, winner of "Capture-the-Flag," the first annual "Tug-a-War," the "Bong-A-Thon," and the general beer consumption title, have proven their ability to triumph in the most unorthodox yet stimulating contests to plague Redstone Campus.

Saga Schedule For Recess

MARCH TOWN MEETING
Holiday Dining Hall Schedule

Friday, February 28
Den closes at 5:00 p.m.; "Walters" closes at 7:00 p.m.; All other units open on their regular schedule.

Saturday, March 1
Marsh – Brunch at 11:30–1:00; Dinner at 5:00–6:30.
Wright – Continental Breakfast at 8:00–8:30; Brunch at 11:00–12:30; Dinner at 5:00–6:30.
All other units closed.

Sunday, March 2
Same as Saturday.

Monday, March 3
Given open on Regular Schedule
Den open 9:00–5:00.
Marsh – same as Saturday and Sunday.
Wright – same as Saturday and Sunday

Tuesday, March 4
Given open on Regular Schedule.
Den open 9:00–5:00.
Marsh – same as Saturday, Sunday, and Monday.
Wright – same as Saturday, Sunday, and Monday.
Living Learning – reopens for Dinner 5:00–6:00.
"Walters" – closed.

Wednesday, March 5
All units reopen on regular schedule.

Coupon Bank will be closed Monday and Tuesday. Saga Office will be open Monday and Tuesday. The "Stores," Redstone Station, White House, "Walters," Wright Snack Bar and Faculty Dining Room closed this weekend and reopen Wednesday March 5 regular hours.

St. Anselm's Chapel

The Chapel will be closed from the 1st of March through the 4th of March because of the Town Meeting Holidays. Our regular schedule will resume on Wednesday morning with Morning Prayer at 7:15 a.m.

Schedule. No Enquirer's Class this Monday, No Tuesday Night Eucharist, No Sunday Morning Service.

For those who will be here over the weekend, St. Paul's Cathedral downtown, invites all to their Sunday services (8 a.m., 10 a.m., 5:30 p.m.)

Cunningham Newman Center

As Lent continues, may we continue to be aware of our need to be Reconciled with the Father and persevere in the means we have chosen this Season to do just that. As we come closer to Holy Week, let us continue to remember that darkness does turn to light, that these 40 days and all 40 days will lead to the Joy of Easter if that's our goal.

WEEKDAY LITURGIES: Monday–Friday: 7:30 a.m. and 4:15 p.m.; Also: Tuesdays: 10:00 p.m.

WEEKEND LITURGIES: Saturday: 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.; Sunday: 9:00 and 11:30 a.m. and 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.

SCRIPTURE SERIES: Exploration of some of the Prophets such as: Isaiah and Jeremiah. Each Monday evening at 7:00 p.m. with Fr. Crowley.

A MORE MEANINGFUL LIFE SERIES: Exposition and exploration of the Catholic Faith. Especially for non-Catholics interested in the Catholic tradition, and for Catholics interested in deepening their religious understanding. Each Monday at 8:30 p.m.

FASHION SHOW: Benefit of the Newman Center. March 6, at 7:30 p.m. at Ira Allen Chapel. Tickets on sale at the Newman Center and in many of the dorms for $1.50. Fashions by Magrams for both men and women.

COMMUNAL PENANCE SERVICE: March 12 at 7:30 p.m. at the Center.

SOCIAL ACTION MINDED? Through a survey handed out last weekend we have close to 100 students who have indicated they will give at least 1 hour each week to some area of Social Concern. The main topics we are concerned with are: Third World and Hunger, Farmworkers and Boycotts, and Amnesty. Let Fr. Crowley or Sr. Lindora know if you are interested in any of these issues.

VARIETY SHOW: A number of students have shown interest in having a variety show. So we will have one! It will be held in Southwick Auditorium on April 19. If you would like to be in it, please call the Center and let us know that. (862-8403)

TRIP TO THE WESTERN PRIORY: In April we will be taking a trip to Weston for Liturgy and a "Picnic" with the Brothers there. If you are interested in going with us, please sign up at the Center.

MUSIC ANYONE? As the year comes closer to an end we are still interested in involving more of you in our Music groups each weekend. Anyone interested with any instrument, please contact Sr. Lindora or Lori Routhier at the Center.

FAITH COMMUNITY: Every other Wednesday evening at the Center, an evening experience of prayer and dialogue for young people in Graduate School, a part of our Worshipping Community. Interested? Contact Sr. Jeannine or Fr. Holland. Next evening: Wednesday, February 26 at 7 p.m.

In Memory of Lisa Rimmer

"She has taken her lighted candle
and is gone into another room
I cannot find.

But anyone can tell
where she has been because of all the little lights
she has left behind."

November 14, 1955 - February 21, 1975

For information on the memorial service please contact Robinson Hall, 656-3085.

The Exchange

Thefts On Campus

by Andrea Lehtonen
Alice D. Outwater Counseling & Testing Center

Many fascinating items of information turned up in my quest about property being stolen on campus and these I now share with you. Certainly the attitude about what belongs to whom and taking responsibility has changed sharply. I wonder what your views are? Scott Smith of Security reports that thefts in all categories are up to 130% this year (unfortunately the total will be larger by mid–May.) Stealing from cars in the parking lots has increased – tape decks, skiis, boots, typewriters, cameras – you name it; but also students are stealing from each other in the dorms. He felt the University used to be considered a sanctuary, now transients and people from downtown are wandering into dorms, even sleeping on the couches in the lounges. They test the bedroom doors until they find one open and help themselves to the contents. Also the dorms used to be locked at night; now they are open 24 hours making access to no–gooders easier.

In the Main lounges comfortable chairs have been removed, the heavier butcher block ones are difficult to handle, so cushions are taken instead, making them rather unusable. Large rugs 20'–30' are removed– sometimes to students' rooms, often to apartments off campus. It's immaterial, very few are returned. Have you been in the Living/Learning Center lately? That was furnished with great pride and care not long ago, sixty handsome chairs in the Fireplace Lounge making it a special place to sit. Only four remain. Where have they gone? There seems to be real anger behind the actions, a getting-even type feeling. The dining room looked like a greenhouse with those delicious smelling tropical plants. Some were moved downstairs to the Commons area so more people could enjoy them and 50–75% of them were stolen from there. One droopy, half dead one appeared back–unrevivable.

Through the EXCHANGE we hear so many students saying they want the quality of their environment improved and take real pride in the campus. Any attempts towards this end are being seriously sabotaged. Billings had three fine wooden chairs in the balcony of the Apse and in three months all had gone. It must have taken a crane to get them down...never to appear again.

Windows get broken, hockey pucks through the glass. A student comes to retreive his puck, but claims he doesn't know who shot it and won't be responsible for the bill to repair the window. Interesting Psychology! I'm feeling depressed as I finish this– faculty are also stealing–especially calculators and expensive smaller items.

But I'll leave you with one last thought. The University of Miss has had armed robberies in the dorms. Police patrolled the campus but found angry students throwing chairs and heavy items out the windows at them. They now patrol safely on horseback– the students don't want to hurt the horses.

Fashion Show Next Week

A men's and women's fashion show, "Springtime on Campus," will be held for the benefit of the Cunningham Newman Center on Thursday, March 6, 1975 at 7:30 p.m. in Ira Allen Chapel. The fashions for the show will be provided by Magrams, with hair styles being done by O'Brien's and flowers by Sharon.

Among the students and friends of the Newman Center who will be modeling bridal, formal, and casual wear are: Mark Boland, George Brunst, Chuck Casella, Carl Clackum, Joe Greco, Terry Green, Tony Kurnick, Billy Looker, David Maccini, Tom McNamara, John Murphy, Tim O'Connell, Warren Prehmus, Bert Rayle, Tim Richard, Rocky Thompson, Bonnie Bishop, Sue Boardman, Maria Breault, Gayle Dunn, Debbie Feitelberg, Marykate Foley, Cheryl Gucciardi, Lise LaCroix, Beverly Michael, Wendy Norling, and Renee Stys. Also among the models will be Mrs. Saul Agel, Mrs Walter Dandrige, Mrs Mary Evelti, Mrs. Martin Flanagan, Mrs David Hill, Mrs. Lee Maynard, Ms. Jackie McGlenn, Mrs. Frederic Middleton, and Mrs. Timothy O'Connell.

There will be a donation of $1.50. Proceeds from the show will be used to augment projects of the Newman Center, among them trips by volunteers to Alabama to work in conjunction with Catholic Charities with the underprivileged in that state.

Door prizes will be awarded and refreshments will be served. Tickets are available in residence halls, at the Newman Center, and at the door the evening of the show.

Aiken Lecture Series

Students, faculty and staff who would like to attend either or both of the Sunday and Wednesday dinners planned in connection with the major speakers in this year's inaugural of the Aiken Lecture Series may obtain tickets (as the supply lasts) at Billings Center, at Living/Learning Center, or in the offices of the respective academic deans and directors.

The Sunday, Mar.2 address of Senator Mike Mansfield will be preceded by a social at 5 and dinner at 6 at Simpson Dining Hall. Tickets are $8 per person. The evening lecture will be at 8 p.m. in Ira Allen Chapel.

The Wednesday, March 5 address of Orville Freeman will be preceded by a 5:30 p.m. social and 6:30 p.m. dinner at Given Medical Building dining hall. Tickets are $6.50 per person. The evening lecture will be at 8 p.m. in Ira Allen Chapel.

A SMALL CHANGE IN YOUR LIFE CAN MAKE A BIG CHANGE IN OURS.

First you have to understand. The family farm is gone. It's been replaced by the giant agri-business corporation, a factory-in-the-fields with thousands of men, women and children picking food assembly-line style.

It's miserable, backbreaking work. And the people who do it are powerless and impoverished. Excluded from the victories won by their brothers and sisters in the factories of the cities.

This is why the Farmworkers needed a union. To bring them into the Twentieth Century. To win for them the basic rights that most people who work for a living take for granted.

The union they have chosen is the United Farm Workers of America. UFW for short.

The UFW has won for its people major victories that have changed their lives in the past ten years.

They got child labor and dangerous pesticides out of the fields.

They negotiated for, and won, a decent, hourly wage.

They won medical benefits and pensions.

They built schools and health care centers and retirement villages.

Elected their own leadership.

And established a sense of pride and purpose in their own people.

And one that would survive as living proof that the people who produce the food and the people who harvest it can enter into a partnership to feed us all.

And each other in the bargain.

What's your part in all this? Well, as we said in the beginning, first you have to understand.

If you do understand, you will cast your vote for the Farmworkers, the growers, and yourself, by not buying grapes, head lettuce or Gallo wines.*

Because the growers understand the power of the purse. And if people all over America support justice for Farmworkers, the growers will have to support it too.

Giving up grapes, eating some other kind of lettuce besides iceberg head lettuce, and buying another brand of wine won't make much difference in your life. But it'll make a big difference in ours.

So . . . because the UFW is the people, it is not very popular with the growers.

Which led the growers to look for a union that saw things their way.

What they found was the Teamsters.

A union that neither invites nor allows its people to participate in the negotiations and decisions that affect their lives. A union that claims the support of the workers, but refuses to allow free elections to see if the workers really want it.

A union that hires highly paid thugs and goon squads to break lawful strikes and picket lines.

A union that is not above bringing illegal aliens into the fields to replace workers who are out on strike.

A union with a documented history of using violence as a means of settling disputes.

Does it look like the Farmworkers have two unions?

Perhaps.

They have one union that takes care of the growers, and one that takes care of them.

One that would die tomorrow if the people in the fields were allowed to vote.

I enclose $_____ to help the farm workers survive the coming weeks or months without a working wage.

☐ I would like to help with the boycott of Gallo Wine. Please send me more information.

Your Name_____

Address_____

City_____

Make Checks Payable to "United Farm Workers of America"

Mail to:

United Farm Workers of America
P.O. Box 62
Keene, Calif. 93531

Call (805) 822-5571 for further information.

DON'T BUY GRAPES, HEAD LETTUCE OR GALLO WINE!

*Thunderbird, Ripple, Boone's Farm, Madria Modena, Wolfe & Sons, Tyrolia, Granada, Silver Star, Carlo Rossi, Red Mountain, Andre, and all the many brands & labels of Gallo.

dunham
Headquarters for CONTINENTAL TYROLEANS
MAZEL'S
194 North St.

ALL NEW MENU
THE BEST STEAKS
GREAT SEAFOOD TOO!
SIZZLING STEAK
1010 SHELBURNE ROAD
SO. BURLINGTON, VERMONT

Levi's
Pants Plus
12 N. WINOOSKI AVE.
BURLINGTON, VT.
05401
802 • 864-0181

CHARLESTOWN MILL STORE
65 MAIN ST
OPEN DAILY 9-9
SATURDAY 9-5
20,000 SWEATERS
SPORTS WEAR

Jobs For Summer Look Promising

Informed sources report that summer job opportunities for college students "look good" this year. National Parks, Dude Ranches, Guest Resorts, Private Camps, and other tourist areas throughout the nation are now seeking student applications.

Summer job placement coordinators at Opportunity Research (SAP) report that despite national economics tourist areas are looking for a record season. Polls indicate that people may not go for the big purchases such as new cars, new homes, furniture or appliances, but most appear to be planning for a big vacation.

A free booklet on student job assistance may be obtained by sending a self-addressed stamped envelope to Opportunity Research, Dept. SJO, 55 Flathead Dr., Kalispell, MT 59901. Student job seekers are urged to apply early!

VERMONT CYNIC

Founded In 1883

Editor-in-Chief ..... Randy Jensen '77
Assistant Editor ..... Wyatt Kash '77
Managing Editor ..... Mark S. Fidle '76
News Editor ..... Lesley Stimmel '77
Assistant News Editor ..... Mark Breyer '77
Features Editor ..... Stephen W. Towner '76
Arts Editor ..... Robert DeMike '77
Sports Editor ..... Norm Robinson '77
Copy Editor ..... Sari Bodi '77
Advertising Manager ..... Debbie Powell '76

Editorial

Deserved Recognition

The Inter-Residence Association is to be commended for its recently requesting SAGA Food Service to buy lettuce picked by United Farm Workers instead of regular or "iceberg" lettuce. In turn, SAGA deserves equal congratulations for its policy of responding to that mandate from the majority of the people it serves. This action is not only a clear example of democratic initiative at UVM, but represents an endorsement of that belief for the United Farm Workers who are striving for democratic union representation now.

The lettuce pickers officially went on strike in 1970. After voicing their desire to organize and have union representation elections, the farmworkers were turned a deaf ear by the growers who called in the Western Conference of the Teamsters to negotiate contracts for Farm Workers. The United Farm Workers renounced these so-called "sweet-heart contracts" signed by the Teamsters in their behalf and walked off the fields. However, the Farm Workers are caught in a bind because if they stay off their jobs, in protest, growers simply hire scab workers to pick their lettuce. Thus the Farm Workers, in need of income, are forced to work under the Teamster contracts which violate their right to democratic union representation.

SAGA is now buying its lettuce from the Inter-Harvest Lettuce Growers, the only lettuce company to have signed a UFW contract. Though this UFW lettuce is sometimes more difficult to obtain (forcing SAGA to ration it or substitute for it), the sacrifice involved seems minute measured against the sacrifices Farm Workers have suffered for years in Kern County, California. The fact that the death rate from occupational accidents for Farm Workers is three times the national average is significant evidence of that sacrifice as well as the beatings and even the murder the Farm Workers have suffered while trying to demonstrate for UFW union representation.

Student initiative these days seems hard to come by and in this case I.R.A.'s is laudable. Recognition of the greater issue behind something as mundane as a salad should make us all a little more sensitive to the environment we inhabit.

S.W.T.

Letters To The Editor

Ticket Book Holders Screwed Again

To the Editor:

It has come to the attention of the Inter-Residence Halls Board (IRA) and the 4,000 students that it represents that at the moment, the hockey playoff tickets will not be going on sale until Monday, March 3, when most of the resident hall students who have ticket books will not be present on campus. Since ticket sales will be on a first-come, first-serve basis, we feel that the students once again are getting "screwed" as they did when the Harvard tickets went on sale during the Christmas recess.

Although the actual decision about home ice advantage won't be made by the E.C.A.C. selection committee until Saturday or Sunday, we feel that the reality of the decision could be known by the outcome of the Cornell vs. Boston University hockey game on Thursday. Also we have been informed that the tickets for the game should be available by Thursday evening.

Therefore, speaking for the resident student body, we kindly request that you review the situation carefully and that tickets go on sale Friday the 28.

If tickets should be put on sale Friday and we are not seated with home ice for the playoffs, the ticket money could easily be refunded. We feel this policy is the fairest policy to the UVM student who has supported the hockey team and athletic program all year by buying ticket books and paying an athletic fee.

Sincerely,
Kenneth Bartlett
IRA President

S.A. Revision/Revival

To the Editor:

Having read Dave Schwartz's suggestion on the revised S.A., I get a good feeling that the organization will start hopping again.

I find it a very sound proposal. It would eliminate the martyristically wasted time that senators often have to spend; listening to trivial squabbles of subjects that really don't concern or excite them.

The constituents would know that there is a very approachable, accountable small group of senators who would deal with their problem directly.

Also, under the new system, more people might consider running for senator. The needed range of knowledge on the varied subject matters can be trimmed down to a specialty subject area. I'm sure there are people who have fantastic, innovative thoughts about one subject, but would defer from joining and participating in the SA because they feel they aren't equipped to deal with the other matters.

Furthermore, some very intelligent people just can't get the tennis ball out of their throat when it comes to speaking in front of large gatherings of people. Schwartz's proposal would eliminate the problem.

Well, what about those senators who are really turned on to many of the subject areas? There must be an easy means for an inspired senator to participate in the various subjects, discussions and decisions. So, the committees should try not to meet on the same date.

I'd like to see Dave Schwartz's proposed SA revision/revival tried out for the remainder of this year, and through the first semester of the next school year. It's a good one.

Sincerely,
Louise Hinrichs
Beinecke, '78
P.O. Box 42 L/L Ctr.

Our Tragic Loss

To the Editor:

Last week a UVM student died in an automobile accident. I don't know the details of the accident, but they don't matter anyway. I do know that Lisa Rimmer was taken from us, and the sadness of this has been very great. Those who were her friends felt the tragedy deeply, and those of you who weren't so lucky to know her should feel a deep regret that she has died. Be assured that if you had known Lisa, you would have loved her as we did. She was that kind of person.

A student died in an automobile accident last week. Please keep this in mind as you head out for the long weekend. The loss of one life is already more than the University should have to bear.

Rob Howland

Behind The Tube

To the Editor:

We tremble in horror and fear at the thought of a police controlled state, yet we sit for hours in front of a T.V. watching Police Story, Adam-12, The Rookies, Kojack...

Protests are heard throughout the country when it comes to prying into private citizens lives, yet Mannix, Cannon, Rockford, and others solve complex and hidden mysteries to the delight of audiences around the United States.

Far out cosmological revelations of today's youth are frowned upon by many, yet Kung Fu is shown weekly.

Come on people, get it together.

Sincerely,
Edmund Lee

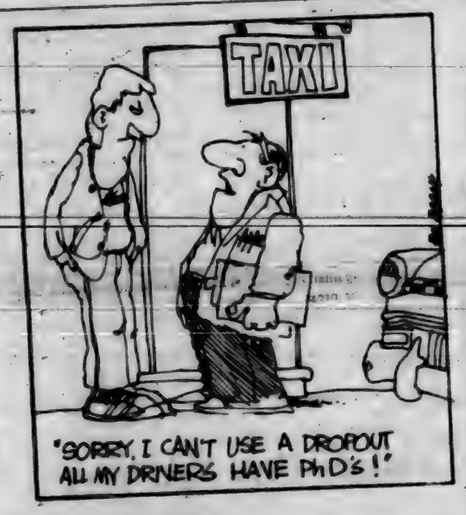
More Letters

Hustle To It, Security

To the Editor:

We are writing to voice our concern about UVM security. At 3:30 a.m., Friday, February 21, our suite and others were harrassed by two drunken males. Though the harrassment was minor, the response from security was also minor. We called security at about 3:50 and again at 4:20. A guard arrived at approximately 4:45. Not only was the delay incomprehensible, but the fact that we had to awaken an R.A. and meet the security guard in the Commons area brings to mind some frightening questions. If it had been a serious problem -- is this the kind of speedy response we could expect? Somehow, it seems that we would be safer living off-campus where a policeman could respond within a matter of a few minutes. We need a more effective security system on campus.

Shari Cantor
Sandra Provin
Marita Benavides
Marcia Maynard
Cathy Chandler
Lynn Lawler
Pamela Eschbach
Karen Bartelloni
Joanne Ferrara



Gay Student Union Replies To Ernest's First Gay Dance

To the Editor:

Rebuttal: In Response to Peter Campbell's article, "Attending His First Gay Dance."

Peter: We respect your attempts at writing a sympathetic article concerning the first Gay dance held on the UVM campus,... but are you in ernest, Ernest?

Do you really feel you treated the dance in a sympathetic manner? We feel your attitude throughout the entire article was most condescending, with very little true understanding of what was taking place. Your insensitive, plastic evaluation of people in general; be they male homosexuals, ("Ernest turned his attention back to the mostly-men sector of the room. Pretty normal. A few looked homeroom sissies and Fellini types, but only two men in drag, and they had none of the polished beauty that Ernest had seen in the queens who roamed the streets of Provincetown.") Vermonters,("...decent, gentle folk who raised their own vegetables and made pottery in their spare time...") or Lesbians, (... "They had an appearance that seemed clearly Lesbian, yet they spoke like women; in warm supple tones...") (..."It was gentle, tender and very positive, exactly the opposite of what Ernest had previously conceived as typical Lesbian behavior"...), we found to be most surprising, especially from a person who should, by now, have some grasp of sexual-political awareness. Your attempt at writing a positive, non-sexist, enlightened report was more detrimental than supportive; reinforces our popular estimations of the straight male mentality.

We would also, at this time wish to criticize your attempts at turning (what should have been more favorably) a concise report into a literary epic. We feel this is an indication of a sense of egoism reflecting itself throughout the entire article.

Your references to women, in general, labelling them as "girls", your previously discussed conception of the significance of Lesbian behavior, as well as your references to the women in your personal life, of being serviced by them, and of being bored by the individuals mentioned in the article.

Also, in regards to the personae-- we would like to inquire what relationships were evident between Ernest and Peter Campbell. Could there be a fear of identity with Gay people? Could hiding behind the personae of Ernest indicate a confusion in your own life? Or does this device remove you from the realities of public exposure?

The ignorance of Feminist politics which you display is frightening and we wish to bring to your attention the references made to a "chubby girl," who is, in fact, a beautiful, sensitive woman, whose figure bears no relevance to her innumerable qualities.

What we find most irritating was your expectance of entertainment at a Gay dance, resulting in indications throughout the article of your boredom, the insertion of your romantic fantasies as a somewhat confused gesture, the attempt of social redemption: the self-reassurance of your heterosexual identity, reacting with your curiosity concerning homosexual developments. We quote: "Yes, the Gay movement was a good thing. After the Vietnam War, and the general insanity of the Twentieth century, Ernest welcomed a society where penises would not so readily be forged into missles; where a more androgynous spirit would soften this unbearable paternalism, whose inflexibility was destroying this earth." As the first piece of good positive thinking expressed as a sensitive, Feminist-oriented statement in this article, we commended you, until you replied that your intentions were an attempt at irony.

As there is no sense of politics in the article (the word was used, but never clearly defined,) we would like to give a statement about the January 25 dance, politically, from an insider's perspective.

Between 125-150 people, both Gay and Straight attended the performance of Touchpoint and the following dance.

Unity Players held the attention of their audience with a series of dynamic theater games, problem-situation skits involving aspects of love in relationships, group-body sculpture, poetry, group choreography, and other exhilarating presentations. The only clearly defined identity which Unity Players reflected was that of Women, high-energy Women whose elevated sense of consciousness was most effective in the education of Feminist politics and non-sexist practices.

Peter, in his article, capitalizes upon the 'bad Vibes' types of homosexuals present at the dance. We feel it is important to stress the fact that they were in a very small minority, with a great majority of healthy men and women involved in a friendly, warm, communal good time. It was, in effect, much more than a party for Gay people, it was recognized as an organized social event where all Gay people, on campus and in the Burlington community could meet, discuss Gay events and dance together freely and comfortably. (Dancing is not permitted in public establishments with two male partners, one of the many prevalent indications of the reality of Gay oppression which still exists today.)

A dance of this nature is important to Gays as it provides a necessary service in fostering a sense of Gay community and culture.

Several months ago, the proposal of a Gay dance at Southwick was suggested as an ideal fantasy, as it was feared UVM was not ready for such an event. Ready or not, the dance did take place on one of the straightest campuses in New England, because of the need felt by the brothers and sisters in the area, and we are grateful for the tolerant acceptance of our community on campus, (unlike the unfavorable incidents that occurred at UNH.)

Looking into the future, another dance at Southwick is being planned for Saturday March 8, beginning at 9:00 p.m. Refreshments are free and attempts at relighting and decorating Southwick are being considered in hopes of creating a more disco-like atmosphere.

Also, a Gay Community switchboard is being installed, for both Gay men's and women's purposes, at the UVM GSU. Planned as a resource center, it will attempt to service the Gay community with counseling and referral facilities.

Plans are being discussed for a Gay Pride weekend, April 25-27, featuring Massachusetts State Representative Elaine Noble, a noted woman who was elected to the Massachusetts State Legislature, incorporating her Lesbianism as a part of her platform.

Also a major film discussing aspects of Homosexuality, various workshops and a dance at Southwick will be among various programs planned.

Anyone interested in joining steering committees, and working on the various programs are urged to contact 862-3955 for further information.

Peter, we're quite sure you know by now who we are.

Respectfully
K.S., J.S.
Members UVM GSU.

Thoughts & Reflections

by Ken Markowitz

The majesty of the Monarch certainly has withered over the past two centuries. Palmina Lapins, once the crown princess of Lithuania is presently working as a sandwich server in the Princeton University Center. She must make a fine tuna on white, onions and just light on the mayonnaise.

Speaking of royalty, Queen Elizabeth recently had the nerve to request a million dollar raise in her expenditure budget. Prime Minister Harold Wilson, who recommended the passage of this proposal, was justifiably met with jeers by the parliament.

Had the pleasure of meeting a princess once. Her Indian name was Princess Evening Star and she is hereditary leader of what remains of the Mashpee Indians on Cape Cod.

The ten cent stamp is expected to be increased to twelve or thirteen cents by the end of this year. At this rapid rate of increase, a twenty-five cent stamp is not unforeseable in the future. Letter writing as a primary medium of communication may be on the decline.

Mike Andrews, formerly a second baseman for the Boston Red Sox and later for the Oakland A's, is reportedly going to play for the Kinetsu Braves of Japan. Glorious were those dog days of summer when we used to sit in the sun-tanned bleachers of Ol' Fenway Park and roar Mike Andrews and the rest of the Cardiac Kids of '67 on to the pennant. Mike was a hard hitting rookie then up from Pittfield along with Reggie Smith, Jim Lonborg, and a little known manager named Dick Williams. Compared to tackling a pillbox in a wartime foray or even accomplishing the feats of everyday life, the toy world of sports is very miniscule. Yet for one season, a city and its environs which had not won for twenty-two years and had not felt together for longer than that put itself behind a hundred to one shot: a team that had finished ninth the year before, had one ace pitcher, a couple of veteran outfielders, a bunch of untested rookies and a new manager. Lots of little people won that year and loved every minute of it. From those that remember: Good luck Mike!

St. Valentine's Day has come and gone but here's an interesting letter which popped up: "Baby: You make my heart throb--and my ear ring, my shower stall, my sun shine, my door jamb, my drum roll, my kitchen sink, my birch bark, my ginger snap, my eaves drop, my barn dance, my chess ring, my sweet tooter -- and you're nice to be around. Happy Valentine's Day! Love,Joyce,"--Little Moggy"

A stick of gum in your pocket will become brittle in the cold weather.

Willie Mosconi, sixteen time world pool champion, holds the record for five hundred thirty-six consecutive shots. That's a lot of racks!

On a recent television special he recreated all the famous Jackie Gleason "The Hustler" pool shots as well as adding a few shots of his own. One of the shots featured was his famous five cushion shot in which the cue ball, originally blocked out by an opponent's ball, had to strike five cushions before precisely cutting its intended target and gently nudging it into the pocket. This shot won a world's championship and it was performed just after Mosconi had been told that he had become a father. Pressure shooting!

Saying for the week: "If a human life is a great thing to me, it is a great thing. Do you know better? I'm entitled as much as you. And why be measly? Do you have to be? Is somebody holding you by the neck? Have dignity, you understand me? Choose dignity." --Schlossberg in The Victim by Saul Bellow.

VPIRG: Capital Watch

Car Registration Bill H.168

by Peter Cobb, VPIRG Staff

Few people doubt that we face a serious petroleum crisis in this country. Gasoline, like sugar, is becoming a luxury item. Still most of our automobiles are oversized and overpowered. Billions of gallons of gasoline could be saved each year if the 100 million automobiles in the U.S. did not get such poor gas mileage. According to EPA tests, 1974 model cars averaged only 11.5 miles per gallon in city and suburban driving.

This session the Vermont Lawmakers are debating a bill that would help discourage the continued use of the Big "gas hoggers." The bill, H.168, would change the present flat registration fee ($32) for passenger cars in Vermont to a sliding fee based on the weight of the car. Automobiles would be divided into five weight classes with fees ranging from $20 to $60.

Excessive weight is the single most important reason for low gas mileage. A 2,500 pound Vega or Pinto usually gets over 25 miles per gallon.

If passed H. 168 would exempt any car over 4 years old from paying higher than the present $32 fee. This exemption protects low-income Vermonters who may purchase inexpensive, but large used cars.

Obviously H.168 is not the complete answer to the energy problem. Undoubtably our completely auto-oriented society must change so that the car will not continue to gobble up thousands of acres of land for roads, and pour millions of tons of deadly gases into the air.

Presently half of the registered cars in the world are in the United States. It is very unlikely that our dependence on the car is going to drastically change in the next ten or fifteen years. Passage of laws similar to H.168 throughout the country can prevent much needless waste of gasoline and encourage energy conservation.

The bill is in the House Transportation Committee whose chairman is John Zampieri (D-Rygate).

Statement Of Supp

by Peter MacAusland
President, UVM Student Associa
Assisted by Scott Bauer

EARLY DEVELOPMENT OF UNDERPASS

The pedestrian underpass originated as a to the pedestrian-auto conflict in early 197 that year, a summary report released by the Burlington Planning Commission identifie solutions. Two of them, an overpass and an underground shopping mall, had been firmly 1972. The remaining two solutions identif underpass and a series of on-grade crossing oriented traffic control systems. On Febru Board of Trustees of the University reco planning commission that there be on crossings with pedestrian-actuated lights. O the Burlington Planning Commission to pedestrian-auto conflict. Excerpts from 3/17/72:

The commission reviewed the progr pedestrian traffic and conflict at the which the design of above and be separations were discussed. After rev the Design Review Committee's reco design criteria for pedestrian separat action was taken: upon a motion mad and seconded by Mr. Aswad the Planning Commission adopt the cri the Design Review Board for the Pe University and Main Street as crite design review of all pedestria unanimously. Criteria attached.

After further review of the Unt motion was made by Mr. Ritchie a Montague that the Commission acc signal but not remove the requi crossing separation at this time as condition to construction of the Center."

There was no indication of vote on this mo

The Design Review Board covered fou pedestrian crossings: (1) general criteria, (3) on-grade criteria, and (4) below grade

Just two weeks later on March 30, commission adopted the following resol the minutes of that meeting:

WHEREAS, the Burlington P recognizes the overall problem fo and the crossing of pedestrians Prospect to the City lines, and overall affirmative solution movements, and

WHEREAS, the Planning Comm partial pedestrial crossing solu inclusion of pedestrian act coordinated with the overall traffic NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT R Burlington Planning Commission University of Vermont said pedes satisfy our request concerned wi the Living and Learning Cente stipulation: that the University o along with the Burlington

Win One For Th

by Knut Rosted

Amidst the overabundance of lese splashing the headlines and dominati editors thoughts, two very real phenom are curiously if not directly related. amount of emotionally filled and politicians and editors alike is the complete disenchantment and total di and those who attempt to run it. Alm widespread theme in volume are the within the Democratic party concerni viable candidate to "unite" the party House in 1976.

Armed with ammunition such as deteriorating economy, and unproductive stalemate between the the very small segment of the popula express themselves have verbalized a sentiments. They are deeply concerne of problems facing us today ranging fr to continuing pollution, a rising crim shortages, the instability of detent system and the newly acquired po They desperately seek government convinced that present leaders are i ever present and unproductive monst tries to inflict its will. But, it's not general feeling of helplessness persis continually unsuccessful search to fi in our massive political machine to b

Related to this sentiment is th Democratic marathon to select a White House. The mass media depic all the encompassing factors raises t of rationale still left in the politic "viable mentionables" (or those supreme authority as "possible") (with Connecticut Governor Ella Gr as a reasonable V.P. choice.) Their experience in government to at leas and background covers former astr The list includes 13 senator approximately 20% of the total nu those offices,) two former senat senator, and one university presid still the favorite to rescue the fractions is also the man who, a Poll, is found by 46% of those trusted (while 44% believe in h 59-35 per cent believed "he has of his name." The man leading the with 19% of those polled favorin man whom 29% of the sampling fa entry in the official race was sugg article to be a suitable candidate short, who might unify the party b not."

The situation, though, may no accersed by a casual observer. (to b

VERMONT CYNIC

NEWS: Margo Howland, Andy Morse, Mary Gilbertson.
FEATURE: Paul Ajemian, Paul Cain, Carol Dufault, Mike Henry, Pam Hogarth, Andy Hunt, Sue Perkins.
ARTS: Dave Mandel, Larry Selden, Mark Sensiniak, Jay Williams.
COLUMNISTS: Peter Cobb, Elliot Freeman, Ken Markovitz, Sue Perkins, Stephen Rice, Larry Selden, Scott Skinner, Peter Campbell.
SPORTS: Randy Briggs, Gary Brooks, Rick Katz, Don Rose, Richard Rottkov.
PRODUCTION: Rick Barney, Elly Clay, Sarah Clay, Beth Cohen, John Lunde, Barb Turdigs.
ADVERTISING: Katherine Bowers, Stephen Lee Brown, Sherry Graceey, Debbie Powell.
BUSINESS MANAGER: Nancy Thank.

Opinions expressed in editorials, cartoons, or columns in the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the University administration, faculty, or staff, or the State of Vermont. Opinions expressed by the columnists do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the majority of the members of the CYNIC Editorial Board.

Published yearly during the college year by the students of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College. Editorial and Business offices in the Billings Center, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone: 658-4911. Deadline for notices is one week prior to date of publication.

Founded in 1883. Subscription rate: $2.00 per year, single copy ten cents.

The Cynic welcomes and encourages articles, columns, and letters from all interested students, faculty, and members of the community. All material must be submitted no later than Monday noon before the Thursday of publication. Material must be signed, names will be withheld upon request. If you are interested in writing or perhaps curious about how things are done, stop in -- we are downstairs at Billings Center -- or call 658-4911.

ters

e Editor

Revision/Revival

d Dave on the t a good rganization
ain.
ery found eliminate asted time have to
to trivial jects that n or excite

nts would is a very ccountable nators who ur problem

new system, ht consider nator. The owledge on matters canwn to a ea. I'm sure who have e thoughts but would lining and SA because they feel they aren't equipped to deal with the other matters.

Furthermore, some very intelligent people just can't get the tennis ball out of their throat when it comes to speaking in front of large gatherings of people. Schwartz's proposal would eliminate the problem.

Well, what about those senators who are really turned on to many of the subject areas? There must be an easy means for an inspired senator to participate in the various subjects, discussions and decisions. So, the committees should try not to meet on the same date.

I'd like to see Dave Schwartz's proposed SA revision/revival tried out for the remainder of this year, and through the first semester of the next school year. It's a good one.

Sincerely,
Louise Hinrichs
Beinecke, '78
P.O. Box 42 L/L Ctr.

Behind The Tube

horror and of a police et we sit for
of a T.V. ice Story,
Rookies,

rs heard ountry when into private yet Mannix,
, and others

s First Gay Dance

unity could y events and freely and ncing is not n public
h two male the many ions of the oppression oday.)
his gesture is Gaye as it ary service in ase of Gay
uture.
hs ago, the ay dance at ggested as an
it was feared ady for such or not, the lace on one of campuses in ecause of the brothers and a, and we are the tolerant ur community (unlike the incidents that
.)
o the future,
t Southwick is for Saturday nning at 9:00
nts are free and relighting and hwick are being considered in hopes of creating a more disco-like atmosphere.

Also, a Gay Community switchboard is being installed, for both Gay men's and women's purposes, at the UVM GSU. Planned as a resource center, it will attempt to service the Gay community with counseling and referral facilities.

Plans are being discussed for a Gay Pride weekend, April 25-27, featuring Massachusetts State Representative Elaine Noble, a noted woman who was elected to the Massachusetts State Legislature, incorporating her Lesbianism as a part of her platform.

Also a major film discussing aspects of Homosexuality, various workshops and a dance at Southwick will be among various programs planned.

Anyone interested in joining steering committees, and working on the various programs are urged to contact 862-3955 for further information.

Peter, we're quite sure you know by now who we are.

Respectfully
K.S., J.S.
Members UVM GSU.

welcomes and encourages articles, columns, and all interested students, faculty, and members of ity. All material must be submitted no later than n before the Thursday of publication. Material ed, names will be withheld upon request. If you d in writing or perhaps curious about how things p in — we are downstairs at Billings Center — or l.

RMONT CYNIC

o Howland, Andy Gilbertson.
Paul Ajamian,
sel Default, Mike
Hogarth, Andy
ckins.
e Mandel, Larry
t Sendzick, Jay

TS: Peter Cobb, reeman, Ken
, Sue Perkins,
n, Larry Seldin,
, Peter Campbell.

SPORTS: Randy Briggs, Gary Brooks, Rick Katz, Don Rose, Richard Rottkov.
PRODUCTION: Rick Barney, Elly Clay, Sarah Clay, Beth Cohen, John Lunde, Barb Tarshis.

ADVERTISING: Katherine Bowers, Stephen Lee Brown, Sherry Grancey, Debbie Powell.
BUSINESS MANAGER: Nancy Shenk.

...opinion or editorials, cartoons, or ...in the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the ...of the University administration, faculty, or ...of the State of Vermont. Opinions expressed by ...boards do not necessarily reflect the opinion ...majority of the members of the CYNIC ...ard.

...ished yearly during the college year by the ...ts of the University of Vermont and State ...ural College. Editorial and Business offices in ...ings Center, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone: ...011. Deadline for notices is one week prior to ...of publication.

...nded in 1882. Subscription rate $8.00 per ...single copy ten cents.

Statement OF Support For Bill S.93-
The UVM Pedestrian Underpass

by Peter MacAusland
President, UVM Student Association
Assisted by Scott Bauer

EARLY DEVELOPMENT OF UNDERPASS

The pedestrian underpass originated as a possible solution to the pedestrian-auto conflict in early 1972. In February of that year, a summary report released by the University and the Burlington Planning Commission identified four possible solutions. Two of them, an overpass and an underpass with an underground shopping mall, had been firmly discarded later in 1972. The remaining two solutions identified were a simple underpass and a series of on-grade crossings with pedestrian oriented traffic control systems. On February 18, 1972, the Board of Trustees of the University recommended to the planning commission that there be on-grade pedestrian crossings with pedestrian-actuated lights. On March 17, 1972, the Burlington Planning Commission took action on the pedestrian-auto conflict. Excerpts from the Minutes of 3/17/72:

> The commission reviewed the progress on solving the pedestrian traffic and conflict at the university during which the design of above and below ground grade separations were discussed. After reviewing the designs, the Design Review Committee's recommendations on a design criteria for pedestrian separations, the following action was taken: upon a motion made by Mr. Montague and seconded by Mr. Aswad that the Burlington Planning Commission adopt the criteria developed by the Design Review Board for the Pedestrian crossing – University and Main Street as criteria to be used for design review of all pedestrian crossings, voted unanimously. Criteria attached.
>
> After further review of the University's request, a motion was made by Mr. Ritchie and seconded by Mr. Montague that the Commission accept the pedestrian signal but not remove the requirements for grade crossing separation at this time as a requirement as a condition to construction of the Living and Learning Center."

There was no indication of vote on this motion in minutes.

The Design Review Board covered four areas of criteria for pedestrian crossings: (1) general criteria, (2) overhead criteria, (3) on-grade criteria, and (4) below grade criteria.

Just two weeks later on March 30, 1972, the planning commission adopted the following resolution as taken from the minutes of that meeting:

> WHEREAS, the Burlington Planning Commission recognizes the overall problem for the moving of traffic and the crossing of pedestrians on Main Street from Prospect to the City lines, and wishes to attempt an overall affirmative solution to these conflicting movements, and
> WHEREAS, the Planning Commission recognizes a partial pedestrial crossing solution would be the inclusion of pedestrian actuated light system coordinated with the overall traffic movement,
> NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, that the Burlington Planning Commission agrees to allow the University of Vermont said pedestrian actuated lights to satisfy our request concerned with the construction of the Living and Learning Center, with the following stipulation: that the University of Vermont be charged, along with the Burlington Planning Commission, to a commitment to continue with a final solution to the Main Street traffic and pedestrian conflict."

This resolution does not require grade-separation as a stipulation to the construction of the Living/Learning Center and even states that a "partial pedestrial crossing solution would be the inclusion of pedestrian actuated light system coordinated with the overall traffic movement." During these two meetings the action taken by the commission concerning the pedestrian crossings is conflicting.

On April 17, 1972, the District Environmental Commission issued land-use permit for the Living/Learning Center. Condition No. 5 of that permit required two pedestrian crossings, one which must be an underpass. This condition also stated "the two pedestrian crossings must be in operation before the expiration of the permit." The permit expired July 1, 1974, yet no amendment was made to that stipulation. In a recent talk with Mr. Kirk Carter of the District Environmental Commission, he said he doubted that the Living/Learning Center would be closed if the underpass is not built.

When the underpass was made a requirement in this permit in April 1972, some considerations may have been overlooked. The financing of this project was not studied in depth back then. The jughandle, a nearby major intersection, which has created physical changes in the road design, had not yet been finished. The vehicular and pedestrian flows also have changed since April 1972 due to the jughandle's completion. The University's up-to-date vehicular and pedestrian traffic survey had not yet even started. Why stipulate a project if criteria necessary to judge the value and need of that project had not yet been explored in depth?

THE PUBLIC OPINION FACTOR

Many people from Chittenden County have voiced their concern about the underpass. Since these people's taxes are helping finance the proposed underpass, it is essential that they are heard. A majority of letters to the editor appearing in the local newspaper, the Burlington Free Press, have opposed the underpass. Last spring over 1600 people, the majority being students, called for a re-evaluation of the project and the UVM Student Association passed a resolution calling for re-evaluation.

UVM students, who would be the major users of the underpass, have voiced strong opposition to the project. The major reason given is that the underpass is not necessary, since safe crossings of Main Street do exist. In a recent three-day period, close to 1,000 students signed the following petition:

> "We, the undersigned, are opposed to the construction of the pedestrian underpass at Main Street. We believe the underpass may not be the best solution. We further believe that the money allocated (about one half million dollars) could be better utilized within the State of Vermont in times of financial deficit. We, therefore, support the bill S.93 in the Vermont Legislature."

Only a few students refused to sign these petitions, showing that a clear majority of students are in opposition to the underpass.

Five of the six state senators from Chittenden County have co-sponsored the bill S.93. It would be evident that the people

(continued on page ten)

Win One For The Gipper

by Knut Rosted

Amidst the overabundance of less than appealing news splashing the headlines and dominating the columnists and editors thoughts, two very real phenomena have surfaced that are curiously if not directly related. Reflected in a record amount of emotionally filled and imperative letters to politicians and editors alike is the persistent feeling of complete disenchantment and total disrespect for government and those who attempt to run it. Almost proportional to this widespread theme in volume are the absurdities transpiring within the Democratic party concerning their effort to find a viable candidate to "unite" the party and capture the White House in 1976.

Armed with ammunition such as Watergate memories, the deteriorating economy, and the plainly visible and unproductive stalemate between the President and Congress, the very small segment of the population that have chosen to express themselves have verbalized a wide range of negative sentiments. They are deeply concerned about the entire array of problems facing us today ranging from our economic puzzle to continuing pollution, a rising crime rate, persistent energy shortages, the instability of detente, the bankrupt welfare system and the newly acquired power of the Arab nations. They desperately seek government action but are also convinced that present leaders are impotent. They resent the ever present and unproductive monstrosity which continually tries to inflict its will. But, it's not working. Subsequently, a general feeling of helplessness persists, and grows with their continually unsuccessful search to find something or someone in our massive political machine to believe in.

Related to this sentiment is the increasingly publicized Democratic marathon to select a "leader" to reside in the White House. The mass media depiction of the candidates and all the encompassing factors raises the question of the degree of rationale still left in the political arena. The number of "viable mentionables" (or those acknowledged by some supreme authority as "possible") numbers at least 25 men (with Connecticut Governor Ella Grasso sporadically suggested as a reasonable V.P. choice.) Their expertise range from little experience in government to at least 32 years of public service and background covers former astronaut to former alcoholic. The list includes 13 senators and 7 governors (or approximately 20% of the total number of Democrats holding those offices,) two former senators, a congressman, state senator, and one university president. The man undoubtedly still the favorite to rescue the party from its destructive fractions is also the man who, according to a recent Harris Poll, is found by 46% of those questioned not to be fully trusted (while 44% believe in his integrity.) and another 59-35 per cent believed "he has gone as far as he has because of his name." The man leading the Gallup Polls last November with 19% of those polled favoring his candidacy is also the man whom 29% of the sampling found unacceptable. A recent entry in the official race was suggested in a New York Times article to be a suitable candidate because he is "a man, in short, who might unify the party because of all the things he is not."

The situation, though, may not be as nonsensical as first assessed by a casual observer. (to be continued)

Flapping in the Breeze...
Three Sheets To The Wind

by Elliot Freeman

From the diary of Kleros Bell
Miami Beach, Florida
Feb 5, 1975

Yesterday afternoon on my way back from the shuffleboard courts, I stopped in the lobby to see if I had gotten any mail. The desk clerk smiled and handed me two envelopes. I smiled and said thank you. He smiled and bid me a good afternoon. I smiled and walked away.

Once in my room I opened one of the two letters. It was an official invitation requesting my presence at the gala grand opening of Lady Gre Cee Theye's Massage Palor.

The second letter was from Elliot. He said that I had reached the end of my vacation in Miami and that at two o'clock this afternoon I should meet a young man named Barry Montpelier in front of the hotel. He assured me that Kitty and the kids would be well taken care of. He asked me to trust him. I walked over to the nightable and got a cigarette. I lit the cigarette and sat on the bed smoking.

****

I woke up at noon today and laid in bed for about an hour. I suppose I was thinking, but not thinking about anything in particular. There was a nice cool breeze blowing in the window and I could see that the sky was blue and sunny. I felt miserable.

Kitty was asleep next to me. Half of her face was snuggled up against a pillow and her mouth hung slightly opened. I admired her sleepy beauty for awhile then leaned over and gave her a kiss. She opened her eyes and smiled, then closed her eyes and slept.

I got out of bed and slipped on the pants of my seersucker suit and noticed that the cuffs were at least two inches above my ankles. I went into the bathroom. I pissed. I brushed my teeth. I noticed that my eyes had changed color from green to brown and that my nose had gotten considerably smaller. I went out of the bathroom and put on my sneakers and a purple tee-shirt, both fit a little too snug for my liking. Yes, my vacation in Miami was quickly coming to a close. I grabbed my wallet and cigarettes off of the night table and left the room.

I stood outside the door for a few minutes. The hallway was quiet except for the squeak in the wheels of a cart that a cleaning woman was pushing along. I walked to the elevator and as soon as I pressed the down button the doors opened.

A little kid who was inside the elevator standing with his face inches away from the buttons said sssshhhhhuuuummmmm-bop. I walked in. He didn't turn to look at me, just asked what floor I wanted. I said the lobby. He pushed the button. I said thank you. He said it was part of his job. He had a brand new perfectly white sailor's cap on his head and was wearing white shorts and a white short sleaved shirt that had a string tied around the collar. On his feet were a pair of white buck shoes that looked much too big. When we were in the five floor range of the lobby he started to make a sssshhhhhuuuummmmm noise. As the elevator slowed to a stop he raised the pitch slightly higher... sssshhhhhuuuummmmm. When the doors opened and the lobby was in sight he said bop. Ssssshhhhhuuuummmmm-bop!

I thanked him and walked into the lobby. It was crowded and noisey. People checking in. People checking out. Bell boys hustling luggage. I walked to the center of the room, stood up on a coffee table and said the following:

A simple twist of fate... all it takes is a letter. Or maybe a phone call or a telegram. Sometimes just a facial expression. Like that (I snapped my fingers) your life is changed. Nothing lasts forever. I received a letter yesterday afternoon and overnight I grew two inches, my eyes turned color and my nose shrunk. No more very charming and beautiful wife. No more three lovely children. No more shuffleboard. No more Miami. I don't want to leave my friends, but when someone is not as they should be what can they expect but saddness? They sacrifice innocence, ignoring the guidance of their heart and without that instinctive sureness they are bound to wander throughout the festival of life players without parts. They roam that empty theater stumbling in the dark. They mumble a chorus of who am I?...Why am I here?...What am I supposed to do?

It is time for me to go. If I were to stay I would rob my existance of any surprises. The unexpected and unintentional delights that have brought me such happiness would surely become predictable and boring rituals. Yes (I put my hand over my heart) it is time for me to leave.

No one heard a word I said. It was a solliloquy. The hotel manager came over and asked if I would please get down off the coffee table. I got down.

Ssssshhhhuuuummmm-bop! The elevator doors opened and I could see a middle-aged lady inside talking with the little elevator operator. I moved closer and heard her tell him to go outside and enjoy the sunshine. He said that he wanted to stay in the elevator... that it was his job. She took a step outside the elevator and stood there saying to him come on young man it is time to go. The elevator doors closed before she could say another word.

I had a half hour to kill before I was supposed to meet Barry Montpelier in front of the hotel so I wandered into the coffee shop. There was an empty table by a window, I sat there. The waitress brought me a glass of water and I ordered coffee and an english muffin with peanut butter. I lit a cigarette and saw the middle-aged lady sitting at a table across the room with three other people. One of the three I figured to be her husband. The other two were Doctor Phobious Nelson, the psychiatrist, and his wife. I could hear the doctor explaining to the middle-aged lady exactly why it was her son refused to leave the elevator. He said that the elevator was a moveable womb and gave the child a sense of security that all children crave. Also it indicated that the boy had the potential of becoming a great world leader since his monopolizations of the buttons demonstrated his great thirst for power. And on and on.

The waitress brought me my order. I took a last drag on my cigarette, squashed it out in the ashtray and then ate. By ten minutes of two I had ordered a second cup of coffee and lit up another cigarette. When I had finished my second cup of coffee and lit up yet another cigarette it was ten minutes past two and a young man named Barry Montpelier was sitting across the table from me. He had gotten tired of waiting outside and was anxious as hell to get into the story. He seemed like a nice fellow.

"Have you ever met Elliot?" I asked.

"No. I spoke with him long-distance a couple of times."

"What did you think?"

"It's hard to make a judgement...only a couple of phone conversations. He said that even though I had gone to college and received a degree it didn't necessarily mean I was a moron and that he would give me a chance. He mumbled alot and talked in circles, at times I had trouble understanding what he was trying to tell me."

"He must talk on the phone like he writes the letters he sends me."

"You mean you have never talked to him?"

"What the hell for? No. We communicate through the mails."

"How long have you been a character?" Barry asked.

"My mother used to tell me that I was a character from the day I was born...but I have done it professionally for almost...it must be close to two years."

"And you have never spoken to Elliot?"

"No. No reason to. He does his job...I do mine. Or at least we try. Hey, is this your first story?"

"Yes," Barry kind of shrugged his shoulders. "I suppose I'm a little nervous. You see I graduated from college three years ago, with a degree in English...I hated college. The whole time I was there I was miserable. I was always wishing that I was somewhere else."

"Everybody feels that way no matter where they are." I said, although I wish I hadn't, it was bullshit.

"That's bullshit," said Barry perceptively. "School was bullshit. Everybody knew it."

"So why didn't you leave?"

"For the same reason that nobody else did...FEAR. I was afraid that I wouldn't be able to get a job. I was afraid that I would be an outcast. But most of all I was afraid of myself. If you ever want to hide go to a college...it is difficult to find anybody there. So I stayed and finished. I took my diploma and couldn't get a job. I took my diploma and became an outcast. Finally, I took my diploma and burnt it."

"And you're not afraid anymore?"

"Well...I don't fear myself anymore...but I am more afraid than ever. Most everywhere I look I see people trying to make me fear myself and it scares the shit out of me."

It seemed the kid had a valid point. What could I say?

"You want anything to eat?" I said.

"No thanks, I ate already. You know its bad that we have to leave Miami today."

"I know."

"Because I got an invitation in the mail yesterday to the gala grand opening of Lady Gre Cee Theye's Massage Palor."

"So did I. Things like that rub me the wrong way."

Barry Montpelier laughed. I liked him. I'd like practically anyone who laughed at my jokes.

"How did you become a character." I asked.

"I was working in a pizza joint over in Tampa... one night I answered the phone...it was Elliot. He ordered a small plain pizza with extra cheese and then asked me if I wanted to see the world and meet many interesting people...I said hell yes and here I am."

"A simple twist of fate," I said.

Barry Montpelier didn't hear me. It was another solliloquy. We decided it was time to move on, so I paid the bill and we left the coffee shop. As we walked across the lobby the elevator doors opened. Ssssshhhhuuuummmm-bop! I waved to the little kid, he smiled and tipped his brand new perfectly white sailor's cap. I told Barry that that kid was going to be a president one day. He said bullshit. Outside I asked Barry if he knew where we were headed. No. We got in his car and went.

****

Editor's Note: You might have noticed that this installment of Three Sheets To The Wind is a week late... such is life. Join us two weeks from today when (hopefully) you might hear Argus, the hitchhiker, inquire of Kleros Bell about whose New York Times he is sitting on... and Kleros Bell might reply, "That's Barry Montpelier's Times, Argus."

Watergate Cultism Hits The Campus

by John Ghrist

(CPS) — Watergate is a big-seller on college and university campuses this spring, as two major figures in Richard Nixon's White House are raking in several thousand dollars per campus appearance.

John Dean, former counsel to the President whose testimony blew the cover off White House involvement with Watergate, and Ronald Ziegler, former press secretary whose utterances led many to believe there was no involvement, will be travelling around the country telling college audiences how power was abused by high officials.

Dean's tour began February 2 at the University of Virginia, which paid $4000 to be the first stop. The event was heavily covered by broadcast media and preceded by complaints from many who felt that Dean had turned the tables on ethics by making a fortune from his past illegal activities.

According to Dean's agent, Robert Walker of the American Program Bureau, such talk almost convinced Dean to give up the tour before it started. By and large, however, Dean found his audiences willing to pay to hear what he had to say — without complaint.

In general, Dean has been warmly received by record-breaking crowds. He will visit more than 50 campuses across the country between now and March 15, for which he will receive more than $100,000, all of it going to pay legal debts and other obligations accumulated over the last two years. Until the start of the tour, Dean had been unemployed after leaving the White House.

There have been some protests against Dean, however, primarily because of his high fees: $3000 or more plus expenses for each one-hour talk, according to Walker.

At the University of Maryland, the student government reported that calls against paying Dean ran 11-1 after an announcement that he would speak. This reaction plus some interorganizational disputes caused the student government to freeze the funds of the group arranging campus speaker appearances.

The University of Montana saw a similar confrontation between student government and speaker bureau. After the Program Council announced Dean would appear, the UM Central Board voted to forbid payment to Dean. Program Council head Dave Snyder insisted the Board had no veto power over speakers, and after a week of confrontation the Central Board rescinded its order.

Over in the Ziegler camp, there is less candor. Unlike Walker, agent William Leigh of the Colston-Leigh Agency refused to give details of the number of colleges Ziegler would visit, his fees, or the dates involved. According to other reports, however, Ziegler has been offered between $2000 and $2500 an appearance.

Ron Ziegler has also had his share of pre-appearance protests although Leigh said he was "not particularly" aware of protests against Ziegler. "The Boston incident was a little inflated by the press," he insisted.

In that confrontation, the Boston University speaker's group contracted to pay Ziegler $2500 but the money was withdrawn by the student government. Following local protests that BU was stifling free speech, BU President John Silber offered to pay Ziegler $1000 out of university funds, but Leigh turned down the offer as too low.

Nevertheless, Ziegler's proposed appearance has caused controversy elsewhere — even more so than Dean has.

The Michigan State University student government also withdrew financial support for Ziegler, but by charging admission and using up the rest of their budget, the MSU Lecture Concert Series said they could still foot the bill and Ziegler would speak. Student body president Tim Cain has called for mass picketing and a boycott of the speech.

The Wisconsin Student Association at the University of Wisconsin — Madison passed a resolution asking the UWM Lecture society to cancel Ziegler's appearance and plans to organize a picket line if they refuse.

"I feel it is wrong for anyone involved in Watergate to make a profit from criminal activity," argued one student who captured the essence of anti-Ziegler thought elsewhere. "This is the man who told us Watergate was a third-rate burglary. If he lied to us then, he's going to lie to us now."

The motion passed and the Lecture Society has attempted to cancel.

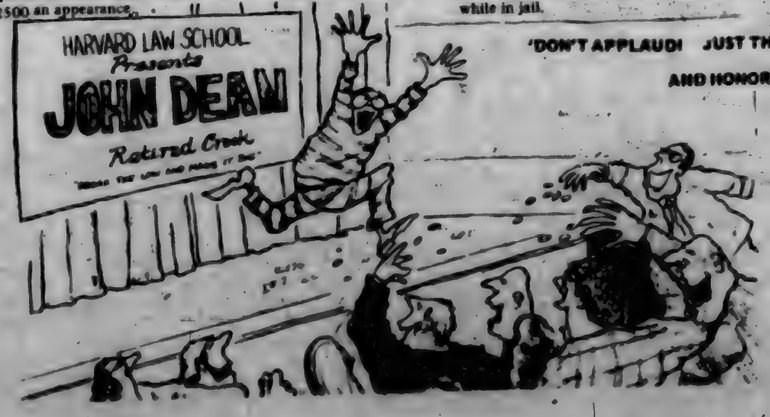
Other schools, such as Florida International University, opposed appearances by either Ziegler or Dean at first, but then agreed to allow the appearances in the interest of free speech.

Beside evoking controversy, the two Watergate tours share similar subject matter. Ziegler plans to speak on the use and abuse of power, according to his agent: in particular, he will discuss how power should be properly used.

Dean has been talking about his personal experiences, blaming the scandal on executive power gone berserk in an atmosphere of political surveillance.

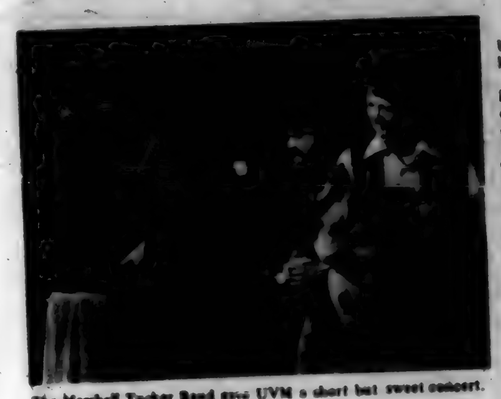
"When I first got to the White House I quickly learned that if you wanted to succeed, you had to have political tidbits," Dean commented to his Virginia audience. For example, within hours of the news of Sen. Ted Kennedy's accident at Chappaquiddick, the White House sent Anthony Ulasewicz to Massachusetts to conduct an investigation, he noted.

Dean has also revealed that after his tour is over and his memoirs are written, he plans to devote himself to prison reform as a result of the psychological effects he experienced while in jail.



ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Bonnie Cut Off By Bomb Scare; Tucker Band Leaves Early



The Marshall Tucker Band gave UVM a short but sweet concert.

by Bob DeNike and Paul Prior

Less than half of the UVM student population turned out Sunday night to see and hear the most professional rock concert Burlington has housed in years. As a result of the poorly attended concert, the SA Concert Bureau has seriously begun considering the worth and value of sponsoring further concerts.

At most, 3000 listeners attended the evening of modern Southern music, leaving each of the two-side bleacher sets half-filled. Where were the remaining students on this momentous occasion, when one of the most popular contemporary rock bands blessed Patrick Gym with their presence? Were you waiting for Stevie Wonder (at a price of $50,000) perhaps? If UVM students won't support gigs as big as Marshall Tucker, how can enough money ever be raised to afford equal or superior talent?

UVM concerts are in danger of extinction. Unless more students support these expensive events, they are most assuredly an "endangered species".

The entire concert consisted of less than two hours of music and when Marshall Tucker left the stage, never to return to an uproar of shouts for more, Patrick Gym emptied in an atmosphere of blatant disappointment.

"God made men and women and He made assholes too," one listener remarked. And one of the latter types phoned in a bomb threat at 9:30 p.m. that night which upset and destroyed any previously existing light-hearted ease. As a result, Bonnie Bramlett's opening act was cut in half and the Tucker boys refused to make up the lost half hour.

Bonnie's act ostensibly lacked talent from the moment of her appearance, so many didn't mind her leaving early. Her back-up band opened the concert more successfully without her, featuring a guitarist of Zappa or McLaughlin-like excellence. She entered for the second song and screamed her way through to the premature intermission.

"I've never seen a performer so drunk in my life," an audience member later commented. Staige Davis, SA Concerts' main man, confirmed that, "she was soused when she got here."

"I don't believe this shit," were the last garbled words we heard from Bonnie before the stifling, ominous figure of blonde Bill Root, Director of Student Activities, appeared before the mike and announced that a bomb reportedly had been planted in the Gym.

The audience was given the choice of remaining seated or leaving the building while police checked the premises. Only several hundred people ostensibly valued their lives more than their seats and processed outside. "I knew there was no bomb" was a common response, to which I could only arrive at the conclusion, "Well, then you must be the asshole who made the call."

"It's not surprising that few in the audience took the threat very seriously since SA itself didn't seem to take it seriously," a student noticed.

Patrick Gym remained in one piece and the audience outwardly seemed to dismiss any worry as quickly as it had been instilled. Yet, the apprehension, originally produced from those anxiously waiting for Marshall Tucker's performance, became a different type of nervousness following the incident: the feeling of being let down and ripped off, no matter how repressed and disguised, seated itself within many, a reaction that culminated with Marshall Tucker's quick departure.

"Short and sweet" were the terms one listener used to describe the Tucker act.

Bonnie Bramlett: her act was cut in half by a bomb scare

Those sitting close to the PA speakers nearly lost their hearing from the excessive volume and distortion of the bass guitar. On the other hand, those in the back row reported loss of both high and low note tones. Yet, when the band walked off the stage after 75 minutes of performance, the crowd was left thirsting for more. "We're home early even for a concert that starts at 8 o'clock," one listener told his friends sitting back in the dorm by 11:30 p.m.

Toy Caldwell's electric leads were unmistakably the highlights people came to see and hear. This guitarist is rivalled by few in the modern world of rock guitar professionals and only a select elite of these could have entertained and satisfied UVM students more that night.

Yet, has UVM o.d.'d on country rock? Though Caldwell's guitar kept everybody on the tips of their toes, did the band do anything surprising or revolutionary for country music (or music in general)? Have the New Riders, Souther, Hillman and Furay and Earl Scruggs demonstrated that country rock has gone as far as it can? Perhaps this unbalanced past program of country rock concerts accounts for the present sparse sales of tickets.

The flute has become recently a popular instrument among rock bands and its incorporation into rock music is partially a Marshall Tucker innovation. So why wasn't it emphasized more Sunday evening? Some rich saxophone tones came through sporadically, but like the flute, they were overshadowed by Toy Caldwell's virtuosity.

Many of those present pleaded for the band to play "Ramblin'", a song from the band's first album (the source of most of the performed numbers). The bass guitarist reported that the lead singer was plagued by laryngitis and could therefore not do as many of the songs as were wished for. This apology seemed an untimely and shoddy excuse and further disappointed the crowd.

Between numbers, the bassist very humbly thanked the audience for the enthusiastic response (we certainly do deserve a hand. The last time I heard a crowd cheer as loudly was at a Jethro Tull concert in Boston). "We shore appreciate you stayin' with us," Tommy Caldwell drawled.

I only wish we could have thanked him in return.

Jackson Browne Visits Soon

Jackson Browne, America's most subtle, sensitive and respected singer-songwriter, will appear Monday, March 17, 1975, with his very special guest Phoebe Snow at Burlington's Memorial Auditorium at 8:30 p.m. Both Browne and Ms. Snow will be backed by full bands for the Burlington engagement. Browne's band will include David Lindley on electric and slide guitar and fiddle; Jai Winding, piano and organ; Larry Zack, drums; Doug Haywood, bass and vocal harmony.

The concert is being produced by Windowpane Productions of Boston, Mass. and Burlington, Vt. Windowpane in the past has brought the New Riders, Jesse Colin Young, Maria Muldaur and the Sugarbush Folk Festival to Vermont.

Jackson Browne, dubbed "Manchild in the Promised Land" by Rolling Stone, is by far according to (to list a few) Rolling Stone, Stereo Review, New Times, People and Circus, "one of this year's top 10 artists".

Rolling Stone says of "Late for the Sky", Jackson Browne's third Asylum album, "is his most mature, conceptually unified work to date. Its overriding theme: the exploration of romantic possibility in the shadow of apocalypse. No contemporary male singer/songwriter has dealt so honestly and deeply with the vulnerability of romantic idealism and the pain of adjustment from youthful naricissism to adult survival as Browne has in this album."

This album is rated by Billboard Magazine the number 32 best seller of the month and continues to climb to the chart tops.

Jackson Browne was born in Heidelberg, Germany but was raised in Los Angeles from age three on. He is 26 years old. Early in his career his writing was put to song by the Byrds and Tom Rush. More recently his songs have been recorded by the Eagles, Bonnie Raitt, Gregg Allman, Kiki Dee, and Ian Matthews. He has toured with Bonnie Raitt, Eagles, Joni Mitchell and J.D. Souther of SHF Band.

Said Noel Coppage of Stereo Review of Jackson Browne: "The understated and possible awesome talent of Jackson Browne came sneaking up on me in the form of his new album, "Late for the Sky", on the Asylum label and I swear I think it's telling me that real poetry doesn't hurt a bit."

Janet Maslin in New Times said of Browne: "Browne can couch a song in the most pedestrian terms imaginable (i.e. those of the California car culture) and make his perceptiveness all the more startling by contrast to the milieu he has chosen." Few can say that Browne is not an

(continued on page seven)

String Quartet Pacifies Audience

by Peter Cohen

From the opening lilting melodies of "Boccherini's Quartet in E Flat Major" to the final swinging rhythms of Beethoven's Quartet in C Minor, the Quartetto Italiano [illegible] with unquestionable mastery. Their performance at the [illegible] Allen Chapel on February 18, gave the full-house a taste of their eloquent European chamber music.

Now on their tenth tour of North America, the quartet is, in the words of composer-critic Virgil Thomson, "the finest string quartet, unquestionably, that our century has produced". Since its inception a quarter of a century ago, the Quartetto Italiano has been regarded as one of the finest chamber music groups in the most hailed music capitals of Europe and the United States.

The members of the group spring from different parts of Italy. Paolo Borciani and Elisa Pegreffi (Mr. and Mrs. Borciani in private life), the two violinists come from Reggio Emilia and Genoa, respectively. The violist, Piero Farulli comes from Florence while cellist Franco Rossi hails from Venice. The four met at an Italian national strings competition in 1940 and have been together from there on.

Their performance on the eighteenth was marked with some excellent pizzicato work on the cello, tastily intermixed with the flowing melodies of the shoulder strings. The amount of emotion and total feeling that was displayed to the audience was remarkable considering the fact that the quartet has been performing together for twenty-five years. One might feel that this length of time spent together might generate a sense of staleness or routine. Nothing of this sort was noticed. The sounds produced were not in the least bit mechanical or calculated but rather profoundly expressed the seeming love that the musicians put into their art.

Along with the aforementioned Boccherini and Brahms pieces, Beethoven's "Quartet in F Major" provided the house with a rather lively tune with fluctuating themes which often seemed to transcend the mind. They employed a rather interesting plucking technique that added a harp-like quality to the music. Their encore, Mozart's "Quartet in D minor" was short and lovely and left the audience in a very placid and relaxed frame of mind as they filed out of the chapel.

Fox's Heavy Organ Tonight

His hair is not long, his face young nor his musical source modern. Yet his interpretation of Johann Sebastian Bach's techniques on a Rodgers Touring Organ, combined with a rear-projection light device, yields one of the most innovative and appealing audio-visual concerts ever to entertain the youth of UVM. Don't miss "Heavy Organ" — a sound and light spectacular.

Vermont Cynic MOVIE GUIDE

Century I & II
DORSET STREET
I Towering Inferno
II Young Frankenstein

MERRILL'S SHOWCASE I & II
SO. BURLINGTON
I Freebie & the Bean
II Lenny

STATE THEATRE
BANK STREET
Cabaret

FLYNN THEATRE
MAIN STREET
Jack Nicholson's Films
Last Detail
— Five Easy Pieces
Easy Rider

ESSEX TWIN CINEMA
ESSEX JCT.
I Cabaret
II Grizzly Adams

CINEMA I & II
BURLINGTON PLAZA
SHELBURNE ROAD
I Murder on the Orient Express
II Life & Times of Grizzly Adams

call theatres for times
Not Good for bargain nights
or special showings

ASATHA CHRISTIE'S GREAT WHODUNIT!
ALBERT FINNEY, LAUREN BACALL, MARTIN BALSAM, INGRID BERGMAN, JACQUELINE BISSET, JEAN PIERRE CASSEL, SEAN CONNERY
One of the year's most elegantly entertaining movies! So run! Do not miss the Orient Express. It's a first class thriller.
PG 7 + 9:30
"MURDER ON THE ORIENT EXPRESS"
Bargain Matinee Sat., Sun., Tues., 2 PM

The Life and Times of GRIZZLY ADAMS
Evenings 7 + 9 PM
Bargain Matinee Sat. + Sun. 2 + 4 PM
Tues. Come by Choice!
2 PM This True story of a man called in the wilderness and how he learns to survive
BURLINGTON PLAZA CINEMA 1 & 2
PHONE 862-5070 ANYTIME

THE SILVER KEG
YOUR ENTERTAINMENT DOLLAR BUYS MORE AT THE SILVER KEG!
★★ OUR SPECIALS ★★
MONDAY THRU THURSDAY
NO COVER
FEATURING
FEB. 22- MARCH 1 SNACK WATER
MARCH 3-8 SKYWATER
MARCH 10-15 DIABLO

SA FILMS PRESENTS
THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 27
SINGING IN THE RAIN (1952) — Gene Kelly, Donald O'Connor
101 Votey — 7:30 — Free
FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 28
FRANKENSTEIN (1931) — Boris Karloff
THE WOLFMAN (1941) — Bela Lugosi, Claude Rains
101 Votey — 7:30 & 10:00 — $1
(Both movies at each showing)
SATURDAY, MARCH 1
THE AFRICAN QUEEN (1951) — Katheryn Hepburn, Humphrey Bogart
101 Votey — 7:30 & 9:30 — Free
MONDAY, MARCH 3
LAST YEAR AT MARIENBAD (1961) — Directed by Alain Resnais
101 Votey — 7:30 — Free
THE CONFESSION (1971) — Yves Montand
101 Votey — 9:30 — Free

TONIGHT
TRY
"MISS BRICKHOUSE'S GRUNCH"
(We build this one right)
CARBUR'S
FAMOUS SINCE 1974
Or try one of the [illegible] combinations at CARBUR'S RESTAURANT
Live Entertainment Tuesday through Sunday
119 St. Paul St. 862-4106

Famous Pian

One of the supreme pianists of our generation, Alicia de Larrocha, will give a recital on Sunday, March 2, in Ira Allen Chapel, under Lane Series auspices.

The concert will begin at 2:30 p.m. in the afternoon, and not in the evening as stated on the tickets.

The critic of the New York Times wrote that "the near-miraculous keyboard control the Spanish artist has at her command made her

W.C. Fields

W.C. Fields and Mae West star in the movie "My Little Chickadee" in Lane Film Series W.C. Fields Festival on Friday, Feb. 28, in Marsh Life Sciences Building Auditorium.

There will be two showings of the great comedian's classic film: at 7:30 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. Preceding the feature there will be a featurette: "A Lonely Villa," a D.W. Griffith [illegible] starring Mary Pickford.

Classified as a comedy-western farce, "My Little Chickadee" (1940), is among the funniest of the current W.C. Fields movies which are currently being presented in the festival.

The inimitable Mae West flounces around in bustles and bows, batting her eyes, arching her eyebrows, as she delivers lines to devastate. Fields, W.C. Fields, who wrote his own material and ad libs much more, fires his uproariously funny repartee right back at her.

It's a great movie as each tries to put down the other in order to be one up. Mae West, as Flower Belle Lee, pretends to marry Fields, Cuthbert J. Twillie, in order to fleece him of his oil wells. What Fields doesn't tell her is that they are hair oil wells.

One of the funniest sequences occurs during their "wedding" night when Mae West substitutes a goat for

Visits Soon

...the pain
...youthful
...arrival as
...album."
...ted by
...e number
...onth and
...the chart

...s born in
...but was
...from age
...years old.
...s writing
...the Byrds
...recently
...ie Raitt,
...Dee, and
...s toured
...gles, Joni
...outher of

Said Noel Coppage of Stereo Review of Jackson Browne: "The understated and possible awesome talent of Jackson Browne came sneaking up on me in the form of his new album, "Late Flor the Sky", on the Asylum label and I swear I think it's telling me that real poetry doesn't hurt a bit."

Janet Maslin in New Times said of Browne: "Browne can couch a song in the most pedestrian terms imaginable (i.e. those of the California car culture) and make his perceptiveness all the more startling by contrast to the milieu he has chosen." Few can say that Browne is not an

(continued on page seven)

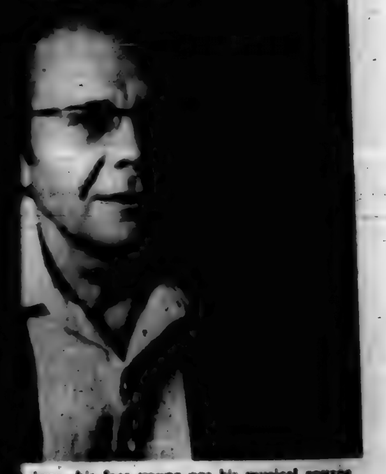
...fies Audience

...his length
...her might
...aleness or
...this sort
...e sounds
...the least
...calculated
...profoundly
...believe that
...into their

...th the
...cherini and
...eethoven's

"Quartet in F Major" provided the house with a rather lively tune with fluctuating themes which often seemed to transcend the mind. They employed a rather interesting plucking technique that added a harp-like quality to the music. Their encore, Mozart's "Quartet in D minor" was short and lovely and left the audience in a very placid and relaxed frame of mind as they filed out of the chapel.

...avy Organ Tonight



...long, his face young nor his musical source ...is interpretation of Johann Sebastian Bach's ...a Rodgers Touring Organ, combined with a ...light device, yields one of the most innovative ...udio-visual concerts ever to entertain the youth ...t. miss "Heavy Organ" — a sound and light

TONIGHT
(RY
S BRICKHOUSE'S GRUNCH"
(We build this one right)

FAMOUS SINCE 1974

...one of the ... locations
...nations at CARBUR'S RESTAURANT
...rtainment Tuesday through Sunday
...Paul St. 862-4106

Famous Pianist Gives Concert

One of the supreme pianists of our generation, Alicia de Larrocha, will give a recital on Sunday, March 2, in Ira Allen Chapel, under Lane Series auspices.

The concert will begin at 2:30 p.m. in the afternoon, and not in the evening as stated on the tickets.

The critic of the New York Times wrote that "the near-miraculous keyboard control the Spanish artist has at her command made her recital an extraordinary experience. Her mastery of everything produced an electric silence in the audience that told of listeners being transfixed by what they heard."

And the Cleveland Plain Dealer had this to say: "Everything about Alicia de Larrocha's recital was superlative. Clearly she is one of the great pianists of our time." Harold Schonberg of the New York Times wrote: "This tiny Spanish woman is pianistically flawless, with infallible fingers, brilliant sonorities, steady rhythm - everything."

In the United States her recitals in virtually every major city, including the Great Performers in Philharmonic Hall, the Hunter College Concert Series and Carnegie Hall in New York, have elicited the warmest praise from her public.

Her performances with the New York Philharmonic, the Cleveland Orchestra, the Chicago Symphony, the San Francisco Symphony, to mention only a few, have produced an acclaim that makes her one of the finest pianists of the day.

Born in Barcelona, Spain, she became a student of Frank Marshall, the successor of the Granados piano school. Mr. Marshall took charge of her piano studies, and she made such progress that she was allowed to give her first public concert at the age of five. Today, with the mantle of the "Granados Tradition" passed on to her, she is a director of the Marshall Academy in Barcelona.

Tickets, $3, $5, $6, are on sale in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman. For reservations, tel. 656-3418. The Waterman box office will be open all day on Saturday and Sunday morning.

The final Lane concert of the season, the Duke Ellington Orchestra, originally scheduled for March 8, has had to be postponed because of the extension of the orchestra's commitments in North Africa. Watch for announcements of the new date.

PDQ Bach Plays Slide Windbreaker

by Jim Fisher

Last Saturday night at Memorial Auditorium, the Lane Series presented The Intimate P.D.Q. Bach which featured the distinguished Professor Peter Schickele. It was a rare opportunity indeed to witness a master of wit such as the professor.

I wish I could speak as highly of the composer or should I say the master plagiarist - P.D.Q. himself. (Some of P.D.Q.'s themes, 1807-1742, showed an unimproved semblance of themes from men like Beethoven, Brahms, and Steven Foster, to name a few.) P.D.Q. is the son of the infamous Sebastian Bach who razed his thirteenth child in the town of Vine on Rhine which may have had something to do with P.D.Q.'s lifestyle or his lack of style.

P.D.Q., as was demonstrated by the professor, wrote music for some ill-fated instruments. Among these were the slide whistle, the foghorn, the windbreaker and slide windbreaker, and least of all, the left-handed sewer flute. Unfortunately, the professor was unable to demonstrate this modest musical machine.

Professor Schickele started out the performance by running up the center aisle bedecked in a most intimate fashion: a ragged tuxedo with tails, hiking boots and --gasp!-- white socks. After executing a perfect Fosbury flop onto the stage, the professor began with a lecture on the music from the notebook for Betty Sue Bach, an acquaintance of P.D.Q.'s. Following this introduction, the professor played exerpts from the notebook, explaining, "I will play only small doses at first in order to let you build up the proper aesthetic antibodies."

The remainder of the show consisted of Erotica Variations (S. 36EE) for banned instruments and piano, Toot Suite in C minor (S. 212), Diverse Ayres on Sundry Notions (S. 99 44/100), and lastly Hansel and Gretel and Ted and Alice (S. 2 n-1), an opera in one unnatural act.

Accompanying Prof. Schickele in the show were John Ferrante, a bargain counter tenor, and David Oei, keyboardist, both of whom added considerable light to the compositions of P.D.Q. Bach.

During a lecture and slide show on the life and times of P.D.Q. Bach, the professor, a renowned musicolologist offered some words of praise for P.D.Q.'s compositions, "In the great forest of music, P.D.Q.'s stone is better left unturned."

I suggest that the professor label it a pebble, a golden pebble.

Book Review
Breakfast of Champions

by David Mandell

After several years of abstinence from the world of Kurt Vonnegut Jr., I ventured forth last week to read his last work of straight fiction, Breakfast of Champions. This book, published about a year and a half ago, is as absurd and satirical as its predecessors, and also as enjoyable to read as the earlier works.

Complete with the author's own sketches, Breakfast of Champions pokes holes in such sacred American institutions as MacDonald's Hamburgers, Nelson Rockefeller, Kentucky Fried Chicken, Holiday Inns, cemetaries, underwear, and presidents. Vonnegut fans will be pleased to learn that at last Kilgore Trout has become a star in his own right. In celebration of his fiftieth birthday, Vonnegut liberates Trout and has him invited to an arts festival in a place called Midland City. During his long march to Middle America, Trout is beaten and left for dead in Times Square, as well as getting his finger bitten off by Dwayne Hoover, the story's other major character. While Trout is busy travelling to Midland City, Hoover is in the process of going off his rocker like his late wife who died from an overdose of Drano. Failing to find happiness among his Pontiacs, Holiday Inns, and Burger Chefs, Hoover concludes that he is a machine. Once arriving upon this conclusion he goes on a rampage, smashing heads into pianos, punching secretaries, and finally biting off poor Kilgore Trout's finger. But the highlight of the book comes at its end when Vonnegut meets his creation, Trout, and tells him "Arise, you are free." Yes, at long last Kilgore Trout is free to roam among the motels, hamburger chains, and pornography houses across the land.

Breakfast of Champions is truly Kurt Vonnegut at his irreverent best. Only Vonnegut can demonstrate that a chimpanzee has more intelligence than the President. Only in a Vonnegut setting can Kilgore Trout upstage Nelson Rockefeller. Perhaps the best attribute of the work is Vonnegut's ability to demonstrate the absurdities of modern life. Vonnegut's sketches are rather humorous but also exemplify his points well. Overall, Breakfast of Champions is as entertaining and stimulating as previous Vonnegut creations such as Cat's Cradle, Mother Night, and Slaughterhouse Five. In fact Kilgore Trout has equaled such immortals as Elliot Rosewater, and Billy Pilgrim.

While it is easy to dismiss Vonnegut as purely comical, he does ask some rather interesting questions. Does every cow have to end up as a Big Mac? Is it really necessary to fill every vacant lot with a Holiday Inn? Are we all merely machines who breathe?

My favorite passage of all comes when Kilgore Trout meets up with Nelson Rockefeller.

"How's it going fella?" asks Rocky.

"About the same," answers Trout.

So it goes.

W.C. Fields in My Little Chickadee

W.C. Fields and Mae West star in the movie "My Little Chickadee" in Lane Film Series W.C. Fields Festival on Friday, Feb. 28, in Marsh Life Sciences Building Auditorium.

There will be two showings of the great comedian's classic film: at 7:30 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. Preceding the feature there will be a featurette: "A Lonely Villa," a D.W. Griffith silent, starring Mary Pickford.

Classified as a comedy-western farce, "My Little Chickadee" (1940), is among the funniest of the current W.C. Fields movies which are currently being presented in the festival.

The inimitable Mae West flounces around in bustles and bows, batting her eyes, arching her eyebrows, as she delivers lines to devastate Fields. W.C. Fields, who wrote his own material and ad libs much more, fires his uproariously funny repartee right back at her.

It's a great movie as each tries to put down the other in order to be one up. Mae West, as Flower Belle Lee, pretends to marry Fields, Cuthbert J. Twillie, in order to fleece him of his oil wells. What Fields doesn't till her is that they are hair oil wells.

One of the funniest sequences occurs during their "wedding" night when Mae West substitutes a goat for herself in the nuptial bed, giving Fields a rare chance to perform verbal surgery on her.

Time Magazine praised the film for its "first-rate clowning...an inspired coupling of the suggestive art of America's leading mental strip-teaser with the comic talents of one of the funniest men on earth."

Directed by Edward Cline, the 83-minute film has a screen play by Mae West and W.C. Fields.

Tickets, $1 each, are on sale in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman, and at the door. For reservations, tel. 656-3418.

The next movie in the W.C. Fields Festival will be "The Bank Dick," March 7.

Foriegn Medieval Studies

A program of medieval studies is being established by two University of Vermont professors this summer at one of the ancient centers of medieval religious and cultural creativity, Assisi, Italy.

The first group of students to participate in the program will be in Italy from May 28 through July 5. The first three days will be spent in Rome, and for the remainder of the program the students will be housed in a 10th Century abbey, now a villa, near Assisi.

The program in "Interdisciplinary Medieval Studies" will be based on two courses taught at Assisi by Dr. Alfred J. Andrea of the UVM history department and Dr. William A. Stephany of the English faculty.

The courses are "The History of Medieval Christian Monasticism" and "Dante and His World." The courses will be closley correlated, and related to other disciplines "to give a comprehensive view of the Middle Ages." Another feature of the program will be field trips to such sites as Subiaco, where St. Benedict formed his plans for an order of monastics; Florence, the birthplace of Dante; and Gubbio, famous for the Palio of the Archers, a re-enactment of Medieval Contests.

Prof. Andrea is Associate Director of the Assisi study program with Dr. James R. Howe, who is Director of the University's Program of Medieval and Renaissance Studies.

The two visited Assisi and Rome early this winter to complete arrangements for the arrival in May of the students. "We hope to sustain this program on a permanent basis," said Dr. Andrea. "It will be the only English-language program in medieval studies in Italy. Indeed, it is the only program of its type." "All other American-directed programs in Italy are devoted to the Renaissance", said Dr. Andrea. "We will be in an area which has not substantially changed in 750 years," he added. "The town has retained intact its original 13th century physical features, even its medieval atmosphere and character."

The program is open to students from any college or university, with academic credit arranged on an individual basis according to the requirements of the student and his or her college.

Further information may be [illegible] Howe, department of English, University of Vermont, Burlington. A limited number of applications may still be accepted for the 1975 program.

...Mr. Brown And Ms. Snow

(continued from page six)

artist. He is. With a capital A. As is the elusive Ms. Phoebe Snow who will open for Jackson Browne on March 17.

Ms. Snow, who will also be backed by a full band, is an excellent guitar player much like, if not better than Bonnie Raitt. But that's where the comparisons end. Ms. Snow is a class all by herself. She is presently breaking into the top 10 in Billboard and Record World, which is unheard of for a newcomer like Ms. Snow. Her album is on Shelter Records and is called simply PHOEBE SNOW. Her song "Poetry Man" is now a single and gaining incredibly fast on the charts. Phoebe Snow is, without a doubt, an overnight star/sensation.

Sound for the Browne/Snow concert will be done by Garcia Sound of New Mexico. Lights will be done by the artists themselves and Westroad Lighting of Los Angeles. Browne is expected to do at least a one and a half hour concert as is Ms. Snow.

The concert will start at 8:30 p.m. Doors will open at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are on sale at Bailey's for $5.00. Tickets are also on sale in Montpelier and Middlebury.

Loretta LynnAnd The Pill

(Earth News) - Loretta Lynn's new single, "The Pill," is proving to be one of the most controversial records in the history of country music. While the song - a salute to contraceptives - is selling a brisk 25,000 copies a day, it also is being banned by some radio stations and is prompting an avalanche of mail both pro and con.

Loretta, the world's best-selling female country vocalist, criticizes the stations who won't play her song. In an exclusive interview with EARTH NEWS, she charges, "If the station ain't playing top ten records and hits, then the radio station ain't too much either. I think you've got to be more broadminded about things."

She says that too many women who listen to country music still have hang-ups about sex and birth control: "A lot of people who are narrow-minded will not go for anything that's everyday living because they don't want to know about it." Loretta says she recorded the song because "I just figured everybody needed to start taking the pill. I've got six children and if they had them (pills) when I was having my first four, I'd have popped them like popcorn."

Women's Lib

Born in a log cabin in southern Kentucky, Loretta was married at the age of 14 and immediately began having children. Now, she's a very young grandmother who has decided there's more to life than just raising children.

In fact, she says she supports the women's liberation movement: "I think they're just trying to hold up for themselves some. And the song might help them a little bit more with what they're doing. It's the woman telling the man I'm sick and tired of you staying out all the time and slipping around on me while you keep me home barefoot and pregnant - because now I've got the pill."

On Sunday, March 2, WRUV-FM will present a program of special interest at 7 p.m. The program is entitled "Courageous Sisters". It takes a look at some of the vibrant and exciting women of the 1800's who were in many ways responsible for beginning the women's movement in the United States.

Produced in Berksley, California, at Radio Station KPFA, a member of the Pacifica Radio Group, "Courageous Sisters" was written, produced and directed by Deborah Janone, currently a graduate student in mass communications at the University of Vermont. The program was originally aired Aug. 23, 1972, as part of a special group of programs celebrating women's sufferage. We are sure that you will be entertained and enlightened by this hour-long stereo program on WRUV-FM on Sunday, March 2. It begins at 7 p.m.

BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE
Retail outlet
FANTASTIC SELECTION OF BEERS, ALES, AND AMERICAN & IMPORTED WINES
AT GREAT SAVINGS

THE DEN
ON TWO FEET

CATERING TO MUNCHIES & NIBBLES

CHITTENDEN-BUCKHAM-WILLS
SUNDAY-THURSDAY 8:30 to 11:00
* SOON TO EXPAND TO OTHER DORMS *
PRESENT THIS COUPON FOR 5¢ OFF ANY PURCHASE-THUS

SUGGEST AND REQUEST

"My parents sold me my Nimbus waterbed"

"When I told my parents I was gonna buy a waterbed, I expected kind of a lukewarm reaction . . . no pun intended. But mom's a nurse and she said that waterbeds had been used in hospitals for years, that the support of a waterbed eliminates pressure on the body that can cause bed sores and restrict circulation. She said a lot of patients preferred waterbeds because they were more comfortable. Then my father chimes in about how he had slept on a waterbed on a business trip a couple of years ago . . . but now he calls ahead to request one. He's even looked into getting a waterbed for the house and told me about Nimbus, cross-buckled construction, triple-protection against leaks and a 10 year guarantee. Imagine that! The same two people who thought that Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young was a law firm sold me my Nimbus Waterbed."

The Emerald City of Oz Ltd.
71 St Paul St.
Burlington Vermont
862-4298

Because of Nimbus...
America will sleep a little easier tonight.

Results From L/L Checking Account Survey

Members of the VPIRG Living/Learning Suite conducted a checking account survey of the Burlington banks. Only three of the banks offered checking accounts to their customers. They were Chittenden Trust Co., the Howard Bank and the Merchant National Bank. Chittenden and the Howard Bank had similar accounts, but there was only a $2.00 charge for bounced checks at Chittenden vs. a $3.00 charge at the Howard Bank. The Merchants National Bank offered their customers, in addition to the similar accounts offered by Chittenden and the Howard Bank, the Monarch account.

Chittenden Trust Co. – $100 free checking (No charge for checking as long as balance does not fall below this amount); $2.00 penalty plus $.10/check written that month (This is the monthly charge should your balance fall below the amount in free checking); other types of checking accounts include a thrifty account (10 cents/check) and a regular (60 cent charge, 12 cent deposit, 6 cent check, 3 cent deposit of check from another bank); $2.00 charge for bounced checks.

The Howard Bank – $100 free checking; $2.00 penalty plus $.10/check written that month; other types of checking accounts include a handy account (10 cents/check) and a service (60 cent charge, 12 cent deposit, 6 cent check, 3 cent deposit of check from another bank); $3.00 charge for bounced checks.

Merchants National Bank – $100 free checking; $2.00 penalty plus $.10/check written that month; other types of checking accounts include a special account (10 cents/check), a regular (60 cent charge, 12 cent deposit, 6 cent check, 3 cent deposit of check from other bank), and a Monarch ($2.50/month, no minimum balance, free checking, free safe deposit box, can overdraw up to amount in Savings account); $2.00 charge for bounced checks.

THE DOCTOR'S BAG
by Arnold Werner M. D.

QUESTION: What is the latest word on cholesterol? I have heard so many pros and cons (even rumors of conspiracy) I really don't know what to believe. Specifically, what are some of the possible consequences of massive dosages of peanut butter over a period of years? I enjoy a balanced diet, but between meals I eat countless peanut butter sandwiches to appease my voracious hunger. I have no weight problem at all. How concerned should hypermetabolic peanut butter aficionados such as myself be about our habit?

ANSWER: It has been years since I've had a question that sticks to the roof of my mouth. The matter of dietary cholesterol and cardiovascular disease is a heavily debated one. There is no question that people with high serum cholesterol levels and high levels of other types of fatty substances in their blood are more vulnerable to heart attacks and other types of vascular disease. A major dietary source of substances which increase cholesterol levels are fatty meats, eggs and most dairy products (skim milk and skim milk cheeses excluded, of course).

Every time a suggestion is made that our dietary habits are producing an increased incidence of cardiovascular disease, the egg, dairy and meat lobby convulses and produces a variety of statements to contradict this possibility. However, there seems to be little question that dietary and other changes that have occurred over the last half a century or more have corresponded with a marked increase in cardiovascular disease. Quite likely, large segments of our population are especially vulnerable to develop cardiovascular disease at an aggravated rate because of the diets we currently consume and genetic factors. There is nothing basically wrong with the food substances which have high amounts of the dangerous types of fats and cholesterol, but the problem is that they are taken in excess amounts. Moderation in diet strikes me as being quite sensible.

Peanut butter is not a problem and if one buys the type of peanut butter that is made only from peanuts, there is nothing in it that is harmful and there is a lot in it that is good. The peanut butter made only from peanuts tends to separate in the jar and has to be stirred up before use. (The other types are kept from separating by being partially solidified and in the process, have increased amounts of fatty substances that one should avoid. Since you eat so much peanut butter, I would suggest the "nothing added" type.

••••••••••••••••••••

QUESTION: I have a problem which I feel is unique and want to know if you are aware of the cause and possible solution. I'm unable to achieve a climax during intercourse; actually I do not even get physically aroused. I have no trouble at all with oral or manual stimulation with which a climax comes very easily. The situation is causing problems with my lover since he places the blame on himself, although he has tried everything either of us can think of to help me. What, if anything, can I do to overcome this?

ANSWER: The situation you describe is far from unique, and it is also quite possible to overcome it. The fact that you are able to achieve orgasm through some means of stimulation is a good sign and would indicate that with a little bit of patience and practice you should be able to achieve orgasm through sexual intercourse.

The basic principle in being successful is to be aroused before you start to have intercourse. Some degree of arousal is essential in a man otherwise he wouldn't have a sufficient erection to gain entry, but a high level of arousal is more important for having orgasm in a woman. Manual or oral stimulation may produce easier orgasms because it is more specifically stimulating than is sexual intercourse. If that is the case, the solution to the problem might be to become sufficiently aroused by whatever means you can. Then proceed immediately to have intercourse while in this very aroused state while maintaining the same type of stimulation that got you aroused in the first place. Obviously, it would be physically impossible (I think) to continue to be stimulated orally while having intercourse but it shouldn't be too hard to figure out how to continue some manual stimulation while coupled.

Part of the problem might relate to attitudes about intercourse and/or fears of pregnancy. In such circumstances, some women have a sufficiently difficult time in relaxing enough to achieve orgasm. If the above suggestions do not work, discussing your attitudes and concerns about sexual intercourse and closeness would be of help. For many women, this is best accomplished by discussing these problems with a sexually mature woman who can discuss sexual issues openly and in non moralistic terms. This could be a close friend but more likely would be someone with proper professional credentials who has an understanding of human sexuality.

••••••••••••••••••••

QUESTION: I am very concerned about a device being offered for sale in the area where my parents live. It produces distilled water which would be used for both drinking and cooking and it costs about $250.00 and produces eight gallons of water per day. Is this merely a waste of money, or could there be danger to one's health in using distilled water exclusively?

ANSWER: Clearly, drinking distilled water is no cure all. It probably does not cause any harm since trace minerals and other things you would be missing in water would be picked up in food, milk, and other ingested substances. But, I would be worried about the still becoming contaminated with bacteria or fungi and your parents getting less pure water than they could from their tap.

Gimmicks such as the one you describe are bound to flourish more and more with the business of dumping of asbestos fibers in Lake Superior and the finding of chemical contaminants in water drawn from other sources. When the water we drink is not as pure as it should be, it is pretty discouraging but, distilling your own is probably no solution.

PIONEER PL-10 BELT DRIVE TURNTABLE

With this well-made stereo turntable, Pioneer proves once again that quality and practicality are synonymous. THE BUDGET-PRICED PL-10 gives you more for your stereo investment than you'd ever expect. A fine synchronous motor that helps cut out audible wow and flutter. An extremely steady belt-drive. An anti-skating control to lessen distortion. A cueing device with simultaneous movement with the stort lever. And a beautifully-balanced S-shaped tonearm with plug-in type lightweight headshell. For the man about to make his first investment into stereo components, the PL-10 becomes more than a budget investment but a truly professional turntable that will serve him well for many years of quality sound reproduction.

Manufacturer's List $128 — $79.95

PIONEER

PL-12D STEREO TURNTABLE

Despite its simplified 2-control operation, this versatile unit contains a high degree of sophistication with advanced features like: 4-pole, belt-driven synchronous motor; static-balanced S-shaped tonearm; ultra-light tracking; oil damped cueing; anti-skating control; 12-inch dynamically balanced die cast platter; walnut base, hinged dust cover; 33⅓ – 45 rpm speeds.

SALE $89.95 — Complete with Base, Dust Cover — QUANTITIES LIMITED

AUDIO DEN

South Burlington — Phone 863-4398

100 DORSET STREET

Monday thru Friday 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Boogie Your Boards Off During Town Meeting Days At SMUGGLER'S NOTCH

Monday, Feb. 3rd - Tuesday, Feb. 4th

MID SEASON SPECIALS FOR AND DISCOUNT PASS HOLDERS REGULAR SEASON PASSHOLDERS

Buses Monday and Tuesday FREE For Everyone

8:30 - State Health Dept.
8:15 Guterson Field House
4:30 - Return Buses To Burlington

½ PRICE ON BAR DRINKS

John Cassel At Piano

30% OFF MERCHANDISE
3-6 PM SKI SHOP SALE

Smuggler's Notch- Where you get more activity for your money

SAGA Ses

Next Years Food Service Plan

It's Question and Answer Time Again.

Question: Thanks for opening up the Simpson branch of The Store, but why are the prices so high?

Answer: Both the Simpson and Marsh Stores are open as a convenience to students. They make it possible to buy items without going downtown. Also, they allow you to use your meal plan coupons to buy grocery items.

The Stores do not have enough volume to maintain a pricing structure like the larger super markets. Originally we'd thought we could pass along savings based on the large purchasing volume of the whole dining hall system. We found, however, it costs a lot of time and material to repack many items into smaller quantities. Hence we decided to buy most of our items in sizes carried by regular grocery stores. In general, the stores will inflict a similar pricing structure to the small corner market and not Martins, Pinest, P&C, etc.

Question: What will next year's Food Service Plan be like?

Answer: It's that time of year again. Feb-March are the months when meal plan details for the coming year must be finalized. We're in the middle of this process right now and won't be able to report completely on it for another month. At this time, however, we can say the following: (a) The main points in the plan will remain unchanged. There will be continued great flexibility including snackbars, restaurants and grocery stores. (b) There will be less disparity between the base plan coupons price and the price of the extra coupons. (c) The Food Service hours will be adjusted to meet anticipated needs next Fall, i.e. Waterman will again be serving breakfast. (d) The cost of the plan will increase due to increased food, utilities and labor costs. The exact amount hasn't been determined yet.

Question: I heard a rumor that Simpson Dining Hall will be renovated – is that true?

Answer: Yes – Simpson which has remained essentially the same since it opened in 1957 will get a major face lifting including carpeting, sound system, lighting, paint, drapes and a refurbished cafeteria line. In addition, much work will be done "behind the scenes" to replace tired cooking equipment, refrigeration and other badly needed items. The UVM central Bake Shop is located at Simpson and will be getting a new rotary oven along with a larger "cookie machine."

Question: I'm a concerned weight lifter and wonder why you don't serve lo-cal dressings and have salad plates regularly as a choice for dinner.

Answer: There is no reason we can't serve lo-cal dressings. We may not be able to offer as wide a variety as we do with the regular dressings though. Please identify yourself to the manager of the dining hall(s) where you eat most often and ask him/her to provide your favorite kind of lo-cal dressing. If it is available in bulk quantities, we'll be glad to serve it.

Your idea for another dinner entree is a good one. We'll try to add some salad plates at dinner time. In the meantime, feel free to see the manager or first cook at dinner and ask for an item or two from the refrigerators to supplement the regular salad selection if you like.

Alleged Radiation Deaths

The VPIRG office has released an announcement of an up-coming speaker, co-sponsored by Robinson Environmental Dorm.

Dr. Ernest Sternglass from the University of Pittsburgh will be speaking at the University of Vermont on low level radiation on March 4.

Dr. Sternglass, a radiologist at the University of Pittsburgh, did statistical studies of radioactive emissions and increase of mortality rates in and around the shipping port Nuclear Power Plant near Pittsburgh in 1972. His findings, released in 1973, caused national impact, that created a commission to investigate the safety of the plant.

Sternglass found what he claims to be an unbroken pattern showing the closer communities lie to the shipping port Atomic Plant near Pittsburgh, the higher the rate of medical problems.

Aliquippa is a community a little larger than Rutland, Vermont, just eight miles downward from the shipping port reactor.

The professor checked Pennsylvania Health Department statistics for Aliquippa and found that in 1970, the town had the highest infant mortality rate of 98 communities surveyed in Pennsylvania. Aliquippa, said Dr. Sternglass, had a rate of 43.9 deaths per 1,000 infants more than a year before. The entire state had a rate of 20.2 percent.

Dr. Sternglass examined other towns near the shipping port power plant and found similar increases. He also found evidence supporting the conclusion that the shipping port plant was causing increases in the level of strontium 90 (a radioactive poisonous element) in milk taken from dairies near the plant.

Sternglass said "People get radiation via milk, air currents, meat from cattle. But mainly from milk." "People downstream on the river get it from drinking water."

Concert Review:

Elvin Bishop And James Cotton Blues Band

by Bob DeNike

The Elvin Bishop and James Cotton Blues Bands presented a program of blues and rock & roll at Middlebury College Saturday night that could not have been more varied, developed and exploratory.

These two bands succeeded in envigorating overworked music styles (Blues and rock & roll), nearly an impossible task in view of the blues 350-year history.

The differing styles of the bands (James Cotton leads a group of five black musicians and Elvin Bishop heads five white artists) combined with the nature of the music itself to demand full, unrestrained audience involvement at a high level of energy and adrenalin flow.

Unfortunately, most of the hypertension that originated while waiting for the doors to open petered out long before headlining Elvin Bishop's drive died.

"We'll play 'til ya get sick of us," Bishop promised early in his act. He kept his word, quitting after only two hours of Caussasian rock & roll and blues.

I was amazed to find the entire field house deserted except for a straggling remainder of 80 to 100 listeners when the house lights came on after the total four-hour concert.

Standing at arm's length from Bishop's guitar neck, I had been well enthralled in his performance and blinked in great surprise upon turning around at the end to see an empty hall stretching behind me.

Four hours is admittedly a long time to sustain a peak of energy, but the cost of physical exhaustion couldn't outweigh that of any ticket. Had the entire audience showed greater enthusiasm (by merely staying until the concert's end), everyone would have enjoyed the most financially worthwhile concert ever.

Elvin Bishop did not tell the audience just how psyched he was to play all night. I learned too late that, after retiring from the fieldhouse (which had become as humid and sweaty as a greenhouse), Bishop fulfilled his promise further than anyone could imagine... by playing until dawn at two Middlebury fraternities.

Both bands exhibited a love for playing extended jams. Whereas most listeners must have found this tendency a boring mistake, it enabled the ancient rock & roll riff to be embellished and explored to the fullest extent.

The routines that persisted as the crowd waited for the drums to drum seemed, at the time, strong enough to level the field house to subterranean depths, a phenomenon directly contradictory to the end of the concert.

As the crowd was individually admitted through a single door, the sudden, massive surge forward that is more than familiar to any UVM hockey fan, erupted into violent waves of synchronized pushing and shoving.

As I neared the entrance, I was suddenly hurled uncontrollably toward the building by a force from the rear as seemingly powerful as the earth's gravitational pull. Glass shattered. Traces of panic momentarily seeped into and gripped me. I thankfully handed my ticket to the guard, passing through the door without any fearful interruptions.

"It was either putting my elbow out or being pushed through myself," later explained my friend, the unwitting vandal who luckily escaped injury.

We were introduced to the James Cotton Blues Band through a spirited rock & roll boogie on a level of exertion comparable to that of J. Geils madness. The people covering the field house floor jumped to their feet on the second note.

Bandleader Cotton tactfully delayed his entrance, much like Bonnie Bramlett did at UVM Sunday (you remember, her being there, barely, don't you?), dramatically appearing only after the start of the third song. An unseen harmonica was of a sudden, surprisingly heard accompanying the guitar and saxophone melodies. Queries of "Who's playing that harp?" circulated in an undercurrent through the audience. In a dazzling flash, the mystery guest harpist, who turned out to be the show's host, briskly stepped to the front of the stage, already huffing and puffing on his mouth organ.

Cotton thereafter held the audience firmly in the palm of his hand, evoking outstretched arms to flail freely throughout.

Musically, a varied blend of euphonious harmonizing between guitar, sax and harp elevated the audience to the desired level of intense attentiveness. These three instruments alternately carried lead melodies with worthy rock virtuosity.

Visually, the audience was made to laugh and smile along with the performers, whose eyes grew wide and winced, rolled and formed grimaces in expressions of sheer delight. The musicians evidently enjoyed their music as genuinely as did the audience.

The slower-paced blues numbers made many in the audience begin to notice wearying muscles and stiffening joints, but they set to work, hard to revive the high spirits of the crowd, however.

"They were great," remarked Staige Davis, head of UVM's SA Concert Bureau. "I don't see how Bishop can be much better."

Staige's prediction proved partly true in that, when Bishop and band picked up their instruments, the skin color, reflected in the style of the funk's musicians, markedly changed. Yet, by the time Elvin Bishop contributed his adaptations of the blues to the evening's program, the audience must have felt as though they had just experienced first-hand the 350-year growth of the blues style. Despite a developed and interesting guitar technique, Bishop's blues fell on deaf ears.

Bishop's style of rock was also exceptional. I had never heard "Gotta Put On My Travellin' Shoes" until a "get psyched" hour of preparatory listening, a period devoted solely to the work of the artist-to-be- experienced. That one time was enough to convince me that Bishop has earned his position in the annals of major modern rock musicians. With the aid of another guitarist, Bishop was also able to build a masterpiece from a basic two-note riff.

On the darker side, both guitarists flaunted slides throughout, yet never delved far enough into attempting double slide work with melody, which I expected to resemble even the poorest facsimiles of Allman-Betts duets.

The pianist most closely approached virtuosity, though he had barely mastered only his instrument's rock & roll potentials. His absence from the act's second half was noticed, felt and heard.

Bishop saved the exposition of his own soloing talents until late in the concert. Though he compensated well for lost time, it was already too late for the many who had left early to realize the fullness of Bishop's ability.

The Middlebury audience can have no justifiable complaint about the concert. Both bands gave their all to the performance and visually and aurally appeared to have had as good a time as I.

CLASSIFIED

For sale: Music Master Fender Bass in excellent condition. Also 30 watt Premier Bass Amplifier. Call Pat at 862-5837 after 5 p.m.

Wanted: lake fish (any type) to feed to research animals – Please don't throw out your fish from ice fishing, will offer to pay. Call Sharon Simpson, 656-2922.

Wanted: a used 10 speed bicycle in good condition for under $100. No phone – write a note and I'll get in touch with you. Susan Fickett, 492 S. Union St.

Wanted: to trade an electric typewriter for a zoom lens, preferably a Nikkor to fit a Nikon Nikkormat. Will pay any difference in value. Tanner, 862-8080.

For sale: Finch Reel-to-reel Stereo Tape Recorder with built-in speakers and amplifier. Has two recording channels with V.U. meters. Includes microphone $50. Call Mary or Chris at 878-8316.

For Sale: Earth Shoe Boots, excellent condition. Size: 7.25 w / 5.75 m. Best offer ($45.00 new). Please call 985-8171.

by Jesse Clemens

Editors note: It has been the decision of the VERMONT CYNIC'S Editorial board for this paper to back the United Farm Workers support effort in this community. The following is an article prepared for this paper by the local UFW support in an attempt to point out the major issues still hard pressed to the controversy.

You may have seen ads, pamphlets or letters recently from the E&J Gallo wine company, talking about the dispute between Gallo and the United Farmworkers Union. Rather than confront the truth and justice of the farmworkers charges against them, the Gallo company has launched a multi– million dollar public relations offensive aimed at obscuring the issues and misleading the public. The facts about Gallo speak for themselves.

GALLO BEFORE THE UFW

The Gallo labor situation was pretty typical of the plight of migrants before the United Farm Workers won their first contracts. Here are some of the conditions that existed at Gallo before the UFW.

Speed up: those who did not work at breakneck speed were fired on the spot to intimidate others.

Labor camp housing facilities consisting of one room shacks with no proper sanitary facilities.

No job security: 15–20 workers fired per day during peak harvest time.

No clean drinking water or bathrooms provided for field hands during working day.

– Low wages: less than $1.60 guaranteed federal minimum for industry.

Racism: company supervisors would race Chicano vs. Portuguese work teams.

Labor contractor system: company supervisors hired by Gallo to fire, hire and pay workers often stole hard earned wages of workers.

This was the situation most migrants found themselves in through most of the sixties. Tired of low wages, harrassment and hazardous working conditions, grape pickers went on strike and organized the United Farm Workers Organizing Committee. After a long struggle and a successful boycott, the first UFW contracts were signed by Schenley and Di Giorgio companies in '66 and '67. Gallo signed with the UFW in 1967, not because of a love of justice, but because of successful boycotts against Schenley and Di Gorgio tha

A Plea T

The Soviet

Steve Garber
Yale University
3168 Yale Station
New Haven, Ct. 06520

People are urged to cut out the following article and send it to the Russian Embassy in Washington. Also, the author would encourage letters protesting the incidents mentioned in the article. For further information call Philp at 656-3009, or contact him in 503 Mason.

The last time the courts of the Soviet Union decreed a death sentence against Soviet Jews, thousands of people turned out in New York City and in cities around the world to protest that travesty of justice and to demand commutation. That was in 1970. The infamous Leningrad Hijack Trial. And the sentences were commuted, though the sentences which replaced them remained ridiculously severe.

On December 8, 1974, in Moscow, Mikhail Leviev was sentenced to death. Leviev is a 56-year-old former manager of a Moscow store. In March, 1972 he applied with his family for exit visas from the USSR. In June of the same year, the family received exit permits. The next day, Mikhail Leviev was arrested. He was subsequently held "under investigation" for two years. And after an 11 week trial also involving non-Jewish defendants who received lighter sentences, Leviev was sentenced to death by firing squad for alleged "economic crimes." His wife was denied an appeal, but a flurry of protests from abroad evidently helped to stay the execution temporarily. Leviev now sits in a Moscow prison awaiting death; his exact state is

Results From L/L Checking Account Survey

Members of the VPIRG Living/Learning Suite conducted a checking account survey of the Burlington banks. Only three of the banks offered checking accounts to their customers. They were Chittenden Trust Co., the Howard Bank and the Merchant National Bank. Chittenden and the Howard Bank had similar accounts, but there was only a $2.00 charge for bounced checks at Chittenden vs. a $3.00 charge at the Howard Bank. The Merchants National Bank offered their customers, in addition to the similar accounts offered by Chittenden and the Howard Bank, the Monarch account.

Chittenden Trust Co. – $100 free checking (No charge for checking as long as balance does not fall below this amount); $2.00 penalty plus $.10/check written that month (This is the monthly charge should your balance fall below the amount in free checking); other types of checking accounts include a thrifty account (10 cents/check) and a regular (60 cent charge, 12 cent deposit, 6 cent check, 3 cent deposit of check from another bank); $2.00 charge for bounced checks.

The Howard Bank – $100 free checking; $2.00 penalty plus $.10/check written that month; other types of checking accounts include a handy account (10 cents/check) and a service (60 cent charge, 12 cent deposit, 6 cent check, 3 cent deposit of check from another bank); $3.00 charge for bounced checks.

Merchants National Bank – $100 free checking; $2.00 penalty plus $.10/check written that month; other types of checking accounts include a special account (10 cents/check), a regular (60 cent charge, 12 cent deposit, 6 cent check, 3 cent deposit of check from other bank), and a Monarch ($2.50/month, no minimum balance, free checking, free safe deposit box, can overdraw up to amount in Savings account); $2.00 charge for bounced checks.

THE DOCTOR'S BAG
by Arnold Werner M. D.

QUESTION: What is the latest word on cholesterol? I have heard so many pros and cons (even rumors of conspiracy) I really don't know what to believe. Specifically, what are some of the possible consequences of massive dosages of peanut butter over a period of years? I enjoy a balanced diet, but between meals I eat countless peanut butter sandwiches to appease my voracious hunger. I have no weight problem at all. How concerned should hypermetabolic peanut butter aficionados such as myself be about our habit?

ANSWER: It has been years since I've had a question that sticks to the roof of my mouth. The matter of dietary cholesterol and cardiovascular disease is a heavily debated one. There is no question that people with high serum cholesterol levels and high levels of other types of fatty substances in their blood are more vulnerable to heart attacks and other types of vascular disease. A major dietary source of substances which increase cholesterol levels are fatty meats, eggs and most dairy products (skim milk and skim milk cheeses excluded, of course).

Every time a suggestion is made that our dietary habits are producing an increased incidence of cardiovascular disease, the egg, dairy and meat lobby convulses and produces a variety of statements to contradict this possibility. However, there seems to be little question that dietary and other changes that have occurred over the last half a century or more have corresponded with a marked increase in cardiovascular disease. Quite likely, large segments of our population are especially vulnerable to develop cardiovascular disease at an aggravated rate because of the diets we currently consume and genetic factors. There is nothing basically wrong with the food substances which have high amounts of the dangerous types of fats and cholesterol, but the problem is that they are taken in excess amounts. Moderation in diet strikes me as being quite sensible.

Peanut butter is not a problem and if one buys the type of peanut butter that is made only from peanuts, there is nothing in it that is harmful and there is a lot in it that is good. The peanut butter made only from peanuts tends to separate in the jar and has to be stirred up before use. (The other types are kept from separating by being partially solidified and in the process, have increased amounts of fatty substances that one should avoid. Since you eat so much peanut butter, I would suggest the "nothing added" type.

••••••••••••••••••••

QUESTION: I have a problem which I feel is unique and want to know if you are aware of the cause and possible solution. I'm unable to achieve a climax during intercourse; actually I do not even get physically aroused. I have no trouble at all with oral or manual stimulation with which a climax comes very easily. The situation is causing problems with my lover since he places the blame on himself, although he has tried everything either of us can think of to help me. What, if anything, can I do to overcome this?

ANSWER: The situation you describe is far from unique, and it is also quite possible to overcome it. The fact that you are able to achieve orgasm through some means of stimulation is a good sign and would indicate that with a little bit of patience and practice you should be able to achieve orgasm through sexual intercourse.

The basic principle in being successful is to be aroused before you start to have intercourse. Some degree of arousal is essential in a man otherwise he wouldn't have a sufficient erection to gain entry, but a high level of arousal is more important for having orgasm in a woman. Manual or oral stimulation may produce easier orgasms because it is more specifically stimulating than is sexual intercourse. If that is the case, the solution to the problem might be to become sufficiently aroused by whatever means you can. Then proceed immediately to have intercourse while in this very aroused state while maintaining the same type of stimulation that got you aroused in the first place. Obviously, it would be physically impossible (I think) to continue to be stimulated orally while having intercourse but it shouldn't be too hard to figure out how to continue some manual stimulation while coupled.

Part of the problem might relate to attitudes about intercourse and/or fears of pregnancy. In such circumstances, some women have a sufficiently difficult time in relaxing enough to achieve orgasm. If the above suggestions do not work, discussing your attitudes and concerns about sexual intercourse and closeness would be of help. For many women, this is best accomplished by discussing these problems with a sexually mature woman who can discuss sexual issues openly and in non moralistic terms. This could be a close friend but more likely would be someone with proper professional credentials who has an understanding of human sexuality.

••••••••••••••••••••

QUESTION: I am very concerned about a device being offered for sale in the area where my parents live. It produces distilled water which would be used for both drinking and cooking and it costs about $450.00 and produces eight gallons of water per day. Is this merely a waste of money, or could there be danger to one's health in using distilled water exclusively?

ANSWER: Clearly, drinking distilled water is no cure all. It probably does not cause any harm since trace minerals and other things you would be missing in water would be picked up in food, milk, and other ingested substances. But, I would be worried about the still becoming contaminated with bacteria or fungi and your parents getting less pure water than they could from their tap.

Gimmicks such as the one you describe are bound to flourish more and more with the business of dumping of asbestos fibers in Lake Superior and the finding of chemical contaminants in water drawn from other sources. When the water we drink is not as pure as it should be, it is pretty discouraging but, distilling your own is probably no solution.

SAGA Sez
Next Years Food Service Plan

It's Question and Answer Time Again.

Question: Thanks for opening up the Simpson branch of The Store, but why are the prices so high?

Answer: Both the Simpson and Marsh Stores are open as a convenience to students. They make it possible to buy items without going downtown. Also, they allow you to use your meal plan coupons to buy grocery items.

The Stores do not have enough volume to maintain a pricing structure like the larger super markets. Originally we'd thought we could pass along savings based on the large purchasing volume of the whole dining hall system. We found, however, it costs a lot of time and material to repack many items into smaller quantities. Hence we decided to buy most of our items in sizes carried by regular grocery stores. In general, the stores will inflict a similar pricing structure to the small corner market and not Martins, Finast, P&C, etc.

Question: What will next year's Food Service Plan be like?

Answer: It's that time of year again. Feb-March are the months when meal plan details for the coming year must be finalized. We're in the middle of this process right now and won't be able to report completely on it for another month. At this time, however, we can say the following: (a) The main points in the plan will remain unchanged. There will be continued great flexibility including snackbars, restaurants and grocery stores. (b) There will be less disparity between the base plan coupons price and the price of the extra coupons. (c) The Food Service hours will be adjusted to meet anticipated needs next Fall, i.e. Watermaan will again be serving breakfast. (d) The cost of the plan will increase due to increased food, utilities and labor costs. The exact amount hasn't been determined yet.

Question: I heard a rumor that Simpson Dining Hall will be renovated – is that true?

Answer: Yes – Simpson which has remained essentially the same since it opened in 1957 will get a major face lifting including carpeting, sound system, lighting, paint, drapes and a refurbished cafeteria line. In addition, much work will be done "behind the scenes" to replace tired cooking equipment, refrigeration and other badly needed items. The UVM central Bake Shop is located at Simpson and will be getting a new rotary oven along with a larger "cookie machine."

Question: I'm a concerned weight loser and wonder why you don't serve lo-cal dressings and have salad plates regularly as a choice for dinner.

Answer: There is no reason we can't serve lo-cal dressings. We may not be able to offer as wide a variety as we do with the regular dressings though. Please identify yourself to the manager of the dining hall(s) where you eat most often and ask him/her to provide your favorite kind of lo-cal dressing. If it is available in bulk quantities, we'll be glad to serve it.

Your idea for another dinner entree is a good one. We'll try to add some salad plates at dinner time. In the meantime, feel free to see the manager or first cook at dinner and ask for an item or two from the refrigerators to supplement the regular salad selection if you like.

Alleged Radiation Deaths

The VPIRG office has released an announcement of an up-coming speaker, co-sponsored by Robinson Environmental Dorm.

Dr. Ernest Sternglass from the University of Pittsburgh will be speaking at the University of Vermont on low level radiation on March 4.

Dr. Sternglass, a radiologist at the University of Pittsburgh, did statistical studies of radioactive emissions and increase of mortality rates in and around the shipping port Nuclear Power Plant near Pittsburgh in 1972. His findings, released in 1973, caused national impact, that created a commission to investigate the safety of the plant.

Sternglass found what he claims to be an unbroken pattern showing the closer communities lie to the shipping port Atomic Plant near Pittsburgh, the higher the rate of medical problems.

Aliquippa is a community a little larger than Rutland, Vermont, just eight miles downward from the shipping port reactor.

The professor checked Pennsylvania Health Department statistics for Aliquippa and found that in 1970, the town had the highest infant mortality rate of 98 communities surveyed in Pennsylvania. Aliquippa, said Dr. Sternglass, had a rate of 43.9 deaths per 1,000 infants more than a year before. The entire state had a rate of 20.2 percent.

Dr. Sternglass examined other towns near the shipping port power plant and found similar increases. He also found evidence supporting the conclusion that the shipping port plant was causing increases in the level of strontium 90 (a radioactive poisonous element) in milk taken from dairies near the plant.

Sternglass said "People get radiation via milk, air currents, meat from cattle. But mainly from milk." "People downstream on the river get it from drinking water."

Concert Review:
Elvin Bishop And James Cotton Blues Band

by Bob DeNike

The Elvin Bishop and James Cotton Blues Bands presented a program of blues and rock & roll at Middlebury College Saturday night that could not have been more varied, developed and exploratory.

These two bands succeeded in envigorating overworked music styles (Blues and rock & roll), nearly an impossible task in view of the blues' 350-year history.

The differing styles of the bands (James Cotton leads a group of five black musicians and Elvin Bishop heads five white artists) combined with the nature of the music itself to demand full, unrestrained audience involvement at a high level of energy and adrenalin flow.

Unfortunately, most of the hypertension that originated while waiting for the doors to open petered out long before headlining Elvin Bishop's drive died.

"We'll play 'til ya get sick of us," Bishop promised early in his act. He kept his word, quitting after only two hours of Caussasian rock & roll and blues.

I was amazed to find the entire field house deserted except for a straggling remainder of 80 to 100 listeners when the house lights came on after the total four-hour concert.

Standing at arm's length from Bishop's guitar neck, I had been well enthralled in his performance and blinked in great surprise upon turning around at the end to see an empty hall stretching behind me.

Four hours is admittedly a long time to sustain a peak of energy, but the cost of physical exhaustion couldn't outweigh that of any ticket. Had the entire audience showed greater enthusiasm (by merely staying until the concert's end), everyone would have enjoyed the most financially worthwhile concert ever.

Elvin Bishop did not tell the audience just how psyched he was to play all night. I learned too late that, after retiring from the fieldhouse (which had become as humid and sweaty as a greenhouse), Bishop fulfilled his promise further than anyone could imagine... by playing until dawn at two Middlebury fraternities.

Both bands exhibited a love for playing extended jams. Whereas most listeners must have found this tendency a boring mistake, it enabled the ancient rock & roll riff to be embellished and explored to the fullest extent.

The routines that persisted as the crowd waited for the doors to open seemed, at the time, strong enough to level the field house to subterranean depths, a phenomenon directly contradictory to the end of the concert.

As the crowd was individually admitted through a single door, the sudden, massive surge forward that is more than familiar to any UVM hockey fan, erupted into violent waves of synchronized pushing and shoving.

As I neared the entrance, I was suddenly hurled uncontrollably toward the building by a force from the rear as seemingly powerful as the earth's gravitational pull. Glass shattered. Traces of panic momentarily seeped into and gripped me. I thankfully handed my ticket to the guard, passing through the door without any fearful interruptions.

"It was either putting my elbow out or being pushed through myself," later explained my friend, the unwitting vandal who luckily escaped injury.

We were introduced to the James Cotton Blues Band through a spirited rock & roll boogie on a level of exertion comparable to that of J. Geils madness. The people covering the field house floor jumped to their feet on the second note.

Bandleader Cotton tactfully delayed his entrance, much like Bonnie Bramlett did at UVM Sunday (you remember her being there, barely, don't you?), dramatically appearing only after the start of the third song. An unseen harmonica was of a sudden, surprisingly heard accompanying the guitar and saxophone melodies. Queries of "Who's playing that harp?" circulated in an undercurrent through the audience. In a dazzling flash, the mystery guest harpist, who turned out to be the show's host, briskly stepped to the front of the stage, already huffing and puffing on his mouth organ.

Cotton thereafter held the audience firmly in the palm of his hand, evoking outstretched arms to flail freely throughout.

Musically, a varied blend of euphonious harmonizing between guitar, sax and harp elevated the audience to the desired level of intense attentiveness. These three instruments alternately carried lead melodies with worthy rock virtuosity.

Visually, the audience was made to laugh and smile along with the performers, whose eyes grew wide and winced, rolled and formed grimaces in expressions of sheer delight. The musicians evidently enjoyed their music as genuinely as did the audience.

The slower-paced blues numbers made many in the audience begin to notice wearying muscles and stiffening bones so that they sat to rest. Cotton never had to work hard to revive the high spirits of the crowd, however.

"They were great," remarked Staige Davis, head of UVM's SA Concert Bureau. "I don't see how Bishop can be much better."

Staige's prediction proved partly true in that, when Bishop and band picked up their instruments, the skin color, reflected in the style of the funk's musicians, markedly changed. Yet, by the time Elvin Bishop contributed his adaptations of the blues to the evening's program, the audience must have felt as though they had just experienced first-hand the 350-year growth of the blues style. Despite a developed and interesting guitar technique, Bishop's blues fell on deaf ears.

Bishop's style of rock was also exceptional. I had never heard "Gotta Put On My Travellin' Shoes" until a "get psyched" hour of preparatory listening, a period devoted solely to the work of the artist-to-be experienced. That one time was enough to convince me that Bishop has earned his position in the annals of major modern rock musicians. With the aid of another guitarist, Bishop was also able to build a masterpiece from a basic two-note riff.

On the darker side, both guitarists flaunted slides throughout, yet never delved far enough into attempting double slide work with melody, which I expected to resemble even the poorest facsimiles of Allman-Betz duets.

The pianist most closely approached virtuosity, though he had barely mastered only his instrument's rock & roll potentials. His absence from the act's second half was noticed, felt and heard.

Bishop saved the exposition of his own soloing talents until late in the concert. Though he compensated well for lost time, it was already too late for the many who had left early to realize the fullness of Bishop's ability.

The Middlebury audience can have no justifiable complaint about the concert. Both bands gave their all to the performance and visually and aurally appeared to have had as good a time as I.

CLASSIFIED

For sale: Music Master Fender Bass in excellent condition. Also 30 watt Premier Bass Amplifier. Call Pat at 862-5837 after 6 p.m.

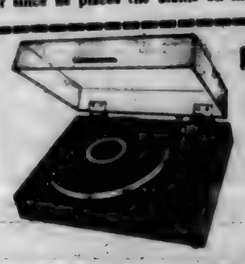
Wanted: lake fish (any type) to feed to research animals – Please don't throw out your fish from ice fishing, will offer to pay. Call Sharon Simpson, 656-2922.

Wanted: a used 10 speed bicycle in good condition for under $100. No phone – write a note and I'll get in touch with you. Susan Fickett, 492 S. Union St.

Wanted: to trade an electric typewriter for a zoom lens, preferably a Nikkor to fit a Nikon Nikkormat. Will pay any difference in value. Tenner, 862-8080.

For sale: Finch Reel-to-reel Stereo Tape Recorder with built-in speakers and amplifier. Has two recording channels with V.U. meters. Includes microphone $50. Call Mary or Chris at 878-8316.

For Sale: Karth Shoe Boots, excellent condition. Size: 7.25 w / 5.75 m. Best offer ($45.00 new). Please call 985-8573.



PIONEER PL-10 BELT DRIVE TURNTABLE

With this well-made stereo turntable, Pioneer proves once again that quality and practicality are synonymous. THE BUDGET-PRICED PL-10 gives you more for your stereo investment than you'd ever expect. A fine synchronous motor that helps cut out audible wow and flutter. An extremely steady belt-drive. An anti-skating control to lessen distortion. A cueing device with simultaneous movement with the start lever. And a beautifully-balanced S-shaped tonearm with plug-in type lightweight head-shell. For the man about to make his first investment into stereo components, the PL-10 becomes more than a budget investment but a truly professional turntable that will serve him well for many years of quality sound reproduction.

Manufacturer's List $125 — $79.95

PIONEER

PL-12D STEREO TURNTABLE

Despite its simplified 2-control operation, this versatile unit contains a high degree of sophistication with advanced features like: 4-pole, belt-driven synchronous motor; static-balanced S-shaped tonearm; ultra-light tracking; oil damped cueing; anti-skating control; 12-inch dynamically balanced die cast platter, walnut base, hinged dust cover; 33⅓ – 45 rpm speeds. SALE $89.95

Complete with Base, Dust Cover

QUANTITIES LIMITED

AUDIO DEN

South Burlington — Phone 863-4398

100 DORSET STREET

Monday thru Friday 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Boogie Your Boards Off During Town Meeting Days At SMUGGLER'S NOTCH

Monday, Feb. 3rd - Tuesday, Feb. 4th

MID SEASON SPECIALS FOR AND DISCOUNT PASS HOLDERS REGULAR SEASON PASSHOLDERS

Buses Monday and Tuesday FREE For Everyone

8:30 - State Health Dept.
8:15 Guterson Field House
4:30 - Return Buses To Burlington

½ PRICE ON BAR DRINKS

John Cassel At Piano

30% OFF MERCHANDISE
3-6 PM SKI SHOP SALE

Smuggler's Notch- Where you get more activity for your money

by Jesse Clemens

Editors note: It has been the decision of the VERMONT CYNIC'S, Editorial board for this paper to back the United Farm Workers support effort in this community. The following is an article prepared for this paper by the local UFW support in an attempt to point out the major issues still hard pressed to the controversy.

You may have seen ads, pamphlets or letters recently from the E&J Gallo wine company, talking about the dispute between Gallo and the United Farmworkers Union. Rather than confront the truth and justice of the farmworkers charges against them, the Gallo company has launched a multi– million dollar public relations offensive aimed at obscuring the issues and misleading the public. The facts about Gallo speak for themselves.

GALLO BEFORE THE UFW

The Gallo labor situation was pretty typical of the plight of migrants before the United Farm Workers won their first contracts. Here are some of the conditions that existed at Gallo before the UFW.

Speed up; those who did not work at breakneck speed were fired on the spot to intimidate others.

Labor camp housing facilities consisting of one room shacks with no proper sanitary facilities.

No job security; 15–20 workers fired per day during peak harvest time.

No clean drinking water or bathrooms provided for field hands during working day.

Low wages; less than $1.60 guaranteed federal minimum for ind.stry.

Racism; company supervisors would race Chicano vs. Portuguese work teams.

Labor contractor system; company supervisors hired by Gallo to fire, hire and pay workers often stole hard earned wages of workers.

This was the situation most migrants' found themselves in through most of the sixties. Tired of low wages, harrassement and hazardous working conditions, grape pickers went on strike and organized the United Farm Workers Organizing Committee. After a long struggle and a successful boycott, the first UFW contracts were signed by Schenley and Di Grogio companies in '66 and '67. Gallo signed with the UFW in 1967, not because of a love of justice, but because, of successful boycotts against Schenley and Di Gorgio the

A Plea T
The Soviet

Steve Garber
Yale University
3168 Yale Station
New Haven, Ct. 06520

People are urged to cut out the following article and send it to the Russian Embassy in Washington. Also, the author would encourage letters protesting the incidents mentioned in the article. For further information call Philp at 656-3009, or contact him in 503 Mason.

The last time the courts of the Soviet Union decreed a death sentence against Soviet Jews, thousands of people turned out in New York City and in cities around the world to protest that travesty of justice and to demand commutation. That was in 1970, The infamous Leningrad Hijack Trial. And the sentences were commuted, though the sentences which replaced them remained ridiculously severe.

On December 8, 1974, in Moscow, Mikhail Leviev was sentenced to death. Leviev is a 56-year-old former manager of a Moscow store. In March, 1972 he applied with his family for exit visas from the USSR. In June of the same year, the family received exit permits. The next day, Mikhail Leviev was arrested. He was subsequently held "under investigation" for two years, and after an 11 week trial also involving non-Jewish defendants who received lighter sentences, Leviev was sentenced to death by firing squad for alleged "economic crimes." His wife was denied an appeal, but a flurry of protests from abroad evidently helped to stay the execution temporarily. Leviev now sits in a Moscow prison awaiting death; his exact state is

Don't Swallow Gallo's Line

by Jesse Clemens

Editors note: It has been the decision of the VERMONT CYNIC'S Editorial board for this paper to back the United Farm Workers support effort in this community. The following is an article prepared for this paper by the local UFW support in an attempt to point out the major issues still hard pressed to the controversy.

You may have seen ads, pamphlets or letters recently from the E&J Gallo wine company, talking about the dispute between Gallo and the United Farmworkers Union. Rather than confront the truth and justice of the farmworkers charges against them, the Gallo company has launched a multi-million dollar public relations offensive aimed at obscuring the issues and misleading the public. The facts about Gallo speak for themselves.

GALLO BEFORE THE UFW

The Gallo labor situation was pretty typical of the plight of migrants before the United Farm Workers won their first contracts. Here are some of the conditions that existed at Gallo before the UFW.

Speed up; those who did not work at breakneck speed were fired on the spot to intimidate others.

Labor camp housing facilities consisting of one room shacks with no proper sanitary facilities.

No job security; 15-20 workers fired per day during peak harvest time.

No clean drinking water or bathrooms provided for field hands during working day.

Low wages; less than $1.60 guaranteed federal minimum for industry.

Racism; company supervisors would race Chicano vs. Portuguese work teams.

Labor 'contractor' system; company supervisors hired by Gallo to fire, hire and pay workers often stole hard earned wages of workers.

This was the situation most migrants found themselves in through most of the sixties. Tired of low wages, harrassment and hazardous working conditions, grape pickers went on strike and organized the United Farm Workers Organizing Committee. After a long struggle and a successful boycott, the first UFW contracts were signed by Schenley and Di Grogio companies in '66 and '67. Gallo signed with the UFW in 1967, not because of a love of justice, but because of successful boycotts against Schenley and Di Gorgio that convinced them that a Gallo boycott was to be avoided at all costs. Gallo signed with the UFW on the basis of a card check election that was verified by the California Department of Labor.

UFW contracts greatly improved the lives of the workers. Some of these benefits were: higher wages, strict regulation of dangerous pesticides, bathrooms and fresh drinking water mandatory in the fields, child labor prohibited (Gallo says this breaks up families), first health care plan in Gallo's history, and one of the most important provisions, the union hiring hall. Instead of the grower controlling the farm labor force through his hiring and firing power, the union controlled it, supplying workers through the hiring hall and protecting them via the local ranch committee. While this tended to stabilize the work force, it also removed the growers from the daily control of workers' lives and lessened their power to harrass, intimidate and dominate them. Growers found this most unpalatable.

A quote from a farmworker sums up the workers' feelings about the UFW and the hiring hall.

"The union has improved our working and living conditions 100%. The work isn't killing us anymore. Workers no longer have to jump when the grower comes, nor take off their hats in homage to him."

THE TEAMSTER RAID

The top leaders of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters have always created problems for the United Farm Workers. In April, 1973, rather than sign contracts with the UFW, the growers invited the Teamster's Union to "organize" their workers. This Teamster-Grower alliance gives the Teamsters Union more union dues and more power for their union and gives the growers insulation from the UFW. It's the workers who lose with this alliance. The Teamster-Grower "sweetheart" contracts eliminate many of the benefits the workers had with the UFW. The Teamster contract brings back the hated labor contracting system, eliminates clauses for no child labor, toilets and cool water in the fields, bans on dangerous pesticides, and eliminates any voice in decision making by the farmworkers.

Here's what Einar Mohn, President of the Western Conference of Teamsters has said about farmworker representation in the Teamsters Union, "It will be a couple of years before we can use farmworkers ideas in the union...I'm not sure how effective a union can be when it is composed of Mexican-Americans... as jobs become more attractive to whites, then we can build a union that has structure and membership participation." (Los Angeles Times 4/28/73.) David Castro, appointed president of Teamster farmworker local 1973, has often stated that union elections will not be held until at least 1976. When asked to explain why he told reporters that if they were held sooner, "I might not win." (Fresno Bee 9/16/74)

Much of the Teamster-Grower alliance has to do with their racist attitudes about a union that is composed mainly of Chicano, Blacks and Asian workers, whose leaders are democratically chosen by the workers. Big growers like Gallo would rather meet with Teamster bureaucrats in plush hotels than meet with a ranch steward chosen by their workers.

GALLO CHOOSES TEAMSTERS

The UFW-Gallo contracts were due to expire on April 18, 1973. Negotiations began on March 22 and Gallo refused to extend the protections of the contract day-to-day if the negotiations go past the date of expiration, a common procedure. On April 15, other grape growers signed with the Teamsters. On May 10, Teamster "organizers" appeared at Gallo ranches in Livingston, Snelling and Fresno. The UFW asked Gallo if they doubt UFW representation of their workers. Gallo gave assurances they were bargaining in good faith. Two key UFW ranch stewards were fired by Gallo on May 14 and 18. Cesar Chavez asked for elections to resolve the issue of representation. Fresno Bee (May 21) carries the story with the headline "Chavez asks for elections by Gallo." During the 12th negotiating meeting between the UFW and Gallo, Gallo announced that unless tha UFW agrees to their position on union security, hiring hall and seniority, the company is not willing to proceed with negotiations. Negotiations broke off. On June 26, Gallo sent letters to workers stating that the Teamster's claim to represent the workers. The Gallo workers called a meeting and voted to strike. The strike began the next day on June 27 with most of the Gallo workers walking out. When the Teamster area supervisor, James Smith, was asked about the elections for the workers to decide representation, he replied, "The Teamsters are not going to go to any Mickey Mouse elections of any nature." (Modesto Bee, June 28)

On July 3, Sister Joyce Higgins and five other priests and nuns asked Gallo for elections. Robert Gallo refused a secret ballot election but agreed to a card check election. Three days later Sister Higgins telegramed Robert Gallo so she could present 173 signed UFW authorization cards out of 222 Gallo workers on the payroll as of 4/18/73. Robert Gallo never acknowledged the telegram. The strike continued and on July 9th, after one negotiating session, Gallo signed a four year contract with the Teamsters. While publicly proclaiming that their workers want the Teamsters Union, Gallo began eviction proceedings against 70 striking workers and 400 children who live in Gallo's labor camp.

JURISDICTIONAL DISPUTE?

The California Supreme Court has ruled that a jurisdictional dispute does not exist when an employer substitutes his choice of a union for the choice of the workers (Chavez vs. Englund 12/29/72) This is exactly what Gallo did, Gallo chose the Teamsters against the wishes of the workers.

WHAT ABOUT THE NLRA?

Gallo acts very noble about their "endorsement" of extending the National Labor Relations Act to agricultural workers. The initial act (Wagner Act) which was passed in 1935 was a progressive legislative act which gave workers the right to organize and to have elections. However, several anti-labor amendments to this act have made it undesireable for the protection of farmworkers, such as restrictions on boycotts and an amendment for court imposed "cooling off" periods which could weaken agricultural strikes. The UFW is sponsoring legislation that extends the initial acts of the NLRA without the restrictive amendments.

DON'T BUY GALLO!!

The Gallo company is not the benevolent big brother to the farm workers movement that they try to portray. Their company grew in size and wealth partly at the expense of poverty stricken migrant and seasonal farmworkers. Like all other major agricultural companies in California, Gallo fought against the rights of farmworkers. Gallo signed with the UFW to avoid a boycott in 967, which was a time of erupting social movements, when people were becoming politicized by the black and anti-war movements. Evidently in 1973 Gallo and the other growers thought that the American people were too apathetic or too involved with their own problems to participate in a boycott of their products. The fact that Gallo representatives have written a letter to the CYNIC and have been on this campus is enough to dispel that idea. The San Francisco Chronicle and the Wall Street Journal have reported that Gallo sales are off 9-10 percent and stores all over the country are being persuaded to take Gallo off the racks.

We need your help to win justice in the fields. The United Farm Workers Union is in a life and death struggle with the Teamster-Grower alliance. Gallo has millions of dollars to pour into anti-boycott campaigns and they have hired two top Public Relations firms to counter the boycott. In contrast with the growers, the UFW has very little money. Full time UFW staff, including Cesar Chavez, earn salaries of $5 a week, plus room and board. It seems like the odds are greatly stacked against us but we do have time and justice on our side, which in the end is more powerful than money. Farmworkers and supporters are in hundreds of cities across the United States spreading the word of the boycott. They are determined to defend their union no matter how long it takes. They will not let the gains they fought so long and hard for go down the drain. Help them win their fight for justice and self determination. Boycott Gallo wines which include: Boones Farm, Spanada, Tyrolia, Red Mountain, Thunderbird, Ripple, Paisano, Madria Madria Sangria, Josef Steuben and all wines from Modesto California and all grapes and non-UFW lettuce. For more information on the UFW or to help call the UFW support committee at 864-4661.

SAGA Converts To UFW Lettuce

by Stephen W. Tanner

SAGA Food Service has always taken the position that it should respond to the majority of the people it serves, SAGA Food's Director, Fred Smith, told the Cynic. Accordingly, by a mandate from the Inter-Residence Association (IRA), SAGA will begin serving only lettuce picked by the United Farm Workers, unless the cost of that lettuce exceeds the cost of regular lettuce by $2 per case.

IRA representatives were approached with the idea two weeks ago Monday. They took four proposed ideas back to the residence halls (and to the town) where constituencies were consulted. The representatives then voted a week ago Monday for one of the following four proposals:

1. To completely ignore the boycott and buy lettuce as usual.

2. To buy only UFW lettuce and ration it if it became scarce (as it sometimes does).

3. To buy the best value in lettuce possible and then post whether or not it was UFW lettuce so the customer could decide for himself.

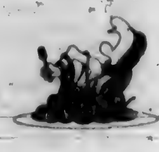
4. To buy only UFW lettuce unless the cost of UFW lettuce exceeds the cost of regular lettuce by $2 per case (which was accepted by the IRA representatives and SAGA).

Last spring a group of interested students filled a petition with 2,000 signatures requesting that all lettuce served by SAGA be UFW lettuce. This year, until now, SAGA has been serving the regular lettuce because no one has shown concern.

The lettuce strike has been going on since 1970, when the teamsters signed the so-called "sweetheart" contracts with lettuce growers after the growers would not recognize UFW demands for union representation elections. The teamsters made the agreements without apparent support of the UFW as polls have shown.

The problems with UFW lettuce are that it is usually more expensive, sometimes of poorer quality, and not always in ample supply. For those reasons last year SAGA had to ration lettuce and will again this year if enough lettuce cannot be obtained.

Bratt's Club: The People's Choice



by Jay Jenkins

The Fresh Ground Coffee House: the food is good, it's wholesome with a flair. It's a casual place, friendly, a nice place to spend an afternoon. They serve the cheapest bottle of wine in town. Come to think of it, Fresh Ground has a lot going for it. No wonder it's the people's choice.

It's the people's choice for other reasons too. I'm sure owners Mike and Sandy Bass would cringe at such clickeed rubric as "food from the people" or "food for the people" in describing their restaurant. Yet, one has ambiguous feelings about how thematically true this is of Fresh Ground. Granted, when Mike says he wants to "offer an alternative" in the short order restaurant scene, he is correctly assessing a market looking for a change from the plastic sandwich in a basket fare.

They have certainly succeeded. Theirs is a carefully calculated melting pot of various dishes designed to delight even the most finicky customers. If, on Monday, you feel down to basics, split pea soup and lasagna is offered. On Friday, perhaps crepes champignon and Russian Cabbage Borscht would be the better alternative. A variety of teas and original homemade pastries make it a complete meal the likes of which can't be found elsewhere in town. I advise you not to come prepared for a bargain. Fresh foods are expensive (as if you haven't noticed.) We mustn't be naive in thinking that Fresh Ground isn't a profit-taking organization. I am almost convinced that you'll get what you pay for, but not quite.

Prices are not the only disconcerting element of the Fresh Ground experience. "Earth consciousness weighs heavily on my mind when I watch the insouciant sauciers of the Fresh Ground kitchen do their thing. Is it a down to earth restaurant where natural foods are prepared with a conscious hand or is it just another bastion of a Woodstock Nation? The answer is difficult. There is much to be enjoyed at Fresh Ground, but there is also something about it which makes me uneasy. I think it is a matter of consciousness, of sensibility, of approach. Do you enjoy watching a cheerful open kitchen and inspecting the contents of your ratatouille before it is potted and stewed? Or do you object to the early flannel shirt and late hiking boot approach? Do you worry that you'll find a beard hair in your bowl of chili? That is unjust if you think that these people care about what they are doing and that they are doing it well. But are you still put off by the "right on" and jaded atmosphere of those there who seem to be "Big A" refugees?

I would be less than frank if I say that I am not confronted uncomfortably with a post-graduate anti-urbanite decadence in Fresh Ground. Their formula has grown stagnant by my reckoning, for those who express their sophistication in matters of contrived taste and earth-conscious art seem to be crowding to bathe themselves in the amber light of the downbeat idealist and mellow intellectual.

I said that all this is a matter of approach, of bias. It is tough to be indifferent about Fresh Ground. If you are "with" the issues, perhaps you'll enjoy eating with other relevant individuals. You may get to sit next to one of the chefs if it happens to be their lunch hour. You may want to dress up (or down) because Fresh Ground Coffee House is a place to be seen. It's where the people eat. It's the people's choice.

A Plea To The Soviet Union

Steve Garber
Yale University
3168 Yale Station
New Haven, Ct. 06520

People are urged to cut out the following article and send it to the Russian Embassy in Washington. Also, the author would encourage letters protesting the incidents mentioned in the article. For further information call Philp at 656-3009, or contact him in 503 Mason.

The last time the courts of the Soviet Union decreed a death sentence against Soviet Jews, thousands of people turned out in New York City and in cities around the world to protest that travesty of justice and to demand commutation. That was in 1970. The infamous Leningrad Hijack Trial. And the sentences were commuted, though the sentences which replaced them remained ridiculously severe.

On December 8, 1974, in Moscow, Mikhail Leviev was sentenced to death. Leviev is a 56-year-old former manager of a Moscow store. In March, 1972 he applied with his family for exit visas from the USSR. In June of the same year, the family received exit permits. The next day, Mikhail Leviev was arrested. He was subsequently held "under investigation" for two years, and after an 11 week trial also involving non-Jewish defendants who received lighter sentences, Leviev was sentenced to death by firing squad for alleged "economic crimes." His wife was denied an appeal, but a flurry of protests from abroad evidently helped to stay the execution temporarily. Leviev now sits in a Moscow prison awaiting death; his exact state is unknown. His only remaining recourse is to the Supreme Court of the USSR, and we are his only hope.

Why haven't American Jews responded to this man's plight? Why are no people marching in the streets in 1975? Why have we failed to notice this fellow Jew and to come to his aid?

Every American Jew can help Mikhail Leviev. It's cheap and it's easy. Activism starts at home. What do I mean? There are two or three actions which can feasibly be expected of every American Jew. First of all, send a telegram to Leonid Brezhnev: DO IT TODAY. For a 21-word overnight cable to the USSR, Western Union will charge $2.92, and your message will have the effect of 100 letters. Just demand commutation. State your outrage in the name of your entire community.

Mr. Brezhnev's address is Kremlin, Moscow, RSFSR (which stands for Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic), USSR.

This case is really urgent. Death is final and we don't know for when the execution is set. Tell your friends to send a telegram, too. If you live in a city housing any Soviet agency, telephone whenever you have a spare minute and demand commutation for Mikhail Leviev. This issue is safe. Even Amnesty International has condemned the sentence as "excessive." If you have connections to prominent businessmen or lawyers, get them to make a statement about this case and send the Kremlin a copy.

The present silence of the Jewish community is unbearable. It is bursting my eardrums and it's killing Mikhail Leviev.

UVM Winter Spectacular

by D. Drake

A Winter Carnival Spectacular at UNH took place on Sunday afternoon, Feb. 16, at Snively Arena in Durham. The UVM girls' hockey club, coached by Tom Kiley, played an action-packed game before four hundred enthusiastic Wildcat fans.

Before the start of the UVM-UNH clash, the coach of the UNH team questioned the legality of playing hockey with figure skates, no hockey gloves, and no mouth guards. After a minor controversy the well-padded UNH team took to the ice, as did the ill-clad Catamount clan. At the end of the first fifteen minute period, the Wildcats held a 1-0 lead, though UVM dominated the period. Back on the ice in the second period, the UVM girls scored quickly: Mary Dee slapped it home with assist coming to Debi Bloom and Pat Duff. On defense for the Cats were Nancy Mullen and Barb Powers, both playing an exceptional hockey game. The score at the end of a hard hitting second period was 3-1. The exhausted UVM first and only line, (having no substitutes) allowed the fully-uniformed Wildcats to score two more goals in the third period, making the final score 5-1.

The thirty-member Wildcat club now stands 4-1 in their intercollegiate season, losing only to Brown. The UVM six-girl squad made a noble effort in a tiring, hard checking battle. The UVM goalie Nancy Beals, in a valiant first-time-ever effort, stopped an amazing 18 shots on goal, allowing only 5 of the total 23 shots in. The UVM girls had 20 shots on the experienced UNH goalie.

With a little more practice and experience, the Catamount squad has the potential to become a top contender in the girls' intercollegiate circuit.

Study At Tel Aviv University

Tel Aviv University (student body: 18,000) offers a variety of study programs for American students at various levels of their college studies.

The Overseas Student Program offers qualified students the opportunity to study at the University and to earn fully transferable credits toward their degree.

The programs offered are diversified and flexible. The one-year programs are geared for the Freshman, Sophomore, and Junior. The language of instruction is English. A full Bachelor's, Master's, and Ph.D. curriculum is also offered to academically qualified students who are fluent in Hebrew. These students study in the regular University program. The Hebrew-language summer Ulpan, open to all college students, is an intensive course for students not proficient in Hebrew.

In combining a classroom and a living experience, the Tel Aviv University Overseas Student Program offers a meaningful challenge. Opportunities to gain insight into the unique life of Israel and the Israeli society are given through field trips, independent study projects, participation in special seminars and student social activities.

For information, contact the Office of Academic Affairs, American Friends of Tel Aviv University, 342 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10017, telephone (212) 687-5651.

...S.A. Senate Reborn

(continued from page one)

wants the chairpersons of the committees to be elected rather than appointed.

Dallas Sacher had the third proposal, which consisted of two groups, one Financial and one Student Action. The Financial Committee would deal with activities that the old SA performed. The Student Action would deal exclusively in political action on students' behalf. Each committee will consist of 15 members.

Edsel Peacock's Rock

This week's encounter with rock is loaded down with the workings of power, heavy, gut-crunching music that deserves nothing less than the full 120 decibal sound level. At the very least every little nuance, even the most subtle is evidently audible at that volume. I admit that nothing effects me as strongly as the zing of a crisp cymbal. I know the life giving energy in the wail of a guitar but clarity of sizzling symbals defies every notion of heaviness even in the blast of Oveen or Montrose.

BABE RUTH/babe ruth - The Babe as they're affectionately Elowa, has scored again and this is a big blast. This, their third album (mystical 3's), should get them the large following they deserve. This British band scores on every song. Their six originals are just that, original and their 3 renditions of classix, Curtis Mayfield's "We The People Darker Than Blue," the surprising "The Good, The Bad, and The Ugly" and the killer version of the old soul staple "Private Number," on which they use mellotrons, moogs, and synthesizers to recreate the orchestral textures of the original. Musically, they revolve in the same sphere of ability as the Mothers and Pink Floyd. Vocalist Janita "Jenny" Haan has to rank with her countrywoman, Maggie Bell as possessing the most powerful set of lungs and razor-sharp vocal chords on either side of the Atlantic. And since we all disclaim any knowlege of the depths that songwriters exist in, I can appreciate the footnotes to their lyrics explaining the mumbo-jumbo of Hollywood names and Dickensian phrases they employ. Since their last album was titled "First Base," it's easy to see now that Babe Ruth is closer to home. Their next record should be a grand slam. (A-, as fine as the candy bar colors)

GROWL/growl - It's rock n' roll, not great and definitely not bad, and not for everyone. Maybe this is Frank Zappa's idea of a Little Richard rhythm and blues band reincarnated. It is his label (Discreet) and who knows what grows in his head besides gems. So watch out. Double vocalists Richard Manuputi and Dennis Rodriguez sound like Mick J. growling under the albino guise of Johnny Winter. Which isn't bad. The band does excellent reworkings of "Shake Your Money Maker," and "Hound Dog," but flop on "I Just Wanna Make Love to You," which has been done too many times by too many people to even roll over here. The rest of the songs are originals that are undistinguishable from each other. (C+, a sharp bark more than a growl colors)

. . . Panthers Fall

(continued from page eleven)

beat Brimsek cleanly on the glove side and caught the far top corner of the net. The second power play goal was scored by Billy Koch with assists going to Bill Spence and John Glynne. These two quick goals seemed to stun Middlebury and from this point on they were never in it. This at the end of two periods the score was 5-2 in favor of Vermont.

The third period was dominated by Vermont as they came out and scored after only 49 seconds had elapsed. The goal was scored by Billy Koch with assists going to Yeates and O'Connell. The onslaught continued when Tom Colby scored his second goal of the evening at the 3:26 mark with assists coming from Rickard and Brady. Bob Connerty scored for Middlebury at the 9:10 mark to make the score 7-3. But the issue was not in doubt. Billy Koch added the last two Vermont goals, his third and fourth of the evening to round out the scoring and to make the final score 9-3.

It was a solid outing for the Cats who raised their mark to 19-10 overall. They hold an 11-4 Division I record.

I was very impressed by the Cats constant hustle. I was especially pleased by the performances turned in by Michel Lebeau and Tommy Colby. They prove that size isn't everything and that with a little hustle and lots of heart you can still get the job done as well as someone who has superior talent.

...Statement Of Support Of Bill For Bill S. 93- The UVM Pedestrian Underpass

(continued from page five)

within this county, where the underpass is planned to be build, are more familiar with the project than other people across the state. For the project is a local one and those residing in the area would be more exposed to the development of the underpass and its impact. If representation is ideal, then these state senators are justified in their sponsorship of the bill.

Citizens, attending the Burlington Planning Commission meeting in September, 1974, when approval for the underpass was discussed, voiced opposition, again as a majority. It is the strong conviction of many people in the Burlington area that a majority of people within Chittenden County are opposed to the construction of the underpass for varying reasons.

THE COST FACTOR

The State of Vermont is experiencing a great financial deficit this year. Taxes may be raised as a result. Money in Vermont is tight. The $550,000 allocated for the underpass could be better utilized for other capital construction projects within the state. The University of Vermont itself will be needing financial assistance in the near future for proposed expansions of the gymnasium and the library, both facilities presently being utilized beyond their capacity. It may be possible to pledge the money allocated for the underpass to another university capital construction project. The money could also supplement next fiscal years' capital construction budget, a state budget that has been slashed greatly.

The funds allocated to the underpass are also financing new campus security offices, including a conference room and a possible arms storage room for the ROTC program. These may represent extra costs in construction of the underpass. The problem of security might be handled less expensively in installation of an outpost rather than complete relocation of the security offices.

Back in November 1971, the University received written pledges totaling $275,000 from three local banks for private loans to finance an overpass. When the overpass was scratched as a solution, the idea of private funding (as compared to existing public funding) for the solution apparently died. Could private funding have been feasible for the underpass?

The State of Vermont, in these times of financial trouble, could definitely use the money allocated to the undespass project to lessen the state's financial burden.

In August 1973, Webster-Martin, the engineering contractor, estimated various costs for the underpass. Five hundred and fifty thousand dollars was given as the total cost. Eighty thousand dollars was budgeted for "landscaping." Sixty-four thousand dollars was budgeted as "miscellaneous" and $42,000 was budgeted for "inflation to 1975." Landscaping, which has since grown into an extensive pedestrian barrier system, will not consume a majority of the "miscellaneous" funds and "inflation to 1975" must be considered as an expense. According to the Standard Form of Agreement Between Owner and Engineer For Professional Services, the engineer "cannot and does not guarantee that proposals, bids or the project construction cost will not vary from cost estimates prepared by him." No guarantee exists that the money allocated to the underpass will be sufficient to cover the lowest bona fide bid.

Of the money allocated to the underpass project, $87,000 has already been spent. Back in Fall 1974, steel tubing was purchased for $27,000. It can be resold, according to university officials, without a loss for steel prices have increased twice since the purchase. There, $50,000 going to engineering fees, could not be recovered. This amount represents about 9 percent of the total sum. The state could realize a savings of nearly $500,000 money which could be reallocated for capital construction projects and help pay off existing state construction bonds.

THE ON-GRADE CROSSINGS

The alternative to the underpass is the use of on-grade crossings similar to the existing crosswalks. To make the on-grade crossings a viable solution to the pedestrian auto conflict, several significant changes to the physical lay-out of the area must be made and the traffic control system must be adjusted. It has been stated often that on-grade crossings using the two existing crosswalks and the pedestrian-actuated signals have been tried but don't work and don't solve the problem. The problem is not so much that there is significant traffic and pedestrian flow but that the co-ordination of these two intersecting flows is poor, creating a potential safety hazard. The two existing crosswalks and the pedestrian actuated signals are currently under utilized. Sixty per cent of the pedestrian crossings occur at the designated crosswalks. Twenty-four per cent of the crossings utilize the pedestrian signals. Pedestrians are crossing Main Street at random locations other than the crosswalks. Pedestrians are crossing at the crosswalks at random times other than during the walk signal. This low utilization is the reason given as to why on-grade crossings do not work. But if the utilization of the crosswalks and the signals increased significantly, then co-ordination of the pedestrian and vehicular flows would be improved, thus reducing the potential of safety hazards.

The traffic lights at the two crosswalks include pedestrian-actuated signals. By activating a button, it enables the pedestrian to create an artificial gap in vehicular flow, allowing the pedestrian to cross the road. The major purpose for pedestrian-actuated signals as stated in the Manual On Uniform Traffic Control Devices is to create artificial gaps at locations where an insufficient amount of natural gaps occur for pedestrian crossings. What is happening at the two crosswalks on Main Street is that when a pedestrian walk phase is called for by activating the button, the pedestrian must wait up to 90 seconds before the walk phase is initiated. During this waiting period, a natural gap may occur, more often than not, allowing a safe crossing before the artificial gap is created. This causes the crossings at random times at the crosswalks. The signals, therefore, are under utilized because of the long delay for an artificial gap to occur. The artificial gap called for may not be needed because of natural gaps occurring beforehand. The 40 percent of pedestrians crossing at locations other than the crosswalks result from their refusal to use the pedestrian signals because of the delay and from the availability of crossing Main Street via a natural gap while traveling on either sidewalk.

Increased utilization of the crosswalks and of the pedestrian-actuated signals would decrease the potential for safety hazard. By changes and adjustments of physical characteristics, increased utilization would be obtained.

Following is an analysis of each physical characteristic and the criteria needed for the on-grade crossings to be a viable alternative to the underpass.

1. Increase Utilization of the Crosswalks

In examination of the immediate areas off the road by the crosswalks, physical characteristics are lacking to achieve directing crossings toward the crosswalks. A pedestrian system has been designed to channel students to the underpass. It is also possible to incorporate a similar design to channel students to the two crosswalks. This is documented in a 1974 UVM Pedestrian Traffic Survey.

> "Pedestrian barriers can prohibit pedestrian crossings of major roadways at points where such crossings cause extreme hazards or impede and delay vehicular traffic movement. Barriers would help to channelize and concentrate pedestrian crossing at specific points, thus forcing uniformity and control of pedestrian movements."

A substantial reduction of random crossings outside the crosswalks increases the level of safety when the majority of crossings occur at the crosswalks. This is illustrated in Chapter 8, "Pedestrians", of Traffic Control and Roadway Elements – Their Relationship to Highway Safety, Revised 1970.

> "...the relatively lower risk of crossing in a crosswalk area to crossing outside such an area (jaywalking) has been established. Studies... have shown that the risk to a pedestrian is less, 50 percent or more, when street crossings are made at an established crosswalk. The greatest risks were in crossings made near, but not in, the crosswalk area, and the smallest were for crossings in a signal controlled crosswalk."

The crosswalks now in existence are poorly designed. Two white lines on the border of the walks are the only pavement textures. Crosswalk markings with either diagonal or longitudinal lines increase the crosswalks' visibility to both the motorist and to the pedestrian. In addition, a marked crosswalk should be established at the crossing of University Heights on the south sidewalk. This idea has been proposed by the Design Review Board of the Burlington Planning Commission, Studies by Road Research Laboratories of Britain show that utilization of crosswalks through "zebra" crossings (longitudinal lines) for the crosswalks become more distinct and "separate" from the rest of the road.

2. Increase Utilization of the Pedestrian Actuated Signals

The pedestrian actuated signals are poorly utilized and, therefore, their purpose is not fulfilled. These lights are timed in co-ordination with the traffic lights in the jughandle, a near-by intersection easterly on Main Street. By severing the tie with these adjacent traffic lights, the minimum vehicular green time can be shortened allowing quicker access across for pedestrians since the minimum vehicular green time represents the maximum wait period for a walk phase to be initiated. The traffic control system now in operation could be synchronized to the heavy pedestrian flows that occur at various times during the day. The Design Review Board of the Burlington Planning Commission in 1972 listed this synchronization as a criteria to design for on-grade crossings when this was still under consideration as a solution. At those times during the day when both the vehicular and pedestrian flows are low, one of two types of control systems could be incorporated. One is the use of a continuous flashing yellow signal for vehicles and an illuminated signal for the pedestrian flow. Vehicles would be cautioned and the pedestrians could cross in only natural gaps; which would be more plentiful when the vehicular flow is low. Another system which could be incorporated is the usual light sequence but with a flashing red signal rather than a steady red signal. The advantage here is, if a natural gap appeared for crossing before the artificial gap, the vehicles would only need to stop and then proceed if the crosswalk is clear of pedestrians. A flashing 'walk' signal would coincide with the flashing red signal. These two systems are in accordance with guidelines set forth in the Manual On Uniform Traffic Control Devices.

SUMMARY

The major reason given to justify the underpass proposal has been one of safety. Proponents of the project say it is hazardous to cross that section of Main Street.

The majority of students who cross at upper Main Street are well aware of the conflict with the vehicular traffic. Students view the situation as no problem at all, or, at worst, an inconvenience. In no way does the majority of students believe that crossing upper Main Street is hazardous, or unsafe. Students are in the age bracket where the risk in becoming involved in a pedestrian-related accident is lowest.

In a one-year period, from August, 1973 on, fewer traffic accidents occurred in the area of the two existing crosswalks than either those accidents at the jughandle area or those at the area of the intersection of South Prospect and Main Streets.

The underpass proposal has been controversial from its beginning. Arguments both for and against the proposal have varied tremendously. As the representative of the students of the University of Vermont, it is my responsibility to express their views when necessary. It has been necessary, for the majority of students are opposed to the construction of the pedestrian underpass.

Movin' Picture Week

This is a very big week for the film enthusiast. A total of 6 films are scheduled for showings this week. These include two horror films and the rescheduled film, The Confession.

Tonight, February 27, Gene Kelly and Donald O'Connor team up in Singing in the Rain. This 1952 color film was directed by Gene Kelly and Stanley Donen and also stars Debbie Reynolds and Jean Hagen. It is a fun-filled and charming musical which combines nostalgia and sentiment in a gentle spoof on the styles and manners of the late 20's when movies were having problems changing to sound. The highlight of the film is the title number danced as a solo by Gene Kelly. The film will be shown in 101 Votey at 7:30 p.m.

Friday night is horror film night with two classic horror films. First, there is Frankenstein, made in 1931, and starring Boris Karloff, Colin Clive, Mae Clark and John Boles. This is the most famous horror film of all time, and is based on Mary Shelley's novel. It is notable for its mixture of gothic decay and chilling lyricism. Karloff's incarnation of the monster (which was originally intended for Bela Lugosi) remains the best of all monstrous performances. Next comes The Wolf Man, made in 1941, and starring Bela Lugosi, Lon Chaney, Claude Rains and Ralph Bellamy. This is one of the classic horror films, with an exceptionally literate script. The Wolf Man tells the tale of Larry Talbot, the man who finds himself cursed with lycanthropy. The films will be shown at 7:30 and 10:00 with both films being shown at each presentation. Admission is $1.

Kathryn Hepburn continues her series on Saturday night in African Queen. This 1951 color film also stars Humphrey Bogart and was directed by John Huston. It is considered one of the best films of both Hepburn and Bogart with her playing a very prim lady and Bogart playing a rough coarse river boat captain. He won an Academy Award for his role in the film. There will be two showings of the film, at 7:30 and 9:30 p.m. in 101 Votey. Admission is free.

Monday night will see the presentation of two French films. At 7:30 there is Last Year At Marienbad, made in 1961 and directed by Alain Resnais. This is one of the most controversial works of the French New Wave and was winner of the Golden Bear Award at the Venice Film Festival. It is a surrealistic portrait of a beautiful woman at a somber, palatial hotel. There she meets a man who tries to convince her that they have met before, "perhaps at Marienbad," had an affair and planned to meet once again and run away together. Although the woman is unable to remember him, she eventually leaves her husband and the strange hotel to go off with him. The film stresses subjective interpretations of reality, the ways in which people associate events in their past with incidents in the present, which is a recurring preoccupation in the work of Alain Resnais (Hiroshima Mon Amour). From the opening shots, in which the camera moves slowly through the hotel's elegant corridors, the film evokes a timeless locale, in which the protagonists seem to be trapped. The New York Times described the film as "an experience such as you've never had from watching a film... a unique and intense experience. The artfulness of this picture is in its brilliant photography, in its sumptuous set and and staging, in its hypnotic rhythmical flow and in the radical use of actors almost as models within the architectural frame." At 9:30 The Confession, originally scheduled for February 17, will be shown. This 1970 color film stars Yves Montand, Simone Signoret and Gabriele Ferzetti. It was created by its director Constantin Costa-Gavras as a rigorous warning against excesses of any ideological dedication while up-holding an ideal of personal truth and expression. Artur London is a dedicated Communist who, upon returning to his homeland after World War II, is imprisoned, subjected to torture and an extended purge trial which almost breaks his spirit. Yet he survives and lives to see justice done, and his accusers receive his former fate. There will be only one showing of each of these films, in 101 Votey. Admission is free.

...VPIRG Examines Energy Needs

(continued from page one)

natural forces to our benefit instead of using energy to control factors such as the sun, the wind, and the weather," said Natalie. "Frank Bridges, an engineer proposes that a rectangular building 2.5 times longer than its width and built along a north–south line will save 30% on its energy for cooling."

"By placing shade trees around a building, the cooling load in summer can be reduced 25 percent. The trees will also block wind in the winter, not to mention how beautiful they are," she said.

"We're locked into energy consumption by virtue of our lifestyles, but I sure hope we start using some imagination in trying to conserve it," Natalie concluded.

VPIRG would appreciate any volunteers wishing to help on this project or on any of the VPIRG projects which include Nuclear Power, Highways, Bottle Laws, Dental Care, Children's Health Care, and Bicycle Legislation. The VPIRG office is located at 49 North Prospect. Their telephone number is 863–3435.

"Governor" Aiken At UVM

Faculty, staff and students of the University are cordially invited to join in the complete schedule of events which will inaugurate the George D. Aiken Lecture Series at UVM, March 2 through March 5.

That schedule includes major addresses by Senator Mansfield on Sunday, March 2 at 8 p.m. in Ira Allen Chapel; and by former U. S. Agriculture Secretary Orville Freeman, now president of Business International Corp., on Wednesday, March 5 at 8 p.m. in Ira Allen Chapel.

It also includes five seminars on March 5, as follows:

9-11 a.m., Carpenter Auditorium, Given Building: The Potential Use of Military Force in an Era of Shortage. Dr. Douglas Kinnard, assistant professor, Brig. General, (ret.) U.S. Army, chairman; Dr. Mark Stoler, assistant professor, history; and a representative of the Pentagon.

9-11 a.m., 115 Commons, Living/Learning Center: Dynamics of World Population Growth. Dr. Samuel F. Sampson, professor and chairman, sociology, chairman; Thomas C. Davis, Vermont Agency of Human Services; Dr. Mary B. Deming, assistant professor sociology; Dr. Edwin D. Driver, professor, sociology, University of Massachusetts; Dr. Carl Reidel, director, Environmental Studies Program; and Ms. Martha M. Smyrnki, '75, sociology major.

1-3 p.m., 115 Commons, Living/Learning Center: World Food Production, Feast or Famine. Dr. Thomas W. Dowe, dean, College of Agriculture, chairman; Dr. Verle Houghaboom, Extension agricultural economist; Leo O'Brien, Vermont Commissioner of Agriculture; and Dr. Quentin M. West, administrator, Economic Research Service, U. S. Department of Agriculture.

1-3 p.m., Royall Tyler Theatre: Middle East Oil, OPEC and the World Economy. Dr. Abbas Ainasrawi, professor, economics, and associate dean, College of Arts and Sciences, chairman; Prof. Rowland Illick, geography, Middlebury College; Vermont Governor Thomas P. Salmon; and Dr. Jeanie G. Versteeg, assistant professor, economics.

3:30-5 p.m., Royall Tyler Theatre: Canada Looks at the World Food Supply. Senator Aiken will introduce the speaker, Arthur J. Andrew, Assistant Undersecretary of State for External Affairs, Canada; who will be the Michael Zeltzerman Visiting Lecturer at UVM. Panel Chairman: Dr. Edward J. Miles, professor, geography, and director, Canadian Studies Program. Panelists will include Dr. William Metcalfe, professor, history; and Dr. Robert Stanfield, associate professor, sociology; Mary Partridge, '77, Canadian studies major.

All the above are open to the public as well as to UVM faculty, staff, and students.

The Aiken lectures and seminars March 2-5 will formally inaugurate this series which has been organized as an annual event to honor Vermont's retired Senior Senator, but "The Governor," as Senator Aiken is fondly known to generations, needs no introduction to the faculty, students and staff who have met him during his weekly stays this semester as a Scholar in Residence at the Living and Learning Center.

According to observers, Senator Aiken and Mrs. Aiken have already established a warm rapport with just about everyone they've met at the university.

For the past several weeks, the Aikens have been arriving at the LL Center Tuesday mornings and staying through Thursdays, when they retire to their home usually in Putney or occasionally to their apartment in Montpelier.

The 82-year old Senator runs a pace at UVM which might tax a middle-aged instructor and possibly even the average undergraduate.

A typical UVM stint will include meetings with two or more undergraduate classes, a seminar, an informal gathering with students, and lunch with either a student or faculty group; an oral history taping session with Charles Morrissy of the Vermont Historical Society; and usually a morning at the library annex on lower Church St., where the Governor and Mrs. Aiken spend time working on the volumes of papers and memorabilia he has given to the University libraries. The collection means a rich slice of history as lived by one of the more influential Senators of the last half century.

The Aikens also find time to meet visiting dignitaries and occasionally dine with friends in the community while they are at the Living/Learning Center; and the Governor is not beyond wandering around that maize-like complex where even LL Director Dr. H. N. Muller is still said to get lost on occasion.

It is possible that Senator Aiken may be known as much for his sly wit as for his prestigious ranking in international affairs, agriculture and his expertise on energy.

When he first checked into the scholar in residence apartment at Living and Learning and asked what the schedule and ground rules were, he was advised that he had the same privileges as anyone else residing there.

"You mean I can anywhere I want?" he asked.

"Well," said Dr. Muller, who is also known as a bit of a dry wit, "as long as you don't shock too easily."

Reports have it that the Governor has yet to find anything exceptionally shocking at UVM, but he is reported to be enjoying himself immensely.

The first annual Aiken Lectures and seminars are intended to add some icing to that cake. They are open to faculty, staff and students as well as the public generally.

Why Did You Come To UVM?

WHY DID YOU COME TO UVM?

by Sari Bodi

Professors ask it. So do questionaires. In–staters, out–of–staters: freshmen and seniors. Public Speaking speeches––Written Expression essays: Orientation to Commencement.

Freshmen meet it everywhere: in the classroom, the dining hall, the dorm, downtown and at frat parties. Out-of-staters suffer from over-exposure to this query as incredulous Vermonters pose the ever–popular question.

The time to become concerned with the importance of this topic may occur one night, when you're dropping off to sleep, in the middle of a heart– to–heart discussion with your roommate of three years, and she suddenly asks, "Hey, why did you come to UVM?"

"I dunno," you reply enthusiastically, or with as much enthusiasm as you can produce at 3:00 in the morning.

"Well, you must have had a reason. What was it? Was it the skiing? Did you plan on doing a lot of skiing?"

"I don't ski."

"I know... but at the time maybe you thought you would."

"I didn't."

"Well, if it wasn't the skiing maybe it was just watching the winter sports. A lot of people..."

"My contacts freeze."

"Your what?"

"My contact lenses freeze when I'm out in the cold too long. And then they can crack and I could be blinded for life. I once knew a girl..."

"O.K. O.K. Well, if it wasn't that then maybe someone you knew came to school here and really liked it."

"Ivs Shapiro."

"Ivs Shapiro. She was a girl I knew that went here and dropped out after a year––or maybe it was a semester.

"Hmmm. There must be some reason why you picked UVM over all the other schools."

"What other schools?"

"The other schools you were accepted to."

"There weren't any."

"Oh. But you chose UVM to apply to. Now there has to be a reason for that. I know... you saw a catalogue of the place and were impressed with the campus."

"You're right. I saw a picture of Cook Building and I just had to come here."

"Come on. You have to admit that this is a pretty campus."

"Yeh, it is. In the spring. If my memory serves me correctly I do remember a day last spring (or maybe it was the year before,) when there wasn't any mud or snow and the sun was shining. I even took a picture of it so I could look back fondly on "my college campus." The university photographers must have been snapping away that day too, judging from the UVM Catalogue they just put out."

"Oh, but I think the campus looks pretty when it's all covered with snow."

"Does it? I'll have to try prying my eyelids open on one of my walks to campus. It's somewhat difficult though, with 40 below zero winds hitting you."

"Well, if you can't take the cold, why didn't you go to school in Florida?"

"I often ask myself that as I sit in class and watch my hands turn from blue to speckled white and as my teeth chatter incessantly and as my legs regain feeling and as my nose runs down my face. Sometime I try to imagine I'm in Florida so the warmth of my thoughts will thaw my legs faster. The hum of the air conditioner in Lafayette Building allows me to imagine this in mid–winter."

"You could have always transferred to someplace warmer."

"Yeh, but a guy I know goes to school down south and he says it's too hot and buggy. I don't know if I should listen to him though. He's one of those types that's never satisfied––always complaining."

"Yeh, I know the types. Well, I guess there's no real reason why you came here."

"I confess."

"What?"

"I confess. There is a reason. I've been trying to hide it, but it's no use. The real reason I came here was because I had a terrible crush on Charlie Catamount. And now that you've dragged it out of me, I hope you feel better."

"Okay, if you're going to be funny, I'm going to sleep. Good night."

"Good night. Hey, wait a minute! Why did you come to UVM?"

"I'm a Vermonter."

"Oh."

Icecats Thrash Par

by Randy Briggs

Last Wednesday night at the Gutterson Field House, the University of Vermont Hockey Machine continued to churn as it thrashed the Middlebury College Panthers 9-3. It was an awesome display of hustle by the Cats but mainly it was the case of just having superior talent.

For the first few minutes of the game, neither team seemed to muster much of an attack. But then Vermont started to put some pressure on in the Middlebury end. The aggressive play paid off when Ted Curtis scored at the 2:58 mark of the period with the assist coming from Micheal Lebeau. Panther goalie Jim Brimsek stopped the original shot but he lost the puck between his legs and it slid over the goal line.

The play over, the next ten to twelve minutes were even. Both teams had numerous chances to score but both goalies made some fine saves. But Lady Luck was on the Cats side as one Middlebury shot hit the goal post. The action went up and down the ice as both teams began to play sloppy defense thus giving both teams great scoring opportunities.

But again, as he had done all year long, Vermont goalie Tom McNamara kept the Cats in the game.

Vermont's great talent began to show late in the period when Tom Colby scored at the 15:40 mark with assists coming from John Glynne and Roger Mallette. Less than two minutes later, the Cats showed that killer instinct as Tim O'Connell struck for

THE ST SC
by Norm

Statistics are a funny thing. S and other times they are unimp hockey for instance, most fans goaltender's goals against averag statistic that they have a lot importance on.

This statistic is a defensive s for goals for, or against while UVM scores a goal, every skat UVM is scored on each skater

This kind of stat is very both the offensive and defensive defensive tandems.

As one would expect, the Mallette, and Koch is UVM's top scored 83 goals and given up 2 Halford with wings Bill Reber Spence line is +3 and the Colby goes, Yeates and McAldruff are are +10. These statistics are prior

One must look at these figur little explanation is needed. Th plays most of the time on the more goals with the opposing because the Spence and Colb column, it doesn't mean they play very good defensive hocke as much as the other lines.

Every team needs the good line and Vermont is blessed wit as well as the other two outst lines.

As far as individual plus a leads the Cats with a +61; Rog +60 and Bill Koch is third wit +28 and John Glynne holds fift

One must be cautious once O'Connell, Mallette, and Koch not to take anything away fro deserve these ratings, but it A couple of statistics that a play figures. UVM has scored percent while the opposition with 20 for 104. These figu abilities.

Coach Cross, when asked orientated replied, "Look at the Celtics, the Dolphins or great defenses. Defense wins the standings in Division 1. Ele scored more than Vermont yet less. Even though 12 teams h Cats are in third place. Harv Division I holds onto first plac

PIPES SCREENS PAPERS
INCE BURL JOKES
101
HOURS: 8:30-

Picture Week

week for total of ind for These ime and m, The

27. Gene
O'Connor
he Rain ilm was elly and lso stars nd Jean ited and which ts and spoof on rs of the ses were egang to
of the e danced elly. The in 101

horror film sic horror here is in 1931,
Karloff,
Clark and
The most of all time.
Shelley's
e for its decay and Karloff's monster intended ensins the onstrous comes The 1941, and osi, Lon
Rains and is one of s, with an its script,
the tale of man who ved with me will be 0:00 with wn at each
son is $1.
continues y night in his 1951
Humphrey
irected by considered me of both rt with his n lady and ough coarse the week in e his role in will be two ilm, at 7:30
101 Votey.

will see the wo French ere is Last
f, made in
by Alain
one of the works of ave and was olden Bear
Venice Film surrealistic utiful woman
atial hotel.
a man who tries to convince her that they have met before, "perhaps at Marienbad," had an affair and planned to meet once again and run away together. Although the woman is unable to remember him, she eventually leaves her husband and the strange hotel to go off with him. The film stresses subjective interpretations of reality, the ways in which people associate events in their past with incidents in the present, which is a recurring preoccupation in the work of Alain Resnais (Hiroshima Mon Amour). From the opening shots, in which the camera moves slowly through the hotel's elegant corridors, the film evokes a timeless locale, in which the protagonists seem to be trapped. The New York Times described the film as "an experience such as you've never had from watching a film... a unique and intense experience. The artfulness of this picture is in its brilliant photography, in its sumptuous set and and staging, in its hypnotic rhythmical flow and in the radical use of actors almost as models within the architectural frame." At 9:30

The Confession, originally scheduled for February 17, will be shown. This 1970 color film stars Yves Montand, Simone Signoret and Gabriele Ferzetti. It was created by its director Constantin Costa-Gavras as a rigorous warning against excesses of any ideological dedication while up-holding an ideal of personal truth and expression. Artur London is a dedicated Communist who, upon returning to his homeland after World War II, is imprisoned, subjected to torture and an extended purge trial which almost breaks his spirit. Yet he survives and lives to see justice done, and his accusers receive his former fate. There will be only one showing of each of these films, in 101 Votey. Admission is free.

To UVM?

n have to admit that this is a pretty campus."
the spring. If my memory serves me correctly day last spring (or maybe it was the year re wasn't any mud or snow and the sun was ok a picture of it so I could look back fondly campus." The university photographers must g away that day too, judging from the UVM t put out."
ink the campus looks pretty when it's all
."
have to try prying my eyelids open on one of
pus. It's somewhat difficult though, with 40 hitting you."
can't take the cold, why didn't you go to
?"
yself that as I sit in class and watch my hands
o speckled white and as my teeth chatter my legs regain feeling and as my nose runs metime I try to imagine I'm in Florida so the oughts will thaw my legs faster. The hum of r in Lafayette Building allows me to imagine
."
ve always transferred to someplace warmer."
y I know goes to school down south and he nd buggy. I don't know if I should listen to He's one of those types that's never complaining."
the types. Well, I guess there's no real reason re."

re is a reason. I've been trying to hide it, but real reason I came here was because I had a Charlie Catamount. And now that you've me, I hope you feel better."
're going to be funny, I'm going to sleep.

ey, wait a minute! Why did you come to ter."

Icecats Thrash Panthers

by Randy Briggs

Last Wednesday night at the Gutterson Field House, the University of Vermont Hockey Machine continued to churn as it thrashed the Middlebury College Panthers 9-3. It was an awesome display of hustle by the Cats but mainly it was the case of just having superior talent.

For the first few minutes of the game neither team seemed to muster much of an attack. But then Vermont started to put some pressure on in the Middlebury end. The aggressive play paid off when Ted Curtis scored at the 2:58 mark of the period with the assist coming from Michael Lebeau. Panther goalie Jim Brimsek stopped the original shot but he lost the puck between his legs and it slid over the goal line.

The play over, the next ten to twelve minutes were even. Both teams had numerous chances to score but both goalies made some fine saves. But Lady Luck was on the Cats side as one Middlebury shot hit the goal post. The action went up and down the ice as both teams began to play sloppy defense thus giving both teams great scoring opportunities. But again, as he had done all year long, Vermont goalie Tom McNamara kept the Cats in the game.

Vermont's great talent began to show late in the period when Tom Colby scored at the 15:40 mark with assists coming from John Glynne and Roger Mallette. Less than two minutes later, the Cats showed that killer instinct as Tim O'Connell struck for Vermont's third goal of the evening with assists going to Randy and Billy Koch. Thus, the score at the end of the first period stood at 3-0 in favor of Vermont.

In the second period, both teams appeared to start skating more fluidly. Passing was better on both sides. Vermont dominated play early in the period but Middlebury goalie Brimsek made some fine saves to keep the score at 3-0 in favor of the Cats. Middlebury kept hustling, though, and scored when Chris Lincoln poked one by McNamara at the 7:09 mark. Assists on the goal went to Mattson and Quinn. The goal seemed to spark Middlebury as they outplayed the Cats for the next six minutes. Vermont began making costly mistakes in their own end which allowed Middlebury to keep the pressure on. Then, at 13:08, Peter Prescott lit the lamp to make the score 3-2 in favor of Vermont. It appeared at this point of the contest that Vermont had a battle on its hands. With the momentum apparently in Middlebury's favor, it appeared they had come to play. But it was quickly snatched away when Vermont scored on two quick power play goals. The first one came at the 15:23 mark when Tim O'Connell scored on one of his patented slap shots. The assists came from Ken Yeates and Bill Spence. The goal was so great because without hesitation, after the pass from Yeates, he slapped it and if

(continued on page nine)

SWIM TALK

The Aqua Cats battled hard to even up their win loss record at four and four. Last weekend the UVM swim team steamed up the University of Rhode Island's swimming arena with a seventy four to thirty nine win. The Cats were on top of the meet from the outset looking strong in every event.

In the opening event of the meet, the Cats showed their prowess, leaving their URI competition far behind. The team of Cliff Johnson, Mike Jacobs, Paul Jones and Peter Andrews scorched across the finish line winning seven points to start the ball rolling. In the big distance event the 1000 yard freestyle Trip Blair was to take second place, in the warm—up before the meet Trip injured his heels, and it was not sure if he could swim his event. Blair undaunted by his injury swam to a respectable time.

The 200 freestyle John Mahoney and John Blake battled it out tooth and nail to the wire. John Blake won the event touching out John Mahoney, this gave the Cats one, two in the event. The 50-yard free was a repeat of the 200 with UVM swimmers placing one, two. Mike Jacobs and Paul Jones dominated the event adding more fuel to the already blazing inferno. The Cats were just beginning to smoke as Cliff Johnson stepped to the starting blocks of the 200 Individual Medley, and at the end of the race the Cats had again triumphed. With Johnson's first place in the 200 I.M. the score was UVM 31 and URI 8.

Freshman Mark Haun had his first gold of the season in the 200 Butterfly. Haun is expected to do well at the New England Conference Meet in one week. Another outstanding freshman at the meet was Peter Andrews. Peter swam to a judges' decision in the 100 yard freestyle getting second place behind Vermont's John Blake. Andrews was also the anchor man in the 400 medley relay and the lead-off swimmer in the 400 yard free relay. The third freshman to shine at the meet was Gary Zibro who placed second in the 200 yard backstroke. The final event, the 400 freestyle relay, was also won by Vermont. Peter Andrews, Paul Jones, John Mahoney, and John Blake gave the Cats their final victory of the day.

This weekend the Cats go away to UMass for their last dual meet of the season. If they win, their dual meet record will be 5 wins and 4 losses. Then the following week March 6, 7, and 8, the diesel powered Cats travel to the New Englands to make their bid for a top position. Anyone interested in attending the meet should contact Mike Brace, team Manager, for details.

Bowdoin Bows To Vermont

by Patrick Tavin

The University of Vermont hockey team won its last regular season home game Saturday night as they whipped the Bowdoin Polar Bears by a 6-1 score. The victory was the Catamount's eighteenth in the last 21 games, and their twentieth of the season. This marks the third consecutive year in which Vermont has won 20 or more games.

The Catamounts dominated the contest as they got 36 shots on goal, compared to a meager 17 by Bowdoin.

Bill Koch wasted no time at all as he rammed home Vermont's initial score with only 29 seconds gone in first period action. Tim O'Connell stole the puck from Bowdoin's Dan Claypool behind the Polar Bear net and passed to Koch in the crease. Koch flipped the puck past Bowdoin goalie Bob White for the easy score.

O'Connell continues to rewrite the UVM record books, as his assist on the play broke Patty Wright's old mark (68) for most points in one season. Earlier this season O'Connell became the all-time leading scorer in Vermont history. This is amazing since O'Connell is only a junior and still has one year of eligibility left.

Bowdoin scored its only goal of the night with a 3 on 1 break at 10:31 of the first period. The Polar Bears' Alan Quinlan took a centering pass from linemate Bernie Gallacher and knocked in a 20 foot wrist shot past the partially screened Vermont goalie, Tom McNamara.

The Cats failed to capitalize on numerous opportunities throughout the rest of the period and the score was still tied 1-1 at the end of the first stanza.

Vermont came out firing in the second period after their rather lackluster showing in the first column. Some aggressive work in front of the Bowdoin net by Peter Brady culminated in what turned out to be the winning goal. Brady stole the puck from a Bowdoin player against the boards. He skated in on goalie White's right side and took a wrist shot from about 8 feet out. White made the save but the Bowdoin defense failed to clear the puck. Brady got the rebound and took another shot which White kicked out to his left side. Brady again controlled the puck and lit the lamp at 3:15 with a backhander past the sprawling White.

Freshman Chuck Ross scored his second goal of the season on a slap shot from the left point midway through the period. Chris Hurley and Michel Lebeau were credited with assists on the play, as Vermont now led 3-1. Only a few minutes before this goal was scored Hurley had been shaken up in front of the Bowdoin net. The gutsy Hurley was not to be left out of the action, much to Bowdoin's discontent.

Chris Hurley in action against Bowdoin — SPS Photo by Tom Rutz

Junior Ken Yeates capped off second period scoring with a power play goal at 12:21. Yeates took a pass from Bill Reber at the faceoff circle to the right of the Bowdoin net. He skated in unmolested by the Polar Bear defense and wrinkled the net with a pretty backhand wrist shot.

The Cats continued to dominate action in the third period as Bowdoin's tempo of play slowed down considerably. The losers managed to muster only three shots on Vermont's goal in the final stanza, all of which were stopped by McNamara. Surprisingly, the visitors best chance came while the Cats were on a power play. Mike Bradley caught the UVM defense napping as he sped down the right side on a breakaway. McNamara played the puck beautifully as he stuffed Bradley's shot with his pads.

Vermont widened its lead to 5-1 on a Chris Hurley goal midway through the third period. Defenseman Ted Curtis had fired a slap shot from the point position which Hurley deflected into the net. Hurley had positioned himself nicely in front of the net and was duly rewarded.

The capacity crowd at Gutterson was thinning out soon after Hurley's goal since it was no longer a question of how the Cats would beat the Polar Bears. Rather, it was merely a matter of how much UVM would win by.

Vermont awarded its faithful fans with another tally at 18:10. Billy Koch has gained control of the puck behind the Polar Bear net and got off a centering pass to Bill McAlduff, who was in the crease to White's right side. The unselfish McAlduff passed up the shot and instead slipped it over to Roger Mallette across the slot. Roger easily beat White to the near side to close out the scoring.

McNamara played the entire game in the nets for Vermont and was called on to make only 16 saves. Bowdoin's White was pelted by the Vermont offense and came up with 30 saves for the visitors.

The Vermont senior playing in possibly their last game within the friendly confines of Gutterson were Bill Koch, Mallette, Andy Rickard, Curtis, Brady, and Captain John Murphy.

Overall the Cats played a solid game. They didn't have many defensive lapses and stayed away from taking a lot of penalties (they only had 3). Vermont controlled the puck well in the Bowdoin zone. Several times it looked as though the Cats were on a power play as they passed and will through the visitor's defense. In many of those instances Vermont did not have a man advantage, they were merely playing good positional hockey.

THE SPORTS SCENE

by Norm Robinson

Statistics are a funny thing. Sometimes they tell you a lot and other times they are unimportant and tell very little. In hockey for instance, most fans look at goals, assists, and the goaltender's goals against average. The coaches have a different statistic that they have a lot of faith in and place a lot of importance on.

This statistic is a defensive statistic. Each player is checked for goals for or against while he is on the ice. For instance, if UVM scores a goal, every skater is plus one and every time UVM is scored on each skater receives a —1.

This kind of stat is very reliable because it accounts for both the offensive and defensive skills of the players, lines and defensive tandems.

As one would expect, the electric line of O'Connell, Mallette, and Koch is UVM's top line with a +63. This line has scored 83 goals and given up 20. The line centered by Andy Halford with wings Bill Reber and Randy Koch is +20. The Spence line is +3 and the Colby line is +1. As far as the defense goes, Yeates and McAldruff are +14 and Glynne and Murphy are +10. These statistics are prior to the Bowdoin game.

One must look at these figures very closely however, and a little explanation is needed. The line centered by O'Connell plays most of the time on the power play and therefore get more goals with the opposing team a man short. Also, just because the Spence and Colby lines are low in the plus column, it doesn't mean they are ineffective. These two lines play very good defensive hockey even though they don't score as much as the other lines.

Every team needs the good checking and tough, defensive line and Vermont is blessed with two very good defensive lines as well as the other two outstanding offensive and defensive lines.

As far as individual plus and minuses go, Tim O'Connell leads the Cats with a +61; Roger Malette is a close second with +60 and Bill Koch is third with +58. Ken Yeats is fourth with +28 and John Glynne holds fifth place with +23.

One must be cautious once again however and realize that O'Connell, Mallette, and Koch play on the power play. This is not to take anything away from these three, because they do deserve these ratings, but it is only to clarify the figures.

A couple of statistics that are also interesting are the power play figures. UVM has scored on 44 out of 130 chances for 34 percent while the opposition power play is only 19 percent with 20—for—104. These figures show Vermont's defensive abilities.

Coach Cross, when asked why Vermont is so defensively orientated replied, "Look at all the good teams in any sport, the Celtics, the Dolphins or Steelers or Flyers; they all have great defenses. Defense wins games." Cross also pointed out the standings in Division I. Eleven of the seventeen teams have scored more than Vermont yet only one, Harvard, has given up less. Even though 12 teams have scored more than UVM, the Cats are in third place. Harvard, the best defensive team in Division I holds onto first place. Defense does win games.

UVM Dumps Rhody

by Don Rose

The Notre Dame football team had its four horsemen and the University of Vermont basketball team had its four seniors in Monday night's win over the Rhode Island Rams. This, the last game for the four seniors on home hardwood, will leave the juices of the 68-61 victory in them for a long time to come. Joe Greco, Bernard Palmer, Terry Green and Barry Cohen all did a heck of a job along with super sophomore Ron Gottschalk, to overcome a team with impressive wins over Manhattan College and the Providence Friars.

Joe Greco, scoring 20 points, had a great game. Rebounding and scoring from all around the hoop, Terry Green had a solid performance, notching 11 points, 11 rebounds, and a nice assortment of assists to Ron Gottschalk at the end of the Vermont breaks.

Barry Cohen played more than he has in a game all year. His wisdom and court experience showed as he ran the offense like a machine.

Bernard Palmer did his usual thing, great defense, rebounding, and like the experienced and seasoned player he is, few turnovers.

Both teams came out playing tough and aggressive man to man defenses. Vermont sliced through Rhode Island's press like a warm knife through butter. Then the Rams went into a 1-3-1 zone, which the Cats destroyed, getting the ball inside to Green and Gottschalk for easy hoops.

Vermont controlled the game from the start, and had several opportunities to blow the Rams off the court. In the second half Vermont opened an 18 point lead but couldn't hold it. The Rams cut the lead to around ten before the Cats iced it away.

This game marked the sixteenth victory for the Cats this season, which is the best since 1946-47 when they won 19. Vermont's Yankee Conference record ends at 8-4. It was the first time the Rams were beaten twice by Vermont in one season.

PFG -Schedule

PATRICK — FORBUSH — GUTTERSON RECREATION SCHEDULE
Weekend of February 28, March 1 and 2

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 28
GYM — Faculty-Staff 7—10:30 p.m.
POOL — Faculty-Staff 7—10:30 p.m. (7—8 under 15)
RINK — Faculty-Staff 7—10:30 p.m. (7—8 under 15)
TRACK — Faculty-Staff 7—10:30 p.m.

SATURDAY, MARCH 1
GYM — Students 1—5 and 7—10:30 p.m.
POOL — Students 1—5 and 7—10:30 p.m.
RINK — Students 7—10:30 p.m.
TRACK — Students 1—5 and 7—10:30 p.m.

SUNDAY, MARCH 2
GYM — Students 1—5 p.m.
POOL — Students 1—5 p.m.
RINK — Students 7:30—9:30 p.m.
TRACK — Students 1—5 p.m.

HANDBALL AND SQUASH COURTS: By appointment only. Call 656-3069.

All recreation may be superseded by varsity activities or special events.

IMPORTANT NOTICE: All facilities closed to student, faculty and staff recreation on March 3 and 4 for Town Meeting Holidays.

MONDAY through THURSDAY
POOL — Students 8:30 — 10:30 p.m.
All other facilities — Students 7—8 p.m.

Physical Education Preregistration

Physical Education Preregistration

Registration for Spring courses will be held at Patrick Gym on March 10 and 11.

The following procedures will be followed:

(1) Come at the hour and day you wish to take an activity. (Ex. 1 — Students wishing to enroll in Badminton 1, Tu. and Th. at 9:30 will enroll on Tuesday, March 11 at 9:30.)

(2) Classes that meet one day a week, Monday, Wednesday or Friday will register on Monday at the scheduled time. (Ex. 2 — Students wishing to take Horseback Riding on Wednesday at 2:00 will register at Patrick on Monday, March 10 at 2:00.)

(3) Classes that meet one day a week, Tuesday or Thursday will register on Tuesday at the scheduled time.

(4) Physical education major activities are open to all students; however, majors have first priority.

(5) Seniors, upperclassmen who have not fulfilled the requirement, students in Allied Health, Nursing and Home Economics will receive higher priority if they are present at the beginning of each hour's registration.

DAVE'S AUTOMOTIVE
INC.
FOREIGN CAR REPAIR SPECIALISTS
INCLUDING THE FINEST IN MICHELIN RADIAL TIRES
VW BUG BRAKE JOB
$49.95
VW Beetle Exhaust Complete $29.95
COMPLETE VW ELECTRONIC FUEL INJECTION DIAGNOSTIC SERVICE.

SPAGHETTI HUT
30 North St., Burlington 863-9893
EVERY WEDNESDAY!
All You Can Eat! SPAGHETTI $2.45
All You Can Eat! PIZZA $1.75
EVERY THURSDAY!
W.I.N. NITE - 10% off ENTIRE MENU (Beverages Excluded) from 7:00 P.M. until Closing
HAPPY HOUR DAILY 5:00 'til 7:00 P.M.
OPEN TILL 4:00 A.M. on FRI & SAT.
College Students Welcome!

ZIGGY'S
CIGARETTES $3.99 CARTON 45¢ PACK
PIPES SCREENS PAPERS
INCENSE BURNERS JOKES
KEY RING CLIPS T-SHIRTS LEATHER GOODS
PIPE GIFT SETS BONGS ROLLERS
101 Church St. Burlington
HOURS: 8:30-5:00 Mon.-Tues. 8:30-9:00 Fri. 8:30-5:00 Sat.

SPRING SPECIALS from VALUGA SPORTS
Free Bike Rack or Safety Flag with Purchase of any Bike
HAVE YOUR BIKE TUNED FOR SPRING FUN FOR ONLY $6.95
NEW BIKES HAVE JUST ARRIVED. STOP IN AND TRY ONE ON FOR SIZE.
BIKES FROM $115.
Men's & Ladies frames in 5& 10 Speed Models
Valuga Sports
1250 SHELBURNE RD. South Burlington, Vt. 862-1961
NEXT TO SWISS CHOCOLATE POT
OPEN 9-8 M-F
SAT 9-6
AMERICAN CARD
MASTER CHARGE

UVM SPORTS

UVM's Title Hopes Die

by Richard Rostkov

"Some days you have it, some days you don't. And today we just didn't have it. A bunch of people played poorly at the same time. It was one horrendous game that as a coach you fear. Unfortunately it was today."

So commented dejected Vermont coach Peter Salzberg following the basketball Catamounts 74–71 loss to the Boston University Terriers at the Roy L. Patrick Gymnasium Saturday afternoon. For the Catamounts it was a bitter defeat, having been virtually eliminated in their quest for their first Yankee Conference Championship.

The Vermont players just didn't have it on this day. On only two different occasions were they able to sustain the necessary momentum that separates the winning and losing teams. Lacking the team cohesiveness in critical situations prevented Vermont from averting the eventual outcome.

Ron Gottschalk and Curtis VanLendingham go for the jump ball
SPS Photo by West Shell

Boston led most of the first half by four to six points. Whenever Vermont narrowed the gap and appeared to have the momentum, a costly turnover, foul, or a missed lay–up would provide B.U. with the opportunity to regain control of the tempo.

Credit must be given to Boston's ability to prevent the Cats from playing their usual patterned offense. By playing a physical, aggressive game and "running" at the slightest fast break situation, Boston utilized their quickness, capitalizing on both their own brand of basketball and Vermont's lackluster play at each end of the court.

This was one of the keys to the game according to the Terriers coach Roy Zigler, "We were able to change their patterned offense. Of the teams we've played this year–Vermont and Holy Cross play the best man to man offenses. We match up well with Vermont. We have the kind of team that can play Vermont, and don't have the kind of team to play our style of ball with Connecticut and Massachusetts. Our guys can't run with them. This game has to be one of our best wins of the year."

For the most part the first half was marred by erratic play: numerous turnovers, poor shot selections, and examples of players just standing around. There was some occasional brilliant outside shooting, particularly by Vermont's Warren Prehmus and BU's Kerry Walker. Some fine shooting by the Terriers Neil Burns gave his team its largest lead at 30–22 with 6:20 left in the half.

There were some interesting match–ups in the game that provided an appreciative sidelight. Play became rather rough between Vermont's fine freshman playmaker Mark Cubit and Boston University's diminuitive guards Lance Tucker and Henry Downs. Rough play underneath also proved that ice hockey is not the only contest sport at this University.

Vermont was fortunate to be "in" the game at the half, behind only 40–36, despite thirteen turnovers and overall inconsistent play.

The Catamounts came out flying to start the second half. A jumper from the right baseline by Captain Joe Greco, followed by Greco's layup, a lay in by Prehmus after a steal, and a drive by Ron Gottschalk gave the Cats eight straight points and a 44–42 lead. The momentum finally swung to the Vermont side and the passive UVM fans finally had something to cheer about.

However, BU quickly regained the lead on some fine shooting by substitutes Alan Engel and Fred Bolden. Mike Richbow got the hot hand, firing in three long jump shots in rapid succession to keep Vermont close, down 77–75 with 9:20 left in the game.

BU's depth was one of the main contributing factors for their hard fought victory. Bolden, Engel, and Tom Heyes were outstanding in relief. This enabled 6x9 VanLandingham, the Terriers talented freshmen center to remain on the bench with four fouls until the final drive.

With 5:24 left to play, Walt Chesley broke loose for a layup, followed by a steal he converted into a score, providing Boston with a comfortable 69–61 advantage.

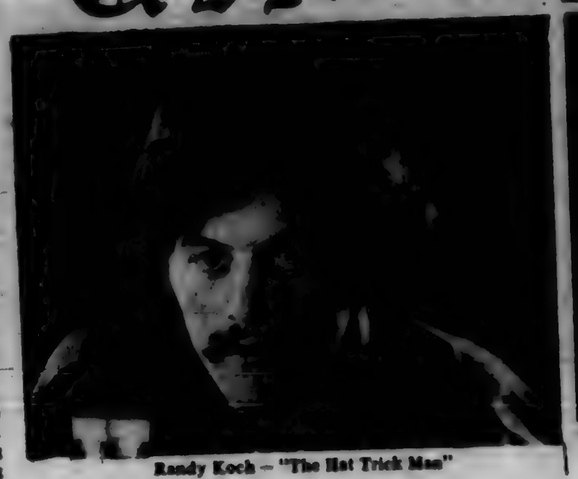
But the Catamounts were not through yet. Vermont applied a zone press that effectively put them right back in the game. Once again, super sub Bernard Palmer came through in the clutch. Palmer made a key steal off the press and converted a lay–up. Terry Green's drive knotted the score at 69–69 and the Cats appeared to be on their way.

However Vermont's lackadaisical play finally took a consequential toll. Some poor positioning underneath, a forced shot, a travelling violation, and a most inopportune charging foul gave BU all the chance they needed. The fact that Vermont scored only two points during the last 4:21 speaks for itself.

As Coach Salzberg put it, "BU played well. But we lost it."

How true it was. For, with thirty–six seconds to play Vermont had possession of the ball, down 72-71. The Cats came down and tried to shake someone loose for a score. Gottschalk received the ball outside of the foul line, and attempted to drive towards the center. He had it stolen, and the costliest of many turnovers proved fatal. Henry Downs converted two foul shots with ten seconds remaining to ice the game for Boston University 74–71.

As Coach Salzburg articulately stated, "You're not going to play 26 games at optimum potential. You hope that when you don't you can still win. We played well against UMass the other night and lost. Today we played poorly and almost won. There's been a disgusting negative attitude permeating this place for years–playing well, losing and accepting it. We'd rather play poorly and win! At the end of the season all that matters in people's minds is if you won or lost."



Randy Koch – "The Hat Trick Man"

Star goaltender Tom McNamara

Koch Leads Cats

Vermont Defeats UNH In Overtime

by Norm Robinson

The University of Vermont hockey team came from a 3-1 deficit in the third period to pull off a 4-3 overtime victory over the Wildcats from New Hampshire at Snively Arena in Durham on Tuesday night.

Behind the three-goal hat trick of Randy Koch, Vermont tied the Wildcats with only 17 seconds remaining and then got the winning tally at the 4:16 mark of the sudden-death overtime period.

Defenseman Bill McAlduff dumped the puck into the right corner as O'Connell raced for it. Goaltender Cap Raeder made the mistake of the game when he tried to beat Tim to the puck. O'Connell got there first and sent the puck out in front of the net. Randy Koch stood there all alone and put the puck into the empty goal.

Koch, who had just come from the penalty box turned into an instant hero. There was more to come.

Vermont had dominated the last eight minutes of the second period and the entire third period as they put continual pressure on the New Hampshire defense.

As the overtime period began, the UVM squad had the momentum going their way even though the capacity crowd was making enough noise to bring the house down. It may have been from disbelief.

Andy Halford took the initial shot from 20 feet out at Raeder. The UNH goalie made the save but as the puck fell to his feet, Randy Koch tucked it into the net to pull off the comeback of the season.

UVM had a poor first period. Their passing was erratic and they were not skating. This may have been because of the long bus ride from Burlington. The Cats had trouble breaking out of their end and getting their offense going.

UNH forward Bob Miller got the game's first goal on a rebound shot by Jamie Hislop. McNamara was off balance as stopped the original stop and failed to snare the shoulder high return by Miller.

Tim O'Connell tied the game on a power play goal at the 13:43 mark. John Glynne cleared the Vermont end with a pass to senior Bill Koch at center ice. Koch came across the blue line and put the puck on O'Connell's stick and Tim's lazy shot beat Raeder.

Randy Koch picked up an interference penalty and soon after, Jamie Hislop put New Hampshire ahead 2-1. Cliff Cox circled the Vermont net and slid the puck across the crease. McNamara couldn't get across in time and Hislop slammed the puck into the far corner.

Tom McNamara played his finest game for Vermont with 39 saves. Three times a UNH player had a breakaway and Tom stopped all three. Tom kept UVM in the game during the first period with outstanding goaltending.

New Hampshire took long shots at McNamara in the early going, apparently believing Tom has a weakness on shots from a distance. This may have cost them because they gave up the puck on numerous occasions.

Senior Dave Bertollo got the lone second period goal when Vermont failed to clear the puck from the slot. Bertollo slammed the puck past McNamara to make it 3-1 and give New Hampshire a commanding two goal lead.

The first of Koch's three goals came on a power play. Bill Reber passed the puck to Glynne who took the first shot. The puck came to Koch in the slot and Randy put a backhand shot between Raeder's legs.

Then came the fantastic finish.

Although Vermont got lucky on the tying goal, they outplayed New Hampshire for the last 25 minutes. New Hampshire was backed by superb goaltending by Reeder, who ended the game with 38 saves. Raeder's mistake cost the New Hampshire game but he couldn't be faulted for the rest of his goaltending.

Koch's first hat trick as a member of the University of Vermont could not have come at a more opportune time.

The loss dropped UNH to 16-6-1 in Division I and upped Vermont to 20-10 overall. The Cats had been in fourth place behind Harvard, Boston University and New Hampshire prior to the game but the win put Vermont into sole possession of third place and should give them home ice in the first round of the playoffs.

The Wildcats, who were eighth in the nation will have to wait now to see whether they, or Cornell will get the final home ice spot. Vermont has now won seven in a row and 19 out of its last 22 games to propel them into ninth spot in the national rankings.

Vermont plays Clarkson this Saturday in their last game of the season.

Spring Baseball!

by Mary Gilbertson

Though the winter snows are still flying, it's time to dig out your spikes! UVM Spring baseball practice will begin on Monday, March 10. This practice is only for those who were not on the fall team and wish to try-out for the Spring nine. Practice for those players whowere on the fall team begins a week later (March 17), thus ensuring that everyone will have an equal opportunity to make the spring squad.

Although UVM's is a "club" baseball team, we play all varsity teams - St. Lawrence, Siena, St. Anselms, Middlebury, and etc. Our record last year was 22-13 and we expect to be playing between 16-20 games this spring, weather permitting. Presently we're working on getting some big games with U. Conn., Southern Conn., Hartford and/or a trip to New York State.

So psyche up for a good season and we'll see you at practice in the field house, 7-9 p.m. on Monday, March 10.

Ticket Information

According to the ECAC hockey tournament rules, the home team is obligated to provide the visiting team with 20% of the seating capacity. If we do have home ice, this means we may not be able to serve all ticket book holders–student, faculty–staff, general and reserved.

Again, if we have home ice, tickets will go on sale on March 3 and 4 at 9:00 a.m. at the Patrick Gym. Tickets for the tournament will be available only to those who have purchased ticket books or reserve seats. For verification and control you must turn in your ticket book or gold card in order to purchase a ticket. One ticket per book or gold card while they last. One person may pick up tickets for up to a maximum of four books.

Reserved, $4.00 (with gold card)

Adults $3.00 (with ticket book)

Students $2.00 (with ticket book)

Women's Gymnastics Team Wins Two

by Deb Light

This was another successful week for the women's gymnastics team, as the team captured two firsts and a second.

On Friday, the gymnasts traveled to Dartmouth for a tri-meet with Dartmouth and Colby (New Hampshire). Final team scores were UVM 69.85, Colby 65.75, and Dartmouth 57.85. Individual results were as follows:

Vaulting: (1) K. Manning (Colby) 8.8; (2) C. Chesley (UVM) 7.1; (3) D. Light (UVM) 6.7.

Beam: (1) K. Esckilsen (UVM) 6.5; (2) D. Blanchette (UVM) 5.6; (3) S. Nickerson (Colby) 5.1.

Bars: (1) K. Zajchowski (UVM) 6.9 (tie) and K. Manning (Colby) 6.0; (3) A. Hurwitz (Colby) 5.0.

Floor: (1) K. Snider (Colby) 7.35; (2) D. Light (UVM) 7.0; (3) D. Blanchette (UVM) 6.7.

Saturday, the Vermont State Championships were held at Norwich. This meet was held in two parts. In the first part, compulsory routines were performed. These are prescribed routines used nation-wide to test a gymnast's ability to perform specific skills. Two levels were used, beginning and intermediate. Vermont finishers on the beginning level were: in vaulting, Carole Shiber (3rd) and Sue Tetrault (fifth). In bars, Deb Light was second and Cilla Minott was fourth. Sue Tetrault was also the third highest all-around performer at this level. On the intermediate level, in vaulting, Carole Chesley was first and Deb Light second. In Bars, Joanna Houbold was second and Kathy Zajchowski third. On beam, Carole Chesley was second and Karen Esckilsen third.

For the second half of this meet, the top two performers from each school on each level performed optional routines. UVM did well in this part of the competition. In vaulting, Carol Chesley was first and Sue Tetrault second. On Beam, Carol was again first, with Karen Esckilsen second. Bars saw Kathy Zajchowski place first, and Joanna Joubolt fourth. Debbie Light was first on floor, and Cilla Minott tied for second.

Final team scores were computed by adding together the team scores of both the compulsory and optional routines. On the beginning level, Green Mountain College was first with 76.80 points, and UVM was second with 76.08. On the Intermediate level, UVM placed first with 96.40 points, while Castleton was second with 92.00.

Wrestling

All contestants who are participating in the Intramural Wrestling Tournament must have a physical by Friday at 4:00. Weigh-ins will be March 7, from 1:00 to 7:00. For further information, call Randy Jansen at 656-3092.

AT THE BONE
43 KING ST.
(Corner S. Champlain & King)
Happy Hour
DAILY 4-9
ALL BEVERAGES DISCOUNTED
LOWEST PRICES AROUND
GOLD TEQUILA NITE
SUNDAY 7-11

MOBIL MOBIL
Whitewall Tire Sale
$25 Small Cars
$27 Medium Cars
$31 Large Cars
Mobil Cushion 78 Whitewall
SPILLANE'S SERVICE CENTER
NEXT TO GAYNES OPEN 24 hrs. AAA ALA

LITTLE PROFESSOR BOOK CENTER
40 Church St. Burlington
Essex Jct. Shopping Center
Essex Junction
Largest Paperback Selection in Vermont
Complete Study Notes
Small presses & some far-out reading

UNIVERSITY STORE
ON THE CAMPUS
PRE-SEASON SALE
regularly 99.50
NOW 79.95
(unassembled) 16 only

GRASSHOPPER

VOLUME XCIII
NUMBER 8
MARCH 7, 1975

VERMONT CYNIC

University of Vermont
Burlington, Vermont

'Tis a privilege to live in Vermont

First Aiken Lecture: Senator Mansfield And A Memorable Evening

by Jerry Weil

"I tried to get George to change his mind about retiring because he is essential to the preservation of sanity in Washington" were the crisp opening remarks of Senator Mike Mansfield, Senate Majority Leader and the first speaker in the George D Aiken Lecture Series, who on Sunday night addressed an Ira Allen Chapel audience of mostly adult Burlingtonians, UVM students, and faculty

After welcoming remarks by President Andrews, Governor Salmon, Mayor Paquette, and Senator Stafford, Senator Mansfield spoke with candor seriousness, and touches of good humor about International Affairs, the role of the Congress, and George Aiken

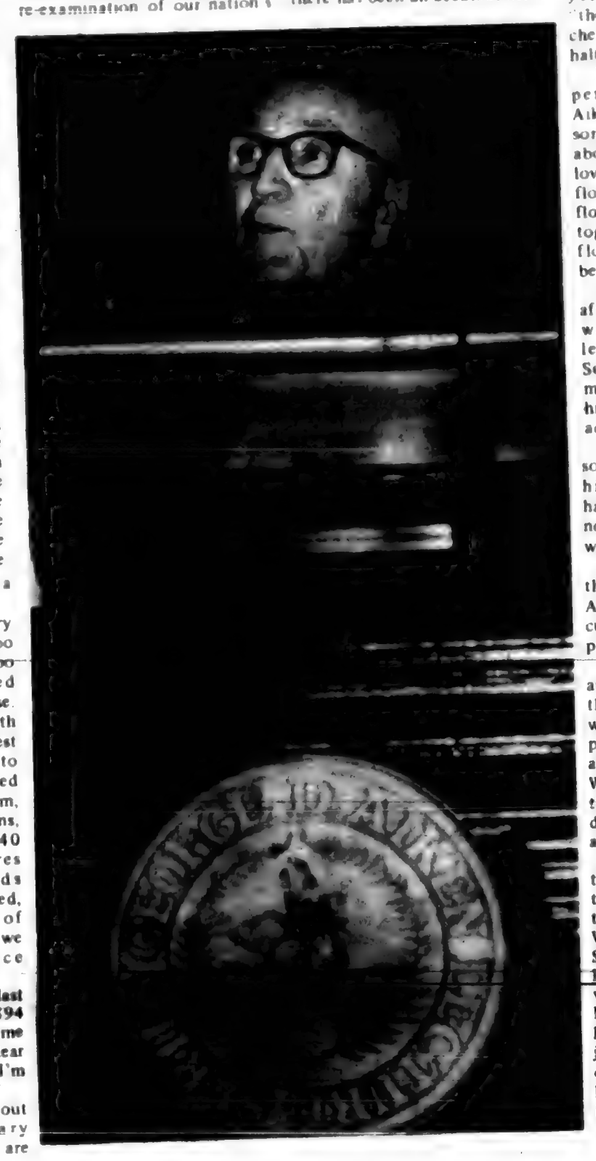
A tall, kind faced man, Senator Mansfield looks more like the professor of history on permanent tenure at the University of Montana that he is, than the owner of the resonant, no-nonsense voice which boomed out upon the audience like the voice of a Roman orator

"The United States military presence overseas has been too much, too great, and at too great a cost," declared Mansfield, eliciting applause. Expressing discontent with President Ford's recent request of $300 million in aid to Cambodia, Mansfield first cited the prices paid in Vietnam, "55,000 dead Americans, 303,000 wounded, $140 billion spent, cultures disrupted and lands destroyed," and then stated, "Now we hear talk of Cambodia. When will we learn?" The audience applauded at this remark.

Mansfield stated that last year's military budget was $94 billion. His voice became almost twice as loud and clear as he exclaimed, "And I'm talking about your money!"

"While we are turning out more refined military equipment ,other nations are doing better at producing pollution free automobiles," stated Mansfield, suggesting a re-examination of our nation's goals under changing circumstances.

Mansfield mentioned that there has been an accumulation of executive power that has been going on for a long time, culminating during the last two years. "However," he said, "the erosion of the system of checks and balances has been halted."



Long time colleague and personal friend of George Aiken, Senator Mansfield had some memorable things to say about his friend. Citing Aiken's love and knowledge of wild flowers, Mansfield said "wild flowers and George Aiken go together. They are at home and flourish wherever they may be."

Senator Aiken's brief talk after Mansfield had finished was as memorable as the lecture. The 82 year old Senator, who is adored by the many students who have met him during his residency and active schedule at UVM, had some good words to say about his former colleague. "You haven't changed much but you never did better," Aiken said with a smile to Mansfield.

"Mike and I have many things in common," Senator Aiken said with a little boy's cuteness, "we're both college professors now."

Aiken went on to tell the audience of the many valuable things that Manfield told him with respect to dealing with presidents. One valuable bit of advice was when you go to the White House, "the best seat in the house is the one nearest the door." The audience laughed and applauded.

Senator Mansfield said at the beginning of his lecture that George Aiken "is essential to the preservation of sanity in Washington." Having met Senator Aiken and listened to him speak many times, this writer feels like telling Senator Mansfield that his old friend has been doing a pretty good job maintaining the sanity of quite a number of people in E Building at the Living and Learning Center.

Cat's Explode In Final Period To Trounce Providence

by Norm Robinson

Before a capacity crowd at Gutterson Field House, the University of Vermont hockey squad put together an unbelievable third period to overcome a three goal deficit and defeat Providence College, 7-5, in the opening round of the ECAC Division I playoffs.

Down 5-2 with 14 minutes left, Vermont got a goal from Randy Koch at the 7:41 mark to get the Cats rolling. Applying pressure all over the ice, UVM got four goals in four minutes to send the Catamounts into the semifinals on Friday against second ranked Boston University

The Friars completely dominated the early going, building a 3-1 lead after the first period and 4-2 after two periods but five goals in the final stanza gave Vermont the win

As they have done all season, the Catamounts put together an overwhelming third period. Roger Mallette put the entire game into perspective. "In the first period we did nothing. We started rolling in the second and put everything together in the third."

Providence was playing super hockey. Bill Koch was put out of action with a possible shoulder separation and things looked dim. Koch, who received the game puck, was injured when Brian Burke received a two minute penalty for charging.

Vermont had a two man advantage due to a phantom penalty and the entire focus of the game shifted to the UVM power play. Randy Koch fired a low, hard wrist shot past goal tender Rick Moffit, to make it 5-3. The Cats began to play their style of hockey, forechecking and putting pressure on the man with the puck. Their persistance paid off.

There was a scramble in front of the Friar net and Randy Koch slid the puck through Moffit's legs, five feet in front of the cage. Tim O'Connell added a whack to make sure and suddenly it was 5-4.

Just thirty-seven seconds later, Andy Rickard tied the game. Rickard took a centering pass from Andy Halford at the right of the net and picked the near side. The puck bounced off the post and past Moffit.

John Glynne, who had four assists on the night, set up the winning goal by Michel Lebeau. Glynne's pass evaded a Providence defender at center ice, Lebeau picking up the puck. Michel flew across the blue line and fired. His slapshot found the far corner on Moffits glove hand side

The insurance goal came moments later on a breakaway by Chris Hurley. Hurley knocked down a lob pass at center ice, skated in on Moffit, who came out to cut down the angle. As Moffit slid to the ice to smother the puck, Hurley faked around the goalie and slid a backhand shot into the empty net.

"We came back before we knew we could do it again," said Bill McAlduff.

"Although the Cats couldn't cut the margin the comeback started in the second period. The momentum had swung to Vermont but Providence kept UVM from getting the good shots.

Ken Cusack got the first Friar goal when he deflected a Ron Wilson shot; Wilson's shot was high but Cusack got his stick on it and knocked it into the net.

SPS Photo R. R. Low

Andy Halford tied the game moments later. Glynne got a pass out to Randy Koch on the left side. Koch fed Halford breaking down the boards and Andy fired a slapshot past Moffit's glove hand side.

Dave Kelly, Providence's fifth scorer, provided some excitement. As Tim O'Connell came in for a shot, Kelly hooked his stick and it flew from his hands. As Tim skated up to Kelly, he cross checked O'Connell and then decked him with a right. Kelly received a five minute fighting penalty and a game misconduct as well.

Danny Kennedy made it 2-1 with a deflected shot off Ron Wilson and Ken Richardson got the third Providence goal.

Wilson set up the goal when he skated past two defenders and drew McNamara to the left. He fed Richardson a perfect pass and Ken hammered it home.

Mallette got Vermont closer when he scored mid-way through the second period. O'Connell took a shot and it deflected off Mallette's skate and slid between the legs of Moffit.

The Cats were fired up and appeared to be ready to score again but as it turned out Providence got the next goal. Richardson centered the puck and Kennedy got it past McNamara with only nine seconds left in the period.

The Friars got one more goal in the early part of the third period and then the unbelievable finish began

"We wore them down in the third period. Providence got all the breaks in the early going, but we did everything right in the last period," added Ken Yeates.

(What makes Vermont play so well in the third period? "We forced them to make bad passes, we put pressure on at their blue line and it's pretty hard to make a good pass with a man on your back," was Mallette's answer.

As Coach Cross summed it up, "Providence was good, very good. We were better though."

This weekend is the biggest yet for Vermont as they make their first trip to Boston Garden in their first year in Division I on Friday. The remaining four teams are Harvard against Cornell, and Boston University versus Vermont. Hope to see you there!

Vermont Tomorrow Receives Grant For Food Day

MONTPELIER - A $1000 matching grant from the Vermont Bicentennial Commission was awarded Feb 20 to Vermont Tomorrow, the statewide citizen action group. Vermont Tomorrow will promote and coordinate upcoming activities associated with April 17th's Food Day in Vermont and continuing agricultural self-sufficiency projects.

Food Day in Vermont is an integral part of National Food Day activities organized by the Center for Science in the Public Interest of Washington D. C. Like Earth Day in 1970, Food Day will be a day of national activities to focus public attention and generate citizen response to the problems of the world food shortage, the spectre of rising food prices coupled with dropping farm prices in the U. S. and the generally declining quality of the American diet at home, work and school.

During its organization of Food Forum '74 in Randolph, Vt., last November, Vermont Tomorrow established contacts and a working relationship with more than fifty agricultural and nutritional organizations. Through these contacts, Food Day in Vermont will focus on increasing agricultural self-sufficiency in Vermont, assisting local and community-based groups establish Food Day projects and function as a clearinghouse and referral service for food-related activities.

Some of the Food Day projects currently being arranged around Vermont include church sponsored fasts, library displays on food production and proper nutrition, food stamp outreach activities, garden tool libraries, community gardens. The purpose of these activities will be to remind Vermonters of its agricultural heritage, and to expose Vermonters to current alternatives and to move towards a more nutritious and self-sufficient future.

Further information on Food Day may be obtained from the Center for Science in the Public Interest (1785 Massachusetts Ave., N. W., Washington, D. C., 20036) or Vermont Tomorrow (5 State St., Montpelier, Vt., 05602).

Canadian Studies Program Offers Opportunities

by Mary D. Partridge

"When the United States sneezes, Canada develops pneumonia." The influence which the U.S. has on Canada is reflected by Canadian televised news reports, where American events are often given as much coverage as are Canadian events. In most cases, the interest is not reciprocated. how often is Canada featured on our national news? Few Americans know anything about our northern neighbor, a nation which has been referred to as "America's attic"

The reader will be pleased to learn that at UVM, a Canadian Studies program has existed since 1963. It is the only program in the United States to offer an undergraduate degree in Canadian Studies. Considered to be the largest, most comprehensive curriculum in the nation, it is made up of thirteen faculty members from nine academic areas. Each professor is hired within his own department, then interdisciplinary cooperation unites the entire group under the heading of Canadian Studies.

Though it is a program of great distinction, Canadian Studies currently has but ten majors. Approximately 150 to 200 students are annually enrolled in Canadian-related courses including anthropology, communications, English, geography, French, history, sociology, political science and theatre. Economics is the one discipline which is unaccounted for

Our Canadian Studies program receives support and interest from the Canadian federal government, the Quebec and Ontario provincial governments, the Canadian consulate in Boston, and the embassy in Washington. Our library is a depository both for the documents which issue forth from the Quebec and Ontario provincial governments and for the documents and maps from the federal government in Ottawa. All told, UVM has about 1,200 volumes in its Canadian collection, plus the documents and maps. A separate card catalogue which indexes the Canadian holdings is located in the Canadian Studies office on the first floor of Old Mill

Prior to the 1963 establishment of the program, Canadian-related courses had been sporadically offered and enthusiastically received. Geographer Dr. Edward Miles, the chairman of Canadian Studies, came to UVM in 1962. The following year, Dr. William Metcalfe of the history department arrived. The two men, both native Canadians, provided a strong base for the nationally and internationally renowned Canadian Studies program which presently exists.

Not only is the program as a whole distinguished, but each faculty and staff member has excellent qualifications. The American Review of Canadian Studies is edited on the UVM campus by Professor Metcalfe with Ms. Judy Webster as assistant editor. Dr. Edward Miles is the vice-president and the president-elect of the Association for Canadian Studies in the United States

In 1967, UVM became the first school to run a summer institute in Canadian Studies for teachers. The session, which was also held in 1972, was designed for elementary and high school teachers, and was taught by the UVM Canadian Studies faculty.

The University provides the program with a small operating budget. This money is primarily used to provide part-time secretarial help, to subsidize field trips for students in various Canadian classes, and to bring visiting lecturers and exhibits to campus. In 1970, the William H. Donner Foundation gave a three year grant of $105,000 to our Canadian Studies program. It was this amount which allowed the purchase of three Esquimo sculptures, two

(continued on page five)

VPIRG Team Works On Nuclear Power

by Stephen W. Tanner

"Basically what we have is a core group of active students who keep up on the project and when something big comes up, we mobilize our back-up people to action," said Sarah Hutchinson, describing the way the Vermont Public Interest Research Group (VPIRG) nuclear power project operates.

"Sarah and I are the coordinator and director," said David Barney, the other member of the core group. "I disseminate information and push the petition drives while Sarah keeps an eye on the legislature and coordinates Burlington with the Montpelier office."

"The objectives of VPIRG's nuclear power group are to create a public awareness of the dangers involved in the construction and operation of nuclear power plants and to activate people to voice their concerns for Vermont's future." Sarah stated.

"We've come a long way from last year," David remarked. "I think people are realizing the long term ramifications of nuclear power waste storage and the unpredictability of the emergency core cooling system for nuclear reactors. But there is still a lot of educating to be done."

Last year the group brought in Dr. Paul Hovecar who gave a speech on "Why I Quit the A.E.C." It was by Hovecar's support that Scott Skinner, VPIRG's director, was able to introduce nuclear power legislation and get legislative backing.

This year the group will host Dr. Ernest Stronglass on March 11 at 7:30 p.m. in the North Billings Lounge who will speak on increased mortality rates among infants born in close proximity to nuclear power plants.

Since Gene Beaudoin kicked off the nuclear power group last year, it has been petitioning, writing letters to the editor and contacting legislators to oppose continued construction of nuclear power.

"Robinson Hall," the UVM Environmental Dormitory, "has been a great help and source of back-up support," according to Sarah. "They really have been receptive this year."

Legislation now under consideration in the Vermont Legislature pertaining to nuclear power is

(1) H 127. A bill designed to give the legislature the power to decide on whether or not a nuclear power plant should be built in the state of Vermont. Currently the decision is made by the Public Service Board Director and one other member. The bill has recently been amended to include all future power plants in Vermont and to set a limit on debate time in the legislature after which time the plant would be built automatically if no legislative decision was made

(2) S 43. Introduced by Sen Bill Daniels (UVM History professor) The bill sets forth several conditions which must be met before the plant could be built a) comprehensive testing of all safety systems; b) safe storage of radioactive waste; c) removal of limits on insurance recovery from nuclear accident

(3) S 62 sponsored by Sen. Robert O'Brien bans construction of all nuclear power plants in Vermont.

The long weekend may be gone, but not without a heavy endowment of snow. For those who skied locally, conditions could not have been better.

Featured This Week

Open Season p. 4

Doctor's Bag p. 5

The Duke's Jazz Relives p. 6

White Devil p. 7

- CALENDAR and ANNOUNCEMENTS -

Religion Dept. Open House

On Thursday, March 13, from 4:30 p.m. to 5:15 p.m., the Religion Department will hold an Open House to acquaint UVM students with the Religion Major, Religion courses for the Fall Semester, and with the Religion Department staff and students. Refreshments will be served. The open house will be held on the second floor of the Philosophy-Religion-Classics Building at 481 Main Street. All interested students are invited.

White Devil Opens Tonight

At 8:00 p.m., Friday, March 7, the Department of Communication and Theatre, University of Vermont, will present John Webster's classic tragedy The White Devil, which will run through Tuesday, March 11.

First performed in 1612, The White Devil is based on a notorious Italian scandal of Webster's day and chronicles the enormous struggle between two immensely rich and powerful families.

"More than any of his contemporaries," says Nancy Haynes, director of The White Devil, "Webster reflects and interprets the despair and disillusionment of the early seventeenth century, the conviction that there is 'no safe place on the ridge of the world.' In The White Devil, Webster looks with unflinching eyes at a society floundering in violence and greed in which the individual personality is all but lost. This straightforward tale of corruption in high places, of political danger and betrayal is told in tough and luxurious language. With his great contemporary, Ben Jonson, Webster is at once deeply pessimistic and clearly realistic."

Tickets for The White Devil are on sale at the Royall Tyler Box Office. Admission is $3.00 for the general public and $1.50 for UVM students. Call 656-2094.

Masked Ball

On March 15, the University Players will sponsor the 3rd Annual Masked Ball at the Royall Tyler Theater. There will be theatrical entertainment as well as music for dancing. Costumes are not mandatory, however the lack of one will no doubt make a person feel a bit foolish. Refreshments will be served. Admission is free, but there is a 200 person limit so get your tickets early. Reservations will be taken in the Royall Tyler business office beginning Monday March 10. Don't miss it! This is your chance to be whatever you want...and no one need ever be the wiser.

Auditions At Royall Tyler

Open auditions will be held March 12, and March 13 at 7:30 at the Royall Tyler Theatre for Beaumont and/or Fletcher's The Knight of the Burning Pestle. A Renaissance comedy with music, The Knight of the Burning Pestle is a burlesque of the social, literary, and theatrical conventions of seventeenth century London. Though not a musical the play contains several short songs which some cast members will be required to sing.

Scripts and copies of the musical numbers will be in the Royall Tyler Theatre business office and may be signed out.

Please note that one need not have a glorious singing voice to audition.

Blood Drive

The UVM Spring Blood Drive – Monday – Thursday, March 10, 11, 12, 13. Billings Center, 10 a.m. – 3 p.m. Show people you care. Come and give the gift of life.

Win a trophy for your fraternity, sorority or dorm. Participation is very important.

Remember The Ides of March

The Medieval/Renaissance Program will hold a reception for students interested in joining it for 1975-76 on Saturday, 15 March, at 1:00 p.m. in 120 Commons Living/Learning.

All such students are cordially invited to attend.

Present student members of the program, as well as several of its associated faculty, will be there to answer questions, present entertainment, and serve refreshments.

To join the program, a student must expect to have at least sophomore standing by next year. He or she will live in one of six adjoining suites of rooms, which surround an inner courtyard. Members take two courses in medieval or Renaissance subjects in the fall semester, one of which will be a new core course team taught by several faculty members from the various disciplines represented in the program. Professors drawn from the departments of art history, classics, romance languages, German, music, history, English, anthropology, philosophy, religion, and communication and theatre are likely to be included.

The goals of the Program are to encourage interest in the Middle Ages and Renaissance, the periods from which modern Western civilization largely takes its roots. It also tries to promote interest in the humanities generally, by showing how different kinds of subjects – music, literature, history, etc. – fit together, and by showing that a full view of these two ages is only possible when such varied kinds of information are tied in with one another. It is, therefore, very much as inter-disciplinary program.

For this reason, it encourages students from all disciplines to join together in the program, to share their different kinds of expertise with one another in achieving a whole view of the ages.

Remember the Ides of March!

Program Listing For WRUV-FM

WRUV-FM, the non-profit, educational radio station of the University of Vermont, has been publishing a radio program guide for over a year. This publication, called Radio Guide, provides the detailed listings of cultural programs heard in the Burlington community from several radio stations which are easily accessible on one's receiver. Although the guide contains primarily classical music programs, one will also find programs on opera, theatre, drama, documentaries, record reviews, jazz, folk music and sometimes special features on the contemporary music scene. Radio stations listed are: WRUV-FM (90.1) and WQCR-FM (98.9) from Burlington, CBM-FM (95.1) and CKVL-FM (96.9) from Montreal; CBO-FM (103.3) Ottawa; and WQXR-AM (1560) from New York City.

Originally, Radio Guide was published and distributed by WRUV-FM which also kept a mailing list. These program listings are now included in the PREVIEWER, which is the guide to the local entertainment fare. The PREVIEWER is published weekly and in its efforts to expand its entertainment coverage, it is in this spirit that WRUV-FM's Radio Guide has now become a regular feature. Copies are available in the UVM Bookstore and also in the Medical Bookstore.

A new exhibit entitled "Art and the Sacred" is now on display in the Fleming Museum's Main Gallery. Art of the American Plains Indians is on display in the Ethnographic Gallery and, in the American Gallery, Twentieth Century American art will be on view through mid-summer, 1975.

FRIDAY, MARCH 7

The Church Street Center courses begin today on the following topics: "Birds and their Environment", and "Basic Drawing". Call 656-4221 for details.

4 p.m., The Psychology Dept. will present Ethel Tobach, Ph. D., curator of the American Museum of Natural History, who will speak and show a film on "Social Context and Response to Novelty" in Room 314, John Dewey Hall. All are welcome.

8 p.m., The first performance of "The White Devil" is presented tonight and continues through Tuesday at the Royall Tyler Theatre. Call 656-2095 for ticket reservations.

7:30 and 9:30 p.m., W. C. Fields stars in "The Bank Dick" sponsored by the Lane Series in Marsh Life Sciences Auditorium. Admission is $1 at the door, or can be reserved by calling 656-3418.

7:30 and 10 p.m., S.A. Films presents "Cabaret" in 101 Votey Bldg. Admission is $1.

8 p.m., International folk dancing is held in Southwick Ballroom. All are welcome.

SATURDAY, MARCH 8

The Church Street Center's series of sessions entitled "Drawing Marathon" starts today. Call 656-4221 for details.

5:00 p.m., Third Annual Powder Puff Hockey Game between Pi Beta Phi and Tri-Delta in the Gutterson Field House. All are invited. No admission.

7:30 and 9:30 p.m., Due to the overwhelming popularity of Katherine Hepburn's films, SA has scheduled a second nightly showing Tonight, "Pat and Mike" is featured. Admission is free.

8 p.m., The Duke Ellington Orchestra, originally scheduled for this date as a Lane Series presentation, has been postponed. Watch for announcement of the new date later in the semester.

9 p.m., UVM Gay Student Union presents a gay dance in Southwick Gymnasium, Redstone campus. Admission is $1 and refreshments will be provided. Further information may be obtained by calling 862-3955.

SUNDAY, MARCH 9

Church Street Center's "couples workshop" begins. Details by calling 656-4221. At 6 p.m., The Center's Legislative study begins.

MONDAY, MARCH 10

Church Street Center starts sessions entitled "Diet for a Small Planet," and "Politics of Food." Details from 656-4221.

9 a.m. to 6 p.m., The Red Cross sponsors a blood drive in Billings North Lounge. Come donate the precious gift of life, anytime through Thursday.

11 a.m., Biological Physics lecture, Dr. William O'Brien, Bureau of Radiological Health, Washington, D.C., "Embryological Effects of Ultrasound, A-402 Cook Bldg., coffee at 10:30 in A-429.

4:10 p.m., David W. Racusen, microbiology-biochemistry, gives a biology seminar, "Leaf Glycoproteins," 105 Marsh Life Sciences Building, where coffee will be served at 3:55 in Room 107.

5 p.m., VPIRG meets in Conference Room C of Billings. All are welcome to attend.

7 p.m., The Living Learning Nutrition class meets for an hour of nutrition counseling in 115 Commons, L/L. All are welcomed. The class meets each Monday and Wednesday.

7:15 p.m., IRA meets at Marvin-Millis. All are welcome.

7:30 p.m., The German film, "Minna von Barnhelm", in German, will be shown in 104 Old Mill.

7:30 and 9:30 p.m., S.A. Films presents the French Classic, "The Bride Wore Black" in 101 Votey Bldg. Admission is Free!

8 p.m., Cross Cultural program presents Dr. H. Lawrence McCrorey, "Competence and Minority Identity," D-170 Living/Learning Center.

8:00 p.m., "The White Devil" is presented at Royall Tyler Theatre; box office is 656-2094. Make reservations now - the play ends tomorrow!

8:00 p.m., The Asian Cultural Exchange sponsors speakers Joan and Jerome Cohen who will present a slide show and lecture on "A maoist View of Art and Archaeology" in Billings' Marsh Lounge.

8:00 p.m., Dr. Lawrence McCorey speaks on "Competence and Minority Identity" in D-107, L/L, as part of the Cross Cultural Program.

TUESDAY, MARCH 11

Church Street Center courses in sensuality and sexuality, Vermont's public utilities and the role of the Civic Center in protecting Burlington's water front begin today. Call 656-4221 for details.

9 a.m. to 4 p.m., The Red Cross blood drive continues through Thursday. Come give the precious gift of life at Billings' North Lounge.

12 noon, Alice D. Outwater leads a study habit workshop at the Counseling and Testing Center.

7 p.m., The Intervarsity Christian Fellowship is holding a series of Bible studies every Tuesday. All are welcome to attend at 205 So. Prospect St., Apt. 2.

7:30 p.m., An English Majors' seminar, led by Prof. Terence P. Brown of Trinity College in Dublin, will deal with the topic, "A Critical Introduction to the Poetry of Seamus Heaney" in Dewey Lounge, Old Mill.

7:30 p.m., Philosophy Prof. William Mann speaks on "The Medieval Concept of God's Timelessness: A Classic Example of Medieval Christian Philosophy Gone Wrong." The lecture is held in A-180, L/L.

8 p.m., concluding performance of "The White Devil" at Royall Tyler Theatre.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 12

The Church Street Center course in "Our Bodies, Our Selves", led by Nancy Koch, begins today at D-107, L/L. Call 656-4221 for details.

9 a.m. to 4 p.m., The Red Cross blood drive continues through Thursday in Billings' North Lounge. Come give the precious gift of life.

12 noon, Nancy Koch leads an hour of relaxation and meditation at the Counseling and Testing Center.

12:15 p.m., The Lunch Bunch film series continues today with the showing of "Yugoslavia", a survey of life there today. 135 Church St. is the site and admission is free.

4 p.m., "Tertulia" is an informal gathering of any Spanish-speaking students, faculty and staff at the Hispanic Apts., Bldg. D, third floor, Living/learning. All are encouraged to attend, whatever your speaking ability.

7 p.m., The Living/Learning Nutrition class meets for an hour of counseling in nutrition exercises in 115 Commons, L/L.

7:30 p.m., The Outing Club meets in 305 Votey Bldg.

8 p.m., The Music Dept. sponsors the Con Brio Chamber Orchestra at Living/Learning tonight.

Placement Office Announcements

1. The Annual Alumni/Student Career Day will be held in Billings Center, Saturday, March 15. The event is an informal get-to-gether affording interested students an opportunity to meet and talk with UVM Alumni from 15 career areas including business, industry, government, allied health, education, agriculture, and to discuss various aspects of their career fields. The event starts at 9:30 a.m. with coffee and donuts and will continue throughout the day. Additional career information will be available as part of the program.

2. Two Canadian Graduate Schools will be visiting the Placement office to discuss MBA Programs with interested seniors:

March 10 St. Mary's University, Halifax

March 17 Concordia University, Montreal

Sign up now for a personal interview, third floor Mansfield House.

Streakers Strike Again

The first streakers of the season made a cameo appearance early this month when 35 students at the University of Georgia/Athens dashed across the campus quandrangle.

Incited by early spring weather, people began "screaming rebel yells and calling for a streak," according to an eyewitness. "Then they began singing Christmas carols, and finally two people started it off."

More than 300 people formed a line for streakers, who ran in pairs and then in groups of 10 and 12.

The university made streaking history last March when 1583 students ran across campus at the same time, setting a national record. Six streakers were arrested in that mass run and their trial is scheduled for the middle of February.

MUSICAL MARK DOWNS!

$1.99 VAL. TO 5.98

The Best of Mark Almond

MANY GREAT NAMES INCLUDING: CREEDENCE CLEARWATER REVIVAL, THE KINKS, SUNFIGHTER, JEFFERSON AIRPLANE, BEATLES, DEEP PURPLE, JAMES GANG, THE GUESS WHO, DOORS, OLIVIA NEWTON JOHN, JIMI HENDRIX, NEW SEEKERS, YOUNG BLOODS, NILSON, ELVIS PRESLEY, B.B. KING AND THE BYRDS.

THE VERY BEST OF BOBBY SHORT

LP's $2.99 ALBUMS INCLUDING: J. GEILS BAND, DERRICK & THE DOMINOS, EDGAR WINTER, ISAAC HAYES, ERIC CLAPTON, BETTE MIDLER, TOM RUSH, FIRESIGN THEATRE, ISLE OF WHITE AND THE FIFTH DIMENSION. VAL TO 9.98 2.99

UNIVERSITY STORE ON THE CAMPUS

Can one priest make a difference?

In Italy, in the 1600's a poor priest met a boy of the streets. At that time there were thousands of such boys in Turin . . . hungry, homeless and without hope.

But what could one priest do? Without money. Without support. Without even a building to house them.

But Father John Bosco did make a difference. He founded the first community that was dedicated primarily to youth. With a program of play, learn and pray he brought the boys from the streets back to God and gave them a means of earning their living. From such humble beginnings a movement began that now reaches around the world . . . a movement that has touched the lives of millions of youngsters — the children of St. John Bosco.

Today over 22,000 Salesians carry on his work in 73 countries. A family of community-minded men who help to build a better world by preparing young boys to be good citizens for both God and country. Salesians serve as teachers, coaches, counselors, parish priests and missionaries. You see, one priest can make a big difference.

For more information about Salesian Priests and Brothers, mail this coupon to:
Father Joseph Bentivi, S.D.B. Room C-

Salesians OF ST. JOHN BOSCO
Box 688, New Rochelle, N.Y. 10802

I am interested in the Priesthood ☐ Brotherhood ☐

Name _____ Age _____
Street Address _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____
Phone _____
Education _____
Your Current Job _____

"My physics professor sold me my Nimbus waterbed"

"A lot of friends had waterbeds and liked them a lot too, but I never really considered one until we studied Pascal's Law in terms of the professor's Nimbus Waterbed. Now I don't know how much you know about hydrodynamics, but in practical terms what a waterbed adds up to is a better night's sleep. When I asked the professor if all waterbeds were the same, he said Nimbus was the only one with the cross-buckle corners, a construction so unique that its the only patented wooden waterbed frame in the world. He talked about other attractive physical properties like solid state temperature control and support that won't deteriorate with age. Well, I believe in putting education to use so after classes I stopped at a local Nimbus retailer. I guess you can say I've learned my lesson in a world where 'What gets up . . . must lay down.'"

The Emerald City of Oz Ltd.
71 St. Paul St.
Burlington Vermont
862-4298

Because of Nimbus... America will sleep a little easier tonight.

Student Chess As

The Student Chess Association is meeting every Monday night in B132 Living and Learning. Club meetings are open to all students. We encourage any student who plays chess to come to our meetings. It doesn't matter how well you play, whether you are just learning or you are a hardened tournament veteran, we would like to see you. Don't worry if you don't have a chess set because the club just got a supply of sets and boards. Any one can use these sets during club meetings. Membership in the club is free and gets you discounts for any club events.

For anyone who is interested in tournament play our next tournament is March 15 and 16 in 115 Commons Living/Learning Center. Entry fee is only... to Stude... Box 90 B... March 1... $4.00 if... This fee i... to "Ches... discounts... equipmen... rating... tournamen... to play i... very good... play in... only pay... advance... informa... write to... call Pe... 656-2037.

UVM Studen

Between 20 and 30 University of Vermont students will travel to Washington, D.C. during the spring recess for a four-day seminar (March 22-27) to be devoted to the topic of "Congressional Reform."

The University's Alumni Association, in cooperation with the Alumni Office and the department of political science, is sponsoring this third annual seminar... planned f... Washingt...

Richar... graduate... Washingt... this year... designe... changes... undergon... reform m...

Repr... Democra...

A New Hig

by Martin Gunther

Startling results have followed the findings that the Ludlow Theory (specialized cell deterioration as a irreversible process) is not quite true. It is true indeed that a cell cannot be brought back to life once dead, however, certain cells which appear to die are actually just removed and excreted from the body. These can then be partially recovered. Furthermore, these free cells can be accumulated, cleansed and reintroduced into the system. Such is true with brain cells.

The findings of recent studies using brain cell matter are amazing. Subjects given varying dosages of RU 200 (the reconverted cells) showed greater concentration, increased depth perception, higher energy levels and a greater level of sharpness.

At higher dosages subjects reported a high similar to that of certain psychedelic drugs. All subjects reported a very positive experience.

Already underground chemists have begun accumulating and preparing RU 200... materials... schools... However... been su... are va... negative... pressure... outlaw... groups... and... misdem... not... physics... have a... similar... Re... in Burl... a sm... studen... to m... popula... high... compe... It is... studen... corner... A... Burlin... a pret... the st... mainly... fairly... around...

Cunningha

WEEKDAY MASS SCHEDULE FOR LENT: 7:30 a.m. and 4:15 p.m. Also: Each Tuesday evening at 10:00 p.m.

WEEKEND MASS SCHEDULE: Saturday, 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.; Sunday: 9:00 and 11:30 a.m. and 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.

A MORE MEANINGFUL LIFE SERIES: Exploration of the Catholic faith. Especially for non-catholics interested in the Catholic tradition, and for Catholics interested in deepening their religious understanding. Each Monday evening at 8:30 p.m. at the Center.

SCRIPTURE: Monday evenings at 7:00 p.m. A series on the Prophet Isaiah for Lent. Jesus quoted Isaiah in His most important statements about Himself. Not to know Isaiah, the poet, philosopher and theologian of the Old Testament is to have missed hearing the heartbeat of the Old Testament.

FASHION SHOW: This evening at 7:30 p.m. "Springtime on Campus." Benefit of the Newman Center. Fashions by Magrams. Place: Ira Allen Chapel. Date: March 6, 1975. Donations for tickets $1.50 available at the Newman Center, in many of the dorms with students and at the door.

The Fa... clothing... women... fashio... from U... CON... Prayer... 7:30 p... SOC... interest... in our... Topics...

Th... whic... Advent... Decem... with a... Break... especi... want... to ma... style o... will... Sunday... want... Sue... come... Sunda... Inc... Sunda... p.m.

dunham

Headquarters for CONTINENTAL TYROLEANS

MAZE

194 North St.

...ing Learning Nutrition class meets for an ...counseling in 115 Commons, L/L. All are ...s meets each Monday and Wednesday. ...meets at Harris-Mills. All are welcome. ...German film, "Minna von Barnhelm", in ...own in 104 Old Mill. ...m., S.A. Films presents the French Classic, ...Black" in 101 Votey Bldg. Admission is ...

...Cultural program presents Dr. H. Lawrence ...mpetence and Minority Identity," D-170 ...Center. ...Where Devil" is presented at Royall Tyler ...re is 656-2094. Make reservations now - the ...w! ...Asian Cultural Exchange sponsors speakers ...Cohen who will present a slide show and ...ancient View of Art and Archaeology" in ...ange. ...Lawrence McCorey speaks on "Competence ...ntity" in D-107, L/L, as part of the Cross ...

TUESDAY, MARCH 11

...Center courses in sexuality and sexuality, ...utilities and the role of the Civic Center in ...ton's water front begin today. Call 656-4221 ...

...m., The Red Cross blood drive continues ...y. Come give the precious gift of life at ...nge. ...D. Outwater leads a study habit workshop ...nd Testing Center. ...versity Christian Fellowship is holding a ...udies every Tuesday. All are welcome to ...Prospect St., Apt. 2 ...English Majors' seminar, led by Prof. Terence ...College in Dublin, will deal with the topic, ...ection to the Poetry of Seamus Heaney" in ...d Mill. ...sophy Prof. William Mann speaks on "The ...of God's Timelessness: A Classic Example of ...Philosophy Gone Wrong." The lecture is ...

...ing performance of "The White Devil" at ...re. ...

...EDNESDAY, MARCH 12

...reer Center course in "Our Bodies, Our ...ney Koch, begins today at D-107, L/L. Call ...ls. ...

...m., The Red Cross blood drive continues ...in Billings' North Lounge. Come give the ...

...y Koch leads an hour of relaxation and ...Counseling and Testing Center. ...e Lunch Bunch film series continues today ...of "Yugoslavia", a survey of life there today. ...the site and admission is free. ...tulia" is an informal gathering of any ...students, faculty and staff at the Hispanic ...rd floor, Living/Learning. All are encouraged ...r your speaking ability. ...Living/Learning Nutrition Class meets for an ...g in nutrition exercises in 115 Commons. ...

...Outing Club meets in 305 Votey Bldg. ...Music Dept. sponsors the Con Brio Chamber ...g/Learning tonight. ...

...cements

...ional career ...e available as ...n. ...an Graduate ...visiting the ...to discuss ...th interested

March 10 St. Mary's University, Halifax

March 17 Concordia University, Montreal

Sign up now for a personal interview, third floor Mansfield House.

...e Again

...yells and ...according ..."Then they ...mas carols, ...ople started ...

...00 people ...streakers, ...nd then in ...

The university made streaking history last March when 1583 students ran across campus at the same time, setting a national record. Six streakers were arrested in that mass run and their trial is scheduled for the middle of February.

...rofessor ...e my ...aterbed" state temperature control and support that won't deteriorate with age. Well, I believe in putting education to use so after classes I stopped at a local Nimbus retailer. I guess you can say I've learned my lesson in a world where 'What gets up . . . must lay down.'"

...he only ...cross- ...a ...so ...nted ...rbed ...world. ...ut other ...sical ...e solid

The Emerald City of Oz Ltd.
71 St. Paul St.
Burlington Vermont
862-4298

...Nimbus... ...ds easier tonight.

Student Chess Association

The Student Chess Association is meeting every Monday night in B132 Living and Learning. Club meetings are open to all students. We encourage any student who plays chess to come to our meetings. It doesn't matter how well you play, whether you are just learning or you are a hardened tournament veteran, we would like to see you. Don't worry if you don't have a chess set because the club just got a supply of sets and boards. Any one can use these sets during club meetings. Membership in the club is free and gets you discounts for any club events.

For anyone who is interested in tournament play our next tournament is March 15 and 16 in 115 Commons Living/Learning Center. Entry fee is only $3.00 if you send it to Student Chess Association, Box 90 Billings Center before March 14. It will cost you $4.00 if you enter at the tournament. The only requirement is that you be a member of the United States Chess Federation. You can join at the tournament for $12.00. This fee includes a subscription to "Chess, Life and Review", discounts on chess books and equipment, a national chess rating (if you play in tournaments) and the privilege to play in tournaments. It's a very good deal. If you join and play in the tournament you only pay $14.00 ($1.00 off advance entry fee). For more information on this either write to the above address or call Polly Peterson at 656-2037.

Dangers of Nuclear Plant Exposed

The VPIRG office has released an announcement of an up-coming speaker, co-sponsored by Robinson Environmental Dorm.

Dr. Ernest Sternglass from the University of Pittsburgh will be speaking at the University of Vermont on low level radiation on March 11.

Dr. Sternglass, a radiologist at the University of Pittsburgh, did statistical studies of radioactive emissions and increase of mortality rates in and around the shipping port Nuclear Power Plant near Pittsburgh in 1972. His findings, released in 1973, caused national impact, that created a commission to investigate the safety of the plant.

Sternglass found what he claims to be an unbroken pattern showing the closer communities lie to the shipping port Atomic Plant near Pittsburgh, the higher the rate of medical problems.

Aliquippa is a community a little larger than Rutland, Vermont, just eight miles downward from the shipping port reactor.

The professor checked Pennsylvania Health Department statistics for Aliquippa and found that in 1970, the town had the highest infant mortality rate of 98 communities surveyed in Pennsylvania. Aliquippa, said Dr. Sternglass, had a rate of 43.9 deaths per 1,000 infants more than a year before. The entire state had a rate of 20.2 percent.

Dr. Sternglass examined other towns near the shipping port power plant and found similar increases. He also found evidence supporting the conclusion that the shipping port plant was causing increases in the level of strontium 90 (a radioactive poisonous element) in milk taken from dairies near the plant.

Sternglass said "People get radiation via milk, air currents, meat from cattle. But mainly from milk." "People downstream on the river get it from drinking water."

Imposter Has No Problem Finding Jobs

(CPS) - Troubled by a shaky credit rating, mediocre academic records, or lukewarm personal references?

One quick-thinking shyster has discovered a sure-fire way to win the hearts of bankers, school admissions staffs and personnel officers: impersonate a Harvard honors graduate.

A man who claimed to be John Q. Johnson III, a 1973 Harvard honors graduate, successfully enrolled in a highly selective business school program, gained admission to two doctoral programs, worked in two banks as a management trainee, took out a $3000 bank loan and received a $5000 educational grant -- all under his false identity, reported the Harvard Crimson.

The imposter, besides claiming a Harvard degree, also said he was a member of the 1972 US Olympic track team and a Vietnam War veteran who had been decorated four times.

"He had a file of references that was unbelievable," said one of the bank officers who hired the bogus Johnson.

The real Johnson, neither an Olympian nor a veteran, is currently enrolled as a graduate student in political science at Stanford University.

"I'm a little confused by the whole thing," Johnson said.

In an ironic commentary on corporate hiring practices and graduate admissions policies, the Crimson revealed that the real Johnson is white while the imposter was black.

A personnel officer involved in the affair said one reason he did not check out the phoney Johnson's credentials as carefully as usual was that his company was "very anxious" to hire such a "well-qualified black man."

The imposter began work as a management trainee for the Mellon Bank in Pittsburgh, Pa. over the past summer and promptly took out a $3000 employee loan. He then left Mellon bank in December and was hired as a management trainee for the First National City Bank in New York.

Although the impersonator has already been admitted to doctoral programs at Cornell University, NY and the Carnegie-Mellon Institute, Pa., First National helped the make-believe Johnson to gain admission to the University of Chicago business school.

The New York bank then reportedly offered the imposter a $5000 a year grant to offset the cost of the Chicago graduate program. An alert Mobil Oil Company personnel officer, however, became suspicious of the bogus Johnson during an interview in December and tipped off the dean of students at the Chicago business school to the possibility of fraud.

After double-checking transcript records with Harvard officials -- who had routinely been supplying the transcripts of the real Johnson to whomever the fake Johnson had requested -- the dean confronted the imposter with charges of entering the school under false pretenses. After denying the charges, the impersonator left the school.

"He was just too good to be true," said the Mobil officer.

The ruse, however, apparently continues. Harrah's Hotel and Casino of Las Vegas, Nv. recently called one of the imposter's former employers to see if the employer would vouch for one "James Q. Johnson," a man coincidentally fitting the imposter's description.

UVM Students In Washington

Between 20 and 30 University of Vermont students will travel to Washington, D.C. during the spring recess for a four-day seminar (March 22-27) to be devoted to the topic of "Congressional Reform."

The University's Alumni Association, in cooperation with the Alumni Office and the department of political science, is sponsoring this third annual seminar, which has been planned for by the University's Washington, D.C. area alumni.

Richard Sachs, a 1967 UVM graduate and resident of Washington, has coordinated this year's seminar which is designed to examine the changes the Congress has undergone as a result of recent reform measures.

Representatives from the Democratic Study Group and the Republican Wednesday Group tentatively will address the seminar, as will speakers from the White House Office of Legislation, Common Cause, and the American Petroleum Institute.

A reception at the offices of U.S. Senator Patrick Leahy also is planned as a seminar highlight, offering an opportunity for both students and Washington area alumni to meet with each other and with Vermont's junior senator.

While in Washington, the students will stay in the homes of the UVM alumni who live in the greater D.C. area.

Prof. James Pacy will accompany members of the student group, many of whom will travel to and from Washington via AMTRAK. Further information and student reservations for the seminar may be made through UVM's Alumni Office, 109 So. Prospect Street, 656-2010, or the department of political science, Old Mill, 656-3050.

A New High

by Martin Gunther

Startling results have followed the findings that the Ludlow Theory (specialized cell deterioration as a irreversible process) is not quite true. It is true indeed that a cell cannot be brought back to life once dead, however, certain cells which appear to die are actually just removed and excreted from the body. These can then be partially recovered. Furthermore, these free cells can be accumulated, cleansed and reintroduced into the system. Such is true with brain cells.

The findings of recent studies using brain cell matter are amazing. Subjects given varying dosages of RU 200 (the reconverted cells) showed greater concentration, increased depth perception, higher energy levels and a greater level of sharpness.

At higher dosages subjects reported a high similar to that of certain psychedelic drugs. All subjects reported a very positive experience.

Already underground chemists have begun accumulating and preparing RU 200. A good source of raw materials are found at bars, schools and rest homes. However impure batches have been surfacing and the effects are varied but generally negative. Presently there are pressure groups pushing for the outlaw of RU 200. Certain groups want to make both sale and possession of it a misdemeanor. Though it has not been found to be physically addictive it seems to have a habit-forming potential similar to marijuana.

Recently RU 200 surfaced in Burlington. It's been used by a small number of UVM students, though it's unknown to most of the student population. Prices run high, as high as 50 dollars a dose and competition to buy it is fierce. It is rumored one pre-med student here attempted to corner the market.

A dealer down at a Burlington bar said, "It's really a pretty good business; I sell the stuff to students and kids mainly, but there's been some fairly old people coming around lately."

APEX May Be Your Answer

by Marcie Levin

Ah yes, I remember back in third grade when I vowed I was going to be an elementary teacher. Back then I thought I was pretty qualified, I was a kid wasn't I? Little did I know how much I would have to relearn at college. Then I realized how little "college" knew about kids; real life, in the flesh kids!

In order to be certified and eventually be what the state calls qualified to teach I would have to spend multitudes of hours in class, reading and writing forever about the abstract concept of kids. Maybe if I could fit it in, I would try to do "fieldwork" one hour a week.

It seemed absurd to me. I mean, to learn about teaching, it's important to learn about who you are going to be teaching: KIDS. To learn about that, you can either be a kid or be with kids. It would obviously have to be the latter for me but who has time with all those papers and tests...

The frustration of requirements would have finally drained all my intellectual and creative curiosity. Is anyone out there feeling stifled? Bored? My answer to that might be yours too. APEX-- the American Primary Experience Program.

Last year I became a member of this program whose basic structure includes continuous in-school experience fully supported by interested and involved staff. We integrate first hand experience in the classroom and first hand experience with classroom materials. We spend 2 years together growing and learning about teaching, learning and ourselves in an individualized, self-motivating atmosphere.

The APEX Program provides a full years experience in elementary classrooms prior to student-teaching. The methods courses are taught with emphasis on discussion, small group activities, personal and group experience with classroom materials plus an opportunity to experience these things with kids.

APEX is relevant education. Anyone interested in an elementary education alternative for next fall apply now and come see us in Living/Learning, Building C, Room 140 or call extension 4189. Maybe we can solve your bored education blues.

The Exchange

Non-Smokers Have Rights Too

More and more students have emphasized again the rights of nonsmokers on campus. It seems many people find smoking extremely offensive especially during exams when as one nonsmoker put it, "the smoke irritated my eyes so much that I could hardly read my answer sheet!" Another expressed it this way, "I find it terribly annoying and I'm not only offended by the smoke, I have trouble breathing - I'm allergic to it." An interesting journal article in Perceptual and Motor Skills, 1973,36,946 may get some of you thinking about this problem. Titled, "Relation of Examination Scores to Tobacco Smoking," the study investigated the hypothesis that examination performances of both smokers and nonsmokers would be lowered by the presence of both behavior types in one room. The study discovered that nonsmokers earned lower scores in the presence of smokers, which might reflect physical reaction to the smoke as well as emotional reaction to the smokers. For those of you who really care about this, Dr. Karl H. Raab, research director for STOP (Society to Overcome Pollution) has suggested that you contact ASH, Action on Smoking and Health, New England Region, 15 Kennedy Road, Cambridge, MA 02138. For the others, maybe you could be a little more considerate of the person sitting next to you when you get the urge for a cigarette. Maybe you could even wait until after class? Do nonsmokers have rights too?

Here's one for those who use the gym facilities. A senior wrote concerning the policy of issuing women's lockers at Patrick. It seems that she has used a locker for the last three years and recently when she went to use the pool found that her locker had been cleaned out and the contents (which ran into a considerable amount of money), disposed of by authorities at the gym. She questions why students were not notified that they should claim their articles. In her words, "I realize the University does not take responsibility for possessions left in the gym, but I think there is a dramatic difference between claiming no responsibility and purposefully removing someone's possessions and disposing of them." The reason for this action, according to gym officials is the new policy of issuing lockers every semester, so that if articles left in lockers are not claimed within a month into the new semester, they are disposed of. Martha Raab, the student submitting the complaint would like to know if anyone else lost articles due to this new policy and were not notified. Call her at 864-7239.

And now for a more positive comment from a student to an anonymous custodian at the bookstore. "I would like to compliment the custodian of the University Bookstore for his most friendly manner when I asked him if I could possibly bring my dog inside. He replied with a smile, 'As long as I am custodian of this bookstore, a dog may come in here.' The reply really brightened up my day." Thanks from those of us who love dogs and don't mind them on campus.

Keep filling out the EXCHANGE forms or call in your concerns (x2068).

by Andrea Lehtonen '75
Alice D. Outwater Counseling & Testing Center

Cunningham Newman Center

WEEKDAY MASS SCHEDULE FOR LENT: 7:30 a.m. and 4:15 p.m. Also: Each Tuesday evening at 10:00 p.m.

WEEKEND MASS SCHEDULE: Saturday: 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.; Sunday: 9:00 and 11:30 a.m. and 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.

A MORE MEANINGFUL LIFE SERIES: Exploration of the Catholic faith. Especially for non-catholics interested in the Catholic tradition, and for Catholics interested in deepening their religious understanding. Each Monday evening at 8:30 p.m. at the Center.

SCRIPTURE: Monday evenings at 7:00 p.m. A series on the Prophet Isaiah for Lent. Jesus quoted Isaiah in His most important statements about Himself. Not to know Isaiah, the poet, philosopher and theologian of the Old Testament is to have missed hearing the heartbeat of the Old Testament.

FASHION SHOW: This evening at 7:30 p.m. "Springtime on Campus." Benefit of the Newman Center. Fashions by Magrams. Place: Ira Allen Chapel. Date: March 6, 1975. Donations for tickets $1.50 available at the Newman Center, in many of the dorms with students and at the door. The Fashion Show will feature clothing for both men and women and most of those fashioning will be students from UVM.

COMMUNAL PENANCE: Prayer Service on March 12 at 7:30 p.m.

SOCIAL ACTION: Are you interested in becoming active in our Social Action Group? Topics we are pursuing are: Farmworkers and boycotts, Amnesty, and Third World and Hunger.

LITURGICAL DANCE: Again this year Mrs. O'Brien from the O'Brien's School of Dance, will prepare a group for a Liturgical Dance at the Center. This will be presented at all the Liturgies the weekend of March 15 and 16.

St. Anselm's Chapel

The St. Anselm's Choir, which put together the Advent/Christmas service last December, is getting started with a new one for after Spring Break. All are welcome to join, especially those people who want to sing but weren't able to make the UVM choir. The style of this music is folk and it will be integrated into the Sunday morning service. If you want more information, call Sue Boolukos (Ext. 4267) or come to the first rehearsal Sunday, March 9, at 6 p.m.

Inquirer's class will be on Sunday night this week at 7 p.m. The Topic will be "the Anglican Communion and the Episcopal Church."

Programs

Choir, Sunday 6 p.m.

Inquirer's Class, Sunday 7 p.m.

Deanery Meeting, Monday, 7 p.m. at St. Paul's Cathedral

Oral Interpretation, St. Anselm's Players, as arranged (call Tim at 862-8309).

Services

Sunday: Holy Eucharist, 9 a.m., Evening Prayer, 5 p.m.

Tuesday: Holy Eucharist, 10 p.m.

Monday-Friday: Morning prayer, 7:15 a.m., Evening Prayer, 5 p.m.

SPRING CLEANING SALE

50% off on:

Ski Boots: HANSON: Riva, TRAPPEUR: Elite & Equipe, RAICHLE: Comp. & Cellina, NORDICA: Mercury & Elegance

Skis: K-2: Two, OLIN: Jr. MarkII, VOLKL: Jr. Tiger, ATOMIC: Atomic, Super Jet, Rider Short & Junior Atomic, A & T: Ski Sets, DEMO-SKIS by: Rossignol, Olin & Atomic

Ski Poles: Barrecrafter, Scott & Crosscountry

Skates: Figure & Hockey by Hyde, Mens, Ladies & Kids

Ski Suits: Innsbruck & Anba, Mens & Ladies Parka & Warmup Combination

Stretch Pants, Warmups & Knickers: Entire Stock in Mens, Ladies & Kids

Crosscountry Suits: Mens & Ladies

Sweaters: Mens, Ladies & Kids

Crosscountry Bindings: Klypa 2 pins

30% off on

Ski Boots: HANSON: Team & Exhibition, NORDICA: Meteor, Slalom, Pro, Alpina & Juniors

Skis: ROSSIGNOL: ST 650, Strato 105, Exhibition, Olympia, Europe, G.S.L. 400 & Jr. Strato 105 & Team K-2: Five, Winter Heat, Three, & Junior Two & Five

Parkas: Mens & Ladies T-Necks: Mens & Ladies, Underwear, Hats, Socks, Gloves & Mittens, Ski & Boot Bags

Valuga Sports
1250 SHELBURNE, RD.
South Burlington, Vt.
862-1961

NEXT TO SWISS CHOCOLATE POT

Open Mon. thru Fri. 9 - 9
Saturday 9 - 5:30

BANKAMERICAN CARD
MASTER CHARGE

Boutilier's
ART CENTER
ART SUPPLIES DRAFTING SUPPLIES
CUSTOM PICTURE FRAMING.
VT.'S LARGEST ART STORE
112 Church Street BURLINGTON, VERMONT

Diamond wedding ensembles -- created for the girl who can't say "NO."

You are invited to open a Charge Account at Preston's.

A family of jewelers in Vermont since 1844

F.J. PRESTON & SON INC.
17 Upper Church Street

Member American Gem Society

dunham
Headquarters for CONTINENTAL TYROLEANS
194 North St.

VALUABLE COUPON
SPECIAL TO STUDENTS AND FACULTY MEMBERS
(prescriptions excluded)
10% DISCOUNT
ON YOUR PURCHASES AT
CAMPUS PHARMACY
ACROSS FROM
The Medical Center

SPAGHETTI HUT
30 North St., Burlington 863-9893
Now Open on Sunday
10% off EVERYTHING ON THE MENU
(except beverages)
Happy Hour All Day
Jim Owens and his Organ
The Place to be on Sunday

VERMONT CYNIC

Founded In 1883

Editor-in-Chief . . . . . Randy Amann '77
Assistant Editor . . . . . Alyssa Katz '77
Managing Editor . . . . . Mark S. Wells '76
News Editor . . . . . Kathy Stokes '77
Assistant News Editor . . . . . Mark Sroger '77
Feature Editor . . . . . Stephen M. Tanner '76
Arts Editor . . . . . Robert DeMike '77
Sports Editor . . . . . Norm Robinson '77
Copy Editor . . . . . Sari Bell '77
Advertising Manager . . . . . Debbie Powell '76

VPIRG: Capital Watch

Pediatric Problem and Prevention

by Peter Cobb, VPIRG Staff

In Vermont, as in the rest of the nation, there are large numbers of children afflicted with serious health problems that go undetected. Assuming that the incidence of disease in Vermont is roughly parallel to the national experience, Vermont probably has 1,000 children with undetected cerebral palsy and an equal number who have epilepsy. An estimated 9,000 children have speech disorders, 16,000 have emotional problems, 5,200 have impaired hearing and another 3,200 have orthopedic problems. A very large number, 43,000 have eye problems and are in need of special lens.

A comprehensive screening program will be an important first step in the detection of preventive medicine. Early identification of disease with prompt treatment may well lessen the effect of an otherwise debilitating handicap. Our present symptom-oriented medical system results in an incalculable waste of irreplaceable human potential not to mention millions of dollars in acute care costs.

Bill H-365, sponsored by Representatives Curtis, D-Charlotte, Niquette, D-Winooski, and Granai, D-Burlington would provide for a comprehensive health screening program similar to the "Tooth Fairy" program which was passed two years ago.

The program would provide state assistance to enable children to receive periodic screening for diseases and disabilities at clinics which are already set up through the federal Early Periodic Screening Diagnostic and Treatment Program (EPSDT).

Costs

Vermont could have a children's health screening program for under $200,000 a year. Two hundred thousand dollars is not a huge sum to pay for a program that is certain to have an economic payoff in addition to promoting better health care for the state's children. Compared to the total state budget of well over 150 million, the program's modest request is small indeed. Last year, the state employees spent over $3 million for travel. The Highway Department alone spent almost $500,000 for travel.

Presently Vermonters spend 11 cents of every dollar earned on health care. In 1973 the average Vermont family with three children spent $2300 on medical and health services, including insurance and governmental health programs. Unfortunately, these high expenditures do not guarantee healthy families. In fact, high medical costs may end up crippling a family budget, leaving less money for adequate food and shelter which are vital for good health.

Why Now

Obviously 1975 is a very tight money year. All expenditures ought to be closely supervised, H-365 however makes economic sense for Vermont. Vermonters are paying out thousands of dollars for health care which could be avoided through early detection and treatment. Also this program has real economic benefits to the state because it provides a badly needed service without increasing bureaucracy.

What to do

Contact your representative and ask him or her to support H. 365. Also contact members of the House Health Committee: Dale Austin (Newport) Chairman, Lew Kedroff (Springfield) Vice-Chairman, Harold Baker (Randolph), William Osborne (Barre Town), Walter Regen (St. Albans City), Harry Ashe (Williamstown), Maurice Chaloux (St. Johnsbury), Margaret Christowe (Dover), David Curtis (Charlotte), Thomas McGregor (Colchester) and Randall Niquette (Winooski).

For more information contact VPIRG, 26 State Street, Montpelier, Vt., 05602, or call 223-5221.

Open Season

by Scott MacKay

In an effort to determine whether there is any truth behind recent news stories speculating upon Richard Nixon's plans for a political comeback, the Cynic furtively dispatched this reporter to San Clemente, California. After weeks of diligent prying, we were finally permitted an exclusive interview with the former President ... sans tape recorder, naturally.

We found our old chief executive very accessible; instead of Bob Haldeman guarding the entrance to his office, Nixon now employs two Doberman Pinscrs. He was in an amiable mood on the morning we dropped in, and even quipped that he had toilet-trained the Dobesmans on old editions of the Washington Post. After telling us of the highlights of his transition period and documenting his courageous battle with phlebitis, he ushered wife Pat in for our intimate parley concerning his political future.

"Yes..." indomitable Dick candidly related, "I've definitely thought of resuming my career in the political world ... in fact, I'm considering an offer to run for Los Angeles City Council, you know, so that I can become well-versed in local problems... everybody from Mao Tse-Tung to the Shah of Iran knows that I am the most qualified man in the world in the realm of foreign affairs... and I could probably win a Senate seat in a race against that liberal lightweight Tunney..."

The conversation continued in this vein for an hour or so. And it became evident that this Nixon was no quitter, not a man to dwell, Bob-Slocum like, on his past, but rather one who looks to the future of renewed public service to the American people. The former President left little doubt that he was yearning for the opportunity to re-enter the political arena. So we broached the inevitable question: Do you, Richard Nixon, still believe you can be elected by a citizenry that perceives you as corrupt?

Nixon replied, "The voters realize by now that I did nothing that Johnson, Kennedy or for that matter Franklin Roosevelt, didn't do; it's just that I was able to capitalize on the technological achievements of American ingenuity in the field of electronic surveillance in a way in which my predecessors never dreamed ... and besides, people don't vote on vague issues like corruption anyway."

Well, we interjected, just what does motivate a person to select one candidate over another?

In a revealing dialogue, the former President mused, "You know, it's the sympathy vote that I could never garner. People always thought of me as a cold, calculating man with few human qualities, you know compassion and all that... the American people are children, really, and the vast majority of them vote on this sympathetic impulse, not on any real issues... and I'll admit, I was always too busy with the big things to worry about this key component of any campaign... certainly, other politicians have done better at eliciting the tears of the electorate than I."

When I mentioned the effective job he had done with the famous Checkers speech back in '52, the old Nixon ire returned, and he glared at me with a wrath usually reserved for the likes of Dan Rather.

"You know," he uttered fiercely as his eyes narrowed and chin jutted awake, "that was kid's stuff compared to what the politicians do today... I never did the underhanded things to get the sympathy vote that are prevalent today... look at Chuck Percy, having his daughter killed a week before election to the Senate... or George Wallace, that old racist who was made respectable as hell all of a sudden by Arthur Bremmer's gun... hell I should have hired that Bremer chap in the middle of the Watergate crisis, but he would probably have missed (ha, ha, ha)... and that master of the sympathy vote, Ted Kennedy, who covered up his disgraceful fornication with his secretary in Cape Cod's sand dunes by having his son's leg amputated..."

Nixon continued, with a sigh, "Even's good Republican, like Gerry Ford, made sure his wife got cancer, and predictably, Rockefeller... quick as Kissinger can arrange flight connections to Moscow... sent Happy up to the hospital for her breast operation..." and laughing now, Nixon cracker, "and Happy never even made the cover of The Ladies Home Journal... boy that Rockefeller never quits running for President, does he..."

Suddenly, the former President glared across the room at a lewpie doll print Pat Nixon, and marshalling all the ardent fervor of an American Legion Post singing the Star Spangled Banner during wartime, he intone, "Don't worry, I'll make it back to Washington, maybe even to the White House... but Pat, honey, it might cost you a tit or two"

Pat replied meekly, "... uh, gee, Dick couldn't I maybe just drag out that good ole Republican cloth coat... it even has a few moth holes in it..."

Now we all know that history professors spend most of their waking hours engrossed in such mundane pursuits as drinking, haughtily snickering to each other while comparing notes on whose students compose the most imbecille answers to their irrelevant exam questions, and wistfully, lecherously pondering which jockette in the intro course would be their choice for an evening of divine decadence. But not everyone is aware of the historians' more pernicious vices and pastimes. Prominent among these are the dual avocations of publishing esoteric articles nobody reads and Monday-morning quarterbacking the decisions of those bureaucratic and elected officials who wield real political and economic power in society. (Sorry, Lord Keynes).

Finally, after a protracted department meeting, the history faculty has formulated a plan perfectly designed to save UVM's vaunted football program. We reprint it here anonymously to protect the reputations of the guilty:

Recent articles spotlighting the cost of maintaining a United States Senator and staff focus upon a predicament that has interested us ever since UVM announced it would abandon football. By conservative estimates the budget for any U.S. Senator's staff (even without including a Senator) far exceeds the cost of maintaining a quality Yankee Conference football team. Furthermore, at least according to some proponents of Vermont football, the former is a demonstrably frivolous undertaking. Since 1933 Vermont has flourished with only one Representative to the House, and we would, they contend, do just as well with only one Senator. Indeed, given the propensity of Stafford and Leahy to disagree, it may well be that they will frequently cancel out each other's vote, thus leaving us with less than if we had only one Senator. As compelling as this argument may be, the savings from implementing it will produce no revenue for football. Except in some ultimate and non-negotiable sense savings from the federal budget are not reflected in those of the States, and sad to relate, Senators are a federal and football is a state item. (Even if funds were transferable, Vermont's estimated share is $1000 for every $500,000 thus saved.)

What then might the State do to keep football, or for that matter human service programs which financial exigency would otherwise require the State cease supporting. One alternative might be to abolish the Vermont State Senate. While the State Senate is nowhere near as expensive as a U. S. Senator, it is more costly than football. Prior to 1965 when the State was apportioned by population and the House represented towns, a bicameral legislature filled an apparent need. Now, however, that both Houses are apportioned by population, the principal job of the Senate is to duplicate the work of the House. There are already notable successful single body legislatures and we ought consider following such models. Nebraska has a unicameral legislature and invariably produces a nationally ranked football team.

Parting Shots: In these days of depression, Burlington's drinkers have some good bargains – the Redwood's Scooter Spiffal heads even peupers a good hammer, and the Rusty Scuffer's weeknight deals for drinkers can't be best... Combining price and ambience, the 'Scuffer is the best watering spot in the downtown area... Two people definitely not in the running for UVM's presidency are John Franco and Michael Parenti... has anybody noticed Bob Stafford's instant liberal change of image?

Cheap Shots: How come Easy Ed Andrews has Vermont license plate number 69... must be because of his position...

(continued on page five)

Letters To The Editor

Rebuttal to VFW Claims By E&J Gallo

To the Editor:

On February 25, 1975 a letter to the Editor appeared in THE CYNIC authorized by Jessie Clemens, a UFW supporter on your campus. Mr. Clemens' writing is proof again that the UFW and its supporters do not wish to present the facts of events that have happened in the past, but are more concerned with presenting trumped-up propaganda that beclouds the basic issue that farm workers have a right to belong to the union of their own choosing, and that a majority of the Gallo farm workers petitioned management to negotiate with the Teamsters and not the UFW. Probably the best way to point this out is to answer the charges made by Mr. Clemens in his letter to the Editor.

Signed Signature Cards

In 1967 the UFW came to Gallo stating that they represented the majority of the Gallo farm workers. To prove this they presented signed signature cards to the Gallo management. These signature cards were verified by the State Mediation and Conciliation Service. These cards were brought to the Gallo Management. At that time two unions claimed to represent the Gallo farm workers. The fact that we were in negotiations with the UFW from April 25 to June 20, 1973 points out that we were working with the UFW and not with the Teamsters. During these negotiations the UFW had every opportunity to present their signature cards. Mr. Clemens wishes to point out that Sister Higgins in July was to attempt to present the UFW signature cards. The question that arises is why Sister Higgins and not the UFW negotiator, Dave Burciaga or Cesar Chavez himself? If the UFW had the signature cards that they claimed to have why did they not present them to the State Mediation and Conciliation Service as they had previously done in 1967, assuming of course that Gallo might have refused the signature cards, which we did not.

Housing

The housing that was being occupied by the strikers was rent free and was provided only to Gallo employees. When these strikers refused to come back to work for Gallo, we asked them to leave the housing. When they did not, the only alternative left was to bring court proceedings to try to get them to vacate the premises. It must be understood that the housing is provided only for Gallo farm workers and their families. Before this matter was ever presented to the courts for decision, the UFW attorneys and Gallo's attorneys came to an agreement that the strikers would leave if they were permitted to stay for another couple of months, to which Gallo agreed.

Secret Ballot Elections

The UFW claims they want secret ballot elections, but Cesar Chavez and his staff of lobbyists have fought all legislation which would include farm workers under the National Labor Relations Act. The NLRA would provide secret ballot elections, but would also outlaw UFW secondary boycotting, and their unfair and discriminatory labor practices. The UFW obviously cannot afford to lose the use of these tactics which infringes upon the consumers freedom of choice.

UFW Strike

Mr. Clemens would have you believe that there is a labor dispute at Gallo, and this labor dispute has continued ever since the UFW called for a strike on June 27, 1973. The Gallo farm workers are not on strike. The majority of the 199 Gallo workers in 1973 chose to join the Teamsters Union after having belonged to the UFW for six years. When the UFW contract expired on April 18, 1973, 68 days later, on June 25, 1973, the Teamsters Union advised Gallo they could supply proof that they represented the majority of the Gallo farm workers, and Gallo notified Cesar Chavez by telegram of the Teamster claim. As previously stated, instead of presenting workers signature cards as the Teamsters did, the UFW called for a strike and boycott on June 27, 1973. Only 69 of the 199 Gallo farm workers left work (not 125 or 135 as UFW would have you believe.) On July 6, 1973, after verification of the signatures of farm workers, it was determined that the majority of all Gallo workers, including those who left on June 27, 1973, had requested Teamster representation. Subsequently, four Gallo farm workers, former UFW members, worked on the negotiating committee with the Teamsters. An agreement was concluded with the Teamsters on July 10, 83 days after the UFW contract had expired.

It is now time that the United Farm Workers, the Teamsters and all the rest of us join forces to see that justice is finally done, and that the right to organize freely and bargain collectively is at last effectively granted to American Farm Workers by including them under the National Labor Relations Act, or similar Federal or State laws. Every person in the United States who truly wishes to solve the farm labor problem in all its aspect should write, wire, or telephone his United States Senator and Congressman and demand that NLRA type legislation be enacted into law without further delay.

Sincerely yours,
E. & J. Gallo Winery
Joshua C. Simons
Director, Education Communication

Incidents You Should Know About

To the Editor:

In times of double-digit inflation, high unemployment, recession, ever increasing taxes, and record government budgetary deficits, topped off with Watergate, the following incidents should be of major concern to UVM students with their hard-working, tax-paying and tuition-paying parents:

In December of 1973 during the Arab Oil embargo all thermostats in all UVM buildings were lowered to 50 degrees during Christmas recess in order to "conserve" fuel oil. After students left the dorms for vacation in M.A.T. complex the area coordinator of the M.A.T. area was supposed to check and close all windows in the building. The coordinator failed to close a window in a room off the main lobby causing heating pipes to snap due to frigid air and snow blowing inside. Other heating pipes also broke causing severe flooding. As a result many students' property (rugs, etc.) were soaked and ruined, and a hallway leading to Austin Recreation had to have all of the floor tile replaced due to buckling from water damage. No action was taken towards the area coordinator.

In early 1974 every piece of furniture disappeared (couches, chairs, end tables, lamps, and even a rug which would have taken at least 8 or 10 men to haul away-how considerate of them to leave the rug pad and piano-). It would have required a minimum of a 5 ton semi-van to haul the furniture away. Incidently, the area coordinator (presently acting Assistant Director of Residence Halls) occupies a rent-free apartment off the main M.A.T. lobby, diagonally across from the M.A.T. main lounge, the site of the great furniture robbery mystery. One begins to wonder if such a hiest of this magnitude could be pulled off so smoothly in an area as conspicuous as M.A.T. which is surrounded by Living/Learning Center and Millis-Harris and the notorious jughandle. Imagine how your stereo set equipment, bicycle, or car (if you still have them) could be stolen like taking candy from a baby. If you don't believe these incidents actually happen, ask a student or students who live in M.A.T. and were victims also in 1973-74.

Signed,
Anonymous

All Things Considered: Tales From The Inside

by Larry Selden

Things aren't what they're supposed to be. When I need you to be there, I have to call all your friends and track you down like your life knows no tomorrow. I know it's hard every step of the way, but I can't wait for another day. You know baby, there ain't going to be another day for you to ask my love.

I know it takes time to ease into the little spaces we leave open for strangers. But I don't need my lady to be playing games with the queens and hearts. I'm cold and I need my lover to be warm in my arms. Please take me away every day. These weekend spells unbalance the ice and I cry cold tears when I hear your song on the radio. It's only for lullabyes and hot rods, honey. You left my bed to sign the highway line of success. I was with you until the winter signaled, too late. So plug me into something, I'm going to do my carrying on alone.

When those dixiemen come and go, remember you called me a smokin' yankee when I threw back your song. Now there are no more duets in the shower, no more shivers under your touch. Nothing left in my arms, no tingles from watching you sleep; just vacant visions in the long shadows of the night.

I'll keep to myself and when I hear your song I'll send you my best memories. Still I get lonely sometimes, walking on the grey snow sidewalks, remember you used to call it muckanow. Lime spring will bring you back (you liked the stinging waterfalls). In my sleeplessness I turn away from your face. The face I recall late at night to help me through. When I'm tossing on the sheets you left, my phone rings to summon me but you leave before I can answer. Every street bears your name, your mark, the children playing on the corner bear your smile. The blankets offer no release, your thunderous invisible attack reduces me to flail clenched fists at the empty night.

But I laugh now. I've drunken away all your desire; no more crazy mornings in bed like the start. I'd like to admit that I've been putting on since the beginning and if you believe this defense then you can't see the screws desparation has turned in my head. I'm a dizzy fool and I think I've forgotten the words to your song. I know I lost you because I gave up the soft touch you adored. Cocky and cruel were the last of your words so-so long.

••••••••••

I, can't do it; it's a hard thing for me to do, to cut off your tingles, forget your shoulders. Time has carried you by me and left me nowhere to hide from your memory. So there's nothing more relieving than laughing and dying in my slow tormenting motionless way. I'll slip away like magic sand castles submitting to your lapping tide.

Still I can't help but get so lonely sometimes. I use my defensive walls to protect me while I run to the hidden rooms in the back of my mind, where romantic constrictions can't grab me. Don't ask what about me? My dear friends know my style and they say it's filled with trouble. But I've gotten alone and you could have been the best thing I ever had.

This is my chilling ground and I've tried everything for you, cold woman. Cold as the sheets where we used to lay. But I'm cold now; still I'd give you my life if you'd stay for just a little while. I beg of you one last favor – let me make sweet, sweet love to you, one more time or let me hurt when you go.

If this be heaven, I'll take hell. Here it's too easy to slip, and let my memory fail. None of my previous people I can remember. But I can't let them drift like they don't mean nothing at all. But your song always had a sad melody and like you, I always chose the thrill of it all. If only I could remember to forget.

I know you're cold and an island when you're on your own. Still lover, you're the weight I've been waiting for (to return in all your splendor).

Revelation: We're all going to need help tomorrow, so call the DUCK.

VERMONT CYNIC

NEWS: Margo Howland, Andy Morse, Mary Gilbertson.
FEATURE: Paul Ajamian, Paul Cain, Carol Dufault, Mike Henry, Pam Hogarth, Andy Hunt, Sue Perkins.
ARTS: Dave Mandel, Larry Selden, Mark Sprulnick, Jay Williams.
COLUMNISTS: Peter Cobb, Elliot Freeman, Ken Markovitz, Sue Perkins, Stephen Rice, Larry Selden, Scott Skinner, Peter Campbell.
SPORTS: Randy Briggs, Gary Brooks, Rick Katz, Don Ross, Richard Rothkov.
PRODUCTION: Rick Barney, Lily Clay, Sarah Clay, Beth Cohen, John Lande, Barb Tarshis
ADVERTISING: Katherine Bowers, Stephen Lee Brown, Sherry Graney, Debbie Powell.
BUSINESS MANAGER: Nancy Shevitz.

Opinions expressed in editorials, cartoons, or columns in the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the University administration, faculty, or staff, or the State of Vermont. Opinions expressed by the columnists do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the majority of the members of the CYNIC Editorial Board.

Published yearly during the college year by the students of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College. Editorial and Business offices in the Billings Center, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone: 658-4911. Deadline for notices is one week prior to date of publication.

Founded in 1883. Subscription rate $8.00 per year, single copy ten cents.

The Cynic welcomes and encourages articles, columns, and letters from all interested students, faculty, and members of the community. All material must be submitted no later than Monday noon before the Thursday of publication. Material must be signed, names will be withheld upon request. If you are interested in writing or perhaps curious about how things are done, stop in – we are downstairs at Billings Center – or call 658-4911.

Nor

by Priscilla Slater

The North Country Star is an alternative news source in the Burlington area which is directed towards a low-income audience and concerned with issues relevant to these members of the community.

The paper was first conceived of in December of 1973. A group of people who saw the necessity for such a newspaper got together, formulated objectives, and began publishing three months later, in March of 1974.

The staff sees the paper as an organizing tool – as a means of collectivizing low-income people in the area and providing a forum through which their views can be expressed. It is seen as a means of educating these people about special community services which function for their benefit. It is also seen as an alternative to other sources of news in the area, which tend to reflect predominately the business interests of the local business community.

The North Country Star aims at expression of oppressive conditions and unfair practices. It strives to help, through communication, in bringing about the realization that the problems of lower-income people are not necessarily a result of their own failings, but are created by the existing system.

The North Country Star has a part-time volunteer core staff of six people who share equally the responsibility and decision-making for the paper. All six are involved in other community related projects such as PACT and the Onion River Food co-op. They hope through this paper, and through the other community related projects, they are involved in, to improve the plight of the lower-income people.

The main headquarters for the North Country Star is located at 77 Archibald Street in Burlington. It is here that the layout work and organizing of the paper is handled. The paper is published monthly by the Middlebury Press at the cost of $120,000 per issue.

THE DO

QUESTION: My girlfriend has a p minute she sees one she goes crazy almost like a fruit picker when she is one is "ripe", this one will be "ripe the difference between a clogged po 20 paces. What do you think of this?

ANSWER: Over-exuberant dangerous. For instance, one can dr skin. On certain parts of the head mouth and back of the neck, such i and produce meningitis or a brain a very rare, but scarring and infection to rupture can generally be harmless very mild pressure, but vigorous squ

For a person with frequent or s treatment by a dermatologist, or special interest in this area, can be m

If the problem is only a matter of handled with frequent washing, use is especially oily, and towel drying program usually prevents a build-up which are responsible for the clogge

As an aside, let me add that you of the many people who suffer an This desire for inhuman imperfectio that all people have skin pores that we all defecate, urinate, and smell.

••••••••••

QUESTION: From the time I h toilet I have been taught that I m urinate. Is my penis that dirty? If I die in some out-of-the-way heap disease?

ANSWER: Actually, it would your hands before you urinate since one has an infection) and the penis more free of bacteria than most p you are dealing much more with a r are with microbiology.

QUESTION: After a day of hard p back will feel stiff and sore. As a r and my girlfriend will systematica backbone until all parts of it have of treatment harmful to either my If so, is there another method wh results without detriment?

ANSWER: I wonder how r question reacted to it so I did? I g about ill-advised spinal manipul girlfriend is liable to end her danc and find you paralyzed from the savorting on your back, she is for over each other in unnatural fashio

There are several remedies for t be much safer. One is take of co engage in strenuous exercise and activity, unless there are medical use aspirin. Another, is simply to all this fails, you might benefit fro relaxant prescribed by a physician. strenuous activity should be con normal reactions.

••••••••••

...tters

...e Editor

...Gallo

...ened with ...mped-up ...cloids the ...m workers ...long to the ...n choosing, ...rity of the ...petitioned ...otiate with ...d not the ...best way to ...answer the ...Mr. Clemens ...Editor.

...rds ...W name in ...that they ...jority of the ...n. To prove ...ted signed ... the Gallo ...r signature ...by the State ...Conciliation ...cards were ...e Gallo ...st time two ...represent the ...s. The fact ...negotiations ...April 25 to ...ts out that ... with the ...with the ...ing these ... UFW had ...to present ...cards. Mr. ... point out ...in July was ...nt the UFW ...he question ...ster Higgins ...negotiator, ...esar Chavez ...FW had the ... that they ...hy did they ...to the State ...Conciliation ...d previously ...assuming of ... might have ...ature cards, ...

...ual was being ...strikers was ...was provided ...loyees. When ...ned to come ...n Gallo, we ...'t leave the ...hey did not. ...ve left was to ...pedings to try ... vacate the ... must be ...the housing is ...e Gallo farm ...their families. ...tor was ever ...e courts for ...FW attorneys ...neys came to ...nt the strikers ...if they were ...y for another ...ike, to which

...ctions ...ims they want ...elections, but ...d his staff of ...e fought all ...would include

...welcomes and encourages articles, columns, and ... interested students, faculty, and members of ... All material must be submitted no later than ... before the Thursday of publication. Material ..., names will be withheld upon request. If you ...n writing or perhaps curious about how things ...in -- we are downstairs at Billings Center -- or

...RMONT CYNIC

... Howland, Andy ...Albertson, ... Paul Ajamian, ...el Default, Mike ... Hogarth, Andy ...ckins, ... Mendel, Larry ... Swoboda, Jay

...S: Peter Cobb, ...Boeman, Ken ... Sue Perkins, ...r, Larry Seiden, ... Peter Campbell.

SPORTS: Randy Briggs, Gary Brooks, Rick Katz, Don Ross, Richard Rothol.

PRODUCTION: Rick Barney, Lily Clay, Sarah Clay, Beth Cohen, John Lunde, Barb Larabie

ADVERTISING: Katherine Brown, Stephen Lee Brown, Sherry Grancey, Debbie Powell.

BUSINESS MANAGER: Nancy Shenk.

...inions expressed in editorials, cartoons, or ... in the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the ... of the University administration, faculty, or ... the State of Vermont. Opinions expressed by ...mmists do not necessarily reflect the opinion ... majority of the members of the CYNIC ...d Board.

...shed yearly during the college year by the ... of the University of Vermont and State ...ural College. Editorial and Business offices in ...ings Center, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone ...11. Deadline for notices is one week prior to ... publication.

...shed in 1892. Subscription rate $5.00 per ...emic copy two cents.

North Country Star

by Priscilla Slater

The North Country Star is an alternative news source in the Burlington area which is directed towards a low-income audience and concerned with issues relevant to these members of the community.

The paper was first conceived of in December of 1973. A group of people who saw the necessity for such a newspaper got together, formulated objectives, and began publishing three months later, in March of 1974.

The staff sees the paper as an organizing tool -- as a means of collectivizing low-income people in the area and providing a forum through which their views can be expressed. It is seen as a means of educating these people about special community services which function for their benefit. It is also seen as an alternative to other sources of news in the area, which tend to reflect predominately the business interests of the local business community.

The North Country Star aims at expression of oppressive conditions and unfair practices. It strives to help, through communication, in bringing about the realization that the problems of lower-income people are not necessarily a result of their own failings, but are created by the existing system.

The North Country Star has a part-time volunteer core staff of six people who share equally the responsibility and decision-making for the paper. All six are involved in other community related projects such as PACT and the Onion River food co-op. They hope through this paper, and through the other community related projects they are involved in, to improve the plight of the lower-income people.

The main headquarters for the North Country Star is located at 77 Archibald Street in Burlington. It is here that the layout work and organizing of the paper is handled. The paper is published monthly by the Middlebury Press at the cost of $120,000 per issue.

Topics are chosen for coverage on the basis of relevancy. Some articles are written by the core staff, others are contributed by interested people in the community who wish to have their ideas expressed in the paper. The staff welcomes such articles and letters which stand a good chance of being published if submitted by the 15th of the month. Some articles are also obtained from GPF, a mail service organization which functions somewhat like AP or UPI, contributing articles to papers like the North Country Star in the New England States.

The paper is free, a non-profit organization. Production costs are paid for by contributions through subscriptions, plastic cups at places of distribution, and organizations concerned with making positive changes in the lives of lower-income and otherwise oppressed peoples. Money is often short, and in case they should run out of it, the people on the staff have made a commitment to pay for production costs out of their own pockets for the following three months, in the hope that by then they will have come up with the money.

The North Country Star's anniversary issue will be coming out in March. It seems like a good time to check out the paper and to read about the news from a different point of view.

Who's Afraid Of Collective Bargaining?

by Neil Klotz

THE LAW AND STUDENT INPUT

(Editors: This is the first in a series of CPS articles which will examine the implications of faculty unionization for students)

(CPS)--When the United Auto Workers sit down at the bargaining table to negotiate their demands with Ford Motor Company, neither of the two parties would think of asking in a '75 Mustang to give its opinion.

The influx of collective bargaining into higher education has left students in the same odd-man-out situation. If the faculty is the employee and the university is the employer, then under the same industrial model students must be the products--or at least the consumers of education.

Unfortunately, few students realize that faculty-administration negotiations over salary and work conditions can directly affect their tuition and student services. Few have noticed that as governance matters are switched from student-faculty committees to the negotiation table, their participation in campus decision-making -- hard-won during the protests of the 60's -- will become as limited as their say in what next year's seat belts will look like.

THE LAY OF THE LAW

Attempts to legalize student input into bargaining have not been promising. Currently, no state legislation guarantees students even observer status in negotiations, and federal legislation marked for passage in the next six months may shut out the possibility for that guarantee altogether.

Collective bargaining is not directly dependent upon the law. Anytime a group of workers wants to designate an agent to deal with its management, it can-- as long as the management agrees to bargain. If not, the workers' only real recourse is to strike.

State and federal legislation passed over the years, however, forces management to sit down at the bargaining table if workers fulfil certain stipulations like formally voting for a bargaining agent.

Currently, about 20 states have passed legislation that enables faculties at public colleges and universities to bargain collectively. Only three states have had no legislative activity in this area, according to a recent study by Dr. Thomas Emmet of Regis College, CO for the Education Commission of the States.

Emmet predicted that more and more states would permit public higher education teachers to bargain collectively and that "each time a new state is added, one can expect the 'ripple effect' to spill over into the private institutions in that state as well."

Private institutions are not covered under state law, but those with revenues over $1 million a year come under the authority of the National Labor Relations Act. The National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) settles disputes when either side believes the other has violated the law.

Students may be present at bargaining sessions when both sides want them there. Several student groups across the nation, most recently at Bloomfield, N. J., have been allowed to observe and even speak during negotiations.

But if one side doesn't want students present and the other side does, the dissenting side can appeal to the state or , in the case of private colleges, federal authorities, charging that an unfair labor practice is being used.

No state has yet been asked to rule whether students have a right to be present under those circumstances.

On the private college scene, the NLRB has also not been specifically asked whether students have the right to be present. The NLRB has, however, ruled that student workers and graduate assistants do not have that right.

The Board ruled, for instance, that student cafeteria workers at the University of California-Davis should be excluded from a food service employees' union because the student's primary concern was their studies rather than part time employment. The Board recently made a similar ruling in the case of graduate research assistants at Stanford.

"The NRLB will not side with students in any way possible," according to Alan Shark, the director of the Research Project of Students and Collective Bargaining. "It is very conservative and very industrially oriented."

"Students have no rights as third parties under the NRLB," aggreed Dr. Thomas Mannix, acting director of the National Center for the Study of Collective Bargaining in Higher Education.

THE SHAPE OF THINGS TO COME

None of this is very encouraging from the student standpoint. Less encouraging is the fact that legislation has been introduced in Congress that would make public college negotiations also subject to the rigidity of the NLRB.

The powerful AFL-CIO and its affiliate, the American Federation of State, County, and Municipal Employees (AFSCME) have been behind several past attempts to extend the National Labor Relations Act to public employees.

Last year, a bill (HR9730) was introduced to do just that. Another bill (HR 8677) introduced would create a separate Public Employment Relations Commission on a national level.

Neither of these bills promise anything in the way of student representation at negotiations.

"No national student group, to my knowledge, has taken a stand on the federal legislation concept, which is to me frightening," said Research Project director Shark.

According to Shark, some sort of federal legislation will probably be passed during this Congress.

"They (unions wishing to extend the NLRA) had more than a hundred votes last time," he said, "and now they own more Democrats, who really owe themselves to the unions in many ways."

More favorable to students, said Shark, would be legislation that would force the states to set up their own public employee bargaining procedures. Under the federal blanket of the NLRB students have virtually no chance; at least within their own states they could bring more clout to bear, he reasoned.

LIFESIGNS

Some student groups have seen state lobbying as the way to go. In particular, student government leaders in Wisconsin have gained support from several legislators for guaranteed observer status for students in higher education bargaining.

One state legislator has also proposed that campus governance procedures shall not be included in collective bargaining, which would at least safeguard student rights won in that area.

A few other groups have chosen not to go the lobbying route and have attempted to organize student unions to negotiate directly with their administrations on the basis of 60's-style power politics.

At the University of Massachusetts-Amherst, a student group has been building a student union for the past two years to force their administration to negotiate with them, law or no law.

"All the collective bargaining laws do is formalize the procedure whereby workers bargain," said Doug Phelps of the U Mass Student Organizing Project.

"Workers can band together and say 'we want to designate one agent to negotiate our contract.' That's what the labor movement was about years before they passed laws in the 30's that set up a formal procedure."

Phelps pointed out that in several states without formal bargaining laws, faculties collective bargain under policies established by their own universities. A similar policy from the U Mass regents could allow students there to bargain, he reasoned.

Whatever strategy students choose regarding the obscure and disputed world of collective bargaining law, they had best choose one. Otherwise, from all accounts, they could find their higher education little more than a finishing factory to churn out the latest obsolete vehicles for a sagging economy.

Vonnegut Fans Delight

For all the Kurt Vonnegut fans, here is your big chance. There will be a special showing of Between Time and Timbuktu -- A Space Fantasy this Saturday night at 7:30 and 9:30 in 235 Life Science. Admission is $1.

This color film was written by Vonnegut and features Bob and Ray, Bill Hickey and Kevin McCarthy. Blending Cat's Cradle and Welcome to the Monkey House with Sirens of Titan and Happy Birthday, Wanda June, it's the tale of a young poet who wins a trip to outer space in a jingle contest. The Milwaukee Journal called the film "grim, comic, and fantastic... it was wildly entertaining." And Life Magazine said, "Mr. Vonnegut's night-terrors -- conformity, the military mind, technological despotism, begin stranded in Schenedtady, N.Y. -- are the bad dreams of most reasonable men and women... a very funny hour and a half."

S.A. Films Presents: Cabaret

The SA Film schedule for this week includes one of the biggest films of the semester, Cabaret. For those of you who haven't seen this marvelous film lately, this is your big chance. It will be shown Friday night, March 7, at 7:30 and 10:00 in 101 Votey. Admission is $1. This film stars Liza Minelli, Michael York, Helmut Griem, Marisa Berenson and Joel Grey. It is based on the Berlin stories by Christopher Isherwood and tells the story of Sally Bowles, an American who is making her way in the nightclub scene of Berlin in the days before World War II.

On Saturday night Katharine Hepburn and Spencer Tracy team up in the 1952 film Pat and Mike. This film was directed by George Cukor and also stars Aldo Ray, Raymond Ching, and Jim Backus. Impressed by the athletic prowess of a dignified college physical education teacher, a seedy promoter takes her on as a client to bill her as a star all-around professional athlete. Pat and Mike will be shown at 7:30 and 9:30 in 101 Votey. Admission is free.

Monday night The Bride Wore Black will be shown. This is a 1968 color film directed by Francois Truffaut and starring Jeanne Moreau, Jean-Claude Brialy, Charles Denner, and Claude Rich. The film opens with a Hitchcockian scene -- a man is shot leaving church on his wedding day. After the murder, the presumptive bride, Jeanne Moreau, devotes her life to the liquidation of those responsible. Renata Adler of the New York Times said, "The movie is technically a suspense and horror film but Truffaut is such a poetic film-maker that the film turns around and becomes not at all Hitchcockian, but a gentle comedy and one of the few plausible and strange love stories in a long time. Everything is so clearly the result of thought and wit; this is, for a change a film in which it is pure pleasure to be alert." The Bride Wore Black will be shown at 7:30 and 9:15 in 101 Votey. Admission is free.

THE DOCTOR'S BAG

by Arnold Werner M.D.

QUESTION: My girlfriend has a pimple-popping fetish. The minute she sees one she goes crazy and has to pop it. She is almost like a fruit picker when she is hunting them down - this one is "ripe", this one will be "ripe" tomorrow. She can tell the difference between a clogged pore and an ingrown hair at 20 paces. What do you think of this?

ANSWER: Over-exuberant pimple-popping can be dangerous. For instance, one can drive infection deep into the skin. On certain parts of the head, particularly around the mouth and back of the neck, such infections can drain inward and produce meningitis or a brain abscess. Admittedly, this is very rare, but scarring and infections are not. A pimple about to rupture can generally be harmlessly helped on its way with very mild pressure, but vigorous squeezing is definitely bad.

For a person with frequent or severe pimples or abscesses, treatment by a dermatologist, or a general physician with special interest in this area, can be most beneficial.

If the problem is only a matter of clogged pores, this can be handled with frequent washing, use of a drying soap if the skin is especially oily, and towel drying with firm rubbing. Such a program usually prevents a build-up of oily substances and dirt which are responsible for the clogged pores.

As an aside, let me add that your girlfriend sounds like one of the many people who suffer an alabaster statue complex. This desire for inhuman imperfection flies in the face of reality that all people have skin pores that can get clogged, and that we all defecate, urinate, and smell.

••••••••••••••••

QUESTION: From the time I have been able to flush the toilet I have been taught that I must wash my hands after I urinate. Is my penis that dirty? If I don't wash my hands will I die in some out-of-the-way hospital from some incurable disease?

ANSWER: Actually, it would make more sense to wash your hands before you urinate since urine itself is sterile (unless one has an infection) and the penis is probably a heck of alot more free of bacteria than most people's hands. I do believe you are dealing much more with a matter of esthetics than you are with microbiology.

QUESTION: After a day of hard physical work or athletics my back will feel stiff and sore. As a remedy I will lay face down and my girlfriend will systematically step on sections of my backbone until all parts of it have been "cracked." Is this type of treatment harmful to either my vertebrae or spinal column? If so, is there another method which would achieve the same results without detriment?

ANSWER: I wonder how many people reading this question reacted to it as I did? I gasped. I have spoken harshly about ill-advised spinal manipulation in the past. Your girlfriend is liable to end her dance routine one of these times and find you paralyzed from the waist down, or worse. By cavorting on your back, she is forcing your vertebrae to slide over each other in unnatural fashion.

There are several remedies for the aching back which would be much safer. One is taking of couple of aspirin before you engage in strenuous exercise and immediately following such activity, unless there are medical reasons why you shouldn't use aspirin. Another, is simply to soak in a nice warm bath. If all this fails, you might benefit from occasional use of a muscle relaxant prescribed by a physician. Aches and pains following strenuous activity should be considered within the range of normal reactions.

••••••••••••••••

QUESTION: Masturbation causes chafing of my foreskin, which can be uncomfortable, although not painful. I discovered that putting vaseline on my foreskin stopped this unpleasant side effect of masturbating. But I also realize that the foreskin is thin and the vaseline can be absorbed through it into the body. I would like to know whether or not using it on a long-term basis as I described is in any way harmful.

ANSWER: I find it extraordinarily unlikely that much vaseline is absorbed through the foreskin of the body. But there is another good reason for not using it. While vaseline is slippery, it is also greasy. Greasy materials have a way of trapping moisture next to the skin, and I would be concerned that vaseline under the foreskin could cause breakdown of the skin. Lubricants used on the body should be water soluble. A variety of such lubricants (a common one is K-Y jelly) are available in drug stores.

The penis is meant to be handled gently. A little less vigorous self stimulation might be in order. In any case, the foreskin should not be so tight that it cannot be regularly pulled back and the area underneath cleaned. If your foreskin is especially tight you may have a condition known as phimosis. This should be brought to the attention of a physician. The treatment for this consists of circumcision.

••••••••••••••••

QUESTION: Could you please tell me why the hair on a person's head is always growing whereas the hair on a person's arms or legs grows to a certain point and then stops.

ANSWER: The hair on a person's head is not always growing. All hair on the body grows to a certain length, stops growing and eventually falls out, to be replaced by new hairs. Head hair follicles happen to be such that they produce much longer strands than eyebrow hair, hair on the arms, or pubic hair. Hair on different parts of the body serves different purposes, some being related to sensation, others being more related to possible reduction of friction, etc. It would be guessing at the purpose of head hair but it is not farfetched to assume it serves an insulating purpose against heat loss in colder climates and against heat gain in hotter climates. The significance of this for the modern human is questionable, of course.

••••••••••••••••

QUESTION: I have noticed recently that the condition called "morning mouth" is present only if I have spent the night with a woman companion. If I sleep alone, there is no problem. I have talked to others about this, and the experience seems common. Does kissing for prolonged periods of time before going to sleep cause "morning mouth"? Oral genital sex is not a factor here since it is not present.

ANSWER: By "morning mouth", I assume you mean that thick tongued, furry feeling most people can identify. I have never thought of it as being related to kissing before. But I suppose that this imminently researchable question could be related to bacteria transfer, although there are a number of other possibilities. Furry mouth occurs with dehydration, sometimes related to alcohol intake, mouth breathing or perhaps just talking into the wee hours of the morning. Next time you are in a position to experiment, try the following: drink a couple of glasses of water and brush your teeth before you go to sleep. I await your reply.

••••••••••••••••

No More Pffsst? Congress May Act to Prevent Ozone

(CPS) -- Well it's back to those messy tubes, gooey jars, greasy kid stuff -- and hot stuffy rooms. Two new Congressional bills have been recently introduced to take the pffst out of aerosol spray cans and the coolants out of coolers.

The retreat from the push button age back to the manual age may occur because of a growing concern that the chemicals used in refrigerator/freezers, air conditioners and aerosol spray cans are collecting in the upper atmosphere and may be causing the gradual destruction of the earth's protective ozone layer.

This layer blocks out much of the ultraviolet radiation from the sun's rays and is believed to be a cancer preventive. Scientists argue that the destruction of ozone could have adverse effects on health, endanger crops and disrupt weather patterns for decades.

The aerosol spray can bill introduced in the House would severely limit production of these cans because of their anti-ozone spray propellants.

According to one congressional source, the aerosol bill "may be the sleeper of the year. Everybody uses shaving cream and deodorants. People may now think, 'is nothing sacred?' But the choice may be 'Do you want ozone or the dry look?'"

The second House bill would limit the chemical coolants in air conditioners and refrigerator/freezers. When appliances are discarded, these chemicals produce harmful fluorcarbons which are released into the atmosphere.

It is reported that 800,000 tons of fluorocarbons are produced worldwide each year, 60% of which are used in spray propellants and 25% in coolants.

The remainder is used in the manufacture of foam for cushions and insulation.

Already there is a one per cent annual depletion rate in the ozone shield which could rise to two percent over the next decade.

And according to one expert, "The full effect of the material already released is not felt until about 10 years after the actual release."

. . . Open Season

(continued from page four)

and one of UVM's deans definitely had no forewarning of Dr. Andrews' resignation or he would have left his hair greyer... always thought my mother would get to meet George Aiken before I did, as she's a social worker at a nursing home... A good way for SAGA to save a bundle of money would be for Fred Smith to cease getting the munchies on the job, as from the looks of his girth of late, he can consume ten base meal plans per semester by himself... and yes, the only difference between the Sting and the A&P is that the beer was cheaper at the A&P...

More depravity next week.

Canadian Studies . . .

(continued from page one)

of which are on display in the Fleming Museum. The third was unprovidentially broken in transit, but will be replaced.

The advantages of majoring in Canadian Studies are myriad. Our proximity to Canada enables more than a pedantic exploration of the field. In addition, Canadian Studies is a relatively uninvestigated subject: virgin territory, both in the academic and in the geographic sense, remains to be developed. A third advantage, of a most mundane nature, is that due to an agreement called the New England Board of Higher Education Regional Compact, students from the New England states who are majoring in Canadian Studies can attend UVM as in-state residents.

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Two Views of Virgil Fox: Bach on Bottom Or God on Top?

by Jack A. Grebb

The music of Johann Sebastian Bach was at the bottom of the pile in the Lane Series concert, "Heavy Organ" (February 27, Memorial Auditorium). On top of the pile was Virgil Fox himself, followed by his Rodgers electronic organ substitute and the "Revelation Lights" by David Snyder.

Fox, looking somewhat like a ventriloquist's dummy, offered the listeners voluminous oral program notes, interspersing endlessly repeated proclamations of God with his own shallow and confused philosophy of life. Fox is very pro-God, and in one touching scene tilted his head to one side in imitation of Christ hanging on the cross.

The Rodgers electronic organ substitute served Fox well since its numerous swell (volume) pedals allowed him to make the sound both too soft to hear and too loud to stand. The imitation principal and flute stops lack the chiff (initial accent) and transparency of sound so vital for a clear performance of the contrapuntal lines. Innumerable shortcomings of electronic organ substitutes could be cited; however, I will simply state that I feel Rodgers has been successful in creating the ultimate in accordians.

Being a great admirer of Disney's "Fantasia," I was disappointed in the light show directed by David Snyder, who, dressed in a sequined suit perhaps to match Fox's sequined pumps, was stationed directly on the stage. Alternately bathing Fox's face in orange, green, and blue, the light show seemed unoriginal, a cliche, and repetitious.

Finally, we get to the music, and I do believe that talking about it last is in keeping with its position of importance in the show. Simply stated, Fox does not believe that the music of Bach has to be performed the way it was performed at the time it was composed. Specifically, he used devices that were created well after Bach died – for instance, the swell pedal. Furthermore, the nuances of Baroque interpretation such as ornamentation were not even touched upon. As if this parody on Bach needed anything else, Fox performed the music at such acrobatic tempo that, not only was it impossible to hear everything that was going on in the complex counterpoint, but also it was impossible for Fox to hit all the right notes with his willing virtuosity.

Fox began the show with a sermon proclaiming Baroque purists as "unhealthy" people who wallow in the "dust of museums" and insist that Bach should be played with "no emotion and no interpretation." Although much of Fox's show can be taken simply as an innocuous, bad joke, statements such as these are such miscarriages of truth that I can not even support "Heavy Organ" as a popular diversion. Does Fox mean that Marie-Claire Alain, Anton Heiller, and Lionel Rogg do not "interpret" Bach's music? These great artists most certainly do play with emotion and interpretation – BUT WITHIN THE CONTEXT OF THE PERIOD IN WHICH THE

SPS Photo: Mark Walker

MUSIC WAS COMPOSED. I agree with Fox about one thing: The music of Johann Sebastian Bach is the greatest music ever composed. But, damn it, Virgil, if you really believed this, you would join the purists, let the music stand more on its own, and still "take quite a trip."

Jack A. Grebb, a senior at UVM, is a pre-medical student majoring in Zoology. He is organist at College Street Congregational Church where he has presented two recitals. He has also performed with the Vermont Philharmonic, the UVM Choral Union, and the Norwich University/Vermont College Choir.

by Bob DeNike

Virgil Fox and his "Heavy Organ" brought more than the music of Bach and a complete spectrum of colors to Memorial Auditorium Thursday night. Headlining the performance was God himself.

The Bach purists are right in one sense. It is not hard to see why German congregations who were lucky enough to hear Bach play on 17th century Sundays were so religious. Bach's music alone is enough to make the most stubborn atheist fall down on his knees in humble penance.

Yet who's to say the music of Bach should only be played as it was in the 1600's? The purists are arrogant in thinking themselves the sole authorities on Bach, entitled to speaking the final objective word on the subjective interpretation of music.

Fox's interpretation of Bach makes the work of the Baroque master more contemporary and hence more enjoyable to the modern listening audience. By playing Bach on an organ the size of the standard Volkswagon, with four keyboards, 144 speakers and accompanied by a psychedelic light show, Fox makes Bach more readily lovable to the listener who is not initially enthused with the master's ingenious work.

"Fugue in D-minor, Virgil!", a listener bellowed echoingly after Fox's second encore. The call was reminiscent of two situations: either a traditional Negro church service in which the congregation responds and participates actively in the preacher's sermon or an Allman Brothers concert, where cries for "Whippin' Post" are infallibly howled throughout.

"It was like going to church at the Fillmore," one listener/viewer analogized.

Fox appropriately gave mini-sermons between selections in which he divulged stories of personal revelations and religious enlightenment throughout his career of working with Bach's music. During these oratory intervals, Fox also took the time to explain and demonstrate the mechanics of the music.

"It would take you ten years to count the number of times this theme recurs in the following fugue," Fox told the audience as he sneak-previewed one of two melodies which work together in the Baroque version of the round.

In this way the audience came to better recognize, understand and appreciate not only the ingenuity of the composer but the virtuosity of the artist as well.

Fox can play two separate melodies with a single, five-fingered hand. Multiply this figure by the number of hands (he has the conventional pair) and add yet another melody accounted for by his two feet (yes, Fox plays a set of bass pedals as if they were another keyboard.) Total: five melodies. Are there any further questions as to whether Fox justifiably and complexly uses four keyboards?

Anyone expecting Disney-like animation from Revelation Lights was disappointed. Disney was one of a kind but so is David Snyder and his rear-projection light device. Burlington Free Press reviewer John Donoghue only saw traces of Lawrence Welk's champagne bubbles (perhaps he had a little bit of the bubbly himself beforehand) and organist Jack Grebb saw even less (he must have been sitting backwards). Both missed blinding explosions of white light which gave way to fiery, volcanic eruptions and splashes of orange and red. Another time I travelled backwards and forwards simultaneously through starry outer space galaxies. I had 'em Bached on a musical trip and lumierist Snyder gave me a super-deluxe guided tour.

"Heavy Organ" proved more than an audio-visual experience. Virgil Fox made me hear and see Bach, but more literally, I felt Bach's never before.

Tonight: Commander Cody

by Larry Selden

Commander Cody and his Lost Planet Airmen

The Commander and his boys are in town this Friday night March 7 and that means you better put your boogie sneakers on and drink a little vino. In other words, be loose, because you're going to find it hard to sit still. The Lost Planet Airmen are probably the best live country swing, boogie woogie band in this here Country States of America. They have a new album out called, aptly, Commander Cody and his Lost Planet Airmen.

My biggest complaint with the band is they can't capture the fires of their live performances on their studio albums. To say the least this album is crackass boogie woogie, to say the most, it still isn't their full potential. The Airmen are now giving up a little of their rowdyism in favor of some solid musicianship. New Airman Ernie Hagar plays some of the finest pedal steel guitar heard since the first Burritos album. Harmonica are difficult to achieve with a slide on a pedal steel, but Ernie does it very credibly too, especially on "Four or Five Times." Andy Stein on fiddle and Yakkety Yak Sax is the standout musician in the group. But Buffalo Bruce Barlow on bass never fails to get your feet a movin'. The Commander, an old Long Island boy, knows how to swing the boogie on his keyboards and that is the nucleus of the band. Lance Dickerson, on drums could vary the do-wackka-do a little on the rockers, but otherwise he's solid in the traps.

On the whole the album is your regular Commander album, half rockers, half cry in your beer songs. "The Boogie Man Boogie" is a standout because the Tower of Power horn section has traded its urban funk+wide brimmed leather hat for a cowboy swing riff, and a bandana. The band's talent will prevail. Billy C. Farlow's vocals fall between the punch of Elvis and the croon of Hank Williams Sr. "Don't Let Go" is the album's standout single. Little Feat's, Lowell George's "Willin'" has been done in the country style too many times and suffers from a bad interpretation. It is not a trucker's song the way they play it. Redemption comes for the band in the soul chorus testifying on "Keep on Lovin' Her", that shows the promise to breaking the chains of country swing which I think the Airmen have explored to its limit.

All things considered, it is as good as anything the Commander and the Airmen have put out including their first record, Lost In The Ozone. Cody fans will go crazy over it, hardcore rockers will dismiss it as an airball, not even close to the rim or backboard. Consensus will say a short jumper from the line, but definitely no swish.

But the Commander didn't get his reputation on his records. This is a live band, who likes its audience rowdy. If you're ready to travel on a country road, this band will take you home. Pass me that 'shine, will you Rufus?

W.C. Fields, Bank Dick

W. C. Fields' immortal movie, "The Bank Dick" is the next film in the Lane Film Society Series W. C. Fields Festival.

There will be two showings of the 1940 movie in Marsh Life Sciences Building Auditorium tonight, March 7, at 7:30 p.m. and 9:30 p.m.

Preceding the film there will be a short, "The Great Train Robbery", called the grand-daddy of motion pictures.

"The Bank Dick", in addition to W. C. Fields himself, features Franklin Pangborn, Una Merkel, and Cora Witherspoon.

In the film, Fields in the part of Egbert Souse is erroneously credicted with the capture of a bank robber, and as a reward is given the job of bank guard. In this position, he persuades a teller to "borrow" some of the bank's money to invest in worthless mine stock. Egbert finally redeems himself by really capturing a bandit, who forces Fields to drive the getaway car. It is one of the most hilarious escapes in screen history.

Movie critic Bosley Crowther of the N. Y. Times wrote that Fields in the role of Egbert "has the time of his life – growling, fainting, being official and forever preserving his fly-blown dignity. No one who fancies madcap comedy can reasonably afford to miss the spectacle of Bill creeping up and pouncing upon a kid with a cap-pistol in the bank; or of Bill solicitously attending a bank examiner whom he has fed a "Michael Finn"; or of Bill at the wheel of the car in which a desperate bandit is attempting to escape... In fact, for anyone who simply likes to laugh at the reckless inanities of an inspired buffoon, we recommend, "The Bank Dick."

"The Great Train Robbery" is generally credited with being the first film to tell a story. The story of the robbery is brought together by editing the film, cutting from scene to scene during the action and arranged to unfold the story.

(continued on page seven)

Alicia Tickles Ivory Keys

by Bob DeNike

Alicia de Larrocha, one of the world's most proficient pianists, brought Impressionistic and Spanish music to Ira Allen listeners Sunday afternoon.

The audience was so enthralled by her talent they sustained their applause long enough to call her back for two encores.

"She is the best pianist I've ever seen," said Jack Trevithick, Director of the Lane Series, who can boast a long career of concert production at UVM.

At times the listener's ear was drowned by a flood of notes as the pianist ran her fingers nimbly and dexterously over the keys.

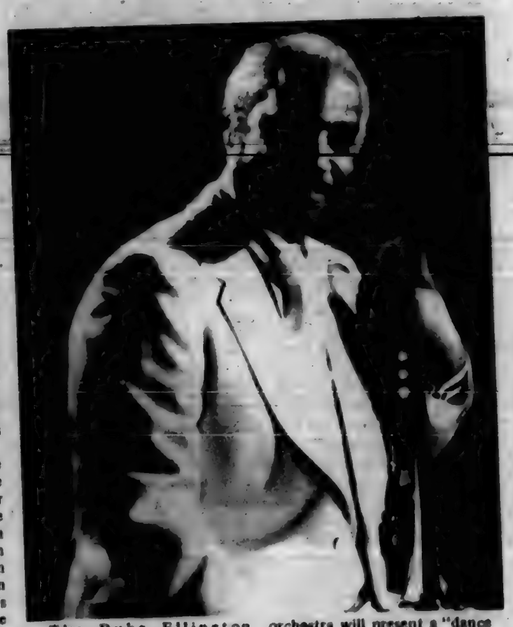
More often she abandoned outright swiftness and concerned herself with creating different musical moods. Chopin's music calls for constantly fluctuating rhythm and volume. With it de Larrocha evoked antithetical emotions of triumph, melodrama, curiosity, casualty and pompousness.

To the listener, her music was conducive to closing the eyes, settling the head into a relaxed position and drifting into a hallucinatory, dream-like state. Sensitively, she could as easily bring the listener out of his sub-conscious wanderings and again rivet his attention on her furiously fleeting fingers by kneeding out 10-note chords up and down the keyboard.

She concentrated the second half of her performance on presenting the music of her native land, for which she showed herself as possessing an inbred, intuitive touch. Even the expectations of Chopin himself would have been surpassed by de Larrocha's interpretation of the Impressionistic master's work. But the Spanish songs and dances seemed to spring organically from within her and she displayed a virtuosity that stemmed from more than countless hours of study and practice – her national pride and ethnic interest seem to have spurred her thirst for absolute knowledge of Spanish piano technique.

And the degree to which she has fulfilled her unquenchable thirst would have drowned most pianists long ago.

The Dukes Jazz Relives



The Duke Ellington Orchestra concert, originally scheduled for March 8 has been postponed to Saturday, March 22. The Lane Series attraction will be held in Memorial Auditorium and begin at 8 p.m.

The Ellington Orchestra, which is currently giving a series of concerts in North Africa under the auspices of the U.S. State Department, has extended its tour and will not be able to return to this country until the middle of March.

Led by the son of the late Duke, Mercer Ellington, the orchestra will present a "dance or listen" concert. Lane Series patrons may either listen or dance – or do both. There are no reserved seats. Patrons may sit either in the balcony or on the floor bleachers when they are not dancing.

Tickets for this concert are $4 each, available in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman. For reservations, telephone 656-3418.

The day after his father's funeral in May, 1974, Mercer Ellington took the orchestra to Bermuda as previously committed to play at IBM's

(continued on page seven)

Vermont Cynic MOVIE GUIDE

Century I & II
DORSET STREET

I —
II Young Frankenstein

MERRILL'S SHOWCASE I & II
SO. BURLINGTON

I Freebie & the Bean
—
II Lenny

STATE THEATRE
BANK STREET

Amarcard

FLYNN THEATRE
MAIN STREET

Ultimate Thrill

ESSEX TWIN CINEMA
ESSEX JCT.

I The Longest Yard
—
II Ultimate Thrill

CINEMA I & II
BURLINGTON PLAZA
SHELBURNE ROAD

I Murder on the Orient Express
—
II Rafferty and the Gold Dust Twins

call theatres for times
Not liked for bargain nights
or special showings

THE SILVER KEG
YOUR ENTERTAINMENT DOLLAR BUYS MORE AT THE SILVER KEG
★★ OUR SPECIALS ★★
MONDAY THRU THURSDAY
NO COVER
FEATURING
MARCH 3-8 SKYWATER March 17-22 Sennett
MARCH 10-15 BIANGO March 24-29 Harpy
Back By Popular Demand

SA FILMS PRESENTS

FRIDAY, MARCH 7
CABARET (1972) – Liza Minnelli, Joel Grey, directed by Bob Fosse
101 Votey – 7:30 & 10:00 – $1

SATURDAY, MARCH 8
PAT AND MIKE (1952) – Katherine Hepburn, Spencer Tracy, directed by George Cukor
101 Votey – 7:30 & 9:30 – Free

MONDAY, MARCH 10
THE BRIDE WORE BLACK (1968) – Jeanne Moreau, directed by Francois Truffaut
101 Votey – 7:30 & 9:30 – Free

BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE
FANTASTIC SELECTION OF BEERS, ALES AND AMERICAN & IMPORTED WINES
AT GREAT SAVINGS

Lenny is Poig

by Bill Beyreuther

Lenny, the latest of director Bob Fosse's smash hits, traces the tempestuous career of the late, ofttimes controversial comedian, Lenny Bruce. Dustin Hoffman anchors the film's title role, and Valerie Perrine bares all as Honey, a stripper whom Lenny falls in love with and marries. The movie was shot in black and white, which may or may not contribute significantly to the stark manner in which Bruce's life is sometimes treated.

After a slow beginning in the early '50's as a stand-up comic doing "old jokes and lousy impressions" in strip joints, Lenny sees his fortune changing; his act gains impetus largely as the result of a change of attitude and material. As time passes, he grows exceedingly malcontent with the standard brand of superficial humor and decides to address himself to the hypocrisy which he seems to feel is tainting American life. This leads him to launch verbal attacks on everyone from the Pope to John Kennedy, thus,

(continued from page six)

Today all motion pictures are edited, but before this innovation films were simply spliced together in chronological sequence.

Tickets for Friday night's

Edsel Peacoc

by Larry Selden

Well awright! The Flu blues have left my bed leaving me speechless in a manner. Actually laryngitis is sexy or so the commercial says. As commercials go, I like the ones that are professional. When you spend most of your waking and snoozing life hot wired to a stylus and a pair of crystal clear speakers (tonx ken), you become very attuned to professionalism in a recording. That usually depends on whether an album is due for an A. This week I found the team of Joe Walsh (on everything except drums) and Joe Vitale (at the production helm) revolving around my turntable almost constantly. When I speak of Joltin' Joe I'm not talking about the guy making commercials for a New York banking concern. That's not professional.

SO WHAT/joe walsh – I guess when you come up with a song as good as "Rocky Mountain Way", it stays in your blood. Like a nervous twitch I keep hearing strains of chords from Colorado throughout the rockers on this excellent album. It's the best whole album Joe Walsh has done to

Ellington Jazz Orch

(continued from page six)

Golden Circle Convention. It was a hard decision to make, and hard to fulfill, but in doing so, Mercer faithfully maintained a tradition established by Duke Ellington during his five triumphant decades as a bandleader.

Since that time, Mercer has been at pains to maintain that tradition musically as well as professionally and ethically. The band's library contains all the famous compositions and arrangements, and he has steadily reactivated items in it that had become less familiar through neglect in recent years. His father was so prolific that there was inevitably a tendency to emphasize the "new one" at the expense of the past. It is now possible to see his majestic output in some kind of perspective and to restore classics to the prominence they deserve. This Mercer is systematically doing, and he is also able to spring enlightening surprises by playing compositions written by his father that were never publicly performed.

The band's personnel

ALL NEW MENU
THE BEST STEAK
GREAT SEAFOOD TOO!
SIZZLING STEAK

Commander Cody

...his Lost ...and his ...Friday ...boogie ...a little ...the blues. ...to find it ...The Lost ...Bobby the ...it, boogie ...ms here ...America ...beats and ...remember ...Planet"

...nt with ...t capture ...eir live ...r studio ...least this ...boogie ...st. It still ...tual. The ...ng up a ...stem is ...solid ...Airman ...e of the ...ar band ...n album. ...Vault to ...a pedal ...it, very ...cally on ...." Andy ...Yakkety ...standout ...up, but ...he has ...ur feet a ...nder, an ...knows ...e on his ...l is the ...d. Lance ...ns could ...ke do a ...kers, but otherwise he's solid in the traps.

On the whole the album is your regular Commander album, half rockers, half cry in your beer songs. "The Boogie Man Boogie" is a standout because the Tower of Power horn section has traded its urban funk-wide brimmed leather hat for a cowboy swing riff, and a bandana. The band's talent will prevail. Billy C. Farlow's vocals fall between the punch of Elvis and the croon of Hank Williams Sr. "Don't Let Go" is the album's standout single. Little Feat's, Lowell George's "Willin" has been done in the country style too many times and suffers from a bad interpretation. It is not a trucker's song the way they play it. Redemption comes for the band in the soul chorus testifying on "Keep on Lovin' Her", that shows the promise to breaking the chains of country swing which I think the Airmen have explored to its limit.

All things considered, it is as good as anything the Commander and the Airmen have put out including their first record, Lost In The Ozone. Cody fans will go crazy over it, hardcore rockers will dismiss it as an airball, not even close to the rim or backboard. Consensus will say a short jumper from the line, but definitely no swish.

But the Commander didn't get his reputation on his records. This is a live band, who likes its audience rowdy. If you're ready to travel on a country road, this band will take you home. Pass me that 'shine, will you Rufus?

...kes Jazz Relives

...llington ...; originally ...h B has been ...Saturday, ...Lane Series ...be held in ...tonium and ... Orchestra, ...ly giving a ...s in North ...auspices of ...partment, has ...and will not ...urn to this ...e middle of ...n of the late ...llington, the orchestra will present a "dance or listen" concert. Lane Series patrons may either listen or dance – or do both. There are no reserved seats. Patrons may sit either in the balcony or on the floor bleachers when they are not dancing.

Tickets for this concert are $4 each, available in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman. For reservations, telephone 656-3418.

The day after his father's funeral in May, 1974, Mercer Ellington took the orchestra to Bermuda as previously committed to play at IBM's

(continued on page seven)

...ERAGE ...AREHOUSE ...TASTIC SELECTION ...BEERS, ALES AND ...RICH & IMPORTED ...WINES ...GREAT SAVINGS

Lenny is Poignant, Provoking and Biased

by Bill Reynolds

Lenny, the latest of director Bob Fosse's smash hits, traces the tempestuous career of the late, oftimes controversial comedian, Lenny Bruce. Dustin Hoffman anchors the film's title role, and Valerie Perrine bares all as Honey, a stripper whom Lenny falls in love with and marries. The movie was shot in black and white, which may or may not contribute significantly to the stark manner in which Bruce's life is sometimes treated.

After a slow beginning in the early '50's as a stand-up comic doing "old jokes and lousy impressions" in strip joints, Lenny sees his fortune changing, his act gains impetus largely as the result of a change of attitude and material. As time passes, he grows exceedingly malcontent with the standard brand of superficial humor and decides to address himself to the hypocrisy which he seems to feel is tainting American life. This leads him to launch verbal attacks on everyone from the Pope to John Kennedy, thus winning the adoration of the beat generation.

Lenny Bruce is pictured as a revolutionary whose only weapon in the spoken word. "Out spoken" somehow seems as though it would be too weak an adjective for use in a description of him. His frank public treatment of such subjects as venereal disease and homosexuality are viewed by many as cheap ploys, shock tactics designed to titilate his audience. Complaints are followed by his arrest on numerous occasions for the use of obscene language.

Lenny uses his act as a spring board which he employs in jumping into a personal crusade for free speech. Whether you find yourself agreeing with Lenny or not, this movie certainly is thought-provoking, and quite worthwhile.

One more point for those people who take stock in such things – Lenny has received six Academy Award nominations, and may be judged best movie of the year by the Academy.

(continued from page six)

Today all motion pictures are edited, but before this innovation films were simply spliced together in chronological sequence.

Tickets for Friday night's showing, $1.00 each, are available in the Lane Office, 234 Watterman, and at the door. For reservations, tel. 656-3418.

by Ellen Holmes

You need your deviant in any society. The one who holds up the mirror, who flashes the neon bright concept of hypocrisy into the faces of his contemporaries. But what is the price of a truth wrung out of hypocrisy? For Lenny Bruce it was his life. Make no mistake about it–he paid his dues. Whether or not this payment constitutes the criterion for his being made a folk hero is another question however.

In many ways Lenny is just a continuation of the anti-hero syndrome of the Sixties. The setting is decadence; the main character, a direct participant in moral decay. But there is an honesty to Lenny's characterization that evokes sympathy. The idea of one lone voice crying out against institutions will somehow always appeal to the American public.

Lenny, starring Dustin Hoffman, does not attempt to enshrine the man. The film is shot in black and whits (a practice becoming more and more common with today's filmmakers) and tries to capture Bruce onstage and off.

Bob Fosse, of "Caberet" fame, directed the film. His structure is one of fictionalized documentation. It is presented in vignette fashion through the use of an anonymous interviewer taping the remembrances of Bruce's wife, mother, and agent who function as third person commentators on the ensuing scenes.

Dustin Hoffman again gives proof to the versatility of his acting ability. In attempting to capture the spirit of Lenny Bruce, he succeeds in presenting Lenny as a man of conviction caught in a maze of dogmatism. Perhaps it is all the more relevant today when, in retrospect, we can see in clearer terms just what Bruce was saying – the blow has been cushioned by over a decade of exactly the same things Lenny Bruce tried to fight.

Indeed Lenny is a bit romanticized. In one scene we have a courtroom setting with the judge as the archetypal embodiment of The Institution. Lenny, bearded and pathetically real in this sterile atmosphere, pleads to be heard... "Let me do my act," he cries, "and you tell me if you think it's dirty, your honor – Please!" Trying to relate man to man, the impact coming all the harder when we realize it is only Lenny up against a system that seems to have neither a soul nor a conscience. The bias is obvious, but at least not saccharine.

Lenny is not a film to be followed by a coupla of beers at Hannibals. In so doing, you negate the man and his message. The aftertaste of exploitation and hypocrisy is too strong for anything less than reflection on ourselves and our society.

Shadowed By Death

by David Mandell

Stay of Execution-A Sort of Memoir Stewart Alsop (Lippincott Press)

What's it like to visit your doctor and then find out that you probably won't live another year? The late Stewart Alsop faced this agonizing prospect at the age of 57, after a lifetime of almost perfect health. After feeling faint after a tennis game, Alsop decided to check with his doctor, expecting some routine explanation for his poor state. To his great surprise, he discovered what he had was a rare type of leukemia, which was nearly always fatal.

When I first saw Stay of Execution, I expected another overly sentimental self-account by one more contemporary whose energy was employed only when writing about himself. Stay of Execution however does not fit into this all too frequent category. The book is a frank and touching account of a person struggling to come to grips with the fact that he will probably not live to see another spring.

Like most of us, Alsop thought that disease and illness were for others, but certainly not him. It was almost a personal insult when he was told of his condition. Alsop never considered himself immortal, but to be so close to death was a tremendous shock. Frankly writing about a topic which was taboo until most recently, Alsop describes eloquently the thoughts going through a person's mind when he learns that death is not a distant concept but his real future. Without an overbearing sense of self-pity, death is discussed in an intelligent manner, in sharp contrast to the typical tear-jerkers such as Brian's Song and Love Story, which are an insult to anyone who knows the alphabet.

For three long years, the author struggled to somehow defeat this mysterious disease, which he neither understood nor accepted. In between extended stays at the National Institute of Health, where his fellow patients were dying right before his eyes, Alsop had to endure countless needles injected into every imaginable part of his body.

Throughout this brutal experience, Alsop managed to avoid entering into walls of sorrow for himself. Like anyone in his position, he asked why he of all people should be fated for leukemia, but this is a question that every patient has asked at one time or another. In between descriptions of his condition, he presented a number of anecdotes from his life, the most amusing one being a story of how his son bugged and eavesdropped on the naive headmaster of the stagnant Groton school.

Looming over Alsop's head during his illness was the ubiquitous presence of death. Every day he faced could well have been his last. Though capable of writing his column for Newsweek, the nagging question never left. Healthy people reading Stay of Execution will be tempted to feel sorry for Alsop but from a remote position. The normal reaction is one in which we all say, yes Alsop's condition is sad, but it will never happen to me. Alsop had no intention to frighten people but this type of attitude (which is still mine) seemed ludicrous to him.

Stay of Execution helped lift the literary taboo on the subject of death. Until the last few years, the reading public was subjected to barrages of Love Stories. At long last it is not considered immoral to intelligently discuss an unpleasant topic. Before his untimely death last summer, Alsop left this moving portrait, probably the best of all his writings.

It deserves to be remembered.

Medieval Play Auditions

Auditions for the Medieval Festival plays to be performed on April 12 are to be held Saturday the 8th of March from 10–12 and on Sunday the 9th from 3–4 in the afternoon at the Living/Learning A107 and Monday, March 10th at 8 p.m. in the John Dewey Lounge at Old Mill. The three plays are The Sacrifice of Isaac, The Second Shepard's Play, and Everyman.

Before these auditions, there will be an open meeting for all interested in participating as musicians, vendors, townspeople, craft demonstrators, dancers, etc. at 7 p.m. on March 10th at John Dewey Lounge. If unable to make these times, contact David Harvey at 658-2393 to indicate interest in participating.

For Slug, and Other Dead Heads

(EARTH NEWS) – The Grateful Dead are experimenting with a revolutionary recording system which could ultimately replace the traditional phonograph, the vinyl record, and the tape. Scientists are doing research at the Dead's headquarters in Marin County, California to develop this entirely new system for reproducing music through the use of holography.

Holography, of course, is a laser-directed method of reproducing pictures in the air – and now, sound. The system would work like this, according to the Dead Heads newsletter: Music would be encoded with a laser on a one-inch plastic pyramid to be read by an optical fiber. The advantages would include "no surface noise, no pops, scratches, skips, or any of the baloney about present day records and tapes."

Grateful Dead-Round Records President Ron Rackow reports that the playback system could be on the market within a year or so. And the major piece of hardware involved could cost as little as $13.

The Dead members are hoping to use proceeds from their new solo projects to help finance their research. Those albums include 'Old and in the Way", a bluegrass set by Jerry Garcia and friends; "Keith and Donna," by Keith and Donna Godchaux, and upcoming efforts by Robert Hunter and Ned Lagin and Phil Lesh.

Female Rock

(Earth News) - A new all-woman band, Deadly Nightshade, has become the first rock band to win a clause in their recording contract prohibiting "sexist exploitation." The trio, who have just signed up with RCA-distributed Phantom Records, demanded and received the anti-sexism clause. It gives the performers the right to "approve the overall approach and content of advertising campaigns promoting (their) recordings in order to ensure against sexist exploitation." Deadly Nightshade, based in New England, is working on their first album which is being produced by Felix Cavaliere and includes guitar work by Leslie West.

Derringer Drunk . . .

(Earth News) - A little bit of the bubbly has helped Rick Derringer come up with the sound he wanted for a cut on his upcoming solo album. Rick wanted a big chorus on his song "Skyscraper Blues." So, he invited a group of fellow recording artists and friends to New York's Record Plant where he treated them all to a champagne party. Once everyone had consumed sufficient quantities of the bubbly stuff, Rick corralled them all into singing the chorus for "Skyscraper Blues." A good time reportedly was had by all.

Lennon & Ono

(Earth News) - John Lennon and Yoko Ono are back together again and living in a Manhattan, New York apartment. Lennon has told reporters, "The separation didn't work out." Meanwhile, Lennon is reportedly doing some recording with David Bowie at the Electric Ladyland studios in New York.

Beatle Wings

(Earth News) - Meeting the press for a floating news conference on the Mississippi River near New Orleans, Paul McCartney announced his next album should be ready for release by mid-April. "We've been working 10 hours a day on it," McCartney told reporters, "and everything has been going splendidly."

The album which is being recorded at Allen Toussaint and Marshall Seahorn's Sea-Saint Studios in New Orleans, will have several New Orleans touches. One is expected to be a Mardi Gras flavored number, "My Carnival."

Explained Paul, "I've always switched styles. I think I sounded country when I was in Nashville because we used Nashville players. We are a little influenced by wherever we are, but we're doing our own sound" McCartney added that he hopes to tour the U.S. with Wings in the not too distant future.

Edsel Peacock Returns To Rate Rock

by Larry Selden

Well awright! The Flu blues have left my bed, leaving me speechless in a manner. Actually laryngitis is sexy or so the commercial says. As commercials go, I like the ones that are professional. When you spend most of your waking and snooting life hot wired to a stylus and a pair of crystal clear speakers (tanx ken), you become very attuned to professionalism in a recording. That usually depends on whether an album is due for an A. This week I found the team of Joe Walsh (on everything except drums) [illegible] (the production helm) revolving around my turntable almost constantly. When I speak of Joltin' Joe I'm not talking about the guy making commercials for a New York banking concern. That's not professional.

SO WHAT/joe walsh – I guess when you come up with a song as good as "Rocky Mountain Way", it stays in your blood. Like a nervous twitch I keep hearing strains of chords from Colorado throughout the rockers on this excellent album. It's the best whole album Joe Walsh has done to date. It is Joltin' Joe on guitars, organs, pianos, bass, synthesizers, and mellotron. He can do it all and he just sparkles on "Welcome to the Club" and "Turn to Stone", a reissue from "Barnstorm". An excellent supporting cast includes 3 Eagles, Dan Fogelburg and an acoustic bass player named James Bond. Somebody named Jimmy Page throws in a few vicious guitar licks to boot. Keep churnin' Joe, you can bring your Les Paul over to my house anyday. (A-, raw power colors)

YOU/gong – What a bunch of solid crud. If this is spacey music, I'll take Jimi anyday. This is the story of Zero who goes to the planet gong to discover WHY from pixie potheads. That's the story to this concept(?) album. The drumming is the only redeeming quality and even that isn't rock steady. I'll eat a string of Carpenters singles before this klinker ever graces my turntable again. (D+, clear carpcrap)

PLUG ME INTO SOMETHING/henry gross – all jokes aside, Henry is one of those Brooklyn boys who discovered the electric guitar (progressed to the custom made variety) and rock and roll. Listen people, Henry Gross knows. This is his second album and it shines. I think the city carries rock on its water pipes. Side one is all rock and roll and the flip side carries 3 un-tempo country truckin' songs that guarantee an A. The boy knows that for the real thing you start with a Ringo-like drummer. He's Alan Schwartzberg and he's better than his Liverpool counterpart. While Alan is cookin' in the back, Henry knows how to get the feet shufflin'. Dig this album, it had me "huffin', puffin', like a cosmic muffin'." (A, my type of colors)

SHEER HEART ATTACK/queen – Don't be afraid of the name, the looks, the image or anything. This is Queen's third album and it's as solid as Ft. Knox. Remember the mystical circle of three's. Well this album has got to score. This band is Britain's cream of thunder. But this album doesn't roar like the last two, it sidles up to you and flicks its derriere on your lap and then you know what is heavy. "Stone Cold Crazy" burns like hot coals. This is a tasteful, humorous album. Freddie Mercury and the boys are getting rather deft with their writing. "Bring Back That Leroy Brown" had me rolling on the floor, drooling. Only Queen could think of Jim Croce in tight leather screaming in a British accent, "We want Leroy Brown for president." Queen has talent, listen to "She Makes Me (Stormtrooper in Stilettoes)." Not a trashy band at all (like the Dolls), they are easily the regal kings (queens) of rock. Go, go little Queenie! (B+, killer, queen colors)

THE FIRST MINUTE OF A NEW DAY/gil scott-heron, brian jackson, and the midnight band – This album has a very strong message, though it is primarily aimed at street blacks. Everyone should hear the words of liberation and revolution. Gil Scott-Heron is late of the Last Poets, an author, a professor and a writer of "The Revolution Will Not Be Televised" and the predicting "H2Ogate Blues". This is a percussion-oriented African album; in fact, it's the first record I've listened to that doesn't have a single guitar on it. The lead instruments are Saxes (Bilal Sunni Ali, and very good), Bass (Danny Bowens) and Piano (Brian Jackson). Gil Scott-Heron is now in the hands of Clive Davis and his Arista label (named after Clive's high school honor society). (C plus, still to rise colors)

IT ALL STARTED WITH ROCK & ROLL & NOW IT'S OUT OF CONTROL/ray manzarek – This album is destined to move. Any record with actor, George Segal playing a faintly heard banjo deserves to be heard. Well Manzarek is the modestly talented keyboard player from the Doors, who relies on other people to make the light shine on this album. Joe Walsh, Gary Mallabar (drums), and Flo and Eddie on backup vocals bring alot of class to this album. Manzarek's voice is limited for throaty rock & roll but he comes through on the title cut,–"I Wake Up Screaming" with L.A. poetess Patti Smith doing an excellent reading of the Jim Morrison poem of the same name in the middle of the cut. "Bicentennial Blues (Love It or Leave It)" with it's recopped "Light My Fire" riff in the middle makes the whole album a trip through nostalgic doors. (B, Jim's appreciation colors)

MULGRAVE STREET/amazing blondel– a nice album with what acoustic albums should have. This is Blondel's third album to be released here. Their English sensibilities help tighten this album. Blondel is a multi-instrumental duo with a very savory taste for together guitar work. Mick Ralphs, Simon Kirk, and Boz Burrell (¾ of Bad C.) show up to make a few cuts tingle. Best cut is the title cut, a rambling excursion on English working class meanderings. (C plus, appreciable colors)

Ellington Jazz Orchestra

(continued from page six)

Golden Circle Convention. It was a hard decision to make, and hard to fulfill, but in doing so, Mercer faithfully maintained a tradition established by Duke Ellington during his five triumphant decades as a bandleader.

Since that time, Mercer has been at pains to maintain that tradition musically as well as professionally and ethically. The band's library contains all the famous compositions and arrangements, and he has steadily reactivated items in it that had become less familiar through neglect in recent years. His father was so prolific that there was inevitably a tendency to emphasize the "new one" at the expense of the past. It is now possible to see his majestic output in some kind of perspective and to restore classics to the prominence they deserve. This Mercer is systematically doing, and he is also able to spring enlightening surprises by playing compositions written by his father that were never publicly performed.

The band's personnel includes such musicians as Cootie Williams, Harold Ashby, Money Johnson, and Chuck Connors, whose long association with Duke Ellington ensures authenticity of interpretation.

Conducted by Mercer, the band's performances have resulted in tremendous enthusiasm at such diverse venues as the Wolf Trap in Washington; the Ravinia Festival in Illinois, Robin Hood Dell in Pennsylvania, Duke University in North Carolina, and the Steel Pier in Atlantic City. Besides such engagements, Mercer has appeared as guest conductor at the American Song Festival in Saratoga and at the All-City High School Band Concert in Los Angles. He is also writing the biography of his famous father for publication by Houghton Mifflin of Boston.

With Ellington Orchestra under Mercer's leadership, Duke Ellington's music will continue to be a healthy and joyous element in twentieth-century life.

White Devil At Royall Tyler

by Sari Bodi

"The Department of Communications and Theater will present White Devil, a play by John Webster, at the Royall Tyler Theater, tonight through Tuesday at 8:00 p.m.

Webster relates the true story of a notorious Italian scandal involving two extremely rich and powerful families. Mysterious sixteenth century Italy becomes the site for a web of adventure and intrigue as members of the deMedici and Orsini family plot towards each other's destruction.

Vittoria and Flamineo stand at the center of the web and through them the other participants become tangled. The beautiful and passionate Vittoria discards her piddling husband for the Duke of Bracciano and remains faithful to her new lover even through the disgrace of a murder trial.

Vittoria's brother Falmineo, is driven by intellect, rather than passion to the evolution of his downfall.

Although set in Italy, Webster was primarily concerned with specific evils of Renaissance England, especially that of the excessively lavish English Court. He reflects what happens when power is placed in the hands of a few.

Nancy Haynes, director of White Devil, says, "Webster interprets the despair and disillusionment of the early seventeenth century, the conviction that there is no 'safe place on the ridge of the world.' This straightforward tale of corruption in high places, of political danger and betrayal is told in tough and luxuriant language. With his great contemporary, Ben Jonson, Webster is at once deeply pessimistic and clearly realistic."

Tickets for The White Devil are on sale at the Royall Tyler Box Office. Admission is $3.00 for the general public and $1.50 for UVM students. Call 656-2094.

Clayton - Thomas Records With B.S. & T.

(Earth News) - Blood, Sweat, and Tears are currently in studios recording their first album since David Clayton-Thomas re-joined them as lead singer. The album is being cut in group member Bobby Columby's recently renovated home, which houses a 16 track studio. Ian Hunter and Mick Ronson were the first acts to record at Bobby's house.

ALL AIR PRINTS 1/2 OFF!
Enter Shop Prints Sale Selections Clearance Prices!
Picasso, Wyeth, Pissarro, Van Gogh, Renoir, Dali, Monet, Lautrec, M. Rockwell, Bonnard, Degas, Escher, Rouse, Magritte and Art Deco Posters. 15", 20", 1.75, 2.50, 3.75 and a few slightly higher.
ALL FRAMED PRINTS 20% to 60% OFF!
Original oils, watercolors and prints. Landscapes, seascapes, florals, etc.
GALLERY 410
214 COLLEGE ST.

DAVE'S AUTOMOTIVE
INC.
FOREIGN CAR REPAIR SPECIALISTS
INCLUDING THE FINEST IN STEEPEST RADIAL TIRES
VW BUG BRAKE JOB $49.95
VW Beetle Exhaust Complete $29.95
COMPLETE VW ELECTRONIC FUEL INJECTION DIAGNOSTIC SERVICE

ALL ... MENU
THE BEST STEAK
GREAT SERVED TOO!
SIZZLING STEAK

...and we've done something about it!

A young woman who enrolls in Air Force ROTC is eligible to compete for an Air Force scholarship that includes free tuition, lab and incidental fees, and reimbursement for textbooks for her last 2 years of college. In addition, a tax-free monthly allowance of $100 is paid to both scholarship and non-scholarship cadets alike.

When she gets her degree, the career as an Air Force officer awaits her, matching her abilities to a job with rewarding challenges. With benefits like 30 days' paid vacation, good pay, foreign travel, and a great place to build a future.

Interested? Contact Department of Aerospace Studies at St. Michael's College. Telephone 655-2000 Ext. 231

And remember, in the Air Force, you'll be looked up to as well as at.

PUT IT ALL TOGETHER IN AIR FORCE ROTC

CHRIST is alive and well and living in the Southern Missions of the Edmundite Fathers and Brothers. Interested in serving with them?

For free information contact:

Edmundite Admissions Office
Enders Island
Mystic, Connecticut 06355

UNIVERSITY STORE

3 weeks only

Special Shipment of REMAINDER BOOKS starts today

JUST ARRIVED!

BACKGAMMON The Quick Course to Winning Play. By Don Stern. Dozens of illustrated diagrams in this easy-to-follow text. Complete introduction to the game — opposition of the 1970's. Exploit theory, strategy, offensive and defensive tactics, betting and tournaments, and psychology of the game. Published at $7.95.
Only $2.98

THINGS TO MAKE WITH PAPER: 187 Fun Projects. By Dan Munson and Alleanore Rose. The beautiful, amusing and useful things described in this book can all be made from the paper that everyone has around the house with only an occasional extra from the stationery or art store. Brighten up the house with these creative ideas! Full directions for making 187 objects plans-photos. Published at $8.95.
Only $2.98

AMERICA'S SEWING BOOK. By Sandra Ley. Beginning with the choice and care of sewing machines, including attachments, and irons, this definitive guide to home sewing covers clothes construction, home furnishings, mending, and alterations. Over 800 diagrams illustrate every detail described in the text and a special chapter devoted to children's clothes. Indexed. Published at $9.95.
Only $5.98

THE COMPLETE BOOK OF KNITTING. By Barbara Abbey. Over 300 drawings and illustrations; 200 pattern stitches. Thoroughly explains all the basic procedures of knitting, from 8 different ways of casting-on to the final [illegible] of blocking and lining garments. Tells how to knit in both English and Continental styles. With this superb guide, anyone can learn to knit well, to undertake any set of instructions and to adapt and create designs. Published at $12.95.
Only $5.98

STAINED GLASS: A Step-by-Step Guide. By Walter W. Judson. Here is a complete guide to the appreciation and creation of stained glass, by an expert in the field. It is an extensive how-to manual that explains everything from drawing and cartooning to cutting the glass, and leading and soldering. Published at $4.95.
Only $1.98

FONDUE, CHAFING DISH AND CASSEROLE COOKERY. By Margaret Deeds Murphy. Contains hundreds of interesting and taste-tempting recipes and will become your one-volume guide to easy, informal entertaining. A fantastic guide to great, great dishes that also let you spend more time with your guests and family! Published at $5.95.
Only $2.98

THE YANKEE COOK BOOK. By Imogene Wolcott. This revised edition includes the chowders, fish cakes, lobster and native fish, cranberry dishes, johnnycake, baked Indian pudding, pies, dumplings, and hundreds of other authentic recipes that have made Yankee cooking famous. Regional articles offer the reader in search of a recipe pleasant browsing. 369 pp. Index. Published at $6.95.
Only $2.98

LIVING OFF THE LAND. By Gary P. Grandner. This handy book covers the subject of survival in the wilderness for anyone who hikes, backpacks, cycles or lives in a trailer. Published at $5.95.
Only $1.98

LIVING WITH ANTIQUES: A Treasury of Private Homes in America. Ed. by Alice Winchester and staff of Antiques Magazine. An intimate tour of 40 private homes in America whose owners cherish the distinctive beauty and variety of the antiques they live with. From New England to California — town houses and country estates ... French antiques from Rococo to Neo-classic ... treasures in ceramics, silver, and painting. 365 illustrations 16 pp. full Color Plates. Thousands of words of engrossing text. 288 pp. Published at $15.00.
Only $7.98

INDIAN ART IN AMERICA: The Arts and Crafts of the North American Indian. By Frederick J. Dockstader. 70 Color and 190 black and white illustrations. The first volume to fully describe and illustrate the arts of the Indian tribes of the U.S. and Canada. Published at $27.50.
Only $12.98

PICASSO. Over 100 reproduction in color and black and white on coated stock. The most outstanding personality of our times, the artist who dominated the development of the visual arts and whose work is a monument to his supreme genius. Unsurpassed, his visual originality and power of construction have come to be universally admitted. A magnificent collection of this master's work.
Special Value $3.98

THE MYSTIC SEAPORT COOKBOOK. By Lillian Langseth-Christensen. Like the seaport itself, this book is completely authentic in its background and presentation, yet put into excellent order for modern-day use. Features 300 years of New England cookery, which evolved out of recipes brought over by the early settlers, out of natural foods they found here, out of Indian cooking, but, above all, out of the sea. Includes an interesting section about Mystic Seaport. Published at $8.95.
Only $3.98

AMERICAN COUNTRY TINWARE 1700-1900. By Margaret Coffin. The simple beauty of country tinware has a claim that appeals to all antiquarians. In this illustrated history, the development of tinsmithing and the growth of the use of tin is discussed with major emphasis on identification and care of old tinware. A must for collectors. Illustrated in black and white as well as an 8 page color section. Published at $12.50.
Only $5.98

CINEMA OF THE FANTASTIC. By Chris Steinbrunner and Burt Goldblett. Over 350 photographs guide us through a fascinating excursion into the bizarre, eerie and haunting film world of the incredible. A picture-and-text documentation of major milestones of this fabulous specialty of cinematic art. Published at $12.50.
Only $5.98

THE FRED ASTAIRE AND GINGER ROGERS BOOK. By Arlene Croce. Over 100 photographs from the 1930's films of Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers as they danced a chain of love duets that remain today the untouchable standard for American theatrical dancing. A definitive book on a memorable alliance. Published at $8.95.
Only $3.98

ORGANIC GARDENING. By Chuck Pendergast. A guide to the fundamental concepts and methods of organic gardening. Learn how to grow your own fruits and vegetables the safe natural healthy way. Published at $4.95.
Only $1.49

COMPLETE GUIDE TO HUNTING ACROSS NORTH AMERICA. Brian W. Dalrymple. The vast hunting opportunities in the U.S. and Canada are exhaustively researched, compiled and evaluated in this highly detailed, comprehensive guide. Specially prepared maps pinpoint Game Management Areas, Waterfowl Refuges, State and National Parks and Forests and other hunting grounds. Statistics of area, population, hunting license sales, game kills for each state and province. Published at $10.00
Only $5.98

UNIVERSITY STORE
ON THE CAMPUS

SCHWARTZ ON SPORTS

by Mike Schwartz

In the past few years while the Vermont hockey team was winning Division II and making the move to Division I, the other major winter sport was in a state of transition. However, this year that sport has finished its season with a 16-10 record and 8-4 in the Yankee Conference. After years below the .500 level and disarray among players and coaches, the basketball team has started to put it all together.

Since I have been at UVM the change in basketball has been apparent. At first, more players with scholarships performed during recreation time and not varsity practice time. Needless to say, in the 1971-1972 season, the team's record was 5-20. Then Coach Art Loche left and Peter Salzburg took over. In his third year, the team has started to progress, molding experience with new recruits. For the seniors on the team, the first chance to win consistently has brought out their best ability. For the younger players, it is probably a carryover from winning high school seasons.

Of particular note is that the team was able to stay close in the big games and perform well in the conference. They were able to beat both UMass and UConn in the same season and defeat the weaker teams in the conference. Perhaps, the major disappointment were the two losses to Boston University. The fact that Charlie Trapani, last year's team MVP and a strong defensive player was lost for the season was felt in such games where more height can allow a coach greater mobility in using his personnel.

But throughout the season, Coach Salzberg was able to use his bench and defeat some good teams. The only real rout was a loss to a tough Tennessee team. Although not playing the best in that conferference, the Cats defeated two Ivy League opponents. They beat a major power from Philadelphia, the St. Joseph's team. When it came down to playing lesser rivals, the Cats displayed superior ability. They also defeated St. Mikes's on both occasions.

The performance through the season can be summed up in just a few sentences. As a winner must do, they were able to come back from hard losses as with the Rhode Island game after losing three Yankee Conference contests in a row. They played a stronger schedule than in the past and earned the respect of opponents whether they won or lost. In a recent Burlington Free Press article, Don Fillion noted that many teams did not want to come up to Burlington because they knew they would win anyway. This is not the case anymore.

Now the key to future success is to continue to recruit quality players. That the team has turned their record around is a good selling point. The graduation of four seniors leaves important spots on the roster open for new talent. But besides this, players like Gottschalk, Trapani, Prehmus, Cubit and Kelly have many years to play before their graduation.

For a basketball fan who always wanted to see his school team win, it was satisfying to notice that the gym was full and the fans were really rooting the team on.

The Patrick gym had seen crowds in the hundreds but now an important conference game can attract thousands. With only a few prestige sports left on campus, this is a most encouraging sign. It once again proves, that if you can develop a winning team and winning attitude, the support of the fan is close behind. For UVM basketball, the 1974-75 season was the start of a new attitude and perhaps in the near future, its first conference championship.

Lacrosse Is Back

"With the demise of football and the conclusion of the hockey season, UVM Lacrosse is the Number One sport for this spring," says co-captain Tom Humphries concerning the UVM Lacrosse Club. With a month of practice behind them the team is looking forward to a busy 14-game regular season schedule. There will be six scrimmages, the first of which is this Saturday in the field house at 1 p.m. UVM will host North Country Community College. The team is also looking forward to a week long trip to Long Island over the spring break. Led by Coach Bruce Cassagrande and assistant coaches Brian Burns and Howard Martin, the Cats have been putting in extraordinary hours. The practice schedule has been Monday evenings from 9:15 – 11:00, Wednesdays 9:15 – 11:00, Thursdays (catch this one) 11:00 – 12:00 and Sundays from 3:15 – 5:00; "carrying your 200 pound friend around the track at 11:58 on a Thursday night is some kind of trick," says the other co-captain Jeff Davis. Yes, the "big sticks" of UVM are looking forward to a fine season, so buy their bumper stickers, stick 'em some place, buy a jug of wine and come watch these guys smash hell outa themselves with those crazy sticks in the fastest game on foot.

AT THE BONE
43 KING ST.
(Corner S. Champlain & King)
HAPPY HOUR
4-9 DAILY
Lowest Prices Around
LADIES' NIGHT
Wed. nite - Happy Hour
Prices for ladies all nite!
GOLD TEQUILA NIGHT
SUNDAY 7-11

UVM SPORTS

Vermont's Tim O'Connell sprawls headfirst over Providence goaltender Rick Moffit in an attempt to score. SPS Photo: R. R. Low
For related story see page one.

Clarkson Whips Vermont

Perhaps Vermont was looking past Clarkson on Saturday as they prepared for the playoffs against Providence, but whatever the reason was, they did not play well and they lost, by a score of 6-4.

David Taylor netted four goals and had an assist as well to pace Clarkson, while Chris Valentine and Dan O'Driscoll tallied the other goals.

The loss did not affect UVM's third place seeding in the tournament, but it did hurt because Vermont is a better team and should have won.

Valentine got the first Clarkson goal when he deflected a shot by Bob Shaw at 2:40. After O'Driscoll scored, the Koch brothers, Bill and Randy netted goals for Vermont to tie it at two apiece.

Only twenty-four seconds later Taylor lit the lamp to end the first period scoring.

Taylor got two more in the second period. The first was a power play goal and the second came when he stole the puck in the Vermont end and scored a short handed goal at 9:21 to make it 5–2.

Michel Lebeau deflected a smash by Tom Colby for UVM's third goal and Tim O'Connell's shot from a bad angle found the net to make it 5–4.

Cross pulled McNamara late in the game and Taylor scored an empty net goal.

Tom McNamara had a total of 26 saves as the Cats finished off the regular season with a 22–11–0 mark.

Defenseman John Glynne picked up three assists for a season's total of 32, a record.

Clarkson now takes on Harvard in the opening round in the playoffs.

Aquacats Beat UMass

Ron Kirkwood and Doug Piche paced the University of Vermont swim team with double victories in a 68-45 win over the University of Massachusetts at Amherst on Saturday.

Piche won both the one and three-meter dives while Kirkwood took the 100 and 200-yard freestyle events and also swam a leg in the 400-yard freestyle relay team.

Vermont's relay team won the event as Pete Andrews, Peter Gelhaar, Dave Macini and Kirkwood broke Vermont's previous freshman record of 3:29.0 with a time of 3:28.9.

Vermont now 5-4, is currently competing in the New England Championships at Brown University.

Hockey Dinner

The Vermont Friends of Hockey will sponsor their sixth annual dinner honoring members of the 1974–75 hockey squad, Saturday, April 5 at Simpson Dining Hall.

Tickets are available at the Patrick Gymnasium (room 206); What's Your Beef, Mills and Greer, and the Tip Top Newsstand in Essex Junction.

There will be a social hour at 5 p.m. followed by a roast beef and seafood newburg buffet at 7.

All team members will be guests and awards will be presented.

Ski Team Finishes Third

The Eastern Championships at the Middlebury Winter Carnival last weekend were disappointing for the UVM Ski team. After taking an early lead in the Giant Slalom and remaining in good position in the cross-country, it looked like a sure overall win in the jump, provided disaster didn't strike in the slalom. But for the fourth year in five, the Ross trail at the Middlebury Snow Bowl gobbled up the UVM alpine team.

Vermont had four individual winners, Eastern Collegiate Champions. Dave Dodge with a fantastic second run in the giant slalom finally came through with a long awaited victory; especially satisfying in the light of a serious knee injury last season. Stan Dunklee demonstrating his recovery from last year's bout with mono won the cross country. In the jump, Petter Kongsli broke his own hill record to win that event. Joe Lamb extended his string of nordic combined victories to four to become undefeated in the East in that event.

What happened? Why didn't basically the same team that was third in this country last year become first in the East this year?

The Giant Slalom went well after Dave Dodge's first. There was Chris Brown and Doug Bruce in sixth and seventh for a team win in that event.

Dartmouth waxed better than us and won the cross-country, but UVM, with Dunklee's first and Morten Gaarud's seventh was still within a few points of the lead.

Friday night before the slalom and the jump it looked like Vermont would take its second Eastern Championship. All we had to do was hold our own in the slalom and the undefeated jumping squad would do the rest.

I personally have raced in four carnival slaloms in the Ross Trail at Middlebury and all of them went badly. Three of them were Eastern Championships. Three years ago I watched our chance to be selected for the NCAA's in Winter Park Colorado disappear in a series of hooked tips, straddled gates and falls. Two years ago we almost lost the Eastern Championships in a slalom on that same hill; we just pulled out a victory in the jump. Four years ago in a downhill on the trail two of UVM's top skiers broke their backs. This year things went almost the same. Bill Rathbone skied by a gate and was disqualified. Brian Sustlin ended up in the woods with one ski on. And Doug Bruce was disqualified for missing a gate; a call by a gate keeper that caused much controversy and a heated meeting. Dick Erdman missed first place by one-hundredth of a second. Chris Brown, top slalom finisher for UVM at Dartmouth with a third, was seeded last. Running in the ruts out of the 62nd spot he was told to cool it and to be sure to make it, which he did; finishing far back. Brookie Dodge finished fifth which would have won the whole thing for us except Coach LaCasse had him entered as an individual competitor, an extra skier not counting for the team score.

Going into the jump fourth, far behind Dartmouth, Middlebury and slightly behind New Hampshire our main objective was to make the top three to qualify for the NCAA's. This we did neatly as Petter Kongsli broke his old hill record by six feet, followed by last year's winner, UVM's Trygve Roiseth and Joe Lamb was sixth.

It was a disappointing third for us. The Eastern Championships have always been tough for us and we all seem to ski better in the National Championships. As you read this, that's where we will be – in Durango, Colorado, skiing better.

EXXON
Ralph's Exxon
on Route 7 Shelburne Road and Interstate 189
Complete Auto Service
Expert Tune up and Repairs
All Work Fully Guaranteed
Free pickup and delivery
Phone: 862-9200

Levi's
Pants Plus
12 N. WINOOSKI AVE.
BURLINGTON, VT.
05401
802 • 864-0181
10% OFF WITH VALID UVM ID.

LITTLE PROFESSOR BOOK CENTER
40 Church St.
Burlington
Essex Jct. Shopping Center
Essex Junction
Largest Paperback Selection in Vermont
Complete Study Notes
Small presses & some far-out reading

VOLUME XCIII
NUMBER 9
MARCH 13, 1975

V

Ski Team

by Chris Brown

Packing up their bags after a poor third in the Eastern Championships, UVM's Ski Team headed out to Durango, Colorado where Fort Lewis was hosting the National Championships. We came back Sunday in second place, our best finish ever, in fact the best for any team from the University.

Downhill training started Monday, March 3. Early in the afternoon on the first day of training, one of UVM's top skiers, 1974 All-American and [illegible] Champion, Chris Brown, was injured. On a fast section of the course he lost a ski and in the resulting fall his arm was lacerated, a bone chipped and a nerve cut. He was operated on immediately, spent the next days in the hospital and was out of the competition. Brooks Dodge who qualified from the Easterns as an individual was able to replace him on the six man alpine squad.

The Western schools usually clean up in the downhill as most of their regular season meets include that event. In the East, giant slaloms are used instead. In the competition Wednesday, Colorado University's Mark Ford took an early lead, which was no surprise. Then when Vermont's Doug Bruce and Dave Dodge came down to take over second and third it looked as if an Eastern school might win the event for the first time in memory. However CU's Marc Milligan, starting from the 55th spot, edged out Bruce for second place by .13 seconds. Rathbone, Susilin and Brooks Dodge the fi[illegible] points 36th. with first, the scho[illegible] scor[illegible] was four[illegible] Dis[illegible] win[illegible] the[illegible] hole[illegible] sele[illegible] onl[illegible] cro[illegible] Ste[illegible] Te[illegible] an[illegible] po[illegible] eig[illegible] Du[illegible] be[illegible] per[illegible] cro[illegible] Ka[illegible] be[illegible] lev[illegible] wh[illegible] do[illegible] Bu[illegible] tra[illegible] tw[illegible] Co[illegible] sup[illegible] tre[illegible] wa[illegible] th[illegible] le[illegible] an[illegible] str[illegible] wa[illegible] se[illegible] pr[illegible] lo[illegible]

News Analy

by Margo Howland

Vermont Governor Thomas Salmon and outgoing University of Vermont President Dr. Edward C. Andrews, Jr. last week expressed contrasting views on the role of the University's next president in the sphere of higher education.

In separate appearances before the Presidential Search Committee last Thursday, Salmon and Andrews both expressed a need for the state and University to look to the future in terms of educational goals and values. The differences came in how the role of the UVM president was perceived in relation with the State and the Vermont State Colleges.

Salmon, speaking in terms of the future of higher education in the state, called for a "greater togetherness in higher education, a greater matching of existing resources, and an understanding between the president and his alter egos in the Vermont State colleges."

Salmon believes the next UVM president should be highly visible: "Every time the president purports to speak on a major policy matter, I think the action should be made live by him... I do not construe this

MARCH 7, 1975

PORTS

...n headfirst over Providence SPS Photo R. R. Low ...empt to score.

...os Vermont

... when he ... by Bob Shaw ... O'Driscoll ...rothers, Bill ...d goals for ... it at two ...four seconds ... lamp to end ...ring ... mate in the ...r first was a ...d the second ...e the puck in ... and scored a ... at 9:21 to ... deflected a ... Colby for ...

UVM's third goal and Tim O'Connell's shot from a bad angle found the net to make it 5–4.

Cross pulled McNamara late in the game and Taylor scored an empty net goal.

Tom McNamara had a total of 26 saves as the Cats finished off the regular season with a 22–11–0 mark.

Defenseman John Glynne picked up three assists for a season's total of 32, a record.

Clarkson now takes on Harvard in the opening round in the playoffs.

...eam Finishes Third

...n Championships at the Middlebury Winter ...weekend were disappointing for the UVM Ski ...taking an early lead in the Giant Slalom and ...ood position in the cross-country, it looked like ... win in the jump, provided disaster didn't strike ... But for the fourth year in five, the Ross trail at ...y Snow Bowl gobbled up the UVM alpine team, ...ad four individual winners, Eastern Collegiate ...Dave Dodge with a fantastic second run in the ...finally came through with a long awaited victory; ...dying in the light of a serious knee injury last ... Dunklee demonstrating his recovery from last ...with mono won the cross country. In the jump, ...l broke his own hill record to win that event. Joe ...ad his string of nordic combined victories to four ...defeated in the East in that event.

...eason? Why didn't basically the same team that ...this country last year become first in the East this ...

... Slalom went well after Dave Dodge's first. There ...own and Doug Bruce in sixth and seventh for a ...that event.

...th waxed better than us and won the ..., but UVM, with Dunklee's first and Morten ...nith was still within a few points of the lead.

...ht before the slalom and the jump it looked like ...uld take its second Eastern Championship. All we ...to hold our own in the slalom and the undefeated ...d would do the rest.

...y have raced in four carnival slaloms in the Ross ...bury and all of them went badly. Three of them ... Championships. Three years ago I watched our ... selected for the NCAA's in Winter Park Colorado ... a series of hooked tips, straddled gates and falls. ...o we almost lost the Eastern Championships in a ...al same hill, we just pulled out a victory in the ...ears ago in a downhill on the trail two of UVM's ...ke their books. This year things went almost the ...thbone skied by a gate and was disqualified. Brian ...d up in the woods with one ski on. And Doug ...isqualified for missing a gate; a call by a gate ...caused much controversy and a heated meeting. ...n missed first place by one-hundredth of a ...ris Brown, top slalom finisher for UVM at ...with a third, was seeded last. Running in the ruts ...2nd spot he was told to cool it and to be sure to ...hich he did, finishing far back. Brookie Dodge ...h which would have won the whole thing for us ...h LaCosse had him entered as an individual ...an extra skier not counting for the team score. ...the jump fourth, far behind Dartmouth, ... and eighth behind New Hampshire our main ...es to make the top three to qualify for the ...e we did mostly as Peter Keough broke his old hill ...ix feet, followed by last year's winner, UVM's ...th and Joe Lamb was sixth.

... a disappointing third for us. The Eastern ...ips have always been tough for us and we all seem ... in the National Championships. As you read this, ... we will be ... in Durango, Colorado, skiing better.

LITTLE PROFESSOR BOOK CENTER

...urch St ...gton

...Shopping

...tion

Largest Paperback Selection in Vermont
Complete Study Notes
Small presses & some far-out reading

VOLUME XCIII
NUMBER 9
MARCH 13, 1975

VERMONT CYNIC

University of Vermont
Burlington, Vermont

"It is a pride to live in Vermont"

UVM Ski Team-Places Second in the Nation

Ski Team Finishes Second In U.S.

by Chris Brown

Packing up their bags after a poor third in the Eastern Championships, UVM's Ski Team headed out to Durango, Colorado where Fort Lewis was hosting the National Championships. We came back Sunday in second place, our best finish ever, in fact the best for any team from the University.

Downhill training started Monday, March 3. Early in the afternoon on the first day of training, one of UVM's top skiers, 1973 All-American and ...Dunklee Boston Downhill Champion, Chris Brown, was injured. On a fast section of the course he lost a ski and in the resulting fall his arm was lacerated, a bone chipped and a nerve cut. He was operated on immediately, spent the next days in the hospital and was out of the competition. Brooks Dodge who qualified from the Easterns as an individual was able to replace him on the six man alpine squad.

The Western schools usually clean up in the downhill as most of their regular season meets include that event. In the East, giant slaloms are used instead. In the competition Wednesday, Colorado University's Mark Ford took an early lead, which was no surprise. Then when Vermont's Doug Bruce and Dave Dodge came down to take over second and third it looked as if an Eastern school might win the event for the first time in memory. However CU's Marc Milligan, starting from the 55th spot, edged out Bruce for second place by .13 seconds. Rathbone, Sunslin and Brooks Dodge who was troubled with the flu, all just missed scoring points with 27th, 31st, and 36th. Colorado took the event with 55 points (21 points for first, 20 for second, etc. with the top three from each school counting) with a first, second, and eighth. Vermont was second, with third and fourth giving us 37 points. Disaster struck last year's winner, Wyoming. Three of their top skiers were unable to hold the tight line they had selected and did not finish, leaving Wyoming eighth with only thirteen points.

Wyoming bounced back in cross country, however, with Steiner Hybertsen, Soberg and Terje Vango taking first, third and fifth, giving them 57 points. Vermont came in eighth with 16 points for Stan Dunklee's sixth, which had to be the most amazing performance of the meet. The cross country race which is 15 Ks or 9½ miles long was run at better than 9000 feet above sea level. For the Western runners who train at that altitude it doesn't make much difference. But for the Easterners who train where the air pressure is twice what it is in Durango, Colorado, the problem of supplying oxygen to athletes is tremendous. Another handicap was the several inches of snow that fell the night before leaving, making the track soft and slow, and putting a great strain on the leg muscle. Stan was leading after 7½ Ks; in the second half, the altitude proved too much for him and he lost two minutes to the leader, despite all-out effort after which he blacked out.

Stan was not only the first Easterner but also the first American. The coaches agreed that had the race begun at sea level Stan probably would have won. Northern Michigan's runners who came out two weeks early to get used to the altitude (Stan came out two days before the race) finished seventh and eighth placing them third behind Colorado who came in second with 38 points.

Unless the Eastern schools change their cross-country training techniques to include high altitude training it will be extremely difficult for one of them to win the NCAA's when they are held in the west.

Dartmouth's strong cross-country team who had been doing well in the east was seventh with only eleven points.

After two events, Vermont was third, 40 points behind first place Colorado. Only a disaster for Colorado in the slalom would allow them to be caught.

The soft Western snow demands a slightly different slalom technique than does the Eastern ice. Vermont's co-captain Dick Erdman adjusted well and finished third, less than a second behind Denver's Peik Christiansen and Colorado's Mark Ford. Doug Bruce, a strong candidate for alpine combine honors, fell prey to one of the many terrain changes in the course and did not finish. Dave Dodge also had trouble and skied off the course, then scrambled back on, knowing that he had lost much time but hoping with a good second run to be to able to score points for the team. This he nearly did, finishing 24th, only three places away from a point scoring position.

The big story of the slalom was Bill Rathbone. Seeded fourth by UVM coaches, he came out of the 56th starting position fighting the course and huge ruts to end up seventh, earning the team 15 valuable points. This also put him fifth in the alpine combined.

Colorado survived the slalom well, in fact gained six more points than Vermont. The team finishes in the slalom were: Colorado, first; Denver, second; Vermont, third; and Middlebury, fourth.

The jump was held on Saturday. Going into it, Vermont had taken over second place in the total team standings from Wyoming who failed to score any points in the slalom. Colorado was 46 points ahead which is an insurmountable lead with only one event left. Our main concern at that time was not getting caught by either Denver or Wyoming, who has a strong jumping team, both of whom were only seventeen points behind us.

The landing on the seventy-meter jump was rough and there had been minor injuries in the training throughout the week. Wyoming, who had been having bad luck in the alpine events, had worse in the jump where their number one star, Per Svean, broke his leg in the trial run Saturday morning, leaving them a disappointing

(continued on page fourteen)

SA Referendum To Occur Next Week

Next Tuesday and Wendesday, March 18 and 19, a campus-wide referendum will be held to decide the future student government for the Student Association. The Student Association is the student body at large. When the Student Association Senate dissolved itself over a month ago, several meetings have been held to work on an alternative government and two proposals have been introduced.

The referendum will propose these two forms of student government. Each student will have the option of choosing either one of the two proposals or a third option which would, in effect, reject both proposals. Each proposal is described later in this article. Also included in the referendum will be several items requesting action on supplemental budget requests for existing student organizations.

Students will be able to vote in five locations. Voting will take place in the dining halls of Simpson, Wright, Harris-Millis and Living/Learning during the lunch and dinner hours. At Billings Center voting will take place all day. One must have their UVM ID card present when voting. Any questions, please call the Student Association Office at 656-2053.

The two proposals each emphasize a strong committee structure. Yet the differences are clear. If one proposal is chosen, then further development of the details of that proposal will be worked out and then a constitutional amendment for that finalized governmental proposal will go to a campus-wide referendum in mid-April, included with the S.A. presidential elections. Then final approval of the government will be made by the Board of Trustees.

PROPOSAL I

Structure: The S.A. Senate will be divided into 5 committees. They are:

(1) Finance Committee – This committee will consist of seven (7) members. The committee, whose function will be to recommend allocations of Student Association funds, will be chaired by the S.A. Treasurer.

(2) Student Activities Committee – This committee will consist of five (5) members. The committee will recognize student organizations and coordinate student activities (i.e., Concert Bureau, SA Films)

(3) Special Affairs Committee – This committee will have nine (9) members. This committee will be concerned with handling seasonal events. Elections for S.A. will be coordinated by this committee. Any special events or problems will be handled through this committee.

(4) Communications Committee – This committee will consist of seven (7) members. This committee will serve in Public Relations, receiving student gripes (i.e. the Exchange), and will communicate information to be discussed at Town Meetings.

(5) Student Action Committee – This committee will consist of eleven (11) members. The student members of the Board of Trustees will sit on this committee, which will be chaired by the S.A. Vice-President. The functions will include periodic meetings with UVM administrators and faculty. The committee will concern itself with political problems as they affect the students of the University of Vermont.

All legislation must be channelled through appropriate committees. Upon decision of a bill by a committee, it will be voted on by the student body with majority vote ruling at a Town Meeting. Town Meetings will be held on the second Tuesday of each month. Special Town Meetings can be scheduled upon consent of the Executive Branch.

The Executive Committee will consist of:

(1) President – elected in the spring of every year by the entire student body. The President is the Chairman of Town Meetings and Chairman of the Executive Committee.

(2) Vice-President – elected in the spring of every year by the entire student body. The Vice-President is the Chairman of the Student Action Committee.

(3) Treasurer – elected in the spring of every year by the entire student body. The Treasurer will be responsible for accounting Student Association Funds and will be Chairman of the Finance Committee.

(4) Committee Chairman – elected by the majority of members of a committee from its membership unless otherwise specified (i.e. Vice-President, Treasurer)

The Executive Committee will coordinate committee actions. The Executive Committee upon majority rule can also call special sessions of the Town Meeting.

Thirty-seven (37) Senators will be elected in the fall of each year. All senators will be seated on a committee via a senator's preference. Senators will be elected in this fashion:

20 from on-campus; 4 from Greek Coordinating Council (fraternities and sororities); 13 from town.

PROPOSAL II

Proposal For Student Government

There would be three branches:

(A) Finances

(1) 15 members to be elected at large. That is, any interested student is eligible.

(2) They will handle all money bids by S.A. Organizations.

(3) They will handle all bids for S.A. recognition.

(4) They will be chaired by the S.A. Vice-President (non-voting)

(5) Their policies are subject to approval by town meeting.

(B) Politics

(1) 15 members to be elected at large. That is, any interested student is eligible.

(2) They will handle all relevant student issues (i.e. the underpass, food service, bookstore, etc)

(3) They may request funds from the Finance Branch to support their programs above and beyond their allocation for the year.

(4) They will be chaired by the S.A. President (non-voting)

(5) Their policies are subject to approval by town meeting.

(C) Executive Branch

(1) President to move the Political Branch. It is his responsibility to get the important issues to the floor, and to coordinate necessary action (i.e. strikes, marches, petitioning)

(2) Vice-President to move the Financial Branch. It is his responsibility to get the important issues to the floor, and to coordinate necessary action.

(3) Secretary of Elections – Appointed by the President.

(4) Secretary of Communications to raise the issues to the student body, and announce town meetings – appointed by the President.

D. Elections

(1) To be held the first Tuesday in April, all elective offices are open (which means that no seniors may run, since they will not be able to serve the following year.

E. Town Meeting

(1) To be held the second Tuesday of each month.

(2) A town meeting may be called anytime at the President's discretion.

(3) The meeting will vote on all bills passed by either branch.

(4) The second purpose of town meeting will be to incite the student body to fight for their rights.

Tuition To Increase

by Randy Jansen

Unless the Vermont legislature provides UVM with the requested money the University has asked for, students can expect a tuition increase. In an interview with the Vermont Cynic, Dr. Patterson, Executive Vice President, pointed out some of the possible solutions to UVM's financial situation.

Tuition is already scheduled to rise $55 for Vermonters and $215 for out-of-state students. However, according to Patterson, the administration has prepared some contingency programs in case funding for UVM proves inadequate, which may cause further increases in tuition. These programs, however, are subject to the approval of the Trustees.

The administration recommends that tuition for in-state students increase by $55 and out-of-state to increase by $60. This would increase the overall tuition to $1100 for in-state and $2,925 for out-of-state. Total revenues resulting from this action are expected to total $496,000.

Dr. Patterson adds that a differential tuition for the medical college will also be requested. This differential will be $500 over and above normal tuition. The administration feels that the high costs of the Medical School and the high future wages of the graduates justify this action. About $138,000 will be added to the general fund, says Patterson.

Patterson and the administration are concerned about the high tuition at UVM. "We're very worried about this," related Patterson. "It's a higher tuition than we feel we should have," he added. He feels, though, that a tuition increase is all you have to deal with UVM's deficit. He feels that tuition has been pushed to the limit and that a deficit budget may be recommended, instead of further tuition increases.

To better deal with the budget problems, UVM is lobbying the Vermont legislature to enact certain bills. These, in effect, will give UVM greater control with in-state tuition and residency requirements. 16 U.S.A. Sec. 2282 deals with residency regulations. UVM is asking that they have the say on who is qualified to be a resident for tuition purposes. A section of this bill states ". . . that a residence established for the purpose of attending an educational institution by either the person seeking reduced tuition or another shall not by itself constitute residence." Such legislation, if enacted, will provide a larger range of freedom for the university to decide residency.

UVM is also seeking to eliminate the provision that Vermont tuition can not exceed 40% of out-of-state tuition. Dr. Patterson felt that out-of-state students have carried a much larger share of the tuition than in-state students. According to Dr. Patterson, Vermonters should expect to share a greater percentage of the tuition burden.

Why is UVM in this position? Patterson offers three explanations. First, the University level growth policy which advocates no further increase in the student population. Inflation is another primary reason. The drop in state revenues is probably the most significant factor. Because of this, Vermont is unable to provide the amount of revenue required to support UVM. Also, federal policy which has reduced federal expenditures for higher education is still another factor

(continued on page three)

Vermont Senate Defeats S. 93

by Kathy Stiesmi

In recent action, Vermont's Senate passed S.93, the bill which blocks construction of the underpass. The bill, which was the first order of business during the Senate's Friday session, received 17 votes in its favor and 11 against. Five of the six Chittenden County senators voted for S.93.

S.93 was approved by the senate after a minor amendment to the effect that present expenditures of between $50,000 and $85,000 would be paid before the funds for the tunnel are re-allocated to Vermont's capital construction fund.

Senator Daniels introduced S.93 at the request of the student association with six co-sponsors, five of whom were from Chittenden County. The chances for the bill's passage looked slim after a 4-2 vote against it in the Senate Institutions Committee. However, this decision was overturned by a Senate majority with 17 members voting in favor and only 11 against.

Since its passage in the Senate, S.93 has had a preliminary reading in the House. Presently it is being discussed in the House Institutions Committee. At the latest Institutions Committee meeting, Burlington alderman, Mark Draper voiced his opposition to the underpass on the grounds that its cost effectiveness make it an unsound project. Draper argued that the pedestrian problem could be solved by utilizing crossing guards during peak crossing periods.

Alderman Draper's statements at the meeting were significant in that he had been one of the first of Burlington's officialdom to take a stand

(continued on page eleven)

News Analysis: Andrews and Salmon Disagree

by Margo Howland

Vermont Governor Thomas Salmon and outgoing University of Vermont President Dr. Edward C. Andrews, Jr. last week expressed contrasting views on the role of the University's next president in the sphere of higher education.

In separate appearances before the Presidential Search Committee last Thursday, Salmon and Andrews both expressed a need for the state and University to look to the future in terms of educational goals and values. The differences came in how the role of the UVM president was perceived in relation with the State and the Vermont State Colleges.

Salmon, speaking in terms of the future of higher education in the state, called for a "greater togetherness in higher education, a greater matching of existing resources, and an understanding between the president and his sister ages in the Vermont State colleges."

Salmon believes the next UVM president should be highly visible: "Every time the president purports to speak on a major policy matter, I think the action should be made live by him... I do not construe this as a delegated task." He referred to the importance of the impression the University makes when they come before the general assembly.

The new president "should be able to deal with the state colleges and future governors... he should be required to articulate views clearly and develop a rapport with people," Salmon continued.

Andrews' views were almost isolationist by comparison: "The president's role is to assist, serve, support and stay out of the way. When things do not go well, be courageous enough to make changes... and stay the hell out of Montpelier unless invited."

"The simple, honest direct approach, with complete candor is the most effective," Andrews declared.

Andrews' major concern was the quality of the University, which he referred to several times, with obvious pride, as a "little Ivy."

"We are a high quality institution. I would put this at the top of the list – to maintain it, enhance it and improve it. It can be improved; it is of real and pragmatic value to the future economy and well-being of the State of Vermont. We have got to guard this jealously."

Andrews suggested that the University's high academic reputation "is better understood outside the state than in; the increase in its academic reputation is equal to the square of the distance from Burlington!" he quipped.

Andrews believes the quality of the University would be "seriously compromised" by a merger with the state colleges. The President indicated that he at one time thought merger might have been a good idea, but "the budget cutting process and the changing economy" caused him to change his mind. He cited Chancellor Dr. William G. Craig's difficulties with the VSC Board of Trustees and indicated that they were having a hard enough time without adding on the University.

Salmon, by contrast, predicted merger may come about because the economy may demand it:

"In due course I see a united higher educational front; I think the economic conditions may mandate this."

Both Andrews and Salmon referred to the need to evaluate educational goals and consider the future needs of the state.

Andrews declared, "What is desperately needed is an all-out effort to look to the future, to decide the mission, purpose and role of the State of Vermont... We need on

(continued on page nine)

Governor Salmon — SPS Photo ; by Wynn Gold

Features This Week

Vt. Number Three In ECAC pg. 14
Important Graduation Info pg. 3
Jackson Brown pg. 6
B.B. King pg. 6
Cynic Contests pg. 12

- CALENDAR and ANNOUNCEMENTS -

Help Keep The Nature Center Open

The Green Mountain Audubon Nature Center is in imminent danger of closing due to lack of funds. Please, we need your support. We are sponsoring a benefit performance the opening night of Pajama Game, March 20, at 8:00 p.m. at the Flynn Theatre. Tickets are $3, $4 and $5. Information: call 862-5121 or 425-2984. Mail Orders: "Pajama Game", General Delivery, Burlington.

Checks payable to Green Mountain Audubon Nature Center. Enclose stamped self-addressed envelope.

Free Champagne Reception Opening Night Only, March 20th.

Gay Student Union Meeting

The UVM Gay Student Union will hold an important meeting in Marsh Lounge, Billings Center at 7:30 p.m. on Sunday, March 16. We hope to coordinate plans for several Gay events on the last weekend in April, including a talk on campus by Elaine Noble. This up-front Gay Woman achieved national prominance last fall when she was elected to the Massachusetts State Legislature. Plans are still in the embryonic stage, and we need a great deal of help, so if you are interested in finding out what is happening, or have some extra energy, be sure to drop by.

Women's Caucus Notes

The UVM Women's Caucus announces that a telephone has been installed at the Women's Center in Blundell House. The number is 656-4366. Office hours will be Tuesday and Thursday mornings, and will be extended in the near future.

People interested in staffing the Center are encouraged to call, as well as those needing information about careers, counseling and women's concerns in general.

The Women's Caucus is currently planning a series of workshops and meetings in April which will celebrate International Women's Year. For more information, or if you have ideas and/or time to help with these activities, please call 656-4366.

Library Orientation

This semester the Reference Department at Bailey Library is having topical tours for people interested in a more efficient use of the library. The first tour, scheduled for Tuesday March 18th at 4:00 p.m., is on Shaker research materials.

Please come to the Reference Desk and sign up for the tour or call Nancy Crane, ext. 2020. The group will be limited to 10 people.

Water Safety Instructor

There will be an important meeting of all currently Certified Water Safety Instructors who wish to participate in retraining sessions to be held at the Forbush Pool this spring.

Date: Tuesday, March 18; Time: 5:30 p.m.; Place: Patrick Gym, room 118.

Please bring your WSI certificate to the meeting. For further information, call Ms. Sandra Farrell, Southwick Building, 656-3240 (3241).

Gliding Association

The Vermont Hang Gliding Association will be meeting on Friday, March 14th, 7 p.m. at the Green Mountain Power Co. auditorium in Montpelier. The agenda includes further discussion of a pilot rating system and an instructional film. All flyers and interested persons are urged to attend.

For more information, call 253-8300 or write Box 1048, Stowe, Vermont. 05672.

Nominations For Mortar Board

Nominations are now being accepted from students, staff, and faculty for selection into Mortar Board, National Senior Women's Honor Society. All junior women who exemplify outstanding ability in scholarship, leadership, and service are eligible. Nomination forms may be picked up at the Student Activities desk in Billings Center and must be returned by Monday, March 17, 1975.

Girl Scout Cookies

Girl Scout Cookies will be on sale at the Billings Student Center on Monday and Tuesday March 17th and 18th from 10:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m.

The cookies will at $1.00 a box.

Symposium on Food Problems In Asia

This week begins the East Asian Cultural Exchange and SA Speakers Bureau spring symposium on "The Problem of Production and Distribution of Food in Asia." The first event will take place on Tuesday, March 18th at 8 p.m. in Billings North Lounge.

The evening will begin with a lecture by Paul Lin, the Director for East Asian Studies at McGill University. Prof. Lin has spent a great deal of time in the Peoples Republic of China, and will speak on the development of China's strategy for her own food production and distribution, as well as China's ideas on world cooperation in these areas.

The second part of the evening will begin with Mary King Rose's film on food problems in India. This film was made originally for Bill Moyers' ETV special, "World Hunger: Who Will Survive?"

Following the two presentations there will be time for discussion and questions.

Music Correction

The Fall 1975 course listings contain an error concerning Music 1. In the schedule Music 1 is listed as "Music Literature for Majors."

Only the first, or section A, of this course is reserved for music majors. Section B through D are open to all, and called "Survey of Music Literature."

Backpacking Catalog Free

A 36-page catalog of hard-to-find books and trail guides of interest to backpackers, hikers, walkers, cross-country skiers and mountaineers can be obtained by sending a 10-cent stamp to Backpacker Books, RFD 1, Bellows Falls, Vermont 05101.

Arts and Crafts Sale

The Developmental Disabilities Center, which serves 125 mentally retarded adults, has an Arts & Crafts Program. The fine quality of the items made at the Center has enabled us to open to crafts boutique. Some of the items being offered for sale are: quilts, place mats, sheepskin pillows, jeans and patchwork tote bags, aprons, pot holders and patchwork material.

The Center located at 72-78 Fairfield Street, St. Albans, is opened weekdays from 9 a.m. through 5 p.m.

You're invited to browse through the boutique and visit the craft rooms to see our products being made.

Phone 524-6561.

Applications Available for Student Teachers

All University students who plan to student teach next year should obtain an intern application form from your program internship coordinator or from the Office of Professional Laboratory Experiences (237 Waterman) and MUST turn this in completely filled out by March 19.

All Juniors in the College of Education and Social Services and the College of Arts and Sciences who intend to student teach next year:

There will be a mandatory intern placement meeting 7:00 p.m. Wednesday March 19 in 413 Waterman.

At that time placement procedures will be explained, group interviews with schools will take place, and the intern handbook will be distributed.

Anyone who cannot attend the meeting MUST contact the Office of Professional Laboratory Experiences immediately since non-attendance will put you at a serious disadvantage in obtaining the placement you prefer.

At the Fleming Museum through April 12, "Art of the Sacred" is on display in the Front Gallery. The exhibit includes works from area churches and private collections and serves as a history of religious perspective presented by UVM students in Religious Studies.

Registration for Classes of the Fall semester, '75 continues for all undergraduate students through Friday. Enrollment forms should be turned into Marsh Lounge, Billings between the hours of 9 a.m. and 12 noon and from 1:00 to 4 p.m.

THURSDAY, MARCH 13

Deadline for faculty and students to fill out and return academic advising questionnaires. If you received one, now's the time to get it back to Prof. Joseph Izso, mathematics.

9 a. m. to 4 p. m., The Red Cross blood drive ends today Come donate the precious gift of life at Billings' North Lounge.

2:10 p.m., A Geology seminar will feature Dr. Kevin Burke of the State Univ. of N. Y. at Albany who will speak on "The Geology of Tibet and its Relevancy to Oregony (Plate Tectonics)" in 101 Perkins Hall. All interested persons are invited to attend.

2:30 – 3:30 p.m. on WRUV-FM, Interview with Mr. Jerome Diamond, Attorney General of the State of Vermont. Interviewers are Kevin Jalbur, WRUV-FM News Director, Matt Kay, WRUV-AM News Director, Ted Conn, reporter for the Times-Argus.

4:30 p.m., Winter Initiation will be held by the Alpha Chapter of Vermont, Phi Beta Kappa in 527 Waterman. Members and friends are welcome. The Annual Banquet will follow in the evening.

4:30 p.m., The Religion Dept. will hold an Open House to acquaint UVM students with the Religion courses for the Fall Semester, the Religion staff and students. Refreshments will be served and all are invited to attend at 481 Main St., second floor of the Philosophy-Religion-Classics Building.

7 p.m., There will be NO fellowship meeting for Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship this week. Our celebration of Narnia night (Saturday, March 15) will take its place. Join us there!

7:30 p.m., Professor William Mann, Philosophy, will present a lecture/discussion on the general idea of the medieval concept of God's timelessness: a classic example of medieval Christian philosophy gone wrong., in A-180 Living/Learning.

7:30 p.m., The Third World Organization holds African dancing, instructed by Maria Jones. Admission fee is $2, and registration is at 7:15 each week at Southwick Ballroom.

7:30 p.m., SA Films presents the musical, "The Pirate", 101 Votey, free. Also "The Jazz Singer" will be shown at 9:30 p.m.

8 p.m., Writers' Workshop presents "Recent North American Poetry", chosen and read by Mike Breiner, Tinker Greene, and Alfred Lawrence, Commons 115, Living-Learning Center.

8 p.m., Dr. Peter Caws of Hunter College will speak on "Some Inconvenient Consequences of Scientific Knowledge" in Carpenter Auditorium of the Given Med. Building. This 1975 Society of Sigma Xi National Lecture is co-sponsored by the UVM Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa and a buffet dinner at 6:30 for members and guests will precede the lecture.

FRIDAY, MARCH 14

3:10 p.m., Physics-Engineering Seminar, Dr. Charles Elbaum, professor of physics and director of Metals Research Laboratories, Brown University, "Dislocation Dynamics and Mechanical Properties of Solids," A-402 Cook Building, coffee at 2:45 in A-429.

7:30 and 9:30 p.m., W. C. Fields stars in "Never Give A Sucker an Even Break", sponsored by the Lane Series. Admission is $1 in Marsh Life Sciences Auditorium.

7:30 p.m., A public forum and exhibit on "What's Happening in Housing?", sponsored by the Housing and Environmental Design Program of the School of Home Economics and the Residential Technology Program of the College of Agriculture, will be held in Carpenter Auditorium of the Given Med. Building.

7:30 and 10:00 p.m., SA Films presents a horrifying duo: "Bride of Frankenstein" and "The Black Cat" in 101 Votey, for $1.

7:30 p.m., The Foreign Students Club meets at Billings.

7:30 p.m., Baha'i Firesides at 71 S. Williams St.

8 p.m., United Farmworkers Support Committee presents two veteran UFW members who will speak on the farmworkers present struggle. A film "Why We Boycott" will also be shown. The meeting will be at the Cunningham Newman Center.

8 p.m., A senior recital by music students Allyson Davis, soprano, and Gary Moresu, baritone, at St. Paul's Cathedral. Admission is free.

8 p.m., The Fleming Museum holds a gallery talk by Dr. F. David Martin of Bucknell's Dept. of Philosophy. The topic for discussion is "What is a Christian Painting?"

8 p.m., Folk dancing is held at Southwick Ballroom and all are welcome to attend.

SATURDAY, MARCH 15

Orientation on Student Aids applications are due at the Counseling and Testing Center. See story in this issue.

Church Street Center courses in woodcutting and women's lifestyles begin today. Call 656-4221 for details.

9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m., The Placement Office sponsors "Student- Alumni Career Day." Have your questions about your future by those with first-hand experience answered in Billings' North Lounge.

1 p.m., The Medieval/Renaissance Program will hold a reception for students interested in joining it for the 1975-76 academic year. Refreshments will be served. All students interested in an interdisciplinary program and a residential living/learning situation are cordially invited. For details call Dr. James Howe, English, 309 Old Mill, 656-3056.

7:30 and 9:30 p.m., Katherine Hepburn stars in "Trojan Women", offered by SA Films in 101 Votey, free.

SUNDAY, MARCH 16

2 p.m., The Fleming Museum sponsors a gallery talk by Christie Fengler and the Reverend Daniel P. Daley.

6 p.m., The Church St. Center's Legislative Study Group meets at 135 Church St.

7:30 p.m., Important planning meeting for the UVM Gay Student Union, Marsh Lounge, Billings Center.

8 p.m., The Music Dept. sponsors a senior recital at the Fleming Museum. UVM student Marcy Atwud will demonstrate her harpsicord technique.

MONDAY, MARCH 17

St. Patrick's Day!

9 a.m. to 12 noon and 1:00 to 4 p.m., Registration in Billings' Marsh Lounge.

10 a.m. to 2 p.m., The Vermont Girl Scout Council holds its annual cookie sale in Billings. Support this worthy cause while treating your taste buds.

2 p.m., "Haven't been a student for a while?, asks Alice D. Outwater. Come to a discussion at the Counseling and Testing Center.

5 p.m., VPIRG meets in Conference Room C, Billings. All are welcome to attend.

7:15 p.m. IRA meets at Harris-Millis. All are welcome.

7 p.m., The L/L Nutrition class meets in 115 Commons. L/L for an hour of counseling and exercise in healthy habits. The class also meets every Wednesday.

7:30 and 9:30 p.m., SA Films presents the French classic, "Les Bonnes Femmes" in 101 Votey. Admission is free.

8 p.m., Dean John Weiger and Prof. Molefi Asante present a lecture on "Cross-Cultural and Paralinguistic Problems," in D-170 L/L.

TUESDAY, MARCH 18

9 a.m. to 12 noon, 1:00 to 4 p.m., registration for all undergraduate students occurs in Billings' Marsh lounge through Friday.

A counselor from the Christian Science organization will be in Billings' Conference Room C for all interested in talking about the role of Christ in daily living. Check Billings main desk for time.

10 a.m. to 2 p.m., The Vermont Girl Scout Council cookie sale continues in Billings. This is the last day of the sale.

12 noon, Alice D. Outwater leads a study habit workshop at the Counseling and Testing Center for all interested students.

2 p.m., Alan Ross and Alice Outwater lead a group discussion of tension and how to avoid it at the Counseling and Testing Center.

7 p.m., The Intervarsity Christian Fellowship holds its weekly Bible study meeting at 205 So. Prospect St., Apt. 2. All are welcome to attend.

7 p.m., East Asian Cultural Exchange and SA Speakers Bureau present Prof. Paul Lin, McGill, who will discuss China's strategy for food production and distribution and Chinese ideas for world cooperation in these areas. Place is North Lounge, Billings Center. Following the talk, Mary King Rose's film on food problems in India will be shown.

7:30 p.m., The Church Street Center's course in "Artistic Gymnastics" begins today. Call 656-4221 for details.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 19

9 a.m. to 12 noon and 1:00 to 4 p.m., Registration for all undergraduate students occurs in Marsh Lounge, Billings Through Friday.

12 noon, Nanch Koch leads an hour of relaxation and meditation at the Counseling and Testing Center.

12:15 p.m., the Lunch Bunch Film Series continues today with "Yugoslavia," a survey of life there today. Admission is free and public.

4 p.m., David Andrews, senior anthropologist at Middlebury College, will give a talk entitled "Paucrathambo: a Community in Peru" in the Anthropology Seminar Room, 5th floor Williams Science Hall.

(continued on page three)

Horse Club

The UVM Horse Club will hold its weekly meeting this Thursday in the MAT lounge.

Guest speaker for the meeting will be Kenneth Wheeling of the Shelburne Museum. Mr. Wheeling will give a talk and slide show on Coaching in America. All interested students are welcome. It will start at 8:00 p.m. and refreshments will be served afterwards.

After the talk, the club will discuss such upcoming events scheduled for April, including: the Denny Emerson Clinic, a Hunter Conformation Clinic, Pony Club Clinic, and the Annual UVM Horse Club Spring Schooling Show. For questions call Verne Batchelder at 864-5944.

SPRING CLEANING
SALE
50% off on:
Ski Boots: HANSON: Riva, TRAPPEUR: Elite & Equipe, RAICHLE: Comp. & Cellina, NORDICA: Mercury & Elegance
Skis: OLIN: Jr. Markll, VOLKL: Jr. Tiger, ATOMIC: Atomic, Super Jet, Rider Short & A & T: Ski Sets, DEMO-SKIS by: Rossignol, Olin & Atomic
Ski Poles: Barrecrafter, Scott & Crosscountry
Skates: Figure & Hockey by Hyde, Mens, Ladies & Kids
Ski Suits: Innsbruck & Anba, Mens & Ladies Parka & Warmup Combination
Stretch Pants, Warmups & Knickers: Entire Stock in Mens, Ladies & Kids
Crosscountry Suits: Mens & Ladies
Sweaters: Mens, Ladies & Kids
Crosscountry Bindings: Klyps 2 pins
30% off on
Ski Boots: HANSON: Team & Exhibition, NORDICA: Meteor, Slalom, Pro, Alpina & Juniors
Skis: ROSSIGNOL: Exhibition, Olympia, Europe, G.S.L. 400 & Jr. Strato 105 & Team K-2: Five, Winter Heat, Three, & Junior Two & Five
Parkas, Mens & Ladies T-Necks: Mens & Ladies, Underwear, Hats, Socks, Gloves & Mittens, Ski & Boot Bags
Yaluga Sports
1250 SHELBURNE RD. South Burlington, Vt. 862-1961
NEXT TO SWISS CHOCOLATE POT
Mon. thru Fri. 9 - 9
Saturday 9 - 5:30
BANKAMERICAN CARD
MASTER CHARGE

Join the third biggest family in the world.

Imagine an order of 22,000 priests and brothers in 73 countries around the world. (That's a pretty big family.)

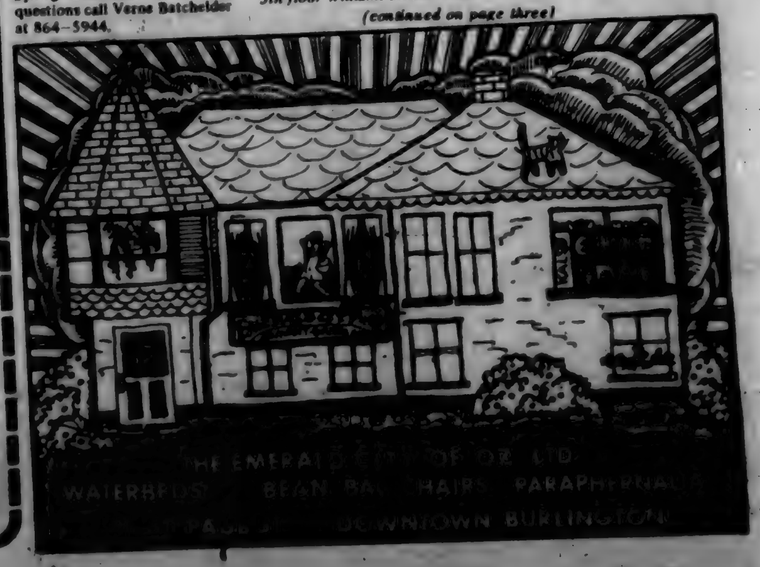
But that's what the Salesians of St. John Bosco are all about — a large family of community-minded men dedicated to the service of youth. (And no one gets lost.)

In Italy in the 1800's a chance meeting between a poor priest and a street urchin served to create a movement of such success that it is still growing today. Don Bosco became the priest who brought youth back from the streets — and back to God.

He reasoned that a program of play, learn and pray would make useful citizens of the world. He crowded out evil with reason, religion and kindness in a (what was then unheard of) atmosphere of family.

The ideals of St. John Bosco are still with us today. His work goes on in boys clubs, technical and academic schools, guidance centers, summer camps and missions. And his very human approach is very evident in the family spirit of the Salesians. This is the way he wanted it. This is the way it is. The Salesian experience isn't learned — it's lived.

For more information about Salesian Priests and Brothers, mail this coupon to: Father Joseph Bisbal, S.D.B. Room A-
Salesians OF ST. JOHN BOSCO
Box 500, New Rochelle, N.Y. 10802
I am interested in the Priesthood ☐ Brotherhood ☐
Name _____ Age _____
Street Address _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____
Phone _____
Education _____
Your Current Job _____



MARCH 13, 1975

. . . Calende

(continued from page two)

4 p.m., "Tertulia," an informal gather professors and staff interested in speaking the Hispanic Apartments, Bldg. D, 3rd floor.

4:10 p.m., Prof. Philip Kitcher of UVM's lectures on "Scientific Explanation" in Coo served in A429 at 3:45 p.m.

7 p.m., A mandatory intern meeting for College of Education and Social Services and will be held in 413 Waterman. All who intend next year should attend. See story this issue.

8 p.m., The Women of UVM Book Discus at the home of Jane Hundal in Milton to disc Barth" by Rohrer.

8 p.m., The Fleming Museum sponsors a in conjunction with the present exhibit "Ar The Arena Theatre in the Museum Basemen following free film showings: "Kaleidoscope of Gesture," "How a Hindu Worships at his "The Sword and the Flute."

THURSDAY, MARCH 20

9 a.m. to 12 noon and 1:00 to 4 continues in Marsh Lounge, Billings for students who have not yet turned in the forms. Get with it gang!

12 noon, the Non-Academic Employees in Waterman's Memorial Lounge.

Political Sc

The Alumni Association and the Department of Political Science continue to extend their offer for UVM students to attend a four-day seminar to be held in Washington, D.C. March 23-26, during the Univers The co coordina Office, i held and the year area alu

New L/L Progr

The Living and Learning Center has announced the inauguration of a new residential Asian Studies Program.

The Program will be directed by Professor Allan Andrews who will live at the Center with his wife, Itsuko, and their two children. Building on the many fine Asia-related courses offered in various Univers attempt of facu will sh particip cultural of the will be A&I S Asia: Coord

Choral Union

"Music for Holy Week" will be sung March 20 and 21 by the UVM Choral Union, with its concert on campus and the [illegible] p.m. at St. Paul's. [illegible] include music by Bach (Motet No. Two with instrumental accompaniment), Byrd (Mass for Five Voices), Palestrina (Stabet Mater for Double Choir), Josquin and Willan. Ticket reserv limito Depot Paul but adva the C Jame ambu cond Willi

The March 20 concert will be held in Royall Tyler Theatre, beginning at 8 p.m.

Cunningham Ne

As we come closer to the end of the Lenten Season, we might consider the words of Sr. Jane Marie Richardson:

"Let us Fast

—From too many words and so recapture their freshness;

—From too much food and drink and so relearn its value;

—From needless shopping and so revalidate what is free;

—From judgments and so feel anew the joy of forgiveness."

WEEKDAY LITURGY: Monday-Friday: 7:30 a.m. and 4:15 p.m.; Also, each Tuesday 10 p.m.

WEEKEND LITURGY: Saturday: 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.; Sunday: 9:00 and 11:30 a.m. and 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.

SCRIPTURE: Monday evenings at 7:00 p.m., on the prophets.

A MORE MEANINGFUL LIFE SERIES: Exploration of the Catholic faith. Especially for non-Catholics interested in the Catholic traditions and for Catholics interested in deepening their religious understanding. Each Monday at 8:30 p.m.

FAITH COMMUNITY: Every other Wednesday evening at the Newman Center. An experience of prayer and dialogue for young people who are of, or beyond, graduate

10%

. . . Calendar

(continued from page two)

4 p.m., "Tertulia," an informal gathering of students, professors and staff interested in speaking Spanish, meets in the Hispanic Apartments, Bldg. D, 3rd floor, Living/Learning.

4:10 p.m., Prof. Philip Kitcher of UVM's Philosophy Dept. lectures on "Scientific Explanation" in Cook A-402. Coffee is served in A429 at 3:45 p.m.

7 p.m., A mandatory intern meeting for all juniors in the College of Education and Social Services and Arts and Sciences will be held in 413 Waterman. All who intend to student teach next year should attend. See story this issue.

8 p.m., The Women of UVM Book Discussion Group meets at the home of Jane Hundal in Milton to discuss "Giants of the Earth" by Rolvaag.

8 p.m., The Fleming Museum sponsors an evening of films in conjunction with the present exhibit "Art and the Sacred." The Arena Theatre in the Museum Basement is the site for the following free film showings: "Kaleidoscope Oritsu," "Mirror of Gesture," "How a Hindu Worships at his Home Shrine" and "The Sword and the Flute."

THURSDAY, MARCH 20

9 a.m. to 12 noon and 1:00 to 4 p.m., Registration continues in Marsh Lounge; Billings for all undergraduate students who have not yet turned in their pre-registration forms. Get with it gang!

12 noon, the Non-Academic Employees' Committee meets in Waterman's Memorial Lounge.

Commencement Information:
Caps And Gowns For Sale, Not Rent

ATTENTION:

Seniors who will be attending commencement ceremonies: The University Store will be offering for sale, souvenir caps, gowns and tassles INSTEAD OF THE RENTAL PROGRAM AS IN THE PAST. This will alleviate your having to line up and return the rental regalia after each ceremony. To assist us, please return the slip below to any register operator at your earliest convenience.

While you are here returning your slip, we now have samples of the announcements and you can make your arrangements for this at the same time. As usual, your cooperation will be greatly appreciated and help prevent any unpleasant situations that might occur the day before graduation. By completing and returning the information below, we will be able to have the wide variety of sizes necessary for such a program.

Recepients of degrees will line up 30 minutes before commencement. If commencement is:

In Ira Allen Chapel – line up at Votey Hall.

In Patrick Gym– line up in Gutterson Field House.

NAME

CAP SIZE CHEST

HEIGHT WEIGHT

. . Patterson

(continued from page one)

in UVM's financial problem.

Dr. Patterson had one optimistic note. A huge increase from the federal government will provide $750,000 for work study. Therefore, more jobs for students with possible higher wages will be available for next year.

Meeting on Lettuce/Grape Boycott

There will be a meeting on Friday, March 14 at 8 p.m. at the Cunningham-Newman Center on UVM campus for all those interested in spreading the lettuce-grape-Gallo boycott in the Burlington area.

Present at the meeting will be Nick Jones, who has been working with Cesar Chavez for the last nine years and presently is director of the New England Boycott. Also present will be Virginia Jones, a veteran UFW member who knows from first hand experience the conditions in America's agricultural fields. There will also be a film presentation on the UFW struggle, entitled "Why We Boycott." Help us win justice in the fields. We hope to see you at the meeting.

For more information, call the United Farm Workers Support Committee, 864-4661.

Political Science Seminar in Washington

The Alumni Association and the Department of Political Science continue to extend their offer for UVM students to attend a four-day seminar to be held in Washington, D.C. March 23-26, during the University's Spring recess.

The seminar, which is being coordinated by the Alumni Office, is the third such to be held and is planned for during the year by the Washington area alumni club, which will act as hosts for the visiting students. This year's seminar topic is "Congressional Reform," and features lecturers from the Democratic Study Group, the Republican Wednesday Group, and the White House Office on Legislation. In addition, students will be hosted at a wine and cheese reception in the offices of U.S. Senator Patrick Leahy. Ample time will be provided students for individual sightseeing and shopping.

Transportation is being arranged through AMTRAK, and students may provide their own transportation if they wish. Two meals a day and housing will be provided students by University alumni who live in the D.C. area, making this seminar an inflation-fighting way of spending part of their vacation in exciting and historic surroundings.

Interested students should contact either the Political Science office on the second floor of the Old Mill, or the Alumni Office, 109 So. Prospect St. (next to Waterman) 656-2010, immediately to leave their names and addresses where they may be contacted.

New L/L Program in Asian Studies

The Living and Learning Center has announced the inauguration of a new residential Asian Studies Program.

The Program will be directed by Professor Allan Andrews who will live at the Center with his wife, Itsuko, and their two children. Building on the many fine Asia-related courses offered in various departments of the University, the program will attempt to form a community of faculty and students who will share their studies and participate in organizing Asian cultural events. A focal point of the Asian Studies Program will be a new course on Asia, A&I S 195 "Introduction to Asia: Tradition and Change." Coordinated by Professor Andrews, the course will be jointly designed and taught by a number of faculty and students who have differing outlooks and approaches to Asia. It will investigate traditional society and the process of modernization in China, Japan, the Middle East and India. The program will study different aspects of Asian Culture. It will work closely with the Asian Cultural Exchange student group and its program of films, speakers, dinners, etc. For further information on the program contact Professor Andrews at the Religion Department, 656-3081. Students interested in joining the program are urged to apply during the pre-registration period.

Choral Union Concert

"Music for Holy Week" will be sung March 20 and 21 by the UVM Choral Union, with one concert on campus and the other at St. Paul's.

The program will include music by Bach (Motet No. Two with instrumental accompaniment), Byrd (Mass for Five Voices), Palestrina (Stabet Mater for Double Choir), Josquin and Willan.

The March 20 concert will be held in Royall Tyler Theatre, beginning at 8 p.m. Tickets are free but must be reserved in advance because of limited space. Call the Music Department [illegible] 3040.

On the 21st, the Choral Union will sing at 8 p.m. in St. Paul's. Tickets again are free, but must be obtained in advance and are available from the Cathedral.

In the absence of Prof. James Chapman, who is on sabbatical this semester, the concert will be conducted by William Metcalfe.

St. Anselm's Chapel

It is with joy and pleasure that we announce a Baptism this Sunday. Each Baptism is a time for us to renew and remember our Baptismal vows as well as to promise to support each new member in their new life in Christ's Body. In Baptism we say, "Yes," to God's power and love given to us in Christ Jesus. And we say "No," to the powers of evil and death.

We do not renounce evil and death by our own authority. Instead, we become through Baptism partakers and participants in Christ's victory over death. Parts of us will die and pass away, but what is loving and healthy, our individuality free from greed and self-centeredness will be nurtured and will live forever.

"For reasons beyond our understanding God in His love has willed the creation of a person. This person is made for God eternally, and the first part of his eternal life is to be passed in the probationary school of finite existence, in which he is to begin to know, love and serve God/His whole life, so considered, is to be in fact a "religious education" that must last from birth to death, continued in ways beyond our knowledge when this life ends... all human life is educative in God's purpose.

Men here are pilgrims, set to learn on their journey that which they may more fully worship and adore at journey's end." (Reginald Lamb – The Education of Souls) Rejoice, again I say, Rejoice!

SERVICES: Sunday, 9:00 a.m., Holy Eucharist; Tuesday, 10:00 p.m., Holy Eucharist; Monday–Friday, 7:15 a.m., Morning Prayer; Sunday–Friday, 5:00 p.m., Evening Prayer.

PROGRAMS: Sunday, 6:00 p.m., Choir, all welcome; Monday, 7:15 p.m., Inquirers' Class, Topic this week, "A Rule of Life."; Friday Night, 8:00–10:00 p.m., Wine and cheese party for a perspective interne, Dave Thompson, for next year at St. Anselm's.

Cunningham Newman Center

As we come closer to the end of the Lenten Season, we might consider the words of Sr. Jane Marie Richardson:

"Let us Fast:

–From too many words and so recapture their freshness;

–From too much food and drink and so retearn its value;

–From needless shopping and so revalidate what is free;

–From judgments and so feel anew the joy of forgiveness."

WEEKDAY LITURGY: Monday-Friday: 7:30 a.m. and 4:15 p.m.; Also, each Tuesday: 10 p.m.

WEEKEND LITURGY: Saturday: 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.; Sunday: 9:00 and 11:30 a.m. and 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.

SCRIPTURE: Monday evenings at 7:00 p.m., on the prophets.

A MORE MEANINGFUL LIFE SERIES: Exploration of the Catholic faith. Especially for non-Catholics interested in the Catholic traditions and for Catholics interested in deepening their religious understanding. Each Monday at 8:30 p.m.

FAITH COMMUNITY: Every other Wednesday evening at the Newman Center. An experience of prayer and dialogue for young people who are of, or beyond, graduate school age. Interested? Please contact Sr. Jeannine or Fr. Holland at the Center.

VARIETY SHOW: April 19th in Southwick Auditorium. If you would like to be in this Variety Show which is being sponsored by the Newman Center, please let Fr. Holland know. Stop by the Center or call 862-8403.

LITURGICAL DANCE: The weekend of March 15 and 16 there will be a Liturgical Dance at the Center. Again this year Mrs. O'Brien and students from her school of Dance will be responsible for this.

Hillel

Sunday, March 16 there will be a Fireside Brunch. The topic of discussion following the brunch will be: Israelis Responces to the Yom Kippur War. The discussion will be led by Avi Gilam, an Israeli Graduate student.

Passover: Arrangements about Passover meal will be made with SAGA Food. Watch for further announcements in the Cynic Hillel column. Direct further questions to Prof. H. Kahn, 656-3488, 656-3430, 864-5417 (evenings).

VALUABLE COUPON

SPECIAL TO STUDENTS AND FACULTY MEMBERS (prescriptions excluded)

10% DISCOUNT

ON YOUR PURCHASES AT

CAMPUS PHARMACY

ACROSS FROM The Medical Center

The Exchange

Extended Library Hours Wanted

by Andrea Lathonen '76
Alice D. Outwater Counseling & Testing Center

At the risk of being repetitive may I say how pleased we are with your responses and positive suggestions (along with complaints) – you are coming across as involved human beings! There appears to be a new seriousness on campus, a concern about academics; the quality of teaching, which actually is what a University is all about. However, we have recently been through some periods when this was rather obscure! There has been a request for the extension of Library hours – "could it open Sunday at 8:00 or 9:00 a.m. for us "hard cores" to get necessary work done and have access to the Reserve desk, etc?" I know this young man, a rather debonair type, who also values academia. He mentions he was in the all–night study and it was PACKED with students. Being an early-to-bed type myself I hold secret admiration for those diligently enriching their minds through the night. He has put a petition in Billings to be signed if you want the library hours extended. Anyone having difficulty with Study Habits, feel free to come any Tuesday noon for help at Counseling and Testing. We like to think we've made life easier for some of you along this line.

Apparently on Valentine's Day an unsuspecting freshman went to dinner at Simpson anticipating the usual fare and found the whole dining room strewn with hearts and delectable food. The chefs had outdone themselves– roast beef, salads, decorated cakes, truly a locullan feast. She wanted to thank someone for this most pleasant surprise and could find nary a Saga person the next day. Had they all hopped off with the White Rabbit in Alice–In–Wonderland? Someone else likes the Coffee houses in Simpson; and others miss the music in the Roundhouse Friday night at Billings.

We were so intrigued with the "big rusty spike that sticks up at the end of the bench in front of the Royall Tyler theater we raced over to investigate and indeed it was there. Lucky we had been warned as we might have tripped over it too (it should be removed by this writing.) Also those missing doorknobs on Marsh Hall; they never were meant to be, as they are on the Emergency Exits which only have access from the inside.

Sorry, that IS a long walk around the building, but Spring is coming.

On a more solemn note we report with great sadness the death of Lisa Rimmer '78 February 21 from a car accident as she returned to UVM. To her brother Chris we send our deepest sympathy.

Darkhaired Lisa, we miss you, your effervescence, your sharing, your searching, and your desire to contribute something special in life. You have done this to mine. Your life was snuffed out too soon, and our friendship too brief, but I will always carry a part of you in my heart.

Reception Centers In Montreal

The Centre de Visosonie Inc. has been in existence since October 1971. Visosonie is a non-profit organization whose social goal is the development of youth.

We have created non-conformist reception centers in downtown Montreal, where young people can take part in socio-cultural activities.

During the Summer from May 1 to September 15, 1975, we will make available to young travellers and students receptioncenters having a capacity of 150 beds, situated in the university area of Montreal, where an atmosphere of security exists.

Dormitory for 6 to 8 people – $3 a night; single room – $8 at night, shower included; double room – $10 a night.

Cafeteria: Breakfast– $.75; dinner – $1.50; coffee, tea – $.20;

Bicycle rentings – $3 a day; free transportation service for members; a baggage keeping service.

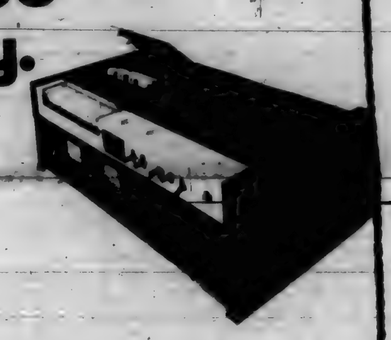
Our services are assured for 24 hours.

In order to obtain more information, please call or write us. Telephone number 514 845-5879. Students can also be sent directly to our address at 2051 Bleury (Metro: Place des Arts, Maisonneuve exit)

Two French Plays This Sunday

The Amicale Francaise of UVM and the department of Romance Languages present two French plays in their original language. Bernard Uzan will direct La Lecon by Eugene Ionesco and La Derniere Bande by Samuel Beckett. The performance will take place at 8:30 p.m. on Sunday, March 16, 1975 at the Royall Tyler Theatre. The cast will be composed of Bernard Uzan, Elaine Uzan and Barbara Smith. The admission is $1, and tickets can be bought at the door before the performance, or at the department of Romance Languages (Waterman 519). For more information and reservations, call 656-3196.

The Teac 450 led the way. Still does.



We reserve the right to limit quantities.

STORES COAST TO COAST

Cassette decks first became respectable in sophisticated systems because of the 450. It set the standard. Now you can find 450 features on other machines—LED peak indicators and integral Dolby* noise reduction, including an FM/Copy control for recording/decoding any external Dolby source.

Now you can even pay more. But take a close look at what you'll be getting—some extra bells and whistles, maybe, but not better overall performance.

You'll be hard-pressed, for example, to find other machines with less than 0.07% WRMS wow and flutter. And if you do, they won't be guaranteed for two full years.

In short, the 450 can't be equalled, price for performance. It remains a standard of excellence. That's why we'd be happy and proud to demonstrate it for you.

TEAC. The leader. Always has been.

$449.50

*Dolby is a trademark of Dolby Laboratories, Inc.

FREE $100.00 worth of C90 Music Tape with purchase of TEAC - 450

Lafayette RADIO ELECTRONICS

Listen to us, you can't go wrong.

$200 $300 $400

Simplicity

In a solitaire is a quality that has always been treasured. We have a fine selection of traditionally styled solitaires from which to choose. We cordially invite your inspection!

Illustrations slightly enlarged

PRICES START UNDER $100.00

You are invited to open a Charge Account at Preston's.

A family of jewelers in Vermont since 1944

F.J. PRESTON & SON INC.

17 Upper Church Street

cunham

Headquarters for CONTINENTAL TYROLEANS

MAZZ

184 North St.

VERMONT CYNIC

Founded In 1883

Editor-in-Chief ..... Randy Jensen '77
Assistant Editor ..... Wyatt Lash '77
Managing Editor ..... Mark S. Valle '76
News Editor ..... Emily Stimmel '77
Assistant News Editor ..... Mark Sawyer '77
Feature Editor ..... Stephen M. Trainer '76
Arts Editor ..... Robert DeMilo '77
Sports Editor ..... Norm Robinson '77
Copy Editor ..... Sari Bell '77
Advertising Manager ..... Debbie Powell '76

Editorial

Hail MacAusland

In recent action, the Vermont Senate has voted down S.93, the underpass bill. In essence, the defeat of the bill will stop construction on the underpass. If the Vermont House concurs, the underpass issue will be dead.

Much of the credit for the defeat of S.93 by the Senators must go to Peter MacAusland, SA President. Since taking office last April, MacAusland has worked hard and diligently on opposing the administration, the Burlington Planning Commission and the Vermont Legislature's approval of the underpass. Feeling an overwhelming student opinion against the underpass behind him, MacAusland prepared a report expressing student views and arguments to the representatives. It was this report that probably had the most influence in swaying the Senators to the student's side.

MacAusland deserves recognition for his efforts. He has proven that working through the system can produce results and that students can challenge the system. His accomplishment will hopefully eliminate an unwanted expense for Vermont taxpayers, and undesired "benefit" for students and an unnecessary construction for the university.

R.J.

Liquor Drenches The Ivy Walls

by John Ghrist

(CPS) -- With a downturn in the use of drugs like LSD, amphetamines and even marijuana, many young people across the nation have returned to another drug that was number one all along: alcohol.

And what's more, many of them are getting farther into the liquid drug than they ever did with other drugs. The result is a serious and growing problem of young alcoholics.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) released a report last summer showing that one out of every 20 college students is a problem drinker. Of all the students surveyed, the 18 to 21-year-old age bracket had the highest percentage of problem drinkers, followed by the 21 to 24-year-old group.

"There is an alarming switch (among students) from drugs to alcohol -- the parents' choice of drugs," said Thomas Berquist of the National Clearinghouse for Alcoholic Information. "College students think they're indestructible," he added.

The new popularity of alcohol can be traced to a number of factors. Primarily, young people have found that drugs like marijuana and LSD carry legal dangers, are disapproved of by most of their families and are often harder to get than alcohol. By switching to beer, wine or spirits one can find just as good a high that's easy to get and carries fewer risks.

There have been other reasons, too. Increasing pressures and a deterioration in the quality of life have driven many to seek something that relaxes them and makes them feel good. Alcohol as a drug has also come back into vogue because it has a different effect than some other drugs. As one California fraternity man put it, "booze gets you rowdier than pot."

ETEMMING THE TIDE

Whatever the reasons, alcohol use has continued to grow. At a number of colleges, administrators have become aware of the need to help deal with the problem.

At Indiana University, a 1973 survey of students found that almost 90% admitted to using alcohol as a recreational drug, and last fall administrators in charge of dormitories noticed "what seemed to be an overwhelming increase in alcohol use. It just seemed to be the mode of behavior to get yourself wrecked on booze."

Last month, the university launched a task force on alcohol education to develop an educational package about the drug for use on campus. One of the first in the country, the group has found that most alcohol educational material is aimed at older drinkers.

In addition, IU boasts the first college campus chapter of Alcoholics Anonymous. Since its organization last fall, AA has set up weekly meetings and a 24-hour hotline. The group presently has only six to eight members who attend regularly, but the hotline has received many inquiries from people worried about the amount of alcohol they are consuming.

Finally, the university has stopped requiring that its resident assistants report for disciplinary action any student drinking in the dormitories.

Rather than turning in friends who were engaged in a very common activity, many RAs took no action at all. Now, disciplinary action takes a back seat to counselling and RAs are empowered to take certain personal actions if they feel someone is over-using alcohol.

At UCLA, a program has been established called Student Health Advocates. The student advocates are trained to deal with minor health problems. They do counselling, dispense aspirin and cough medicine, and encourage those with alcohol problems to seek help from the Student Health Service, which has been working with Dr. Karl Ullis, an expert in adolescent alcoholism.

"Traditional behavior like the return to fraternity and sorority life is the mode for everyone across the country and ...alcohol use is obviously very traditional," he noted.

At San Jose City College in California, community worker Angela Walsh persuaded college officials to sponsor a seminar on alcoholism for half a credit. She pointed out that a big problem for alcoholics is social attitudes. Often those around the alcoholic ignore the problem or pretend that he is not responsible for his own actions. At colleges, there may actually be social pressure encouraging alcohol abuse.

At most schools there are simply no facilities to help a young alcoholic. Rules against alcohol use on campus make school employees unapproachable for fear of disciplinary action and infirmaries and health centers are often ill-equipped to handle more than the simplest health problems. Administrators have barely begun to wake up to the problem.

EVOLUTION OF A DRUNK

According to treatment experts, there are two stages in the development of alcoholism. The first is psychological: a preoccupation with liquor, a personality change, gulping or doubling drinks and an increase in tolerance. The second, physical stage occurs when the disease has progressed over a period of time. Symptoms can include blackouts, ulcers and liver or kidney damage.

For those who suspect they may be slipping into an alcohol problem, the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism has a ten question test:

1) Do you think and talk about drinking often? 2) Do you drink more than you used to? 3) Do you sometimes gulp drinks? 4) Do you often take a drink to help you to relax? 5) Do you drink when you are alone? 6) Do you sometimes forget what happened while you were drinking? 7) Do you keep a bottle hidden somewhere for quick pick-me-ups? 8) Do you need a drink to have fun? 9) Do you ever start drinking without really thinking about it? 10) Do you drink in the morning to relieve a hangover?

A "yes" answer to four or more questions "may indicate you have a drinking problem," the Institute has advised.

For those with a drinking problem, Alcoholics Anonymous is still the best road to travel in many parts of the country, particularly in non-urban areas. AA can be contacted without obligation for information on symptoms and treatment of alcoholism.

Cheating Alive And Well And Living In Colleges

(CPS) -- Cheated on an exam lately? There is a growing concern among college administrators that academic dishonesty is running rampant. They may be right. According to the Washington Post, "Cheating appears to be rising nationally, particularly in large public universities."

And although a 1964 survey found that schools which employ the honor system have the least amount of cheating, eleven years later colleges which do employ the honor code have found that upwards of 1/3 of each class cheat. An outbreak of cheating has attacked a number of campuses.

A special committee to study the honor code has been set up to deal with increased cheating at UC - Davis.

The law center at Georgetown University in Washington, DC has gone so far as to revoke a law degree because of a cheating incident there and an F was given to another law student after a "cut and paste job of plagiarism on a seminar paper."

The University of Florida's honor court is presently dealing with an organized cheating ring involving 200 students and every department in the College of Business Administration.

Students have used all sorts of intricate methods to cheat. For instance, the University of Florida scandal unearthed students rummaging through garbage cans before the test date in hopes of finding surplus tests.

Elsewhere the gamut has run from notes scribbled inside gum wrappers to hiring ringers to "ghost write" tests. Other weird methods have included a pre-arranged coughing or sneezing code and helpful hints written on a student's blue jeans.

More popular ideas have ranged from cheat sheets hidden under a watchband, between one's legs or inside a coffee cup to strategically placed books that can be handily flipped through with errant feet.

The how-to's and prevention of cheating have been finely scrutinized by many school officials. But in the process, according to some observers, they have lost sight of a more important question: why is there cheating.

"As long as grades maintain the base for measuring academic achievement and as long as these grades depend on exam scores, the motivation for cheating will remain high," said a faculty member at Eastern Mennonite College.

"Grading encourages cheating by wanting a certain grade out of desperation," agreed Bernard Nisenholtz, a professor at Indiana University at South Bend. "Grades are determined by the individual teacher. The grading policies of professors vary widely because of individual biases in teaching, learning and evaluating methods. The system of grading is so subjective that it doesn't mean anything." Nisenholtz went on to say.

"Like it or not, grades do matter," commented Edward M. White, a professor at Cal State-San Bernardino. "Remember

(continued on page eleven)

Letters To The Editor

20 Unforgivable Hours Too Late

To the Editor:
February 12, 1975
Dear Sirs (and/or Ms.)

Please pardon this humble and unworthy demand on your excellencies' undoubtedly valuable and intellectually devoted time.

This descent into a beaurocratatic malestrom was launched by my visit to Assistant Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences office, Barbara O'Reilly, where I was refused permission to drop Psychology I, Introductory Level. This was minutes after I had contacted the Registrar's office where I was informed that if I persuaded the Dean of my college to sign my add-drop form I would still be able to drop the course sans penalty. I had made the request for dropping this course to Ms. O'Reilly approximately 20 unforgivable hours past the generally recognized beaurocrotatic deadline. After being asked by the honorable Ms. to plead my case, I was then chastized for my gross lack of foresight, and obvious mental and moral sloth. I was next directed to emote this epistle to your illustrious panel of experts in this field, begging leniency and hoping for ultimate salvation.

This is not my first experience with the office of Ms. O'Reilly. It is my firm opinion that with a great savings to the niggardly students and their parents who are forced to pay for their children's education in trivia, the honorable Ms. O'Reilly, for Ms. might be replaced by a small sign on her office door or desk top which merely states "permission denied" or, as also was my case, "the buck starts here."

I am of senior standing, a history major, and am carrying a six course work load this semester. Three of these courses are of 200 level and vital to my graduation. One of them involves computers with which I have had no prior experience. Also I am taking an art history course and an introductory geography course. Somehow in a moment of weakness I signed up for the notorious Psych I. I have found that I don't have time for this course which I assumed would be a gut and is not. Its obcession with the mastery of trivia requires more time than I have to devote. It's not vital to my major. As a result of this course, my already addled, overloaded mental faculties are on the verge of imminent collapse if I am forced to retain it. The reason I attempted to drop this late is that I was absorbed in my other courses and hadn't the time to discover my ensnarlment until 20 unforgivable hours after the deadline was reached. I am penitent; I am willing to crawl on my knees up the stairs of Waterman building to Barbara O'Reilly's office in supplication if your excellencies deem it necessary; I realize the error of my ways. If you need a legal precedent, the fate of the Salem Witches who pleaded guilty and were released might serve as an example. I realize that I have blasphemed; I abhor the error of my ways. In final argument let me propose that "to err is human, to forgive, divine."

God Bless President Andrews and this scholarly committee!

Your Obedient Servant
Francis Reed Murphy III
(A Scholastic Peasant)
101 Christie Hall, UVM

In Response

Dear Mr. Murphy:

The Committee on Academic Standing of the College of Arts and Sciences has reviewed your petition and has tabled its decision until such time as we receive a properly written petition.

While we understand that you do not like rules, they are made for a specific purpose.

Further, we feel that your letter was inacceptable to us.

Sincerely yours,
Jeannette R. Folts, Ph.D.
Assistant Dean

Locker Contents

To the Editor:

Just a note to Martha Rabb and anyone else whose things were cleaned out of their locker and disposed of. Congratulations for getting into college without learning how to read! A sign was put up on the locker room bulletin board in October stating that lockers were to be cleaned up by Dec. 18 (the last day of exams). On December 17, I started calling all the people who had not cleaned out their lockers and whose numbers were listed in the student directory. I continued to try to get in touch with these people for a week (this is above and beyond the duties of my job and out of the kindness of my heart). If a person's number was not listed or if the person had gone home for vacation there was nothing I could do about it.

At the beginning of this semester there were two long lockers full of unclaimed things. I feel that if the owners of these things did not care enough about them to come over to the gym and get them within a month after the beginning of the semester, then they can't have been that valuable.

A note to anyone else who either can't see or can't read and has a locker this semester, they are to be cleaned out by May 10, and anything left after that date will be disposed of.

Sincerely,
Laurie Barnett
Day Matron, Women's Locker Room, Patrick Gym

The Continuing Battle Against E.&J. Gallo Winery

To the Editor:

To: Joshua C. Simons, Director, Education Communication, E & J Gallo Winery

Mr. Simon: In your letter of March 7, you characterize Mr. Clemens, and UFW supporters in general, as "more concerned with presenting trumped-up propaganda," than the "fact" of Teamster representation of your workers. Sir, your company's slick public relations blitz is miscalculated; students on this campus, as citizens elsewhere in the country, are not so naive and credulous that they will accept your humanitarianism and righteous indignation, for which I substitute a grudging paternalism and acknowledgement of the Boycott's increasing support among consumers, as respectable, or even believable.

You claim to have negotiated in good faith with the UFW from April 15 to June 20, 1973; but in your all too brief analysis, you inadvertantly leave out and "cloud" several facts. On March 22nd, the date that negotiations began, and I refer you to Chris Hartmire's letter to Ernesto Gallo dated 8/2/74, David Bursiaga, UFW negotiator, asked for an extension of the contract, set to expire on April 18, as is common procedure in labor-management negotiations. Grape contracts in the Coachella Valley were being stolen by Teamster "sweet-heart" contracts with virtually all Growers, signed on April 15th, and the UFW was hard-pressed, when they asked for a day-to-day extension. If your company was serious in its "good intentions," why did they not extend the contract past the 18th? Was that an act of good faith?

Furthermore, as you neglected to mention, UFW organizers were kept out of the fields from April 19 to July 3, when Robert Gallo, refusing to hold secret-ballot elections, "agreed" to a card-check election in its place. Sister Joyce Higgins tried to present you with signed UFW authorization cards on July 6, but I shall get to that. On April 24, Teamster organizers appeared in the fields, in violation of their 1967 jurisdictional pact with the United Farm Workers, two months before they suddenly materialize in your letter on the 25th of June, where you say they, "advised Gallo they could supply proof that they represented the majority of the Gallo farm workers." On May 21st, the Fresno Bee carried the headline, "Chavez Asks for Elections by Gallo." Again, you ignore the evidence of UFW good faith with your company. A week earlier, on May 14, Cesar Chavez asked Gallo for secret ballot elections, to determine union representation. Perhaps you were not informed of this. Perhaps not.

With regard to Teamster authorization cards and corresponding support of these cards by the Gallo employees, the date June 20 should not be assumed unimportant and incidental to your audience. For it was on that day that Gallo announced that unless the UFW did away with the hiring-hall system, and "moderate" their position on child labor, pesticide control, and union seniority, Gallo would break off negotiations. This was nothing more than an ultimatum, a ploy enabling you to move, and move swiftly, to the union of your choice: the Teamsters.

You claim, "the majority of the 199 Gallo workers in 1973 chose to join the Teamsters union after having belonged to the UFW for six years." For proof, the Teamsters present their 139 authorization cards to you, I assume on June 25, which you have verified by July 6, and from which you subsequently sign contracts on July 9. Who has seen those names, Mister Simons? Only your company! The 1967 UFW authorization cards, as you admit, were verified by the State Mediation and Conciliation Service -- why does this procedure not apply to the Teamsters? Why are you afraid of a third party verification? I submit sir, with all due respect, that James Smith, Teamster area supervisor, let the "cat out of the bag," when he was quoted in the Modesto Bee as saying: "The Teamsters are not going to go to any Mickey Mouse elections of any nature." Perhaps that explains why you pass over Sister Joyce Higgins so quickly. The card-check elections you agreed to hold on July 3rd were empty rhetoric; the UFW had presented Sr. Higgins with 173 out of 222 signed authorization cards on the 6th of July, but you chose to downplay this fact. I ask again sir -- is this good faith? I think not.

On July 18, Gallo began eviction proceedings against 70 striking workers and 400 children living in your labor camps -- I remind you sir, that the majority of your field workers were on strike on June 27. Yet you make the bold-face statement that even those workers, "requested Teamster representation." I fear this is beyond the imagination of the most naive of the naive. They would support the intrusion of the very union they are on strike against! And I feel obliged to ask you sir, that if, "housing is provided only for Gallo farm workers and their families," where did the workers you used as strikebreakers, live? The California sun makes a poor roof, Mr. Simons!

Your company has maintained that a jurisdictional dispute exists between the United Farm Workers and the Teamsters, to which you are an innocent third party. However, the California Supreme Court, in their decision Chavez vs. Englund (12/29/72), ruled this is not the case "when an employer substitutes his choice of a union for the choice of the workers." I submit, Mr. Simons, that Gallo is guilty of precisely this.

As for the UFW's "unfair and discriminatory labor practices," if you mean the hiring hall, it is not discriminatory, but fundamentally democratic, being the union's control (re: the membership) of its work force; if you mean union seniority as opposed to ranch seniority, you are quite correct, but two years too late. Since 1972, the latter has superceded the former.

I will not enumerate the many differences a close inspection of the UFW-Almaden and Gallo-Teamsters contracts will show, as copies are available to any interested party, whether it be yourself, or a student at the University of Vermont, and if you should ever drop in on campus, I would be more than happy to give you one. Let me close with a suggestion, Mr. Simons. Instead of the futile PR campaign your company is waging at considerable expense, listen to your own workers, and the American people who are not long silent to injustice -- sit down and negotiate with the United Farm Workers!

Sincerely,
Bob Colodny
Student at UVM

The Cynic welcomes and encourages articles, columns, and letters from all interested students, faculty, and members of the community. All material must be submitted no later than Monday noon before the Thursday of publication. Material must be signed, names will be withheld upon request. If you are interested in writing or perhaps curious about how things are done, stop in -- we are downstairs at Billings Center -- or call 658-4911.

VERMONT CYNIC

NEWS: Margo Howland, Andy Morse, Mary Gilbertson.
FEATURE: Paul Ajamian, Paul Cain, Carol Dufault, Mike Henry, Pam Hogarth, Andy Hunt, Bud Perkins.
ARTS: Dave Mandel, Larry Selden, Mark Secalnick, Jay Williams.
COLUMNISTS: Peter Cobb, Elliot Freeman, Ken Markovitz, Sue Perkins, Stephen Rice, Larry Selden, Scott Skinner, Peter Campbell.
SPORTS: Randy Briggs, Gary Brooks, Rick Katz, Don Rose, Richard Rothkov.
PRODUCTION: Rick Barney, Elly Clay, Sarah Clay, Beth Cohen, John Lande, Barb Tarabis.
ADVERTISING: Katherine Bowers, Stephen Lee Brown, Sherry Graney, Debbie Powell.
BUSINESS MANAGER: Nancy Slavik.

Opinions expressed in editorials, cartoons, or columns in the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the University administration, faculty, or staff, or the State of Vermont. Opinions expressed by the columnists do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the majority of the members of the CYNIC Editorial Board.

Published yearly during the college year by the students of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College. Editorial and Business offices in the Billings Center, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone: 658-4911. Deadline for notices is one week prior to date of publication.

Founded in 1883. Subscription rate $3.00 per year, single copy ten cents.

All Things Consi

by larry wrden

Imminent, abrasive, painful and unch death surrounding us, infiltrating our sorrow, with despair. I, for one, do not with death. Of course I do not know of firmly believe in rebirth or reincarnatio wondering, not when my time is going t rationalize the loss of a person close to m

Death is only physical, memories neve way I can rationalize it. The dead hav memories, real existences relieved of the still clutch what memories we cherish relive the moments, the thrill of contac close to. Yet memories denote the past.
future in death, there is no tomorrow
That's the point. The raw, abusive, torm real to us. This is the pain we must cope cry?

Are we mourning for the lost or realistically we are crying for the loss incurred. It is our loss, not the passing misfortune that inflicts its claws into o shedding tears for our own inability to at the graveside and ask why. Why spar departed who is spared. I used to think have to face the grief of bearing anot world.

I'm afraid I'm going cold at the pro realness, the gross obscenity of death.

Capital Watch:

Insurance Of T

by Peter Cobb, VPIR

S. 120 would compel health ins children requiring other than ordina care. At present many insurance c first-day coverage of newborn child of the more serious problems occur d after birth.

Statistics show that a high nu complications during birth and are hospital for long periods of time.
June 1973, 108 of the 883 newborn
Burlington had to stay in the hosp Sixteen of the infants stayed in the days. Undoubtedly families covered u first-day coverage of the infant m bankruptcy because of high medical

The main argument against su because they are an "unknown" the underwriting standards. Insurance cover anyone who might present pr a lot of money. An example is that will not cover a child born with a n malfunctioning heart until the prob

This argument that adequate sta is weak. Statistics concerning th associated with birth are available complications for the infant is not be an insurable risk. Although insurance companies doing busine newborn children, there are two n both Blue Cross and Mutual of Om

If both Blue Cross and Mutual newborn infants there is reason t standards can be established so t
the same. Anyone interested in th write to their county senator or Finance Committee whose cha
Westphal of Lamoille County
Committee include: Thomas Cro
R-Addison, Herbert Ogden R-W
R-Bennington, and Seeley Reyno

Who's On Top?

The University

THE DEAN
- Leaps tall buildings in a single bo
- Is more powerful than a locomot
- Is faster than a speeding bullet
- Walks on water
- Gives policy to God

THE DEPARTMENT HEAD
- Leaps short buildings in a single
- Is more powerful than a switch
- Is just as fast as a speeding bull
- Walks on water if sea is calm
- Talks to God

PROFESSORS
- Leaps short buildings with a run
- Is almost as powerful as a switc
- Is faster than a speeding BB
- Walks on water in an indoor sw
- Talks with God if special permi

ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR
- Barely clears a quonset hut
- Loses tug of war with locomot
- Can fire a speeding bullet
- Swims well
- Is occasionally addressed by C

ASSISTANT PROFESSOR
- Makes high marks on the walls
- Is run over by locomotives
- Can sometimes handle a gun
- Talks to animals

GRADUATE STUDENTS
- Runs into buildings
- Recognizes locomotives two
- Is not issued ammunition
- Can stay afloat with a life jac
- Talks to walls

UNDERGRADUATE STUDENTS
- Falls over doorstep when try
- Says look at the choo-choo
- Wets himself with a water p
- Plays in mud puddles
- Mumbles to himself

DEPARTMENT SECRETARIES
- Lifts buildings and walks un
- Kicks locomotives off the t
- Catches speeding bullets in
- Freezes water with a single
- She is God

rs
Editor

Late

Andrews and this scholarly committee!

Your Obedient Servant
Francis Reed Murphy III
(A Scholastic Peasant)
101 Christie Hall, UVM

esponse

you do not like rules, they are made for a specific purpose.

Further, we feel that your letter was inacceptable to us.

Sincerely yours,
Jeannette R. Folta, Ph.D.
Assistant Dean

er Contents

there was nothing I could do about it.

At the beginning of this semester there were two long lockers full of unclaimed things. I feel that if the owners of these things did not care enough about them to come over to the gym and get them within a month after the beginning of the semester, then they can't have been that valuable.

A note to anyone else who either can't see or can't read and has a locker this semester, they are to be cleaned out by May 10, and anything left after that date will be disposed of.

Sincerely,
Laurie Barnett
Day Matron, Women's Locker Room, Patrick Gym

Gallo Winery

fundamentally democratic, being the union's control (re: the membership) of its work force; if you mean union seniority as opposed to ranch seniority, you are quite correct, but two years too late. Since 1972, the latter has superceded the former.

I will not enumerate the many differences a close inspection of the UFW-Almaden and Gallo-Teamsters contracts will show, as copies are available to any interested party, whether it be yourself, of a student at the University of Vermont, and if you should ever drop in on campus, I would be more than happy to give you one. Let me close with a suggestion, Mr. Simons. Instead of the futile PR campaign your company is waging at considerable expense, listen to your own workers, and the American people who are not long silent to injustice – sit down and negotiate with the United Farm Workers!

Sincerely,
Bob Coloday
Student at UVM

...comes and encourages articles, columns, and interested students, faculty, and members of ... All material must be submitted no later than ...fore the Thursday of publication. Material ...names will be withheld upon request. If you ...writing or perhaps curious about how things ... – we are downstairs at Billings Center – or

MONT CYNIC

...Rowland, Andy ...Morton, ...Paul Ajamian, ...Dufault, Mike ...Hogarth, Andy ...Mandel, Larry ...Steinbock, Jay ...Peter Cobb, ...eman, Ken ...Sue Perkins, ...Larry Seldin, ...Peter Campbell.

SPORTS: Randy Briggs, Gary Brooks, Rick Katz, Don Ross, Richard Rotkow.
PRODUCTION: Rick Bussey, Lily Clay, Sarah Clay, Beth Cohen, John Lande, Barb Tarbox
ADVERTISING: Katherine Bowles, Stephen Lee Brown, Sherry Gramcey, Debbie Powell.
BUSINESS MANAGER: Nancy Shanik.

...ions expressed in editorials, cartoons, or ...in the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the ...of the University administration, faculty, or ...the State of Vermont. Opinions expressed by ...mists do not necessarily reflect the opinion ...majority of the members of the CYNIC ...Board.

...shed yearly during the college year by the ...of the University of Vermont and State ...ural College. Editorial and Business offices in ...ton Center, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone: ... Deadline for notices is one week prior to ...publication.

...ished in 1883. Subscription rate $5.00 per ...ademic year (two issues).

All Things Considered:
It's All Fulfilled In The End

by larry seiden

Imminent, abrasive, painful and unclear. Death. Constant death surrounding us, infiltrating our air with loss, with sorrow, with despair. I, for one, do not know how to cope with death. Of course I do not know of it first hand, nor do I firmly believe in rebirth or reincarnation. Yet I toss at night wondering, not when my time is going to come but how I can rationalize the loss of a person close to me.

Death is only physical, memories never die. That's the only way I can rationalize it. The dead leave behind very vivid memories, real existences relieved of the span of time. We can still clutch what memories we cherish in our hearts. We can relive the moments, the thrill of contact with those we were close to. Yet memories denote the past. Logically there is no future in death, there is no tomorrow to look forward to. That's the point. The raw, abusive, tormenting pain that is so real to us. This is the pain we must cope with. But why do we cry?

Are we mourning for the lost or the loss? Maybe more realistically we are crying for the loss that we ourselves have incurred. It is our loss, not the passing on of another. It is our misfortune that inflicts its claws into our tender skin. We are shedding tears for our own inability to claim the loss. We stand at the graveside and ask why. Why spare us. Or is it really the departed who is spared. I used to think I would rather die than have to face the grief of bearing another's absense from my world.

I'm afraid I'm going cold at the prospect of reconciling the realness, the gross obscenity of death. It is final, it is haunting and it rears its ugly face in our daily existence and like the impenetrable walls we are, we ignore it. The only ones who read the obituaries are those who are ready to see their names there. That to me is the saddest door I have to walk through everyday. The door of willing death—suicide and the ultimate release.

When the degeneration of old age sets upon us, we become acutely aware of the agony or in some cases, the relief that lurks in the uncertain moments that are always ticking away from us. An old age home bears the cloaked figure of death. The residents never speak of its hiding in the shadows, but their faces reflect the imminency if its presence. This is the sadness I see; we are rarely ready for death. That is tragedy. That is why I cry.

It is my finality I see in the mirror. Death is infesting my backyard and I don't have the strength to face it. I'm not a coward, I don't tremble before it. But I don't wish to inflict my last exit upon my brothers. I don't want them to bear a pain that I can't share with them. I want them to celebrate, to toast my name. Pronounce gaily that I walked with them, that my footsteps are just not echoes that have ceased. No sentimental blabberings. No soundless reverberations left to lie on marble tombstones and unswept corners of memories.

Life, I carry it around like loose change in my pockets. I take it for granted and spend it foolishly, lonely

••••••••••

Reflection: I will bring you thornless roses for your darkest nights.

Win One For The Gipper

by Knut Rostad

(continued from two weeks ago)

The large-scale expressions of negativism and over-packed dog race for the Democratic nomination might be flourishing from similar sources. Both phenomena stem from the widely held consensus that government is not working, and the more impotent the government appears the more outraged the electorate becomes and mediocre the men appear.

A major reason for the large number of Democrats contending for the nomination may be that the two most frequently mentioned credentials deemed absolutely necessary for the job are probably unrealistic. Consistent Democratic and editorial rhetoric complains of the absense of a candidate able to provide leadership and unite the Party's factions.

It may be easier to argue for the innocence of Richard Nixon than find a Democrat who can successfully tip-toe through the mine-field of sensitive and controversial issues and consolidate the Party. F.S. Kirkpatrick, in a January 16 letter to the NEW YORK TIMES describes a similar dilemma: "God himself could not devise an economic and energy-saving program which could satisfy all the interests in the United States..."

The Democratic Party contains a diversified assortment o. ideologies. This wide range is reflected in Congressional voting records which are measured and evaluated by numerous political interest groups. The groups then award 'grades' based on the degree of support a Congressman gives the programs and legislation the group lobbies for. By combining grades from basic liberal and traditionally conservative groups, a single figure can be ascertained that positions a politician on a standard scale. The scale involves a 600 point range with 300 being the most liberal score and -300 the most conservative. Using the ratings in the 1974 "Almanac of American Politics" Arizona senator Barry Goldwater scores -263 while Minnesota senator Walter Mondale accumulates 276 points. Fundamental differences within the Democratic Party can be seen when an average score for ten of the most liberal senators is 248 and ten other equally Democratic senators average a score of -145. The idea that one man could be endorsed by all factions without becoming a general blur or ignoring the issues is highly unlikely.

In a recent TIME essay that concerns the Presidency and public expectations, Thomas Griffith pin-points the dilemma of any man filling the leadership role today: "In the present atmosphere, no one seems good enough to be President...The romantic longing to hide behind bold leadership, as if this were a wartime emergency with a simple, patriotically accepted goal to be personified in one man, is too simplistic a remedy for that messy complexity of economic, moral and social problems we all struggle with." Griffith also explains general public dissatisfaction as the result of: "The gap between the public's expectations of Presidents and the reality has grown so great..." As intricate and complicated problems become less manageable, and the government flounders from crisis to crisis, voters turn to the highest authority. Increasingly, he disappoints and frustrates.

Because no man is evidentally able to unite and lead the Party, no man stands out and they all look as equally as bad. The upcoming Presidential election season, will widen the 'expectancy gap' as hopes are raised and rationale ignored. One might begin to think the electorate a glutton for punishment.

(to be continued)

Capital Watch:
Insurance Of The Newborn

by Peter Cobb, VPIRG Staff

S. 120 would compel health insurers to cover newborn children requiring other than ordinary hospital and medical care. At present many insurance companies do not offer first-day coverage of newborn children. Unfortunately most of the more serious problems occur during the first few weeks after birth.

Statistics show that a high number of children have complications during birth and are forced to stay in the hospital for long periods of time. From January 1973 until June 1973, 108 of the 883 newborns at the Medical Center in Burlington had to stay in the hospital seven or more days. Sixteen of the infants stayed in the hospital for over twenty days. Undoubtedly families covered under a plan that excludes first-day coverage of the infant may find themselves facing bankruptcy because of high medical bills.

The main argument against covering newborns is that because they are an "unknown" they do not meet established underwriting standards. Insurance officials are reluctant to cover anyone who might present problems that will cost them a lot of money. An example is that many insurance companies will not cover a child born with a non-functioning kidney or a malfunctioning heart until the problem is corrected.

This argument that adequate standards can not be drawn up is weak. Statistics concerning the percentage of problems associated with birth are available. The probability of serious complications for the infant is not so great that they can never be an insurable risk. Although most of the major health insurance companies doing business in Vermont do not cover newborn children, there are two notable exceptions. Presently both Blue Cross and Mutual of Omaha offer first-day coverage.

If both Blue Cross and Mutual of Omaha are able to cover newborn infants there is reason to believe that underwriting standards can be established so that other companies can do the same. Anyone interested in this important bill is urged to write to their county senator or to a member of the Senate Finance Committee whose chairperson is Senator Fred Westphal of Lamoille County. Other members of the Committee include: Thomas Crowley D-Chitt., Arthur Gibb R-Addison, Herbert Ogden R-Windsor, Robert Cummings R-Bennington, and Seeley Reynolds D-Addison.

Who's On Top?
The University Hierarchy

THE DEAN
- Leaps tall buildings in a single bound
- Is more powerful than a locomotive
- Is faster than a speeding bullet
- Walks on water
- Gives policy to God

THE DEPARTMENT HEAD
- Leaps short buildings in a single bound
- Is more powerful than a switch engine
- Is just as fast as a speeding bullet
- Walks on water if sea is calm
- Talks to God

PROFESSORS
- Leaps short buildings with a running start and favorable winds
- Is almost as powerful as a switch engine
- Is faster than a speeding BB
- Walks on water in an indoor swimming pool
- Talks with God if special permission is granted

ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR
- Barely clears a quonset hut
- Loses tug of war with locomotive
- Can fire a speeding bullet
- Swims well
- Is occasionally addressed by God

ASSISTANT PROFESSOR
- Makes high marks on the walls when trying to leap tall buildings
- Is run over by locomotives
- Can sometimes handle a gun without inflicting self-injury
- Talks to animals

GRADUATE STUDENTS
- Runs into buildings
- Recognizes locomotives two out of three times
- Is not issued ammunition
- Can stay afloat with a life jacket
- Talks to walls

UNDERGRADUATE STUDENTS
- Falls over doorstep when trying to enter building
- Says look at the choo-choo
- Wets himself with a water pistol
- Plays in mud puddles
- Mumbles to himself

DEPARTMENT SECRETARIES
- Lifts buildings and walks under them
- Kicks locomotives off the tracks
- Catches speeding bullets in her teeth and eats them
- Freezes water with a single glance
- She is God

Who's Afraid Of Collective Bargaining: A Table's Eye View

by Neil Klotz

(Editors: This is the second in a continuing series of articles on collective bargaining in higher education and its impact on students. The first in the series considered federal and state bargaining law as it relates to student input.)

(CPS) — While some students around the country have begun to realize that collective bargaining can directly affect their tuition, class size and say in campus governance, many more have found themselves faced with a more basic quandary: what actually goes on behind closed doors when faculty and administration hash out the future of their campus.

CPS talked to one of the nation's few masters of postsecondary dispute process for a table's eye view of bargaining and students' role in it.

According to Dr. Tom Emmet, special assistant to the president at Regis College, CO, misunderstandings about the actual bargaining process has led to a glut of bad research on the issue.

They're asking all the wrong questions," he said. "If you don't understand the process, how can you understand the outcome of the process?" Emmet has served as a consultant on bargaining technique to both faculties and universities since unionization hit college campuses nine years ago.

ROOM WITH A VIEW (OR VIEWS)

From his experience, Emmet said, most faculties and administrations don't even know the basics of bargaining.

"What usually happens in 99 percent of the cases is that the faculty comes in, lays out a list of demands and the administration goes up the wall," he said.

This is what should happen:

(1) Each side divides into a policy team and a table team. Before negotiations begin the policy and table teams resolve any internal differences and decide, in the case of the faculty, which issues the table team should bring into the negotiations. The policy team stays outside the actual talks and coordinates research used for consultation between bargaining sessions.

(2) At the first meeting, the chief spokespeople from each side agree on the ground rules for the discussions, including issuance of press releases and a time frame for the talks.

(3) In the next stage, called "weeding out the garbage," the two sides eliminate extraneous issues from consideration. Usually these are the "one person's problem" issues that can best be solved outside of the talks. After the garbage is weeded out, the table is closed to new issues.

(4) As a prelude to actual issue bargaining, each side clearly develops its position so the other side can understand it. Exact language is important so that each side can comprehend what the other's obligations to its constituency are.

(5) Bargaining then begins over the substantive issues, usually by working through the language developed by the faculty and trying to give-and-take an agreement. Things eventually come down to "the crunch" – marathon bargaining over two or three sticky issues.

If both sides have done their homework and have the absolute confidence of their policy groups, the system can work smoothly, said Emmet. But both sides must discipline themselves to stick to one point of view on the issues. Waffling and uncertainty tend to disrupt the process.

(6) If an agreement isn't reached and the talks break down, the bargaining is thrown into the impasse procedure. In the first stage a third party mediator tries to get the two sides to talk to each other again.

(7) If that doesn't work, a fact-finder or team of fact-finders is brought in to listen to both sides and give its best judgment on who is right.

(8) If there's no agreement on the fact-finder's report, then the process usually goes into either voluntary arbitration, which is similar to another fact-finder's inquiry, or more likely into binding arbitration, in which an outside party comes in and makes a decision which both sides have agreed will be binding.

A strike sometimes occurs before binding arbitration is used, but according to Emmet, strikers are not necessarily bad. They usually put pressure on both sides to go back to the table.

STUDENTS AT THE TABLE

Emmet believed that students have a real place in bargaining "from a true consumer interest. But if they think this is going to be a power play, they're dead wrong."

Faculty unions are openly paranoid about student input, he said, because they believe it would disrupt the sessions.

One of the biggest hang ups with students as separate bargainers at the table is that collective bargaining was never designed for a tripartite (three party) structure, according to Emmet.

"It's hairy as hell and requires an extremely sophisticated bargainer," he said. Having students bargain separately with one side which would then bargain with the other was more possible, but still not a good use of the process.

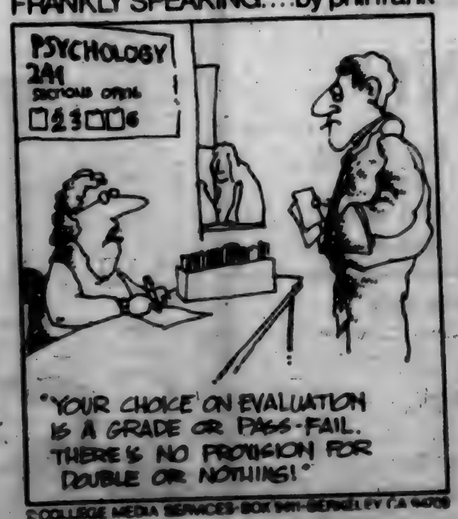
At the same time Emmet saw that relegating students to the status of silent observers doesn't really fulfill their need to have a voice. The same thing goes for having students sit on either or both bargaining teams: they're not representing their own interests and will only splinter the discipline each side must have to bargain efficiently.

The ideal solution, according to Emmet, would be to guarantee students observer status, but also grant them the right to meet in advance of negotiations with the policy teams of both sides to explain their needs. They should also be given the right to meet with the teams at various intervals in the bargaining. In return the students would have to keep in confidence what happened at the table and agree to the rest of the ground rules.

Under Emmet's plan, students would have no power to ratify the contract, only a guaranteed voice in the proceedings.

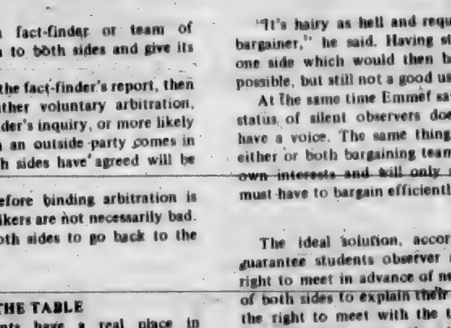
"I think they'll get their points across," said Emmet. "If not they can always raise a lot of hell, which I think both sides realize."

FRANKLY SPEAKING....by phil frank



© COLLEGE MEDIA SERVICES-BOX 941-BERKELEY CA 94709

10 MINUTES OF YOUR TIME COULD SAVE A FRIEND'S LIFE.



In the time it takes to drive your friend home, you could save his life.

If your friend's been drinking too much, he shouldn't be driving.

The automobile crash is the number one cause of death of people your age. And the ironic thing is that the drunk drivers responsible for killing young people are most often other young people.

Take ten minutes. Or twenty. Or an hour. Drive your friend home. That's all. If you can't do that, call a cab. Or let him sleep on your couch.

We're not asking you to be a doctor or a cop. Just a friend.

DRUNK DRIVER, DEPT. Y*
BOX 2345
ROCKVILLE, MARYLAND 20852
I want to save a friend's life.
Tell me what else I can do.
My name is _____
Address _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____

IF YOU LET A FRIEND DRIVE DRUNK, YOU'RE NO FRIEND.

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION • NATIONAL HIGHWAY TRAFFIC SAFETY ADMINISTRATION

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Jackson Browne Comes to Town

Jackson Browne and his band, one of today's most sensitive and successful group of songwriters and musicians, will appear with Phoebe Snow and her band Monday, March 17 at Memorial Auditorium at 8:30 p.m. Doors will open at 7:30 p.m. A limited amount of tickets are still left at Bailey's.

Moody Blues Launch New Album

(Earth News) Two members of the Moody Blues, Justin Hayward and John Lodge, will debut their first album as a duo at a unique "playback" session at New York's Carnegie Hall on March 10. Some 2,800 fans, record officials, and members of the press are expected to show up at Carnegie to hear the premiere playing of the album, "BlueJays." It will be the first time in Carnegie Hall history that a crowd has come to the facility simply to listen to a new record. Hayward and Lodge have been key members of the Moody Blues throughout the band's lengthy history.

C. Cody: Fun But No Boogie Marathon

Where how the good old days of rock concerts gone, when a cry of "play all night!" was a wish often granted instead of the fallacious cat-call ignored and laughed at by artists today?

With the coming of Commander Cody and His Lost Planet Airmen to Memorial Auditorium Friday night, I was prepared to forget the aborted Marshall Tucker performance of Feb. 27. Instead I was made blindingly aware of the failings and limitations of modern rock concerts.

Perhaps Burlington has been hit by a coincidental, unlucky streak of "rip off artists." However, after three consecutive events that have ended in disappointment because of insufficient length, (Rush/Ronstadt, Marshall Tucker, and Cody,) the role of coincidence becomes questionable. When was the last time you attended a concert that lasted over two hours and featured more than two encores? (Grateful Dead Heads, I hear you remembering and are disqualified from answering).

—One student mentioned "It must be something about Burlington that burns 'em out." That something could be the size, status or finances of Burlington. The latter, money, seems to be the most blatant reason.

Commander Cody's fee for the recent gig was minimal. So was his performance. It may be theorized therefore that he intended from the start to play a mere 1½ hours instead of the three or four reputably given at his performances.

Though Memorial Auditorium was barely 3/4's full, R&R Producers needed to sell only one fifth of the seats to afford Cody's price. $5.00 is an outrageous fee to pay for a band of Cody's calibre and the audience was also forced to sit through two hours of introductory music by two local bar-circuit bands.

It was as much of a chore (and less enjoyable) for the lead-off bands to play before the headlining Cody as it was for the impatient audience to listen. Pleas for the Commander to appear were howled loudly between each song of the first two acts, a response not taken appreciatively by the rudely interrupted back-up bands.

Brian Curry, the evening's lead-off artist, at one point could no longer ignore the disruptive calls for the Commander. He threw his head back and with upturned palms, cried hopelessly at the rafters, "He's coming. He's coming!"

The second band on the program, Home Brew, was likewise harrassed by impatient whoops and hollers from the audience but did not take it as humorously or understandingly as did Curry. "This is our last number just for those individuals who can't wait," the lead guitarist spat vehemently into the mike, while pointing an accusing finger at some anonymous loud-mouth after 50 minutes of Home Brew music.

The band appeared psyched to play at least one encore but the applause died while they were still taking bows on stage. They stormed disgustedly off stage and then pathetically volunteered an encore (a first in the history of my concert-attending experience.)

By the time the Commander and his Airmen milled on stage at 10:20 p.m. many in the audience (some of whom had been waiting outside the concert hall since 6:30 p.m.) had during the interval, drunk themselves into a sleepy stupor.

Thanks go to R&R Productions also for not opening the doors until 10 minutes before scheduled curtain time. You created such tension among those waiting (beneath snow and rain) that violent, inhuman pushing started when the doors were finally opened. My rib cage, cozily crushed to the point of near-implosion (a fate not escaped by one glass door), also thanks you.

Musically and visually, the Commander and Co. proved as stimulating and fun-filled as everyone expected. Eight-strong they stretched across the stage, dipping and diving to the sounds of country and 1950's rock and roll tunes played in the joking, jovial vein only Commander Cody can convey successfully.

Once, the Commander ran the heel of his boot up and down his piano's keys. Shortly after, he bounded from his seat into the air and landed full force with both feet on the keyboard in a side-splitting gymnastic.

In another feat of sheer amazement (and gimmickry), the lead guitarist turned his guitar upside down, lifted the instrument up and over his head and, resting it on the nape of his neck, rapidly played a lead break behind his back near the end of the nationally raknowned "Hot Rod Lincoln."

Billy C. swung a mike stand 'round and 'round in a desperate boogie and shook his knees in frantic, bow-legged oscillation while an unamplified acoustic guitar hung purely as decoration from his neck (Billy doesn't know how to play guitar but he flips and pushes his instrument around with wild expertise.)

"Sunshine on the Sage" featured a whistling duet and Andy Stein showed the audience he (if no one else in the band) was no drunkard, as

(continued on page twelve)

King of the Blues Returns

B. B. King, a name synonymous with electric blues professionalism, will perform at Memorial Auditorium April 16th. Tickets are on sale at Bailey's, Tech Hi-Fi, and the Silver Keg (the concert sponsor).

"His Gibson guitar is red, he's black, and his love is the blues," heads an excerpt from the Gibson Gayette, vol 10, no. 1 of the summer of 1970 "B. B. King is his name, and people today run out of words in trying to describe him and the level of his art. He's called 'Bossman of the Blues' and 'King of the Blues' and 'A Living Legend' and 'The Idol of the Now Generation' and on and on.

"Sell-out crowds give him standing ovations at performances all over the country. College-age audiences seem particularly captivated by the honesty and clarity of his message. A lot of them are curious about what B.B. was doing before his zoom to success."

"He was doing the same thing then as now — playing the blues as no other man ever has. B.B. King's long overdue general recognition came 'overnight' after a 'day before' which was about 20 years long. A new generation of black and white youngsters discovered him in late 1968 and 1969. Before that he had been keeping up a gruelling pace of one-nighters, mostly in urban ghetto clubs and theaters and in smoky southern roadhouses. In 1966 he somehow managed to survive 342 one-night stands."

"The big wave rolled for B.B. when people started getting round-about exposure to his guitar style through the playing of artists like Larry Coryell, Eric Clapton and Mike Bloomfield. B.B.'s 'debut' come in 1966 at San Francisco's Fillmore Auditorium. The enthusiasm he generated there propelled him to Europe and a full schedule of festival and college concert dates. The

(continued on page ten)

Cash Walks The Amtrak Line

Johnny Cash, country music's "most formidable purveyor," who has filled arenas, theatres and prison yards throughout the world, will appear at Memorial Auditorium tonight, Thursday, March 13 at 6:30 and 9:30 p.m.

By popular demand a second show at 9:30 p.m. had to be added to the originally scheduled sole performance at 6:30 p.m.

Appearing with Cash are the Tennessee Three (his back-up musicians), June Carter (his wife), step-daughter Anita Carter, Carl Perkins, Gordon Terry, and the Cash daughters, Rosanne and Rosey.

Cash has been called "the biggest thing that has happened to country music since its recorded beginnings a half century ago."

Old and young alike identify with him whether successful or down-trodden. He is a dynamic "eagle figure," displaying truth, honesty and a perceptive awareness of the human condition. This knowledge has been gained through hardship and difficult times. Cash has indeed "paid his dues."

June Carter, originally gaining fame as part of the singing Carter Family and later a soloist and comedienne of the New York vaudeville circuit, helped free Cash from the clutches of amphetamine and barbituate addiction in the mid-sixties. His encounter with drugs destroyed his first marriage and nearly led to his total demise. Carter married Cash in 1968 and has added a "sparkling vivaciousness" to the Cash act, thus earning the title, "Country Music's First Lady."

The Tennessee Three provide Cash with a unique and distinct background sound that is as much a part of the Cash style as the superstar's guitar and voice themselves. Bass player Marshall Grant has been on every Cash recording and in every personal appearance for the past 17 years. Bob Wootton joined the group as guitarist, after the death of Luther Perkins and with Grant was one of the original Tennessee Two. "Fluke" Holland is "the greatest percussionist in the world," according to Cash and has played with Cash for 10 years.

Cash still performs ten to twelve prison shows a year.

He has written and produced a feature-length film entitled "Gospel Road" which, made in Israel, is his personal interpretation of the story of Christ's life.

"The past of Johnny Cash represents the toughest part of our lives. The present and future of him represent the hopes and goals of most of us."

Vermont Cynic
MOVIE GUIDE

Century I & II
DORSET STREET
I Towering Inferno
II Young Frankenstein

MERRILL'S SHOWCASE I & II
SO. BURLINGTON
I Stepford Wives
II Lenny

STATE THEATRE
BANK STREET
Amicord

FLYNN THEATRE
MAIN STREET
Ultimate Thrill

ESSEX TWIN CINEMA
ESSEX JCT.
I Freebie and the Bean
II Ultimate Thrill

CINEMA I & II
BURLINGTON PLAZA
SHELBURNE ROAD
I Murder on the Orient Express
II Report to the Commissioner

call theatres for times
Not Good for bargain nights
or special showings

SA FILMS PRESENTS

THURSDAY, MARCH 13
THE PIRATE (1948) — Gene Kelly, Judy Garland, directed by Vincente Minnelli
101 Votey — 7:30 — Free
THE JAZZ SINGER (1927) — Al Jolson
101 Votey — 9:30 — Free

FRIDAY, MARCH 14
THE BRIDE OF FRANKENSTEIN (1935) — Boris Karloff, Elsa Lanchester
THE BLACK CAT (1934) — Bela Lugosi
101 Votey — 7:30 & 10:00 — $
(Both shows at each presentation)

SATURDAY, MARCH 15
THE TROJAN WOMEN (1971) — Katherine Hepburn, directed by Michael Cacoyannis
101 Votey — 7:30 & 9:30 — Free

MONDAY, MARCH 17
LES BONNE FEMMES (1960) — directed by Claude Chagrol
101 Votey — 7:30 & 9:30 — Free

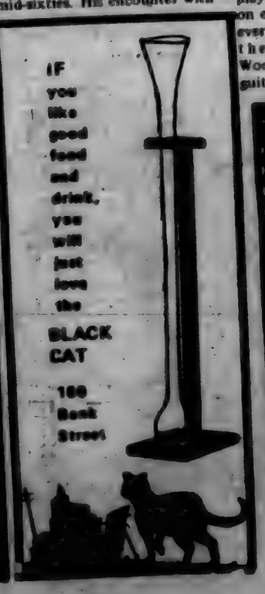
THE SILVER KEG

Presents In Concert

B. B. KING

MEM. AUDITORIUM — WED. APRIL 16
TICKETS AVAILABLE AT — 8 PM
BAILEY'S MUSIC ROOMS — $5 in advance
THE SILVER KEG — $6 at the door

THIS WEEK AT THE SILVER KEG
DJANGO
SONNETT — MARCH 17-22
HARPY — MARCH 24-29 - Back by popular demand
(TEN) 10 CENT NITE EVERY WEDNESDAY
Your entertainment dollar buys more at the Silver Keg



BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE
Retail Outlet
FANTASTIC SELECTION OF BEERS, ALES AND AMERICAN & IMPORTED WINES
AT GREAT SAVINGS

Tom Mitchell Bri... to Billings Rou...

Tom Mitchell is from Ballston Spa, New York. Raised on country folk music (his father sang like Bradley Kincade,) Tom now writes in a genre of his own creation—Country Thunder-Funk. A prolific songwriter, Tom sings of personal experiences with a perception and sensitivity that is easily recognized by today's listening audience.

In telling the story of a poor, country farmer, Tom sings, "Sam Ogan never lifted a hand to any man for any reason other th... on the ... recordi... 4th the r... summer record. listen, ... it's on ... Billings, p.m. ... Center conju... Record... over. perform...

Rock With The...

Sometimes I think love is just mythical until out of the black vinyl comes the explosion. The power of the words, the song; every note scaling the skin of my lonely body. In love with records? Where is that at? Certainly you can't get VD from it and it is tolerable in public. Look at all those fornicators in the record stores. We have more power and taste than the gays, if you don't believe me, come to one of our dances. Come and light a candle in my heart. Oh babe, love is so blind.

DIXIE ROCK/ wet willie — I keep rooting for Wet Willie to make the album that is going to get them the recognition they so deserve. There is a lot of potential in this band. There is a mouthful of boogie-booze bands that can't do it as well as Willie, yet, fools like Bachman Turner are gold mines. This is a very good album. Jimmy Hall's voice was made for this record. Mama Hall, Donna Hall, Jack Hall, dance hall. The best cut is Elizabeth Cotton's "Jailhouse Moan," done in the original fingerpickin' guitar and harp style. It's such a low-down tune it will tear the crust out of your bowels (that's low). The title cut, and "Poor Judge of Character" are torching rockers. This vinyl should slide up the charts and on to your turntable if you like Southern Music. (B+, true grits color)

OLD AND IN THE WAY — This band is made up of Jerry Garcia, David Grisman (late of Maria Muldaur), Peter Rowan (late of Rowan Bros.), Jack Kahn (Garcia's pal), and Vassar ("I practically invented the fiddle") Clements. That alone might be enough for some people to buy this. It is a bluegrass album (not to be confused with country music). For me, I have no trouble passing out while this album plays. The bluegrass version of "Wild Horses" falls flat, while the new version of "Panama Red" is commendable. (C, imitation moonshine colors)

BARRY MANILOW II/barry manilow — I'll admit right now to liking schmaltzy music. When I hear Mandy on the AM radio, I'm happy so I figured I'd apply my critical ears to the whole album. What a klunker. Manilow should have stayed on Bette Midler's garters (he used to be her musical director). I'll let you in on a trade secret, Manilow used to sing "You Deserve A Break Today" for our favorite hamburger chain. He should have stayed there. Give this album to your grandmother and tell her it's rock and roll. She'll get off on it. I tried and I couldn't (C-, one song album)

SILK TORPEDO/ pretty things — A little rock quiz — who wrote and recorded the first rock opera? the Who, right? WRONG. Pretty things recorded S.F. Sorrow in 1968. Whose album did Rolling Stone name as album of the year for 1970? Right Parachute by Pretty Things. Now Pretty Things are on Led Zep's Swan

Blues Returns

...ds give him ...ations at ...ll over the ...ge audiences ...ptivated by ...ilarity of his ...st them are ...hat B.B was ...ir zoom to ...

...g the same ...w playing. ...ther man ever ...long overdue ...dition, came ...a 'day before' ...20 years long. ...of black and ...s discovered ...8 and 1969. ...e had been ...elling pace of one-nighters, mostly in urban ghetto clubs and theaters and in smoky southern roadhouses. In 1966 he somehow managed to survive 342 one-night stands."

"The big wave" soiled for B.B. when people started getting round-about exposure to his guitar-style through the playing of artists like Larry Coryell, Eric Clapton and Mike Bloomfield. B.B.'s 'debut' came in 1966 at San Francisco's Fillmore Auditorium. The enthusiasm he generated there propelled him to Europe and a full schedule of festival and college concert dates. The

(continued on page ten)

...e Amtrak Line

...nyed his first ...nearly led to his ... Carter married ... and has added a ...vaciousness" to ... thus earning the ...ry Music's First ...

...nessee Three ...with a unique and ...ground sound that ... part of the Cash ...superstar's guitar ...themselves. Bass ...ll Grant has been ...h recording and in ...al appearance for ...17 years. Bob ...ned the group as ...r the death of Luther Perkins and with Grant was one of the original Tennessee Two. "Fluke" Holland is "the greatest percussionist in the world," according to Cash and has played with Cash for 10 years.

Cash still performs ten to twelve prison shows a year.

He has written and produced a feature-length film entitled "Gospel Road" which, made in Israel, is his personal interpretation of the story of Christ's life.

"The past of Johnny Cash ...represents the toughest part of ...our lives. The present and ...future of him represent the ...hopes and goals of most of us."

...VERAGE WAREHOUSE
...ELISTIC SELECTION ...F BEERS, ALES AND ...MERICAN & IMPORTED ...WINES
...AT GREAT SAVINGS

Tom Mitchell Brings Folk to Billings Roundhouse

Tom Mitchell is from Ballston Spa, New York. Raised on country folk music (his father sang like Bradley Kincade,) Tom now writes in a genre of his own creation—Country Thunder-Funk. A prolific songwriter, Tom sings of personal experiences with a perception and sensitivity that is easily recognized by today's listening audience.

In telling the story of a poor, country farmer, Tom sings, "Sam Ogan never lifted a hand to any man for any reason other than to shake it. He lived on the gospel side all his life."

Tom will be recording with Philo Records in the near future looking for a summer release of his first record. Take time out for a listen, you'll be happy you did. It's on Friday March 14 for Billings Roundhouse at 9:00 p.m. Sponsored by Billings Center Governing Board in conjunction with Philo Records Incorporated. Come over, relax and enjoy the performance.

White Devil Robs My Soul

by Elliot Freeman

On Saturday night I was one of the few people fortunate enough to attend the performance of The White Devil at the Royall Tyler Theatre. Many other people, I assume, decided to seek their fortunes elsewhere since the theater was two thirds empty. The almost empty theater did little to inspire the actors and less to encourage the audience, although both were generally well behaved.

The stage set was impressive. Not only do I say that because I felt that it gave a subtle feeling of the time and place in which the play was set (seventeenth century, Italy) but also because the lady who was sitting behind me must have remarked thirty times during the performance how impressed she was with it. She also said that whoever was doing the lighting knew what they were doing. I agree.

Let me rave about the costumes. The costumes (except for the shoes which were horrid) were just magnificent. Wonderful. That's all the lady behind me could say about the costumes...wonderful.

The play itself was written by John Webster as a tragedy with some comedy thrown in to keep one from falling asleep. I think the cast handled the comic aspects of the play better than the heavy drama. There were really quite a few scenes that had me laughing and at times even guffawing. Outstanding performances were by Paul Ugalde as Flamineo and Karen Trott as Cornelia. Both did fine acting that touched me as did the lady who was sitting behind when she leaned over and told me that she thought that Robin Coleman seemed like too nice a fellow to be playing such a bastard as Count Lodovico.

Some of the players appeared to be stiff and some appeared to be jumpy, but on the whole the performance was very pleasant... it wasn't the kind of thing that would knock you out or anything, but it was very pleasant.

It is a pity that more people were not at the performance, for if you did attend The White Devil, you had an enjoyable evening. If you did not attend, that is what you missed.

Inspector Hound Has Clues o' Cast

The cast has now been assembled for the upcoming production of The Real Inspector Hound to be presented April 9-13 in the Billings Center Apts. The cast includes celebrities worthy of mention such as Gil Rood, mercantile kingpin of Burlington, owner of G.B. Rood Co., who plays Birdboot. Mr. Rood calls himself a "seldom employed would-be actor living out a fantasy life of G. B. Rood, Co." Ken Rothwell, notorious leader of UVM's English organization plays the part of Moon. Although Mr. Rothwell has appeared in various dramatic roles, he regards the current part of Moon as the peak of his acting career.

Other notables include Julie Jameson who played in Under Milkwood last semester and the recent West Side Story and Peter Rivenburg, a UVM senior who is a member of the University Players.

Jan Backus, mother of three who has worked as an English teacher, secretary and cook, plays Mrs. Drudge, the housekeeper. Edward VonAlstyne, an ex-UVM student working in Burlington plays the colorful part of Magnus.

Bud Whitebook, an unemployed professor, unpublished writer, played in Berkley Square with the Essex Players – a "grave mistake" he calls it.

He plays Simon in Inspector Hound. Finally, Susan Dunlop, a transfer from the University of Maine plays Cynthia.

The cast is, as one can see, a melting pot of personalities, consisting of 5 non-students and 3 UVM students. I have tried to find out more about the identity of the real Inspector Hound, but the cast is more than secretive about the Mystery Man. It looks as if you will have to come and see the play yourself in order to find out who he is. It will be well worth the time.

The Merciless Exploitations of W. C. Fields

W.C. Fields' "Never Give a Sucker an Even Break," the final movie in the Lane Series W.C. Fields Festival, will be presented on Friday, March 14.

There will be two showings of the hilarious classic in Marsh Life Sciences Building Auditorium: 7:30 p.m. and 9:30 p.m.

Preceding the feature there will be shown a Buster Keaton short, "She's Oil Mine."

The comic genius of W.C. Fields is strikingly evident in "Never Give a Sucker" (1941), one of his last movies – a wild, irreverent and totally unpredictable farce. Fields plays a character known as The Great Man, a broken-down movie hack who tries to sell a script to Esoteric Studios, and acts out each episode himself. The result is an unforgettable blend of slapstick, song and verbal gags, as Fields goes to Mexico to sell wooden nutmegs, dives out of a plane to rescue a whiskey bottle, and lands on a mountaintop inhabited by man-hating Mrs. Hermogloben.

The critic of the New York Times asks of Fields in "Never Give a Sucker": "Of contemporary mortals who can match his pickled pomposity, his flyborn grandeur? The world's his oyster and as far as we're concerned he can have it."

"She's Oil Mine," with Buster Keaton, is a crazy comedy in which Buster, a plumber's helper, becomes involved with an oil heiress and even fights a fun-filled duel of honor on her behalf. Also, Buster's plumbing – external, that is – is thoroughly confusing, but leaves the audience hilariously happy.

Tickets, $1 each, are available in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman, and at the door. For reservations telephone 656-3418.

Woody Allen Stars In Film About McCarthy Era

(Earth News) - Woody Allen has just signed to play the lead role in an upcoming film about the Hollywood blacklist era of the 1950's. The film, "The Front" will feature Woody portraying a front man for blacklisted writers in the Joe McCarthy days of the '50's. Senator McCarthy and other Communist-hunters in the government maintained so-called blacklists of Hollywood stars, writers, and producers who held opinions considered to be "red tainted." Woody will treat the blacklist era with his usual aura of respect.

Rock With The Peacock

Sometimes I think love is just mythical until out of the black vinyl comes the explosion. The power of the words, the song; every note scaling the skin of my lonely body. In love with records? Where is that at? Certainly you can't get VD from it and it is tolerable in public. Look at all those fornicators in the record stores. We have more power and taste than the gays, if you don't believe me, come to one of our dances. Come and light a candle in my heart. Oh babe, love is so blind.

DIXIE ROCK/ wet willie—I keep rooting for Wet Willie to make the album that is going to get them the recognition they so deserve. There is a lot of potential in this band. There is a mouthful of boogie-blooze bands that can't do it as well as Willie, yet, fools like Bachman Turner are gold mines. This is a very good album. Jimmy Hall's voice was made for this record. Mama Hall, Donna Hall, Jack Hall, dance hall. The best cut is Elizabeth Cotton's "Jailhouse Moan," done in the original fingerpickin' guitar and harp style. It's such a low-down tune it will tear the crust out of your bowels (that's low). The title cut, and "Poor Judge of Character" are torching rockers. This vinyl should slide up the charts and on to your turntable if you like Southern Music. (B+, true grits color)

OLD AND IN THE WAY—This band is made up of Jerry Garcia, David Grisman (late of Maria Muldaur), Peter Rowan (late of Rowan Bros.), Jack Kahn (Garcia's pal), and Vassar ("I practically invented the fiddle") Clements. That alone might be enough for some people to buy this. It is a bluegrass album (not to be confused with country music). For me, I have no trouble passing out while this album plays. The bluegrass version of "Wild Horses" falls flat, while the new version of "Panama Red" is commendable. (C, imitation moonshine colors)

BARRY MANILOW II/barry manilow – I'll admit right now to liking schmaltzy music. When I hear Mandy on the AM radio, I'm happy so I figured I'd apply my critical ears to the whole album. What a klunker. Manilow should have stayed on Bette Midler's gutters (he used to be her musical director). I'll let you in on a trade secret, Manilow used to sing "You Deserve A Break Today" for our favorite hamburger chain. He should have stayed there. Give this album to your grandmother and tell her it's rock and roll. She'll get off on it. I tried and I couldn't (C–, one song album)

SILK TORPEDO/ pretty things – A little rock quiz – who wrote and recorded the first rock opera? the Who, right? WRONG. Pretty things recorded S.F. Sorrow in 1968. Whose album did Rolling Stone name as album of the year for 1970? Right Parachute by Pretty Things. Now Pretty Things are on Led Zep's Swan Song label and you are going to hear a lot of them. Side one is smooth; all the songs flow together, including another song about Atlanta. (I'm going to Atlanta for Easter, I gotta see what is so much.) Side two is where the rockers are. "Singapore Silk Torpedo" is a phenomenal song. Jack Green's throaty howl will keep you up late at night. Superb rhythm guitars by Gordon Edwards predominate on the entire album. (B+ smooth, comin' home colors)

PIECES OF THE SKY/emmylou harris – Primarily a backup singer for the late Gram Parsons and the current Little Feat, Emmylou is out on her own. Unfortunately she doesn't have the take-charge voice to command the material, so the album comes across like a shadow, very laid back. It's filled with sweet and innocent country songs and competent back-up musicians. Her interpretation of the Beatles' "For No One" is exceptionally haunting. (C, no new direction colors)

FOR EARTH BELOW/robin trower – this is Robin's third solo album since leaving Procol Harum and it is his best so far. When the music is this good it's not an imitation (of Jimi), it is a clear defined style. And Jimi would be proud. James Dewar's vocals are as tough as any rugby player but there is no variation, unlike Trower's guitar playing which is masterful, so a definite A album becomes a B+. (B+, shades of someone I used to know)

PAMPERED MENIAL/pavlov's dog – It takes ten years to get used to David Surkamp's high whiny vocals. If you have that much time, then there is a lot to get into, musically on this debut album. Others can file it under the trash. (C– a strain on the ears colors)

(continued on page eight)

Tales From The Ozones—View From Space

by Paul Prior

LED ZEP: NO LIMP BLIMP
LED ZEPPELIN PHYSICAL GRAFFITI

For months, one has heard repeated rumors of what the new "Led Zeppelin album would bring; I'm happy to find that most of them were true, and that the album is so gratifying that it makes their last album (Houses of the Holy) sound pale in comparison. The double L.P. opens with "Custard Pie," a song indicative of the Led Zep formula of building layer upon layer of sound from one steady riff. This pattern is followed to the letter on several, if not most of the songs on the record. From any other group, it would be unacceptable, monotonous, or even worse, but from Page and Co., they make it sound fresher than ever. It is this formula that tends to drive the critics in many rock papers mad, they try to account for the success of the group with far-reaching explanations, when there is basically one— Simply that Zep have established a style of hard rock that is unable to be duplicated, and they do it with such verve, style, and competence that it will remain "theirs" for as long as they stay together.

The second cut on the disk is "The Rover" which serves as a fine vehicle for Robert Plant's vocal cords. "In My Time Of Dying" closes out side one, and is probably my least favorite cut on the album, mainly as a result of the lack of anything really interesting going on, and also because it is extended for eleven minutes. Side Two opens with "Houses of the Holy." This has caused me to wonder if their next album will feature a tune entitled "Physical Graffiti." A very catchy number follows, "Trampled Under Foot" which features fine work on Clavinet by bassist/ keyboardist John Paul Jones. This cut is also interesting because of the strange timbre of Plant's voice which at times sounds like a cross between Terry Reid and Three Dog Night. Side two climaxes with what is destined to be a Zepplin Classic, "Kashmir." A rock steady beat by madman drummer John Benham holds this cut together more than anything else, as well as the use of spectacular electronic effects. The drums are channeled through either a phase-shifter or synthesizer, and the result is overwhelming. Plant's voice adds a sense of urgency to the song, and he is able to emit some screams and gutteral tones worthy of some tunes on Led Zeppelin's first effort. Combined with this effect are strains of music evoking (for me) echoes of nomads wandering across the desert.

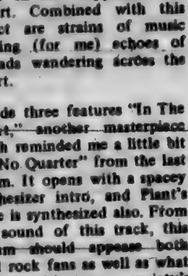
Side three features "In The Light," another masterpiece which reminded me a little bit of "No Quarter" from the last album. It opens with a spacey synthesizer intro, and Plant's voice is synthesized also. From the sound of this track, this album should appease both hard rock fans as well as what one could term society's "Space Cadets." Page's lead on this cut is also tops, as is his acoustic work on the next cut called "Bron-yr-aur." Page is the sole player on this tune, and it makes one ache for even more acoustic work from one of the acknowledged masters of the guitar. "Down By The Seaside" follows, another fine cut, as well as "Ten Years Gone" which ends the side. Side three is probably the side I'll put on the turntable most frequently, overall it's the best side, and the first two songs are again destined to become staples in the Led Zep hall of fame.

"Night Flight" begins side four, with a beautiful opening, but somewhat of a letdown, as it fails to maintain the excitement of the opening chords. "The Wanton Song" is a disappointment, mainly because it sounds like Custard Pie in the rhythm department. "Boogie with Stu" and "Black Country Woman" are fine efforts, though they reminded me a lot of some material off Led Zeppelin Three, the names of the tunes escape me, however. The album closes with "Sick Again," which is merely something the group used as filler material. It is perhaps the only tune on the disk unworthy of being there, but considering the hazards of releasing double albums, the Zep fare better than most groups. One or two mediocre cuts out of fifteen is an excellent track record.

So overall, the album is excellent, and I would definitely give it the "Captain's Seal" of approval. For technical enthusiasts, the album was recorded at a variety of locations in England with the aid of the Rolling Stones Mobile Studio, and also the Ronnie Lane Mobile Studio. The mixing was divided between Olympic Studios in England and Electric Lady Studios in NYC.

(continued on page eight)

THE LAST CHANCE SALOON



Special Beers & Drinks
Old Irish Songs & Gigs
Free Party Favors

147 MAIN ST.

MUSICAL MARK DOWNS!

$1.99 VAL. TO 5.98

The Best of Mark Almond

MANY GREAT NAMES INCLUDING: CREDENCE CLEARWATER REVIVAL, THE KINKS, SUNFIGHTER, JEFFERSON AIRPLANE, BEATLES, DEEP PURPLE, JAMES GANG, THE GUESS WHO, DOORS, OLIVIA NEWTON JOHN, JIMI HENDRIX, NEW SEEKERS, YOUNG BLOODS, NILSON, ELVIS PRESLEY, B.B. KING AND THE BYRDS.

LP's $2.99 ALBUMS INCLUDING: J. GEILS BAND, DERRICK & THE DOMINOS, EDGAR WINTER, ISAAC HAYES, ERIC CLAPTON, BETTE MIDLER, TOM RUSH, FIRESIGN THEATRE, ISLE OF WHITE AND THE FIFTH DIMENSION. VAL. TO 9.98 2.99

UNIVERSITY STORE
ON THE CAMPUS

Yankee Trader

ENTERTAINMENT
NOW THRU SATURDAY
BITTER BLUE
direct from Toronto

OLD BARD 899 Shelburne Rd. 864-0851

TONIGHT
TRY
"MISS BRICKHOUSES BRUNCH"
(We build this one right)

FAMOUS SINCE 1776

or one of the 90 other unbelievable combinations at CARBUR'S RESTAURANT
Live Entertainment Nightly
119 St. Paul St. 862-4106

Art History/ReligionDepts. Give Art Exhibit

University of Vermont faculty and students in art history and religion have been collaborating for the past year in a study of consequence to both fields.

Their work will be evident in an exhibition entitled ART AND THE SACRED to be held in the Robert Hull Fleming Museum from March 16 to April 12.

The idea for the show grew out of a course in comparative religions offered by Professor Glen Yorius of the UVM Department of Religion. He proposed that students work with art objects and exhibit the conclusions of their research in museum space. The Museum staff was not only receptive to the idea, but also suggested the opportunity for a major exhibition.

Professor Christie Pougter of the Department of Art and The Reverend Daniel P. Daley of Rice Memorial High School, who were teaching a course on Christian iconography at the time, proposed an exhibition of liturgical and devotional objects to be borrowed from churches, museums and individuals in Vermont. A UVM Innovative Teaching Grant provided the financial basis for plans to proceed.

The exhibition is handled in two parts:

The Lounge and Front Gallery will house objects selected, researched, and exhibited by UVM students in religion studies. A number of cultures and religious traditions will be represented, and examples range from a Yoruba headpiece (Africa), to a Chinese landscape painting, to a Rodin Sculpture. The variety of objects is striking, but equally suggestive is the fact that they are united in their relation to the religious dimension of human experience. A free catalogue is available for this part of the exhibition.

The Main Gallery displays examples of Christian art selected by Professor Pougter and the Reverend Daley from throughout the State. The works have been chosen to illustrate two basic concepts. First, they demonstrate that there is a continuous tradition in both style and iconography from the Medieval–Renaissance–Baroque period to the present.

The objects displayed either date from this era or reflect an interest in and respect for this tradition. Secondly, the works affirm that even within the boundaries of the small State of Vermont, there is a rich variety of religious art which displays a high level of craftsmanship and visual interest.

Some of the objects shown are still in use in the liturgy or in church decoration. Others were located in private collections or in attics and storerooms and are visible for the first time in many years.

An opening reception and slide talk will be in the Museum on Friday, March 14 at 8:00 p.m. The slide talk, "What is Christian Painting" will be given by Professor F. David Martin, of the Philosophy Department at Bucknell University. On Wednesday, March 19, four films on art in the Hindu tradition will be shown at 8:00 p.m. in the Arena Theater, Museum basement. Then in April, there will be two more slide talks in conjunction with the exhibition: "Oriental Art as a Spiritual Path" by Professor John Brzostoski of NYU and Cooper Union, on Friday, April 4; and Professor Lowell Bliss of Hobart and William Smith Colleges will speak on "Early Buddhist Art" on Friday, April 11, both at 8:00 in the Museum.

Museum hours are Mondays through Fridays 9:00 a.m.–5:00 p.m., Sundays 1:00 p.m.–5:00 p.m., closed Saturdays and most holidays.

VVAW/WSO Fighting For Discharge Upgrading

The Burlington chapter of the Vietnam Veterans Against the War/Winter Soldier Organization (VVAW/WSO) announced last week the creation of a Discharge Upgrading Project (DUP) to assist Vermont Veterans with less-than-honorable discharges and also those with "derrogatory" separation codes.

Over 500,000 Vietnam-era veterans have been branded for life by the stigma of bad discharges, many of which the VVAW/WSO says were earned by resisting the war, racism and repression of the military system. In addition to "bad paper" discharges, as they are called, all veterans are assigned separation codes which most vets are unaware of.

According to Dave Ross, Vt. VVAW/WSO coordinator, "every veteran is assigned a SPN (Special Processing Number) code and the government makes no effort to inform vets of this arbitrary classification. Even vets with Honorable discharges often are assigned harmful codes." Ross claims the codes are arbitrarily assigned by the services with no concern for due process.

"Three years later, a vet may find that his employment difficulties stem from having been classified as a homosexual, subversive, or as having unclean habits or an inadequate personality, etc."

Public pressures generated by the VVAW/WSO, ACLU and others forced the Pentagon to announce discontinuance of the codes in May and vets can now request and receive new discharge papers, minus the codes. However, VVAW/WSO characterizes the Pentagon's move as a "cheap publicity stunt aimed at diffusing the issue" and noted that "for all practical purposes the codes are still in effect."

"Every employer using the codes is well aware that all discharges issued prior to May have the codes on them. Any vet discharged before May who submits a new set of papers minus the code will automatically be notifying their prospective employer that they were originally assigned a derrogatory classification."

While SPN codes are no longer being placed on discharge papers, VVAW/WSO is quick to point out that the same kinds of classifications are still being assigned and made part of the veterans' permanent military, VA and Selective Service records. Ross points out "these codes were never supposed to be available for public use in the first place but employers and others seem to have had little difficulty in obtaining them. We have no reason to believe that information stored under the new system will be any less accessible than under the old system."

The separation codes are found in section IIC of the DD-214 Form and follow the designation SPN. They are usually three digit numbers. The VVAW/WSO has a complete list of the codes and welcomes information requests from vets about their classification. The group will also assist vets in getting new papers.

Less-than-honorable discharges create even more of a problem for vets since they are written out right on the discharge and don't have to be decoded. There are five types of discharges issued by the military: honorable, general, undesirable, bad conduct and dishonorable. All but the last two are "administrative", meaning that they are assigned without legal proceedings or other due process safeguards. A very high percentage of bad discharges are issued for activities which are not considered illegal under civilian law.

VVAW/WSO also says that racism plays a major role in the assignment of less-than-honorable discharges. The military's own records show that while blacks and other minorities make up only 12 per cent of the armed forces, these minorities receive well over a third of all bad discharges. The statistics alone clearly demonstrate the racist nature of the armed forces.

"Even if someone really messes up and does something bad, is it fair to brand them for the rest of their life just because they didn't exercise very good judgement when they were 18 or 19?" asks Bill Barton, Discharge Upgrading Project Coordinator.

"VVAW/WSO is willing and prepared to assist veterans through the red tape involved in getting their discharges upgraded," said Barton, but he warned that "only 15% of discharge upgrading request are acted on favorably." Still, for the small percent who do manage to get their discharges upgraded it can be well worth the effort.

The VVAW/WSO is building a national campaign around the demand for a retroactive, single-type discharge for all veterans. The new kind of discharge envisioned by the group includes the abolition of all classification codes and the issuing of new discharge papers to all veterans. VVAW/WSO says that the current discharge system can't be reformed.

"The only way veterans are going to get decent benefits and a single-type discharge is by organizing to fight for it, it's not going to happen by itself, "Barton stated.

Veterans wanting more information about discharge upgrading, separation codes or VVAW/WSO activities can contact the group at 12 Clymer St. in Burlington or by calling 862-8175.

First Aiken Lecture Was Successful

by John McDonald

The first annual George D. Aiken Lecture Series came to a satisfying end on Wednesday, March 5 at 8 p.m. in the Ira Allen Chapel. In the words of President Andrews, "The frosting was put on the cake."

The event was well attended by local Vermonters, faculty, and some, but not many students. The night started with President Andrews welcoming the distinguished guests of the series. The main speaker was Mr. Orville Freeman, President of Business International. Also in his career, Freeman has served three terms, from 1955-1961, as Governor of Minnesota, from 1961-1969 as Secretary of Agriculture, and in 1960 at the Democratic National Convention, he nominated John F. Kennedy for President.

Gov. Thomas Salmon introduced Freeman as a "genuine, distinguished American" and heralded his past record with a very hospitable and spirited introduction.

Freeman, a long-time friend of George Aiken, felt right at home reminiscing about past experiences with the retired governor. In his very friendly and humorous manner, he set a very spirited and hopeful tone for the evening.

His topic was well-suited to the present concerns and problems of people everywhere today. In his speech, he asked for international cooperation to help solve the six major world-wide crises, which include nuclear warfare, famine, deterioration of resources, inflation, and distribution of wealth.

He saw these problems as crisis which spell opportunity" and saw it as a time to start to make some real progress.

Although Freeman had no real concrete answers to the problems, he proposed, in a "crisis which spell opportunity" very optimistic way, that countries should start to concern themselves with international rather than inward and selfish national interests. He called for global cooperation and collaboration to organize and increase production of commodities; in economic terms, a cartel between countries to control price and supply for the maximum benefit of all.

In realizing the inherent difficulties and barriers to achieving this goal, Freeman went on to describe the present oil crisis as a perfect example of the problem. Rather than hoard the wealth, OPEC countries should recycle their wealth to underdeveloped countries. But this is harder than it seems. National sovereignty and protectionist policy may tend to bar this from happening and consequently cause an over all economic breakdown. He described selfish nationalist concerns as a form of mass suicide.

In proposing to try to meet the needs of the world's ever-growing population, Freeman said we all must think and realize the potential disaster which may come about if countries do not choose to collaborate better politically and economically.

The former Secretary called for action. His conclusion was superb and very apropos. He said, "Nature has provided us with two ends, one to think with and one to sit with. In facing these problems, depending upon which one we choose, 'Heads we win, tails we lose.'"

The evening was upon coming to an end with a brief talk by former Gov. George Aiken, who saw no reason to have to defend or to add to Freeman's words. With a bit of reminiscing and joking, he merely summed up his own similar feelings with his latest "Aikenism", "problems make progress."

President Andrews then concluded the ceremony. He saw Freeman's speech as certainly a simplification of complex issues, but as a very attention directing and guiding light to the world's problems. He presented Freeman with some Vermont Maple Syrup, UVM bookends, and a $250 choice of books for the library.

New Student Travel Catalog Available

CIEE's new Student Travel Catalog is required reading for any young traveler who wants to plan a trip that's both fun and inexpensive. Wherever in the world a student is going in the U.S. or abroad, the Catalog can help.

First, there's the International Student Identity Card (ISIC)- internationally recognized proof of student status carried by over 1,000,000 students all over the world. The ISIC entitles holders to travel on student charter flights within Europe and on to Asia and Africa. On presentation of the ISIC, students may also take advantage of reduced fees at museums, theaters and cinemas and a worldwide network of student hostels and restaurants.

The Catalog also provides information on low-cost insurance, reduced rates on rail tickets and car leasing and it includes order forms for the best in student travel guidebooks. For everyone who is worried about the high cost of going abroad this year, the Catalog has information on CIEE's money-saving travel group charter flights. These flights are open to anyone in the educational community, but reservations and deposits are required at least 65 days before departure. The schedule includes over 90 round-trip flights connecting New York, Chicago, San Francisco and Los Angeles with Amsterdam, Paris, London, Dublin and Madrid. The Student Travel Catalog is free and available now from CIEE, a non-profit organization that has been serving travelling students for 27 years. Write for your copy to CIEE, Dept SC, 777 United Nations Plaza, New York, New York 10017, or 235 East Santa Clara Street, San Jose, California 95113.

656 – 2068

It's Everything You Ever Wanted From A Phone

COMPLETE CAMPUS PROGRAM INFORMATION:
speakers, films, concerts, meetings & miscellaneous
RIDES AND RIDERS WANTED
DIRECT INPUT INTO "THE EXCHANGE"
LOST AND FOUND
A NEW "HOT TIP" NEWSLINE TO THE CYNIC NEWS STAFF
CALL ANYTIME FROM 8 AM — 11:30 PM MON — FRI
9:30 AM — 11 PM SAT
2 PM — 11 PM SUN

We regret we cannot handle telephone listing information

The Cultural

by Stephen Tanner

"Have you all heard the one about the minister and his wife who lived in Boston? Well, it was early in the week and the minister was sitting in his study deciding on the topic for his Sunday sermon. His wife opened the door and asked him what he was going to preach come Sunday. The minister didn't really know what he was going to speak on that early in the week, so he said 'skiing.' His wife, taking him seriously, closed the door in a huff and didn't mention the sermon for the remainder of the week. In fact, she thought the topic was such a waste of time, she decided not to go to church that Sunday.

"The minister went to church that Sunday, but he delivered his sermon on sex.

"The following week, the minister's wife went shopping. In one of the open markets along a Boston street, she bumped into one of the parishioners from her husband's congregation.

"That was an inspiring sermon your husband delivered on Sunday," said the parishioner.

Burlin Case In

by Peter Duquette

On February 24, 1975, Vermonters For Justice released a report to the public on the Ponce shooting. Endorsed by Chittenden County Liberty Union, VVAW/WSO, The Feminist Union, United Farm Workers Support Committee, and the North Country Star, the report announced a new petition, asked 105 questions which the group felt were left unanswered by the official investigations, and made several demands of the city of Burlington Police Department.

The new petition, charging the city police with misconduct, has not yet been presented to the Board of Police Commissioners "...because since the petition was circulated, the commissioners have proven themselves totally incapable of handling charges of police misconduct. "To support this contention, the report cited as examples the fact that Detective Miles (the officer responsible for the shooting) was drinking the night of the shooting, and unspecified "revelations" made in the Lawrence trial.

Section I of the lengthy report is an introduction, briefly describing Ponce as "a relatively unskilled Puerto Rican worker... (who) attempted to become self-sufficient by getting a job as a dishwasher." It states that the rest of the report "is what we believe to be an objective presentation of the known facts and resulting questions which need to be answered before this matter is justly resolved."

Section II of the report deals with the informer. It presents the facts previously published, that is, that several days prior to the shooting the police were tipped off to the fact that Luis Ponce would rob the Red Lion Restaurant, and that the man would be armed. The report then goes on to ask the questions which it feels were left unanswered, questions such as who received the information, and what was said to the police by the informer.

The format in Section III follows the same pattern. The section deals with the stake-out, and again presents previously published facts.

SPAGHET
30 North St., Burling
SAINT PATRICK
HAPPY HOUR
ANYTHING
(beverages
Drop a dime i
POT O
St. Patty will
HAM & CA
DON'T MISS T

Was Successful

...operation ...as major ... which ...warfare, ...tion of ...on, and ...oblems as ...portunity" ...to start to ...ess. ...n had no ...rs to the ...ard, in a ...portunity' ...way, that ...start to ...ves with ...her than ...' national ...for global ...laboration ...increase ...odities; in ...a cartel ...to control ...for the ...all. ...inherent ...barriers to ... Freeman ...the present ...ct example ...rather than ...h, OPEC ...cycle their ...developed ...is harder ... National ...rotectionist ...o bar this ...ing and ...an over all ...down. He ...nationalist.

concerns as a form of mass suicide.

In proposing to try to meet the needs of the world's ever-growing population, Freeman said we all must think and realize the potential disaster which may come about if countries do not choose to collaborate better politically and economically.

The former Secretary called for action. His conclusion was superb and very apropos. He said, "Nature has provided us with two ends, one to think with and one to sit with. In facing these problems, depending upon which one we choose, 'Heads' we win, tails we lose.'"

The evening was soon coming to an end with a brief talk by former Gov. George Aiken who saw no reason to have to defend or to add to Freeman's words. With a bit of reminiscing and joking, he merely summed up his own similar feelings with his latest "Aikenism", "problems make progress."

President Andrews then concluded the ceremony. He saw Freeman's speech as certainly a simplification of complex issues, but as a very attention directing and guiding light to the world's problems. He presented Freeman with some Vermont Maple Syrup, UVM bookends, and a $250 choice of books for the library.

Catalog Available

...also take ...ced fees at ...and cinemas ...network of ...restaurants. ...o provides ...low-cost ...rates on rail ...ssing and it ...ms for the ...nt travel ...veryone who ...the high cost ...his year, the ...rmation on ...aving travel ...ights. These ...to anyone in the educational community, but reservations and deposits are required at least 65 days before departure. The schedule includes over 90 round-trip flights connecting New York, Chicago, San Francisco and Los Angeles with Amsterdam, Paris, London, Dublin and Madrid. The Student Travel Catalog is free and available now from CIEE, a non-profit organization that has been serving travelling students for 27 years. Write for your copy to CIEE, Dept SC, 777 United Nations Plaza, New York, New York 10017, or 235 East Santa Clara Street, San Jose, California 95113.

The Culturally Different Child: Defunis

by Stephen Tarnet

"Have you all heard the one about the minister and his wife who lived in Boston? Well, it was early in the week and the minister was sitting in his study deciding on the topic for his Sunday sermon. His wife opened the door and asked him what he was going to preach come Sunday. The minister didn't really know what he was going to speak on that early in the week, so he said 'skiing.' His wife, taking him seriously, closed the door in a huff and didn't mention the sermon for the remainder of the week. In fact, she thought the topic was such a waste of time, she decided not to go to church that Sunday.

"The minister went to church that Sunday, but he delivered his sermon on sex.

"The following week, the minister's wife went shopping. In one of the open markets along a Boston street, she bumped into one of the parishioners from her husband's congregation.

"That was an inspiring sermon your husband delivered on Sunday," said the parishioner.

The minister's wife was a little puzzled at the compliment. "I didn't think he knew that much about it," she said. "In fact, he's only tried it twice and both times he fell off."

The story says something about communication and that is what I'm here to talk to you about tonight."

So began Walter Leonard, the second speaker in the lecture series "The Culturally Different Child." Mr. Leonard is currently a special assistant to the President of Harvard University and his topic Thursday night was "Racism and Testing: the Defunis Case."

Mr. Leonard directed his remarks to the racism that has been imposed on black people by their not being able to attend schools or get the education necessary to integrate themselves in the system.

He said the educational process in the United States originated from an "economic decision and that any group that did not fit into the system that was created was denied access to that educational process."

Leonard stated the black people were such a group. "Slaves were brought to this country as functional units to be controlled and used as workers. Black people were denied a place in this country's school system."

"The Educational process in this country has done three things: (1) developed and maintained the social strata, (2) developed and controlled the distribution of wealth, and (3) maintained and controlled the political processes... It has been a sorting system in which the losers are the minorities, workers, poor, and uneducated, and the winners are the business and educational leaders...

"The American Educational system was organized to help the children of the well-born govern the children of the not-so-well-born."

Dr. Leonard substantiated his case with a lengthy review of the legal precedents set in education-related cases for blacks by the Supreme Court.

He said, "Defunis and similar cases, when stripped of legal jargon and obfuscatory issues, are basically sexist and racist because they proceed from the erroneous assumption that the presence of a black person automatically ushers in discrimination of white people."

Leonard said the Supreme Court "ducked the question" when it ruled the case moot last fall because Defunis had already graduated from Law School.

Leonard said Law schools had apparently reacted to the Defunis Case by altering their affirmative Action programs and were retreating drastically from the great outreach programs he had seen in the late sixties.

. . . News Analysis: Andrews and Salmon Disagree

(continued from page one)

indication of what we are, where we're going and what decisions are being made."

"A serious and constructive evaluation of where we are in Vermont higher education is a matter of priority policy consideration in the State," said Salmon, adding the hope that the new president "will be a big enough person to see higher education in Vermont in an umbrella-like spectrum."

Salmon added that the University president should come from a high academic background, have a sense of fiscal awareness, have expertise in the field of labor relations, have a sense of integrity ("integrity is tremendously important and sometimes it's hard to find under all those other qualities.")

He hopes that the committee would not engage in "ideological screening."

"I think the next president must have the capacity to build bridges with the student body."

Salmon wished the committee good luck in their "unenviable task" and added, "I am sure the ultimate decision will make us all proud to be Vermonters."

Andrews gave an historical sketch of his days at the University, from the time when it was an "untouchable" institution, never criticized by the press and of highest priority in Montpelier, through the turbulent years of student unrest, to the present day when it must compete for funding and work hard to maintain academic quality.

Andrews predicted that what the State must look towards in the future is high technology and a labor-intensive industry. "We cannot expect any significant growth in the State's economy from agriculture," he said. Tourism was labeled "shaky and unpredictable - a bad winter is a disaster," and in a state where the future lies in industry, people will look very hard at the system of public education.

Along with good health care, they will demand good public schools and high quality academic institutions, Andrews believes; therefore, the new president must regard the academic quality of the University as crucial for the good of the State.

Andrews spent some time in executive session with the Search Committee on more personal views of the presidency.

In other action, Committee Chairman Robert Boardman announced the division of members into three separate subcommittees to facilitate the search process. Sub-committee decisions will be subject to the approval of all the other committee members.

Selma Bloomberg, representative of the Non-Academic Employees' Council, will chair the "Committee to Determine Qualifications," consisting of Rep. Louise Swainbank, UVM Trustee Robert Blundrman and student David Schwartz. "The committee will be of short duration and will meet before the screening committee can function," said Boardman.

Professor Robert O Sinclair will chair the "Screening Committee," consisting of Professor Donald Musser, Trustee Joseph Corbett, and student Teena Heck.

Dr. Norman Alpert will chair the "Visitation Committee," consisting of Trustee Paul Low, Richard Wolfe, president of the Alumni Council, Professor Sam Bugorad, and student David Schwartz.

Burlington Shooting Case In Review (Part III)

by Peter Duquette

On February 24, 1975, Vermonters For Justice released a report to the public on the Ponce shooting. Endorsed by Chittenden County Liberty Union, VVAW/WSO, The Feminist Union, United Farm Workers Support Committee, and the North Country Star, the report announced a new petition, asked 105 questions which the group felt were left unanswered by the official investigations, and made several demands of the city of Burlington Police Department.

The new petition, charging the city police with misconduct, has not yet been presented to the Board of Police Commissioners "...because since the petition was circulated, the commissioners have proven themselves totally incapable of handling charges of police misconduct. "To support this contention, the report cited as examples the fact that Detective Miles (the officer responsible for the shooting) was drinking the night of the shooting, and unspecified "revelations" made in the Lawrence trial.

Section I of the lengthy report is an introduction, briefly describing Ponce as "a relatively unskilled Puerto Rican worker... (who) attempted to become self-sufficient by getting a job as a dishwasher." It states that the rest of the report "is what we believe to be an objective presentation of the known facts and resulting questions which need to be answered before this matter is justly resolved."

Section II of the report deals with the informer. It presents the facts previously published, that is, that several days prior to the shooting the police were tipped off to the fact that Luis Ponce would rob the Red Lion Restaurant, and that the man would be armed. The report then goes on to ask the questions which it feels were left unanswered, questions such as who received the information, and what was said to the police by the informer.

The format in Section III follows the same pattern. The section deals with the stake-out, and again presents previously published facts. Briefly, that the alley outside the Red Lion was staked out by four police officers, who observed Ponce break a rear window, enter the establishment and leave with two objects in his hands. The question section is lengthy, asking if any officers were stationed inside the restaurant, what time did the stakeout begin, and other questions relating to the conduct of the operation.

The objects which Ponce carried in his hands at the time of the shooting is the subject of Section IV of the report. The section states that Ponce carried a pair of wire cutters in his hand wrapped in a cloth. The questions relate to this object. The report asks...(43) "Did any of the officers see Ponce wrap his hand? If so, at what point?" And other questions relating to the size and shape of the object and whether it could be mistaken for a handgun.

Section V is concerned with the shooting itself. The published facts are that upon leaving the restaurant, Ponce was approached by the arresting officers and ordered against the wall. Ponce did not comply with the order and was placed against the wall by the arresting officers. The man reportedly made a quick movement away from the wall and was at this moment shot by Detective Miles. The questions relate to Ponce's conduct during the arrest, the conduct of the arresting officers, and the sequence of events which led to the pulling of the trigger by Miles.

Section VI of the report deals with police procedures and the investigations into the incident. It calls into question the validity of the investigations since the first inquest was conducted by the Burlington Police. "...Men with whom the detectives have worked and associated for years." The report also questions the investigation conducted by the States Attorney's office since it was conducted by "people who work in close cooperation with the members of the BPD." It also asks why the city has so far refused to order an investigation by elected officials into the shooting. The questions relate to "How... Miles, Goodrich, Larock and Moran performed as policemen." For example, (90) "Were there any visible bruises or lacerations on Ponce's face?" and (96) "Were fingerprints taken? If so, were Ponce's fingerprints on the inside doorknob?"

Section VII is the conclusion of the report. It concludes that the denial of a public hearing of the case is an infringement on the public's right to know the full facts pertaining to the incident.

The report also makes certain demands on the city of Burlington. These demands are:

1) The immediate suspension of Detective Miles, with pay, pending the outcome of a public hearing.

2) A public hearing with the following conditions:

a. The police commissioners must disqualify themselves from acting as judges because their close association with the police creates conflict of interest.

b. A panel to sit in judgment who are free of political or personal ties to the police.

c. A guarantee that all reasonable questions submitted to the panel will be answered.

d. Subpoena power for the panel.

3) The creation of an independent civilian review board to investigate and judge future charges of police misconduct.

4) Re-evaluation of police training and procedures.

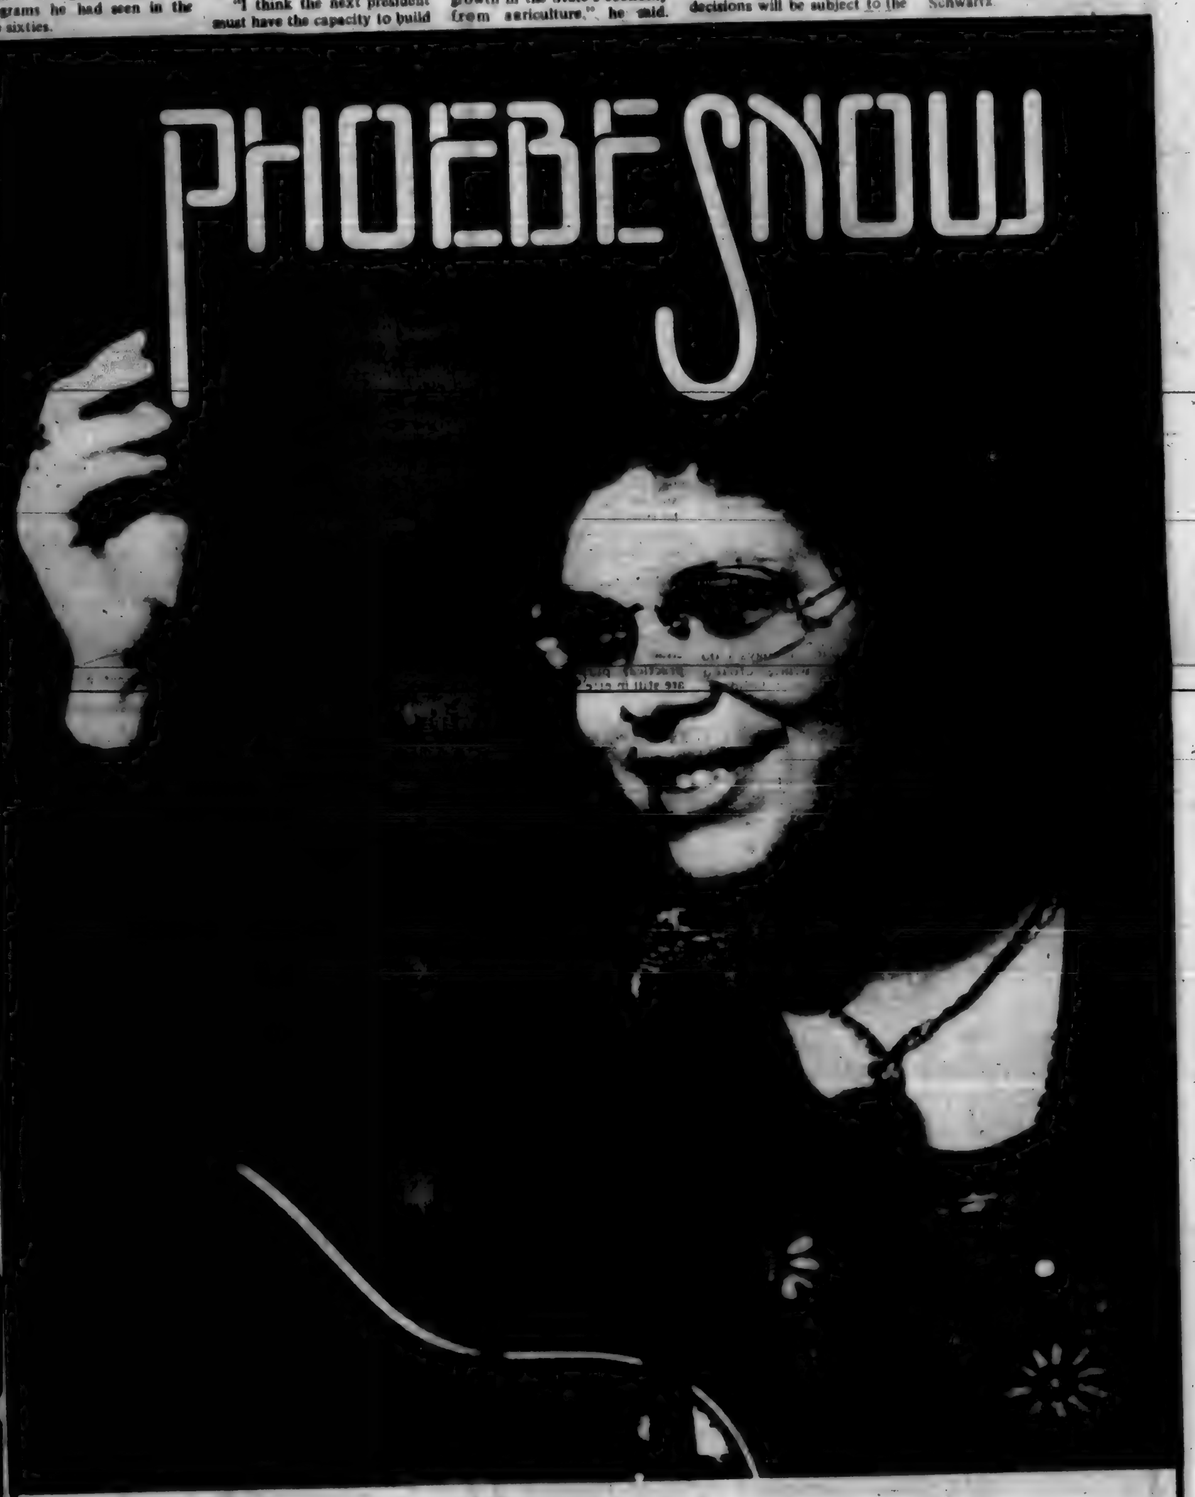
5) Burlington police immediately stop endangering lives by pointing cocked revolvers at suspect's heads.

With its questions and demands clearly stated, the report ends.

SPAGHETTI HUT
30 North St., Burlington 863-9893
SAINT PATRICK DAY SPECIAL
HAPPY HOUR ALL DAY
ANYTHING ON MENU
(beverages excluded)
Drop a dime in the
POT OF GOLD—
St. Patty will pay for meal!!
HAM & CABBAGE 50°
DON'T MISS THIS SPECIAL

WORLD CAMPUS AFLOAT
JOIN US!

Sail either in September or February, with the ship as your classroom and the world your campus . . . combine accredited study with fascinating visits to the storied ports of the Caribbean, Africa, the Mediterranean, and the Americas. Over 10,000 undergraduates from 480 colleges have already sailed with WCA — join several thousand and apply now. Write today for free catalog.
WCA, Chapman College Box F, Orange, CA 92666

PHOEBE SNOW


"....Undoubtedly the most exciting talent and important musical force to emerge this year..."
Appearing at:
Memorial Aud. (Univ. of Vermont)
Burlington, Vermont
March 17
Available on Shelter Records and tapes (SR-2109)
Produced by Dino Airale
SHELTER
Distributed by MCA Records, Inc.

Special Shipment of REMAINDER BOOKS

JUST ARRIVED!

BACKGAMMON-The Quick Course to Winning Play. By Don Stern. Dozens of illustrated diagrams in this easy-to-follow text. Complete introduction to the game sensation of the 1970's. Explains theory, strategy, offensive and defensive tactics, betting and tournaments, and psychology of the game. Published at $7.95.
Only $2.98

THINGS TO MAKE WITH PAPER: 187 Fun Projects. By Dan Mursen and Allanore Rose. The beautiful, amusing and useful things described in this book can all be made from the paper that everyone has around the house with only an occasional sales from the stationery or art store. Brighten up the house with these creative ideas! Full directions for making 187 objects plans-photos. Published at $8.95.
Only $3.98

AMERICA'S SEWING BOOK. By Sandra Ley. Beginning with the choice and care of sewing machines, including attachments, and irons, this definitive guide to home sewing covers clothes construction, home furnishings, mending, and alterations. Over 400 diagrams illustrate every detail described in the text and a special chapter devoted to children's clothes. Indexed. Published at $9.95.
Only $5.98

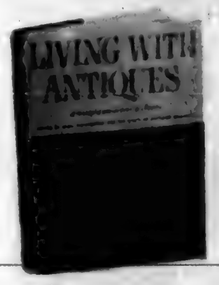
THE COMPLETE BOOK OF KNITTING. By Barbara Abbey. Over 300 drawings and illustrations; 200 pattern stitches. Thoroughly explains all the basic procedures of knitting, from "A" (Abmoss) ways of casting-on to the final details of blocking and lining garments. Tells how to knit in both English and Continental styles. With this superb guide, anyone can learn to knit well, to undertake any set of instructions and to adapt and create designs. Published at $12.95.
Only $5.98

STAINED GLASS: A Step-by-Step Guide. By Walter W. Judson. Here is a complete guide to the appreciation and creation of stained glass, by an expert in the field. It is an extensive how-to manual that explains everything from drawing and cartooning to cutting the glass, and leading and soldering. Published at $4.95.
Only $1.98

FONDUE, CHAFING DISH AND CASSEROLE COOKERY. By Margaret Deeds Murphy. Contains hundreds of interesting and taste-tempting recipes and will become your one-volume guide to easy, informal entertaining. A fantastic guide to great, great dishes that also let you spend more time with your guests and family! Published at $5.95.
Only $2.98

THE YANKEE COOK BOOK. By Imogene Wolcott. This revised edition includes the chowders, fish cakes, lobster and native fish, cranberry dishes, johnnycake, baked Indian pudding, pies, dumplings, and hundreds of other authentic recipes that have made Yankee cooking famous. Regional articles offer the reader in search of a recipe pleasant browsing. 388 pp; index. Published at $6.95.
Only $2.98

LIVING OFF THE LAND. By Gary P. Grandner. This handy book covers the subject of survival in the wilderness for anyone who hikes, backpacks, cycles or lives in a trailer. Published at $5.95.
Only $1.98



INDIAN ART IN AMERICA: The Arts and Crafts of the North American Indian. By Frederick J. Dockstader. 70 Color and 180 black and white illustrations. The first volume to fully describe and illustrate the arts of the Indian tribes of the U.S. and Canada. Published at $27.50.
Only $12.98

PICASSO. Over 100 reproduction in color and black and white on coated stock. The most outstanding personality of our times, the artist who dominated the development of the visual arts and whose work is a monument to his supreme genius. Unsurpassed, his visual originality and power of construction have come to be universally admitted. A magnificent collection of this master's work.
Special Value $3.98

THE MYSTIC SEAPORT COOKBOOK. By Lillian Langseth-Christensen. Like the seaport itself, this book is completely authentic in its background and presentation, yet put into excellent order for modern-day use. Features 350 years of New England cookery, which evolved out of recipes brought over by the early settlers, out of natural foods they found here, out of Indian cooking, but, above all, out of the sea. Includes an interesting section about Mystic Seaport. Published at $8.95.
Only $2.98

LIVING WITH ANTIQUES: A Treasury of Private Homes in America. Ed. by Alice Winchester and staff of Antiques Magazine. An intimate tour of 40 private homes in America whose owners cherish the distinctive beauty and variety of the antiques they live with. From New England to California ... town houses and country estates ... French antiques from Rococo to Neo-classic ... treasures in ceramics, silver, and painting. 366 illustrations 16 pp. full Color Plates. Thousands of words of engrossing text. 288 pp. Published at $16.00.
Only $7.98

AMERICAN COUNTRY TINWARE 1700-1900. By Margaret Coffin. The simple beauty of country tinware has a claim that appeals to all antiquarians. In this illustrated history, the development of tinsmithing and the growth of the use of tin is discussed with major emphasis on identification and care of old tinware. A must for collectors. Illustrated in black and white as well as an 8 page color section. Published at $12.50.
Only $5.98

CINEMA OF THE FANTASTIC. By Chris Steinbrunner and Burt Goldblatt. Over 350 photographs guide us through a fascinating excursion into the bizarre, satanic and haunting film world of the incredible. A picture-and-text documentation of major milestones of this fabulous specialty of cinematic art. Published at $12.50.
Only $5.98

THE FRED ASTAIRE AND GINGER ROGERS BOOK. By Arlene Croce. Over 100 photographs from the 1930's films of Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers as they danced a chain of love duets that remain today the untouchable standard for American theatrical dancing. A definitive book on a memorable alliance. Published at $9.95.
Only $3.98

ORGANIC GARDENING. By Chuck Pendergast. A guide to the fundamental concepts and methods of organic gardening. Learn how to grow your own fruits and vegetables the safe natural healthy way. Published at $4.95.
Only $1.49

COMPLETE GUIDE TO HUNTING ACROSS NORTH AMERICA. Brian W. Dalrymple. The vast hunting opportunities in the U.S. and Canada are exhaustively researched, compiled and evaluated in this highly detailed, comprehensive guide. Specially prepared maps pinpoint Game Management areas, Waterfowl Refuges, State and National Parks and Forests and other hunting grounds. Statistics of area, population, hunting license sales, game kills for each state and province. Published at $10.00
Only $5.98

UNIVERSITY STORE
ON THE CAMPUS

Frontier Nursing In Kentucky

by Stephen W. Tanner

"It sounded really exciting and at that point I decided I was up for a new experience," said Cathy Barkley, UVM junior, about her two months working with Frontier Nursing in Hyden, Kentucky.

Frontier Nursing is an organization which serves the inhabitants of the rural and mountainous Leslie County in Kentucky. It was started some fifty years ago to provide basic health services for these neglected and impoverished people.

"I had been through two years of school and by that time I wanted to try something where I could see the practical results of an extraordinary organization."

As it turned out, Cathy saw how Frontier Nurses, living in outposts in the Appalachian Mountains, ran their clinics. They provide health and emergency care for such things as child births, accidents, and sufferers of old age problems.

"The most meaningful part of my experience in Leslie County was the time spent living in an outpost and travelling on a nurse's daily rounds." Usually the nurse and her carrier, Cathy; had to travel over the rugged terrain in a four-wheel drive jeep just to reach one patient and his family.

"The higher up we got into the hills, the worse the living conditions became. People lived in anything from a small house to a one-room shack. Of course, in many of these homes, there was no electricity or water.

Families are reducing in size due to the introduction of birth control. Older families living in the back woods are generally much larger and as a result living quarters are cramped and inadequate.

"On daily rounds we were able to visit up to six families. When we arrived at a patient's house, the entire family was usually present. Such a situation allowed the family to see and learn about the type of care the patient required. While the patient was being checked, the family could join in on the recovery process."

The people of Leslie County suffer from many health problems. Old age, poor nutrition, diabetes, cancer, and heart conditions are only a few of the typical maladies. The principal industry is mining.

Nearly all the families helped by Frontier Nurses had members working in the mines.

The Hurricane Mine Disaster in 1969 left many families hurt in Leslie County. Aside from mine disasters that do occur, Black Lung Disease takes a greater toll. Many Frontier Nurses work with Black Lung patients.

"Basically, what I was involved in was working with a nurse distributing medicines, teaching families how to care for the sickly, and promoting generally better health such as diet and bathing. For example, on a visit to a patient suffering from Black Lung Disease, we first had to check patients' general condition, then teach his wife how to provide greater comfort and finally to provide oxygen and encourage respiratory exercises."

The fate of Black Lung patients is usually slow degeneration of the body. Families are emotionally helped by the support and companionship of the Frontier Nurses.

Through the years, Frontier Nurses has obtained the confidence of the Leslie Mountain people, but there are many people who are not even reached by Frontier Nurses. For those who are, services are limited because the organization relies on private donations.

"Frontier Nurses has overcome the limitations imposed by numbers of personnel and facilities at their disposal. Since its inception, the organization has provided care for hundreds who otherwise would never have received it."

Cathy concluded, "The experience showed me what could be done in a remote area starting from nothing and developing into an efficient and respected organization." She is now studying nursing and hopes to return to Kentucky some time in the future.

CLASSIFIED

For Sale: Earth Shoe Boots, excellent condition. Size: 7.25 w / 5.75 m. Best offer ($45.00 new). Please call 985-8575.

Professional Services: Grad Students, authors, researchers: Freelance editor, experienced, will help you over the hurdles. I copyedit, proofread, type and/or index. P.O. Box 132 Castleton or 1-265-3805, evenings.

Wanted: Dodge Dart, Dodge Lancer or Plymouth Valiant. 1965 or older. Body must be in excellent condition. Call Tom, 862-7007.

For Sale: Music Master Fender Bass; and a 30 W Premier Bass Amplifier. Please call Pat at 862-5837 after 7 p.m.

For Sale: Car-top Carrier, 62" wide, with straps. Aluminum, can be modified easily to carry canoes, bicycles, kayaks, etc. $10. Also wooden cut-out for carrying Outing Club Kayak $10. 864-4231 after 7 p.m.

Wanted: Used wet-suits, almost any size. Call 864-4231 after 7 p.m. or 656-3012.

Wanted: A home for a superb pair of slightly used VW snowtires (Bias-ply) at half cost. 864-4231 after 7 p.m.

Wanted: A mate for my lonely 210cm Splitkein/Bass Splitkana X-Country ski, to buy or sell. 864-4231 after 7 p.m.

Two Free Tickets to the Duke Ellington Orchestra March 22 at Memorial Auditorium. One hitch: review the concert for the Cynic Models and New Faces Wanted for photographic work in Vermont area. Part-time and week-ends. Previous experience not essential. Good Wage. Write for Details: Scott Collier, P.O. Box 273, West Springfield, Mass. 01089 snap shot helpful.

summer in europe
65 DAY ADVANCE PAYMENT REQUIRED
U.S. GOVT. APPROVED
CHARTERS LESS THAN 1/2 NYC ECONOMY FARE on travel charters
CALL TOLL FREE 1-800-325-4067

. . . King of the Blues

(continued from page six)

environment had changed, the complexion of audiences was different – but B.B.'s blues remained as pure as ever."

"Interviewed by Time Magazine in 1969, B.B. said, 'People are starting to go with me. I think it's because they know I'm not kidding out there. Blues is the message, and they're getting it.'"

"His message in blues is bold and in language not meant to be misunderstood. He writes the words for about 60 per cent of his songs. Here's a sample from 'Why I Sing the Blues:'

'When I first got the blues, they brought me over on the ship,
Men was standing over me, and a lot more with a whip,
And everybody want to know, why I sing the blues,
Well, I've been around a long time, I've really paid my dues.'

In the song he is a spokesman for his race, but a lot of people interpret the last two lines as a more personal statement."

"B.B. was born as Riley King 45 years ago on a plantation between Indianola and Itta Bena, Mississippi. When he was four years old, his parents separated; at nine his mother was dead and he lived on a farm where he worked as a milkboy and general hand. His employers let him go to school during the rainy season or when work was slack, and B.B. managed to get through the ninth grade."

"A preacher uncle taught him to sing and play the guitar for church services when B.B. was about 14 years old. Soon after that he bought his first guitar (a red one) for $8. In 1947 he headed for Memphis ('to a Mississippian like me, it was like going to Europe'), where he landed a job as a disk jockey and singer on the Negro-staffed radio station WDIA.' His radio show expanded to 2¼ hours daily, and he began playing one-nighters in the Memphis, Little Rock and later, Nashville areas."

"But the blues had a stigma. Blacks and whites alike considered it to be 'dirty' music, and many wouldn't give it or the people who played and sang it a chance."

"It was during one of his one-night stands in the sticks – in Twist, Arkansas – that B.B. found his first Lucille (the name he's given to all of his guitars since then). It all started when two men started fighting in the club in which B.B. was playing and singing. A kerosene stove was knocked over, fire started spreading in the frame structure and everyone made fast steps for the nearest door. Safely outside, B.B. suddenly remembered that he'd left his guitar behind, and dashed back. He grabbed the guitar and made it out again just as the place caved in (killing two other men). He later learned that the fight was started over a woman named Lucille, and decided to give the name to his guitar – 'to remind myself never to do anything that foolish again.'"

"B.B. feels that he can play the blues anytime, in spite of or because of whatever mood he happens to be in. 'I have my good and bad nights. Maybe my guitar doesn't sound good to me or the auditorium has bad acoustics. But I love to play, and I give it everything I've got every time I'm on stage.'"

"In the late 1950's, he began punctuating phrases by 'bending' notes. He would hit a note, press the string across the frets with his fingers to raise its pitch, and hang on. Other guitarists had done this before him – Lonnie Johnson comes to mind – but the frequent use of bent notes has become one of his trademarks."

"B.B.'s advice to electric guitar students is pointed and potent. 'Get yourself a teacher and learn everything you can about your instrument. Even though a guy may want to play the blues just like me, he shouldn't start out just playing. He should take lessons and learn to read music. I can read, but only very slowly. I never had any music in school, but ever since then I've really studied. Cats shouldn't just try to play – they should try to learn as much as they can.'"

"B.B. King should know. He's done a world of playing and studying since the day he bought his first red [illegible]."

WE MADE IT!

WASHABLE COTTON TWILL
RED-NAVY-KHAKI-SLATE
BACK WRAP SKIRT $12.50
PANTS $14.50

DESIGNED & MADE BY US FOR YOU AT
THE COMPANY STORE 117 Church St. Burl.

S.A. Films Pre

The SA Film schedule for this week includes an interesting combination of films, ranging from The Jazz Singer, the first talking picture, to The Bride of Frankenstein, a classic horror picture, to The Trojan Women, a classic of the Greek theater.

Tonight there will be a double feature. At 7:30 The Pirate, a 1948 color musical with Judy Garland and Gene Kelly and directed by Vincente Minnelli, will be presented. Then at 9:30 The Jazz Singer will be shown. This film was made in 1927 and has the distinction of being the first picture with sound. It stars Al Jolson, Warner Oland, May McAvoy and Otto Lederer. It won a Special Academy Award for "Marking An Epoch in Motion Picture History." It is the story of a singer who chooses show business rather than following the wishes of his orthodox Jewish father to become a cantor. If you are an Al Jolson fan, this is a film that you should not miss. If you have never heard Al Jolson, this is DEFINITELY a film you should not miss. Both films will be shown in 101 Votey.

On Friday night all of you horror film freaks will get another chance to see two of the classic
there Frankens starring
Clive, F
Ernest T
by Jame acknowled the Fran wild Goth horror d feature encounter the docto
a female and a fi that rank spectacul horror fil
Black Cat
Basil R
Crawford
Hugh He
Albert S atmosphe horror, d a group gather at the "read corpses scene. T shown i and 10
being pr time. Ad

. . . Vermont S

(continued from page one)

against the tunnel. Draper indicated that other Burlington officials were also against the underpass.

Why is negative sentiment surfacing at this late date, only days before the final vote? Peter MacAusland and Scott Bauer, representatives of UVM's student body have actively opposed the underpass since the spring of '74. Yet until now their careful researching of alternatives and constant attendance at committee meetings has been virtually unsupported.

Draper defended his position, attributing his recent support to the state's current money pinch. It seems that this crucial factor has played into the hands of those who have consistently opposed the tunnel.
cong percep financ
Vermon
Stem committ
they w back to

Explo

(CP Stanfo unveile they s in ca machin
by ca explos
A resea subat
the s

MAGRAMS
MAGRAMS
IMPAC
MAGRAMS
MAGRAMS

WEATHER WORTHY
FOR OUTDOOR DO

...g of the Blues

...ged, the ...ences was ...B.'s blues ...ave." ...by Time ...B.B. said, ...to go with ...ause they ...ding out ...ange, and ...

...blues is ...not meant ...He writes ...t 60 per ...Here's a ...Sing the ...

...the blues. ...ver on the ...

...s over me, ...a whip, ...want to ...blues, ...around a ...y paid my ...

...spokesman ...t of people ...o lines as a ...ment." ...as Riley ...ago on a ...Indianola ...Mississippi. ...ars old, his ...at nine his ...nd he lived ...worked as ...eral hand ...him go to ...any season ...slack, and ...t through ...

...cle taught ...y the guitar ...when B.B. ...old. Soon ...ht his first ...for $8. In ...r Memphis ...like me, it ...Europe"), ...ob as a disk ...er on the ...dio station ...dto show ...ours daily, ...playing ...Memphis, ...nd, later, ...

...ad a stigma. ...ites alike ...be 'dirty' ...wouldn't give ...who played ...on.

"It was during one of his one-night stands in the sticks – in Twist, Arkansas – that B.B. found his first Lucille (the name he's given to all of his guitars since then). It all started when two men started fighting in the club in which B.B. was playing and singing. A kerosene stove was knocked over, fire started spreading in the frame structure and everyone made fast steps for the nearest door. Safely outside, B.B. suddenly remembered that he'd left his guitar behind, and dashed back. He grabbed the guitar and made it out again just as the place caved in (killing two other men). He later learned that the fight was started over a woman named Lucille, and decided to give the name to his guitar – 'to remind myself never to do anything that foolish again.'"

"B.B. feels that he can play the blues anytime, in spite of or because of whatever mood he happens to be in. 'I have my good and bad nights. Maybe my guitar doesn't sound good to me or the auditorium has bad acoustics. But I love to play, and I give it everything I've got every time I'm on stage.'"

"In the late 1950's, he began punctuating phrases by 'bending' notes. He would hit a note, press the string across the frets with his fingers to raise its pitch, and hang on. Other guitarists had done this before him – Lonnie Johnson comes to mind – but the frequent use of bent notes has become one of his trademarks."

"B.B.'s advice to electric guitar students is pointed and potent. 'Get yourself a teacher and learn everything you can about your instrument. Even though a guy may want to play the blues just like me,' he shouldn't start out just playing. He should take lessons and learn to read music. I can read, but only very slowly. I never had any music in school, but ever since then I've really studied. Cats shouldn't just try to play – they should try to learn as much as they can.'"

"B.B. King should know. He's done a world of playing and studying since the day he bought his first red [illegible] Mississippi."

IT!

WASHABLE COTTON TWILL
RED•NAVY•KHAKI•SLATE
BACK WRAP SKIRT $12.50
PANTS $14.50

...OR YOU AT

...ORE 117 Church St. Burl.

S.A. Films Presents. . . The Trojan Women

The SA Film schedule for this week includes an interesting combination of films, ranging from The Jazz Singer, the first talking picture, to The Bride of Frankenstein, a classic horror picture, to The Trojan Women, a classic of the Greek theater.

Tonight there will be a double feature. At 7:30 The Pirate, a 1948 color musical with Judy Garland and Gene Kelly and directed by Vincente Minnelli, will be presented. Then at 9:30 The Jazz Singer will be shown. This film was made in 1927 and has the distinction of being the first picture with sound. It stars Al Jolson, Warner Oland, May McAvoy and Otto Lederer. It won a Special Academy Award for "Marking An Epoch in Motion Picture History." It is the story of a singer who chooses show business rather than following the wishes of his orthodox Jewish father to become a cantor. If you are an Al Jolson fan, this is a film that you should not miss. If you have never heard Al Jolson, this is DEFINITELY a film you should not miss. Both films will be shown in 101 Votey.

On Friday night all of you horror film freaks will get another chance to see two of the classic horror films. First, there is The Bride of Frankenstein, a 1935 film starring Boris Karloff, Colin Clive, Elsa Lanchester, and Ernest Thesiger and directed by James Whale. Generally acknowledged to be the best of the Frankenstein series, this wild Gothic concoction by ace horror director James Whale features the Monster's encounter with a blind man, the doctor's manufacturing of a female mate for his creation, and a final laboratory scene that ranks as one of the most spectacular climaxes of the horror film. Next, there is The Black Cat, a 1941 film starring Basil Rathbone, Broderick Crawford, Bela Lugosi, and Hugh Herbert and directed by Albert S. Rogell. In a finely atmospheric film that mixes horror, comedy, and mystery, a group of shallow socialites gather at a creepy mansion for the reading of a will; then corpses begin littering the scene. These two films will be shown in 101 Votey at 7:30 and 10 p.m. with both films being presented at each show time. Admission is $1.

On Saturday night Katherine Hepburn will be seen in The Trojan Women. Produced, directed and written by Michael Cacoyannis and adapted from the great play by Euripides which was first presented in Greece in 415 B.C., this is the dramatic story of the fall of Troy and the tragic fates of its women. The film also stars Vanessa Redgrave, Genevieve Bujold, and Irene Pappas. Playboy called the film "a theatrical tour-de-force," and the Christian Science Monitor called it "a classic filmed with class." Judith Crist in New York Magazine remarks that "Katherine Hepburn as Hecuba reaches moments of simple magnificence."... The Trojan Women should not be missed. This film will be shown at 7:30 and 9:30 in 101 Votey.

Then on Monday night the French film series continues with Les Bonne Femmes. This 1960 film, one of the most powerful and compassionate of its director Claude Chabrol, centers around the dreams and lives of four Parisian girls, all of whom work in an electrical appliance store. Each is let down in her hopes for happiness. Jane, the most aggressive, is depressed at the end of her one-night sexual relationships. Rita is disillusioned when she discovers the extent to which her fiance is dominated by his parents. Ginette breaks down with shame when her friends discover that she brings a trace of glamour into her empty life by singing in a cheap theater. Jacqueline, the most timid and innocent of the four, is infatuated with a mysterious motorcyclist who follows her all over Paris; her worshipper-from-afar proves to be a psychotic killer, who eventually rapes and strangles her. Chabrol has said of the film, "My four girls are really facets of one girl. Their adventures are inseparable. They are four aspects of contemporary romanticism." Les Bonnes Femmes ends on a scene of a girl, not seen earlier, smiling happily as the dances with a romantic stranger. One senses that she is about to begin the same cycle of hope and frustration experienced by the other girls. By the very intensity of the girl's smile, Chabrol avoids the grotesque and bitter irony on which the film could easily have ended, and substitutes feelings of pathos, melancholy and hope.

Gavin Millar remarks that the film expresses "the apparent impossibility and the undeniable necessity of love... Les Bonnes Femmes is the saddest of Chabrol's films, and the most hopeful..." The film will be shown at 7:30 and 9:30 p.m. in 101 Votey.

. . . Vermont Senate Defeats S.93

(continued from page one)

against the tunnel. Draper indicated that other Burlington officials were also against the underpass.

Why is negative sentiment surfacing at this late date, only days before the final vote? Peter MacAusland and Scott Bauer, representatives of UVM's student body have actively opposed the underpass since the spring of '74. Yet until now their careful researching of alternatives and constant attendance at committee meetings has been virtually unsupported.

Draper defended his position, attributing his recent support to the state's current money pinch. It seems that this crucial factor has played into the hands of those who have consistently opposed the tunnel. Officialdom must be congratulated for its perceptiveness toward the financial stringencies in Vermont.

Members of the institutions committee have indicated that they would like to send the bill back to the House floor for a final vote. Wednesday's committee meeting will probably end with a committee decision. Not without discussion though. UVM's administrators favoring the underpass are on the guest list for the committee meeting.

Explore Your Way To Better Health

(CPS) – Five scientists at Stanford University have unveiled a new machine which they say will cause a revolution in cancer treatment. The machine destroys cancer cells by causing miniature nuclear explosions in their atoms.

According to the researchers, a stream of subatomic particles is shot into the atoms of cancer cells from 60 different infections at once, making the atoms explode. The team says that the technique can kill tumors while causing "little damage" to nearby healthy tissues.

The team speculates that about three to five years of further testing will be necessary before the device can be used on humans.

SAGA SEZ

Vegie Programs Worthy And Expanding

Although it is not always suitable to blow your own horn, the Vegetarian programs at Living/Learning and Wright are worthy of some fresh print. These programs, though not unique, are far from common-place in college board operations. Still our sizable vegetarian population has created a need for the program and as Walt May added "the students like these items so we like to make them." At Wright, the program is run by Steve Holtz in conjunction with the manager, Mary Ann Dywan. The Living/Learning Center's program is slightly different due to the involvement of Laurie Bobker and Brett Gold, two students from the Center's Nutrition program. They aide in the menu selection and meal preparation, under the supervision of head cook Gerry Greenland.

According to Gerry the meatless items take more time to prepare than normal entrees, but are well worth it, since they are a break in the routine, challenging and very popular. His final comment was his interest in perhaps expanding the menu of vegie entrees. If someone has a recipe which can be used for 200-300 stop in to either Wright or Living/Learning and let the cook know what it is.

In the area of student complaints we recently received an anonymous letter complimenting our food program; thanks, it's nice to know not everything is bad. In addition to compliments there was mention of problems during dinner hours in our music and dogs roaming around. If the music creates a poor dinner atmosphere, please ask the manager to lower the volume or change the station. He'll be happy to do so. As for dogs running freely about the dining hall. This is a problem we need your help on. Until students no longer feed the dogs or open the doors for them our staff can only partially solve this problem. With a little help from everyone this problem could, however, be easily solved.

. . . Cheating Alive And Well And Living In Colleges

(continued from page four)

the draft and that the lower rates for driving insurance go to A and B students."

Most psychologists and school officials have agreed that the roots of cheating are in the elementary school system.

A 1970 study by Leroy Barney revealed that 70% of all grade school children cheat. The study found that children cheat to hide their misunderstanding of the assignment, to prevent others from thinking they are stupid or to escape from trying to live up to unrealistic expectations.

This trend is seen throughout the continuing educational careers of students, the study showed. A New York Times survey has found that this fearful obsession with grades has led to students sabotaging the work of others to improve their class standing. The survey also showed that students feel their grade equals their personal net worth.

Ironically, the net worth of the grade itself has been declining. Grade inflation – the recent abundance of A's and B's – has led employers to resort to old qualification standards. "Better a Princeton A than an A from a less familiar school," said one admissions officer.

Most piecemeal solutions to the present grading/cheating problem have met with limited success. Although the pass-fail system has been initiated at many colleges, it has come under attack because of some recent studies that claimed graduate and professional schools looked down on a transcript laden with 'pass' grades.

Some have said that one strategy might be to let grade inflation run its course. If grades become an ineffective means of evaluation, then a new system would have to be designed, they have reasoned.

Educator William Glasser, author of Schools Without Failure, argued that the ultimate solution to cheating would be "a grading system which would not rate students against each other, thus eliminating the psychological factor of failure." By reducing the stress of competition, said Glasser, cheating would also decrease.

If those who side with Glasser are right, cheating will not stop until the motivations for cheating are eliminated and the root of the problem attacked.

MAGRAMS
MAGRAMS
IMPACT 75
MAGRAMS
MAGRAMS

WEATHER WORTHY SLICKERS $7.95 - $12 - $15
FOR OUTDOOR DO-ERS

These bright beautiful hooded slickers of polyvinyl complements you and the weather foul or fair, always keeps you comfortably dry and protected as clouds burst and winds howl.
A. Classic reversible, available in red, navy, green assorted reverses $12
B. Waisted hood, in yellow, pink, green, navy, $15
C. Yellow Slicker, 7/8 — all come in sizes S-M-L (available in XL).

Magrams Way In — Main Level

For over 130 years we've been using the word "quality" in our advertising. Once again, we'd like to tell you what we mean by it.

Our brewery in 1844.

Blue Ribbon quality means the best tasting beer you can get. A quality achieved only by using the finest ingredients and by adhering to the most rigid of brewing standards.

In Milwaukee, the beer capital of the world, Pabst Blue Ribbon continues to be the overwhelming best seller year after year. Blue Ribbon outsells its nearest competitor nearly five to one. That's why we feel we've earned the right to challenge any beer.

So here's the Pabst challenge: Taste and compare the flavor of Blue Ribbon with the beer you're drinking and learn what Pabst quality in beer is all about. But don't take our word for it. Taste our word for it.

Pabst. Since 1844.
The quality has always come through.

PABST BREWING COMPANY, MILWAUKEE, WIS., PEORIA HEIGHTS, ILL., NEWARK, N.J., LOS ANGELES, CAL., PABST, GA.

Twenty-One Years of Radio At UVM: WRUV

by Tim Lewis

This weekend marks the start of a week long celebration of the 21st Anniversary of WRUV. WRUV is the student radio organization at the University. They operate two broadcast outlets: WRUV-FM at 90.1 Stereo and WRUV-AM 580 KHz Carrier-Current AM and 91.1 Cable FM. They are located in Pomeroy Hall and Pomeroy Hall Annex. WRUV has roughly 100 students involved and is open to all interested students and other persons of the University.

Weekend highlights include a two day open house from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, the 17th, and 1 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. Sunday and return of WRUV Alumni and dignitaries to the old haunts. WRUV extends an open invitation to all to come over and see them sometime and especially this weekend. The following is a cursory history of WRUV and the...

RADIO ROOTS AT UVM

according to the files (with innumerable holes) at WRUV.

Early in the history of the Wireless, the University of Vermont electrical engineers were conducting tests under the license and call letters of WCAX. CAX stood for College of Agriculture Xperimental. That license was eventually sold to the present company and has evolved into WCAX-TV.

WRUV can find its earliest ancestor in records of a gift of $2000 from the Burlington Free Press in 1945. This grant was used to set up a broadcast studio production facility. WCAX in 1946 donated $1000 in cash and $1000 in a Gates audio control board for the "proposed radio and speech department" at the University.

In September 1948 ex-GI Byron H. Kretzmen came to the University as an EE transfer. A radio amateur, he was interested in setting up a campus broadcasting system at UVM similar to those he had seen at other campuses. Byron prepared a paper on the feasibility of such a system. He presented it to a meeting of the UVM AIEE Chapter on April 30, 1949. It was "received with considerable enthusiasm by the student members and the Speech Department." The tech dept. was not warm to such a prospect. The speech dept. took the ball and hired in September, 1949 Ms. Lydia A. Frank, who was in charge of establishing "radio studios, programs, and classes in broadcasting techniques." These classes were started in the summer of 1950. A monthly band program from Ira Allen was being recorded by early RUV'ers and being aired over WCAX. Weekly sports and news programs originated from WJOY's studios.

The first UVM studio was built in the upstairs back room of Pomeroy Hall. In late 1950, the Student Association recognized the Radio Workshop as a student organization. During the middle of 1952, questionaires were circulated to other college stations by Herb Ruzicka in regard to necessary equipment to start an on-air operation. The collection of data resulted in a "Report on Proposed Radio Station WRUV" by the Executive Committee of the Radio Workshop in November of 1953. This was presented to the Student Advisory Committee. In the Spring of 1953, the SA voted $3065 for the "establishment of a student-run radio station on the UVM campus." During the next year WRUV, with its fiscal fund, worked to set up the broadcast system that was described in Byron Kretzman's paper.

On March 22, 1954, with all the promotional hoopla, (a full page ad in the Vermont Cynic) WRUV signed on. Everyone in Allen House (then a dorm) was able to listen on the carrier current system. The great race with transmitters was on. The problem of being heard and increasing coverage legally was engaged and has been with them ever since. In Fall '54, Grassemount, Lyman Hall, Old Mill, Phi Sigma Delta, Buckham, Converse and Coolidge joined the network.

WRUV throughout the '50's with Dr. William Lewis as advisor, started the tradition of serving the campus community through programs of public affairs, news, and entertainment types. "Dateline UVM," Lucky Strike News, Sports Remotes, Trustees Meetings, kept the campus aware. "Dreamtime," "Easy Street," and other music shows kept them entertained. "Spotlight UVM" was syndicated to numerous stations across Vermont. It is still produced under the auspices of the Public Relations office. While Dick Clark and Rock 'n' Roll were starting in Philly, WRUV was airing jazz, classical and Big Band pop tunes. A year after the inception, a special program "The Swinging Deans with Anna Rankin Harris and the Dean of Men" was aired as an anniversary special.

In 1956 WRUV moved to the Barn. Technically, WRUV was purchasing equipment to improve the facilities and on-air sound. In early 1962, the Green Monster was conceived by an industrious group of individuals. The Green Monster is the High Voltage transmitter system that couples into the Main Street powerlines and its branches. Ray Dilley, Win Tendy, and Bob Piper went on to construct and install the system in the Library. It was later moved. It is still operating after a brief period of silence due to high water in the Main Street manhole outside Pomeroy Hall. It increased coverage to the fraternities, homes and cars near the powerlines.

WRUV was affiliated with the CBS radio network in the early '60's and 'was receiving news copy from the United Press International.

WRUV, from the beginning, has attempted to supplement its budget from the Student Association with sale of advertising. A rate card in 1958 offers a minute spot at $1.30. In 1975 the going rate for a minute spot is $2.10, still one of your better buys. WRUV has also provided taping services for people outside of the organization. Rates have always been modest and consistent with the broadcast business. These tapings and commercial sales have provided WRUV members with practical real-world experience.

1965 marked the start of another WRUV. WRUV-FM. Repeating the carthisis of other campus stations, WRUV-AM sprouted a 10 watt FM station that served the Burlington community. Licensed to the University of Vermont Board of Trustees, it was started with a major allotment of funds from the student body, with the stipulation that it would be supported by the University from year to year. FM first broadcast from the Barn right beside the AM studios. Quarters being cramped, the FM operation moved to its present location on second floor Pomeroy Hall. FM had moved back to the original base of WRUV.

The two stations, being funded separately and located 75 feet apart in two buildings, grew away from each other in the intervening years 67-72. The Student Association was funding AM at a level roughly twice the amount the University was at FM. In 1973, a group from both stations realized the need for a coming together. Fiscal year 74 saw both stations using funds from the Communication and Theatre Dept, the SA, and advertising to increase the power of WRUV-FM to 400 watts ERP, engage a half-time first class engineer, and broadcast the UVM Catamounts from Duluth, Minnesota at National Invitational Hockey Tournament.

Fiscal 75 saw WRUV-FM go stereo, WRUV-AM get on Green Mtn. Cable FM at 91.1, and a basic movement to find WRUV's roots and bring everyone together.

That is what this Anniversary Week is all about. Alumni of WRUV have been contacted along with dignitaries of the University, the State, and national record companies to come to the Open House on March 15 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and March 16, 1 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. and find out where WRUV is, where it's been and where it's going. If this cursory history has made you inquisitive, WRUV invites you to attend or perhaps just listen and call in. WRUV is WRUV-AM 580 am, 91.1 cable FM, 656-3220 and WRUV-FM 90.1 stereo, 656-4399.

Cynic Photography Contest

The CYNIC announces the Fourth Annual CYNIC photography Contest. The rules are as follows:

1. The contest is open to all students of the University of Vermont who are amateurs. (Amateurs will be considered those people who do not support themselves by taking pictures.)
2. The pictures will be divided into the three following catagories: faces, landscaping, and other subjects. The category of other subjects will include any picture not included in the catagories of faces and landscapes.
3. All photographs will be black and white and will be approximately 8 X 10 inches. There is no limit to the number of photographs that each photographer may submit.
4. The picture submitted will be the property of the Vermont Cynic, which will have the consent of the photographer to publish them in the newspaper.
5. The Vermont Cynic has the right to request the photographer to submit a subject release form signed by those people who may appear in the photograph.
7. Pictures entered in the Fourth Annual Cynic Photography Contest could not have been entered in any other photography contest sponsored by the Cynic.
8. Photographs will be judged on print quality and composition by a board of judges.
9. Judges will be announced in next week's issue.
10. All photographs should be placed in the Cynic office or the Cynic box at the main desk in Billings Center.
11. The photographer's name, address, and telephone number should be lightly printed in pencil on the back of each photograph submitted, along with a title, if any.
12. Deadline for entries will be April 10, 1975.
13. One winner will be chosen from each category and the winners will be announced in the April 24, issue of the Cynic.
14. The winner in each category will receive $25.00.
15. All questions should be referred directly to the Cynic Office.

Creative Writing Contest

Deadline: Thursday, April 10, 1975 12 Noon

Rules

1. Three categories - short story, essay and poetry
2. All UVM students, full and part time, may enter.
3. All entries must be typed, double spaced.
4. All entries to be handed in to Cynic office with name and address on separate paper.
5. Limit of 15 pages on short story, 7 pages for essay.
6. Judges will be announced in next week's issue.
7. Winners will be announced in the issue of April 17, 1975.
8. First prize in each catagory: $25.00

. . . Commander Cody

(continued from page six)

many are left to believe of the airmen's zany antics. "seduced" by the Commander, Stein Solo brought the listener's imagination to the heart of Moscow and placed it amidst a circle of comrades dancing uncontrollably.

Such favorites as "Beat Me Daddy Eight to the Bar", "Lost in the Ozone Again" (the lyrics of which are always appropriately applicable to the state of minds in any Cody audience) "Don't Let Go", "Truckin' and Fuckin'" and "Seeds and Stems" (a melancholy, country ode that really embodies the feeling of literally being "down and out".)

Unfortunately, the Commander and Airmen were the only ones in Memorial Auditorium that night who were ready to leave at 11:30 p.m. Why they felt so I'll never know. I only know I was stomping and howling as loudly as anybody else.

Fashions Exhibited By UVM Allstars

by Barb Pitzer

What's the latest fashion forecast for spring at Magram's? Ask any one of our star athletes who appeared in "Springtime on Campus", a fashion show presented for the benefit of the Cunningham Newman Center last Thursday evening, March 6.

Ira Allen Chapel was packed with spectators anxiously awating what was to be quite an extraordinary display of fashion. According to Mrs. Richard J. Gucciardi, commentator-coordinator, color of all shades and combinations is predicted for spring. Act I, entitled "Let's face the morning in comfort," featured loungewear from frilly and innocent to elegant and sensuous in all colors and prints, modelled by UVM coeds and wives of faculty members.

Joe Greco and Terry Green, two of our basketball stars, introduced Act II: "Let's be casual - But Lovely" as they strutted out onto the stage modelling blue denim Levis and rugby shirts. The audience roared with laughter as each took their turn waltzing down the runway revealing the exclusive Levi cut and comfortable lines of their respective shirts. "Outfits such as these will give Joe and Terry hours of fun wear," commented Mrs. Gucciardi and Joe and Terry quickly made their exit. Just as the audience was beginning to settle, Rocky Thompson and Mark Boland appeared also demonstrating the comfort and fit of the Levi's separates line.

The remainder of the first half continued in this manner with colorful separates and pants suits worn by Debbie Feitelberg and Beverly Michael. And again the air of elegance was disrupted as Billy Looker and Tony Kurnich of our former football team cavorted about the runway with their tennis racquets, showing off their "new double-knit after tennis suit and warmups, the latest in sporting fashions." Similarly, Tim Richard and Burt Rayle appeared all decked out for the golf course in plaid slacks, golf shirts, and cardigans.

Mrs. David Hill, wife of Prof. Hill and Mrs. Martin Flanagan, wife of Dr. Martin Flanagan, graced the stage as they appeared in elegant daytime ensembles. The audience was surprised to see Mary Evelti from the Vermont State Legislature appear under the arch in a mint green coordinated double knit pantsuit, "...the ultimate in sophistication."

Magrams featured the latest in leisure suits for men for casual yet dressy affairs. Mr. John Hart, a social studies teacher in Burlington, and Mr. Earl Greer appeared in casual green and grey suits respectively. Billy Looker also modelled one of these latest creations. He couldn't keep a straight face any longer as the commentator stated: "Whether you're on the football team, boxing, or running track, you always look good to us, Bill."

The second half of the program featured "The Wedding." Mrs. David Hill and Ms. Jackie McGlenn were shown wearing sophisticated evening ensembles "for all those affairs preceding the big day."

Finally, "the big day" arrived and the guests appeared in couples under the wedding arch. First to arrive at the church were Tim Richards wearing a leisure suit with a "suppressed waist", and his date who demonstrated that pinafores can also be worn for formal wear. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs Timothy O'Connell. Tim wore a brown plaid suit "made for a man with taste" from the Yves St. Laurent collection. His wife Kathy was present in an elegant gauze dress of a floral pattern. Tom McNamara and his date Maria Breault appeared just after his teammate. His pastel three piece vested suit complemented her green gingham gown "just perfectly". As there are always a few in every crowd, the wedding wouldn't have appeared real without a few stags. Rocky Thompson and Mark Boland arrived together. Laughter rolled from the audience as Mark gave a "sneak preview" by pivoting on one foot while flipping up the vent in the back of the jacket.

And so the guests arrived, all illustrating the bright colors of spring. Suddenly the groom, Joe Greco, appeared. Nervous as most grooms (and amateur male models too for that matter) are, he clenched his hands in front of him as he exhibited a black tux chosen from Magram's "after six" collection, accessorized by a lavender ruffled shirt.

Mary Evelti and Jack Hart posed as the parents of the groom. Mrs. Evelti waltzed down the aisle in a hot pink chiffon gown. The Mother-of-the-bride, Carol Middleton, entered the promenade, in a flowering lemon chiffon gown trimmed in beads and sequins about the neckline. The bridesmaids wore

(continued on page fifteen)

Let's give America a hand!

NATIONAL COLLEGE "PITCH IN!" WEEK APRIL 7-11

There's probably an organized "Pitch In!" Week program on your campus for the week of April 7-11.

Why not contact your college information office for further details—and help give America a hand with the litter problem.

(And give yourself a big hand for helping!)

Sponsored by the brewers of Budweiser and the ABC Radio Network

Pitch In!

LEVI'S

come from NATE'S

choose from

Straight leg Pre-Shrunk Denim

Bell Bottom Denim

Shrink to fit Blue Jeans

Corduroy Jeans Straight leg & flares

ALL NEW SPRING COLORS

LEVI'S

Nate's Connection

OPEN MON-TUES-SAT 9AM-6PM PHONE 864-4122

THE COUNTRY BOYS HAVE COME TO TOWN

OPEN WED-THUR-FRI 9AM-9PM PHONE 864-4122

DAKINS VERMONT MOUNTAIN SHOP

50% OFF RETAIL PRICE TO MEMBERS OF THE UVM OUTING CLUB

YOUR COMPLETE BACKPACKING, MOUNTAINEERING, X-C SUPPLIERS

MASTER CHARGE

FREE PARKING IN REAR

Vermont Sw

The University of Vermont swim team finished its season with an eighth place finish in the New England Intercollegiate Swim meet on Saturday.

Host, Brown University won the meet with Springfield College second. Twenty eight teams competed.

Ron Kirkwood was Vermont's top swimmer as he finished third in the 100 yard freestyle. In the meet, Ron set two individual school records and swam on relay teams which set others.

Dave Phalen, Mike Delany, Mike Kurt, and Kirkwood set a school standard in 800 freestyle relay with a time of 7:33.3, giving in that event.

In the 5 Mike Jacob 22.2 for f record. Mike in the 200 medley, eleventh Jones had 100 butterfly. Two o swimmers h and finished twelve p Mahoney d and 200 bu Cliff Johns the 200 ind 400 I.M. backstroke.

Meeting For

There will be an introductory meeting on Thursday, March 20th, at 7:00 p.m. at Marsh Lounge in Billings Center for all UVM women interested in competing for the title "Miss University of Vermont," an official preliminary to the Miss Vermont-Miss America Pagaent.

The private mini-pageant which is scheduled for early April is being coordinated by the Student Activities Office with the assistance of Barbara (Schmitt) Mair, a UVM alumnus and former Miss Vermont who now serves as an officer of the Miss Vermont State Pagaent Committee.

All girls are welcome to attend the March 20th meeting to learn more about the opportunities available to them through the Sororities residence organizatio sponsor girl Miss UVM may also b contestants to compe sponsor are

A sch awarded to Miss UVM then have compete fo least $1,00 and po scholarship

Contest UVM page three bas evening g

The S Pagaent i 31st in B

. . . Fashion

(continued from page twelve)

floral print gowns with spring picture hats to match.

At last the Bride appeared under the archway escorted by her father, Earl Greer. Her white gown, beaded about the neck and wrists, featured a long train, and a floor length veil attached to a juliet cap trimmed in the same manner as her ex processe kissing h to her be. Mrs with the and sp anxious and pr over afte

PFG -Sche

PATRICK - FORBUSH - GUTTE

SCHEDULE

WEEKEND OF MARCH 14, 15, 16

FRIDAY, MARCH 14
GYM - Faculty-Staff 7-10:30 p.m.
POOL - Faculty-Staff 7-10:30 p.m.
RINK (TENNIS) - Faculty-Staff no
TRACK - Faculty-Staff 7-10:30 p.

SATURDAY, MARCH 15
GYM - Students 7-10:30
POOL - Students 1-5 and 7-10 p.
RINK (TENNIS) - Students none.
TRACK - Students 1-5 and 7-10

SUNDAY, MARCH 16
GYM - Students 1-5 p.m.
POOL - Students 1-5 p.m.
RINK (TENNIS) - Students none.
TRACK - Students 1-5 p.m.

HANDBALL AND SQUASH COURTS Call 656-3069.

All recreation may be superseded special events.

MONDAY through THURSDAY
POOL - Students 8:30 - 10:30 p.
All other facilities - Students 7-8

Women's H

by Debi Bloom

The UNH Women's hockey club traveled to Burlington last Friday, to challenge the UVM women's club for a second time. After a 5-1 defeat in Durham, the UVM club, a bit more organized and more plentiful in number played an impressive hockey game on home ice. Coming from a 3-0 deficit in the third period, the Catamounts rallied for two goals, and allowed only one other UNH score. The final score was 4-2.

To Verm club, coord this well- 1976 wom got pote time is pl girls hoc inte

DAVE AUTOMO

ROUTE 2, WILLISTON
862-7686
FOREIGN CAR SPECIALIS

VW BUG BRAKE JOB $49.95

COMPLETE VW ELECTRONIC FUEL INJECTION DIAGNOS SERVICE

a group from both stations realized the need for a coming together. Fiscal year 74 saw both stations using funds from the Communication and Theatre Dept, the SA, and advertising to increase the power of WRUV-FM to 400 watts ERP, engage a half-time first class engineer, and broadcast the UVM Catamounts from Duluth, Minnesota at National Invitational Hockey Tournament.

Fiscal 75 saw WRUV-FM go stereo, WRUV-AM get on Green Mtn. Cable FM at 91.1, and a basic movement to find WRUV's roots and bring everyone together.

That is what this Anniversary Week is all about. Alumni of WRUV have been contacted along with dignitaries of the University, the State, and national record companies to come to the Open House on March 15 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and March 16, 1 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. and find out where WRUV is, where it's been and where it's going. If this cursory history has made you inquisitive, WRUV invites you to attend or perhaps just listen and call in. WRUV is WRUV-AM 580 am, 91.1 cable FM, 656-3220 and WRUV-FM 90.1 stereo, 656-4399.

By UVM Allstars

church were Tim Richards wearing a leisure suit with a "suppressed waist", and his date who demonstrated that pinafores can also be worn for formal wear. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs Timothy O'Connell. Tim wore a brown plaid suit "made for a man with taste" from the Yves St. Laurent collection. His wife Kathy was present in an elegant gauze dress of a floral pattern. Tom McNamara and his date Maria Breault appeared just after his teammate. His pastel three piece vested suit complemented her green gingham gown "just perfectly". As there are always a few in every crowd, the wedding wouldn't have appeared real without a few stags. Rocky Thompson and Mark Boland arrived together. Laughter rolled from the audience as Mark gave a "sneak preview" by pivoting on one foot while flipping up the vent in the back of the jacket.

And so the guests arrived, all illustrating the bright colors of spring. Suddenly the groom, Joe Greco, appeared. Nervous as most grooms (and amateur male models too for that matter) are, he clenched his hands in front of him as he exhibited a black tux chosen from Magram's "after six" collection, accessorized by a lavender ruffled shirt.

Mary Evelti and Jack Hart posed as the parents of the groom. Mrs. Evelti waltzed down the aisle in a hot pink chiffon gown. The Mother-of-the-bride, Carol Middleton, entered the promenade, in a flowering lemon chiffon gown trimmed in beads and sequins about the neckline. The bridesmaids wore

(continued on page thirteen)

TRY BOYS
OME TO WN
OPEN
WED-THUR-FRI
9AM–9PM
PHONE 864-4122
KINS
RMONT
UNTAIN
OP
ETAIL PRICE TO ERS OF THE UTING CLUB
COMPLETE
OUNTAINEERING, X-C
PPLIERS
FREE PARKING
IN REAR

Vermont Swimmers Eighth in N.E.

The University of Vermont swim team finished its season with an eighth place finish in the New England Intercollegiate Swim meet on Saturday.

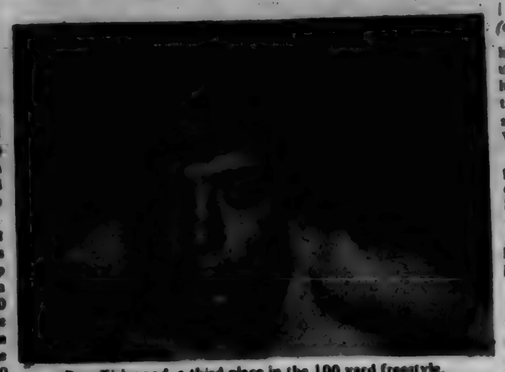
Host, Brown University won the meet with Springfield College second. Twenty eight teams competed.

Ron Kirkwood was Vermont's top swimmer as he finished third in the 100 yard freestyle. In this meet, Ron set two individual school records and swam on relay teams which set others.

Dave Phalen, Mike Delany, Mike Kurt, and Kirkwood set a school standard in 800 freestyle relay with a time of 7:33.3, giving Vermont eighth in that event.

In the 50 yard freestyle, Mike Jacobs was clocked at 22.2 for fifth and another record. Mike Kurt set a record in the 200 yard individual medley, which gave him eleventh place, while Paul Jones had an eleventh in the 100 butterfly.

Two other Vermont swimmers had excellent times and finished just out of the top twelve positions. John Mahoney did well in the 100 and 200 butterfly events while Cliff Johnson participated in the 200 individual medley, the 400 I.M. and the 100 backstroke.



Ron Kirkwood, a third place in the 100 yard freestyle.

Meeting For "Miss UVM" Candidates

There will be an introductory meeting on Thursday, March 20th, at 7:00 p.m. at Marsh Lounge in Billings Center for all UVM women interested in competing for the title "Miss University of Vermont," an official preliminary to the Miss Vermont–Miss America Pageant.

The private mini-pageant which is scheduled for early April is being coordinated by the Student Activities Office with the assistance of Barbara (Schmitt) Mair, a UVM alumnus and former Miss Vermont who now serves as an officer of the Miss Vermont State Pageant Committee.

All girls are welcome to attend the March 20th meeting to learn more about the opportunities available to them through the pageant program. Sororities, fraternities, residence halls, clubs and organizations are invited to sponsor girls to compete in the Miss UVM mini-pageant. There may also be candidate-at-large contestants, so girls who wish to compete but have no sponsor are also eligible.

A scholarship will be awarded to the winner of the Miss UVM pageant. She will then have an opportunity to compete for scholarships of at least $1,000 as Miss Vermont and possibly $10,000 scholarship as Miss America.

Contestants for the Miss UVM pageant will compete in three basic categories: talent, evening gown and sportswear.

The State Miss Vermont Pageant is scheduled for May 31st in Brattleboro, Vermont.

The Miss America Pageant is the largest scholarship foundation in the free world for young women between the ages of 17 and 28. The program throughout the United States awards an excess of $850,000 annually in scholarship funds.

In addition to scholarships offering the opportunity for higher education, the Miss Vermont receives a practical education as well. Participation in a production, public speaking, and daily contact with the general public along with the responsibilities of representing an area are but a few of the functions requiring poise and intelligence — all learning situations.

Many have furthered their talent through the pageant program. As a result of experience and exposure some have found opportunities in public relations, advertising, television and in other areas of business.

. . . Fashions

(continued from page twelve)

floral print gowns with spring picture hats to match.

At last the Bride appeared under the archway escorted by her father, Earl Greer. Her white gown, beaded about the neck and wrists, featured a long train, and a floor length veil attached to a juliet cap trimmed in [illegible] her exquisite gown. She proceeded down the aisle after kissing her father "good-bye" to her nervous husband-to-be. Mrs. Gucciardi continued with the commentary on love and springtime while the anxious couple kissed, excited, and presumably lived happily ever after.

PFG -Schedule

PATRICK – FORBUSH – GUTTERSON RECREATION SCHEDULE

WEEKEND OF MARCH 14, 15, 16

FRIDAY, MARCH 14
- GYM – Faculty-Staff 7–10:30 p.m.
- POOL – Faculty-Staff 7–10:30 p.m. (7–8 under 15)
- RINK (TENNIS) – Faculty-Staff none
- TRACK – Faculty-Staff 7–10:30 p.m.

SATURDAY, MARCH 15
- GYM – Students 7–10:30
- POOL – Students 1–5 and 7–10 p.m.
- RINK (TENNIS) – Students none.
- TRACK – Students 1–5 and 7–10 p.m.

SUNDAY, MARCH 16
- GYM – Students 1–5 p.m.
- POOL – Students 1–5 p.m.
- RINK (TENNIS) – Students none.
- TRACK – Students 1–5 p.m.

HANDBALL AND SQUASH COURTS: By appointment only. Call 656-3069.

All recreation may be superseded by varsity activities or special events.

MONDAY through THURSDAY
- POOL – Students 8:30 – 10:30 p.m.
- All other facilities – Students 7–8 p.m.

Women's Hockey

by Debi Bloom

The UNH Women's hockey club traveled to Burlington last Friday, to challenge the UVM women's club for a second time. After a 5-1 defeat in Durham, the UVM club, a bit more organized and more plentiful in number played an impressive hockey game on home ice. Coming from a 3-0 deficit in the third period, the Catamounts rallied for two goals, and allowed only one other UNH score. The final score was 4-2.

Tom Kiley, coach of the Vermont women's hockey club, is looking forward to coordinating the hockey club this spring into a serious, well-organized squad for the 1976 season. Kiley said of the women's hockey squad, "We've got some good skaters; the potential is there, all we need is time to develop it." A meeting is planned in late April for all girls interested in playing hockey next winter in inter-collegiate activities.

DAVE'S AUTOMOTIVE
ROUTE 2, WILLISTON
862-7686
FOREIGN CAR SPECIALIST
EXCLUDING TIRS PRICED IN EMERGENCY RADIAL TIRES
VW BUG BRAKE JOB $49.95
VW Beetle Exhaust Complete $29.95
COMPLETE VW ELECTRONIC FUEL INJECTION DIAGNOSTIC SERVICE

Vermont Falls To Boston U.

(continued from page fourteen)

his stick and the puck flipped up in the air. The Cats got their lucky bounce of the night as the puck went over Durocher's shoulder and into the goal for Vermont's last score.

With 27 seconds left in the period BU scored what turned out to be the winning goal. Pete Marzo knocked in a rebound in front of the net to send the Terriers into the locker room with a slim 4-3 lead.

The Vermont fans, some 2000 strong, made it known as the third period started that their team was still in the game. In the quarterfinal round of the playoffs the Cats had been down 4-2 against Providence after the first two periods. In that game Vermont scored 3 goals in the final stanza to wipe out Providence's upset hopes. That same magic was missing against BU as the Cats were blanked in the last period.

The Terriers got a 2 on-1 break to tally their fifth goal. Mike Eruzions stickhandled the puck past McNamara as he faked to the goalie's right and brought him down to the ice. Eruzione kept the puck and waltzed past the sprawling McNamara to hit the open net at 6:32.

With Vermont down by 2 at this point they needed some breaks to go their way if they were to get back in the game. The breaks went the other way, however, when Michel Lebeau went out for crosschecking at 6:51. It took BU only 12 seconds to score what Vermont coach Jim Cross called "the clincher- the one that hurt us the most."

Rick Meagher capped off the scoring for the evening with BU's last goal at 19:28.

The Vermont locker room was a somber one after the game. Coach Cross explained the loss simply as he said that "We played well in flurries, but every time we'd get a couple of strong shifts they would come back and take the momentum away. They are a stronger hockey club in every area but Yes, BU was a better team. The Terrier defense was superb as Vermont rarely got any chances to score on rebounds.

goaltender Tom McNamara

BU coach Jack Parker felt that his team "played extremely well in front of the net. They've learned to clear the puck instead of trying to carry it out."

Parker was asked if he had been worried about a Vermont comeback after being up 4-3 in the second stanza. "No, that really wasn't on my mind. They had been close in the last two games after the 2nd period and we won both of them."

McNamara had an excellent game in the nets for the Cats. He came up with 31 (11-12-8) saves and was the real reason UVM was still in the game until the 3rd period. BU could have easily scored 11 or 12 goals as a great deal of McNamara's saves were remarkable! BU's Durocher was relatively untested as he was called on for only 14 (5-3-6) saves.

The Cats lost a big game but have nothing to be ashamed of. In their first year in Division I, the Cats had made it to the semifinals of the playoffs with one of their best teams in history. They had lost to a disciplined team of veterans. BU's one weakness might be their goaltending. Durocher, the Terrier's freshman netminder, was definitely vulnerable. Durocher had an easy game though, since the BU defenseman played extremely well.

Hustle was the name of the game for the Cats all year long. That hustle and desire was still evident against BU even after the outcome had been decided. The Cats kept on trying and surely gave their fans something to cheer about.

This kind of "never quit" attitude has payed off in the past and will continue to do so for the Cats in the future.

THE SPORTS SCENE

by Norm Robinson

The University of Vermont hockey team has just completed their first year in the ECAC Division I. It has to be considered a great success, as the Catamounts finished a solid third behind Boston University and Harvard.

After losing 7-3 to tourney champion Boston U., Vermont tore into the Big Red of Cornell to make a firm hold of third place in Division I.

The Cats finished with a 24–12–0 mark overall and an impressive 14–6–0 record in Division I. Boston was Vermont's nemesis throughout the year, losing three times to the Terriers. The Catamounts' other Division losses came against Harvard and disappointing defeats to RPI and Clarkson.

The highlight of the season may have been the Syracuse Invitational Tournament at Christmas time. Vermont defeated a good St. Lawrence team and then thumped Cornell, 5–2, to take first in the tourney.

After this victory, they had those great games with New Hampshire and BU and the terrible thrashing by Harvard. An overtime victory in Durham over the University of New Hampshire gave UVM the third seed for the play–offs. Then came the heart–stopping 7–5 victory over Providence and the trip to Boston Garden.

Looking back over the season, there were standout performances by many members of the squad.

Tim O'Connell, who should undoubtedly be an All–American, shattered both the season and career marks for most goals, assists, and points as he piled up unbelievable statistics.

Roger Mallette, who gets my vote for MVP on the team, rocketed into second place in All–Time scoring at UVM. Mallette's constant hustle and his great play–making helped Vermont immeasurably.

The other member of the Electric Line, Bill Koch, cannot be forgotten. The talented senior finished his career in sixth spot in All–Time scoring. Although Bill couldn't play in the Garden, due to a shoulder separation in the Providence game, it had to be a satisfying season. Bill finished with 30 goals and 30 assists for 60 points to finish second in team scoring behind O'Connell.

The one other man who deserves special praise is Tom McNamara. Throughout the season Tom was showered with insults and false accusations. Many felt that Tom was incapable of playing Division I goaltending.

McNamara showed his critics that they were dead wrong. In Boston, he was by far the best goalie of the four teams. He kept Vermont in the game against BU and although he allowed seven goals, he was outstanding. Most of the scored goals were not his fault. His 3.44 goals–against average was one of the best in Division I.

It had to be tough to go into his first full season of hockey against Division I opponents. It is time for critics of Tom McNamara to realize that this goaltender is very good, at the least. Only a sophomore, Tom will get even better.

Other people who deserve praise are John Glynne, the sophomore sensation on defense.

The freshman trio of Andy Halford, Bill Reber and Randy Koch were superb in forming the second line.

Michel Lebeau came on towards the end of the year to play up to his potential.

The man that must be credited with the outstanding season is Jim Cross, the coach of the Catamounts. Cross blended youth and the experience of the seniors to bring out the best in everyone.

This man did the unexpected in bringing Vermont to the Garden in their first year and winning the consolation game.

If Jim Cross does not win Coach of the Year honors in the ECAC Division I, it will be a great injustice. No other coach can match his success in so short a time.

The University of Vermont should feel blessed with a great coach and man, and a fine hockey team. The best is yet to come, as Vermont proved they will be a team to be reckoned with in the future.

Jim Cross, coach of the hockey Catamounts. Coach of the Year?

AT THE BONE
43 KING ST., INC.
(Corner S. Champlain & King)
Happy Hour
4 until 9 Sun–Thur
Gold tequila Nite
Sun 7–11

LITTLE PROFESSOR BOOK CENTER
40 Church St. Burlington
Essex Jct. Shopping Center Essex Junction
Largest Paperback Selection in Vermont
Complete Study Notes
Small presses & some far-out reading

A representative from Concordia University (formally Sir George Williams University), Montreal, Canada, will be on campus on March 17th to discuss opportunities in the M.B.A. Program at the Sir George Williams Campus.

Interested graduating students will be invited to attend a briefing session: 3:00 P.M. in the Mansfield House - 3rd Floor, University of Vermont Placement Office, Burlington, Vermont.

Study in Europe

Attention: Freshmen and Sophomores

Plan now to spend this summer, next fall or the academic year in Austria, France, Germany, Spain or England.

Study opportunities available in a wide range of subjects in the humanities and social sciences. Curriculum in Vienna (with exception of German language classes) taught in English. Summer sessions designed to improve language ability rapidly.

Excellent preparation for
- jobs with international firms & organizations
- law school or other postgraduate work
- teaching foreign languages

Traineeships with international firms (Paris, Madrid, Vienna), student teaching in European schools in France and Austria, and programs in comparative law and international business management.

See your study abroad advisor and write for full information today.

Institute of European Studies Department N
710 North Rush Street
Chicago, Illinois 60611

UVM SPORTS

. . . Skiers Are Second In Nation

(continued from page one)

fourth over all.

Vermont's number one jumper, Petter Kongali also had trouble in the trial round taking a bad fall and hitting his head. He also fell in his first jump in the afternoon meet. In college competition, the best two out of three jumps count. Petter's next two jumps were better. Unfortunately, the sun had come out and warmed the track making the snow slower, and Kongali, who usually sets hill records, had to be satisfied with eighth. After the meet, he was also hospitalized overnight with a concussion. Trygve Rolseth was also bothered by bruises from falls in practice and only took two competition jumps, coming in eleventh.

Joe Lamb, who did not run in the x-cross country due to shoulder injuries and did not jump 19th and was the first American from the East.

As a team, Vermont finished fourth in the jump behind Colorado, Northern Michigan and Utah.

Vermont held down second place behind Colorado who took their fourth first place in as many years. The other two Eastern schools, who brought out full teams, Dartmouth and Middlebury came in eighth and ninth, after coming in one and two in the Eastern Championships. It was our best finish of the season. I guess we were just saving it for the big one.

Vermont has only one thing to look forward to in the coming year and that is to be number one. With the NCAA's being held in Maine next year, it's not too far out of sight.

Head ski coach Chip LaCasse

NCAA Results

Downhill
1. Mark Ford - C.U.
2. Mark Milligan - C.U.
3. Doug Bruce - UVM
4. Dave Dodge - UVM
27. Bill Rathbone - UVM
31. Brian Suslin - UVM
36. Brooks Dodge - UVM

Cross-Country
1. Stiner Hybertsen - Wyoming
2. Helge Aamodt - C.U.
3. Asle Soberg - Wyoming
6. Stan Dunklee - UVM
38. Morten Gaarud - UVM
49. Trygve Kjolseth - UVM

Slalom
1. Pick Christensen - Denver
2. Mark Ford - C.U.
3. Dick Erdman - UVM.
7. Bill Rathbone - UVM
24. Dave Dodge - UVM

Jumping
1. Didrik Ellefsen - C.U.
2. Ron Steele - Utah
3. Arne Haveth - C.U.
8. Petter Kongali - UVM
11. Trygve Rolseth - UVM
19. Joe Lamb - UVM

Alpine Combined
1. Mark Ford - C.U.
5. Bill Rathbone - UVM
13. Dave Dodge - UVM

Nordic Combined - (UVM had no one competing for this award!)
1. Stig Hallingbye - Wyoming
7. Rick Hale - N.E.C.
8. Steve Kendall - U.N.H.
9. Terry White - Midd.
10. Tom Keaper - Dart.

Ron Gottschalk Named Al -YanCon

University of Vermont's Ron Gottschalk has been named to the first team All-Yankee Conference basketball squad.

The only UVM player selected for either the first or second All-Conference team, the 6' 7" sophomore center had a fantastic season for the Catamounts.

A native of Freeport, N.Y., Ron improved tremendously from his freshman season, averaging close to 14 points a game and leading the Cats in rebounds as well.

John Murphy, from the University of Massachusetts was names Player of the Year and is the only first team repeater from last year's squad.

Rhode Island freshman Jiggy Williamson was Rookie of the Year.

The list of first team players includes John Murphy, UMass, 6-8 senior; Ron Gottschalk, UVM, 6-7 sophomore; Bob Warner, Maine, 6-6 junior; Tony Hanson, UConn, 6-4 sophomore; and Kerry Walker, BU, 6-2 senior.

Boston University led the conference in players named with three. Massachusetts, the conference champions, placed two on the squad, while Vermont, Maine, Rhode Island, Connecticut, and New Hampshire had one each.

Women's Lacrosse

by Debi Bloom

Despite the recent snowfall, covering the playing fields, the women's lacrosse team at UVM has begun practice for their spring season of 1975. Though few people know it, the women's lacrosse team has been an official collegiate team sport for over five years. Thirty-five girls showed up for the team this year, with a mixture of veteran players from last year as well as new-comers to the sport. Practices will be held in the Gutterson Field House and in Southwick Gym, until the Southwick field recovers from the early spring snowfalls and subsequent late spring mud.

Miss Cathy Schiller, coach of the women's soccer team at UVM, has taken over the coaching position for lacrosse this season. Unfortunately, the popularity of the sport has not spread throughout women's colleges in Vermont or nearby New Hampshire, limiting the game schedule. The first home game is scheduled for mid-April, with five later games to follow. Though the lacrosse season is short, the women's team has high hopes for a successful season.

Girls' Lacrosse differs in many aspects from men's lacrosse; for one thing, a girls' lacrosse stick is called a cross. There are 12 members on a team, lining up in a vertical positioning from goal to goal. The game is a fast and gracefully paced sport. There is no body checking or rough stick checking allowed, and therefore no padding is necessary. Starting off with a center draw, the game runs for two 25-minute halves, with no time-outs. There are no boundaries on the girls' lacrosse field, except those designated by the officials. If you've never seen the UVM Women's Lacrosse Team play, come support them in their season's opener in mid April.

Vermont's Dream Season Ends: Vermont 7, Cornell 3

by Richard Rotchov

The University of Vermont skating Catamounts proved beyond a shadow of a doubt that their third place Division I ranking was no fluke.

Vermont silenced all the skeptics who had questioned their credence as the divisions third best team by smashing the Big Red of Cornell, 7–3, in Saturday night's consolation game of the ECAC Division I Tournament before a sell-out crowd at the Boston Garden. The 'victory' provided the Catamounts with third place in the tourney and closed what is now considered their finest hockey season ever.

After the game an ecstatic Vermont coach, Jim Cross, said, "When we were 2 and 7, I said this was our best team ever. Nobody believed me."

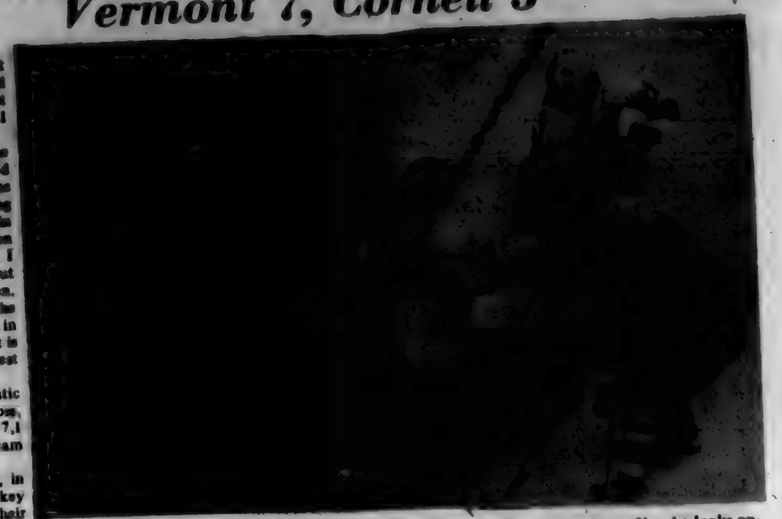
How right he was. For, in this, their final night of hockey this year, the Cats played their most complete game of the season by putting together three solid periods of hockey.

Typical of many of Vermont's key wins this year, was their determined third period effort against Cornell. The Cats came back from a 3–2 deficit to score five consecutive goals in the final stanza.

Michel Lebeau, "The flying Frenchman," was the man of the hour. At 2:54 of the third period, Lebeau scored the second of his three goals, by rifling home a snapshot between the pads of Cornell goaltender Steve Kelleher to knot the score at three.

Freshman sensation Randy Koch punched home the winning goal on a rebound, giving Vermont a 4-3 lead at 7:06. Earlier in the game, Koch had missed two relatively "easy" opportunities to score. However, by the third period Randy Koch started playing like his injured older brother, Bill, whom he had replaced on the "electric line." Koch also scored Vermont's final goal at 17:42, assists going to linemates Roger Mallette and Tim O'Connell. When asked to comment on playing with his new line, Koch said, "They're good boys to play with. Bill used to play tough in front of the net. By remembering how he played, it helped me position myself."

The Catamounts put the game away on two picture perfect goals less than a minute apart. Mallette, concluding an illustrious career for Vermont, scored at 14:00 of the third period. The goal coming on a beautiful pass from Randy Koch on a two on one, provided UVM with a convincing 5–3 advantage.



A shot by Bill Reber is kicked away by Cornell goaltender, Dave Chrestina. James Vaughn looks on.

Just 56 seconds later Andy Halford and Lebeau worked the same pattern. Halford gracefully skated in on right wing, faked the defensemen, and unselfishly slid the puck to Lebeau in the slot. Lebeau drove the puck by Kelleher, giving him the hat trick and more importantly Vermont's sixth goal of the game.

For Lebeau, his performance against Cornell marked a sensational turn around for him, indicating that he has arrived as a fine hockey player for Vermont. "Coach Cross helped me alot. Now I know I can't do it alone. Now I'm helping the defensement and that's the way the game should be played. It's actually a lot more fun to play this way."

Cornell scored first, just 48 seconds into the contest. Dave Groulx scored following a face–off, by sliding the puck by Vermont Goalie Tom McNamara. Soon after Vermont took it right to Cornell, dominating play for much of the early going. Some fine forechecking, particularly by Chris Hunley, kept the puck inside Vermont's blue line.

Despite several "stupid" penalties to Cornell, Vermont failed to capitalize. All–American candidate John Glynne, drove one slapshot after another from the point. Twice Glynne's booming slapshot hit the post.

At 8:21 Lebeau fired home a backhand from the slot, to tie the score at 1–1. The first period ended with the same score, though Vermont had many other opportunities. UVM's dominance of play was largely a result of Cornell's preoccupation with the referees. The Big Red were assessed two ten–minute misconduct penalties along with three minor penalties.

Both teams came out flying to start the second period. It was a fine example of "up and down" hockey. McNamara, believed by many to be the top net–minder in the East, brilliantly turned away a couple of breakaways and other point–blank attempts.

Tim O'Connell scored on a power play at 9:02 giving the Cats a 2–1 lead. For O'Connell it was his 41st goal of the season, which leads the nation in that category.

Groulx scored again for Cornell at 16:30 of the second frame. On a breakaway he just barely jammed the puck underneath McNamara's right glove to tie the score at 2–2 after two periods.

John Harper gave Cornell a brief 3-2 lead at 1:50 of the final period, soon to be followed by the Catamounts patented third period explosion.

Coach Cross made some bold moves that made him look like a genius. He paired freshman Chuck Ross with Glynne on defense; moving John Murphy to play with Ted Curtis as the alternating tandem. Ross played a fine game, particularly when Cornell had a powerplay. Randy Koch replaced Bill on the first line, Lebeau went to the second to play with Halford and Bill Reber, and Tom Colby moved up to center the third line.

"We wanted to win this game. We don't believe that crap that consolation games mean nothing," said Cross.

Vermont's win was largely a result of wanting the game more than Cornell. They played an inspired game despite the loss to Boston University the previous night.

Unheralded defenseman Ken Yeates said following the win, "Last night against BU we played hard. It's nice to prove something. We can beat Cornell and they're a good team. It just comes easy sometimes."

With a smile on his face O'Connell added, "When you play like this, you don't want it to end. In two weeks I'll wish we were playing again."

"Next year we're going after the giants," said McNamara, in reference to BU and Harvard.

The Catamounts' amazing showing in just their first year as a Division I team indicates that Vermont has arrived for future ECAC and NCAA championship competition. Vermont was able to turn it all around in "Cinderella" fashion. Rebounding from a 2–7 record early in the season, the Icecats won 22 of their last 27 games to conclude with a most impressive 24–12 record (14–6 in Division I).

Terrier Defense Thumps Cats

by Patrick Tavas

The University of Vermont hockey team dropped a 7-3 decision to defending champion Boston University Friday night in the Boston Garden. The Catamount loss came in the semi-final round of the ECAC Division I tournament and killed their chances for a berth in the NCAA championships in St. Louis.

The score is indicative of the supremacy that BU displayed throughout the game. The Terriers had Vermont bottled up in its own end for a majority of the contest as they took 38 shots on goal compared to 17 for the Cats.

Even though BU dominated play from the onset, the Cats were the first to light up the scoreboard. At 5:56 of the first period, Chris Hurley slammed home a slapshot from the top of the left faceoff circle. Hurley's shot was the first Vermont was able to muster against the strong BU defense.

It looked as though an upset was in the making when Andy Halford sent the underdog Cats up to 2-0 with a backhander past the Terrier goalie, Brian Durocher. Halford's shot came off a rebound as John Glynne got the assist.

BU struck back quickly, however, on goals by seniors Jim Glover and Buddy Powers.

Glover's goal came at 13:05, less than a minute after Halford had put the Cats 2 ahead. Glover took a high shot on Vermont goalie Tom McNamara, which he saved. The rebound off McNamara's chest hit a UVM defender's back and rolled into the net.

Powers knotted the score at 2-2 only 30 seconds later as Vermont was still trying to figure out the Glover score.

With about a minute left in the period BU put some tremendous pressure on the Vermont goal but was foiled by McNamara. The Vermont netminder was at his best as he kicked out about 4 or 5 point blank shots. To McNamara's relief, the horn sounded with score still tied 2-2.

BU came out strong in the second period but again McNamara did a superb job for the Cats. Consistent pressure by the Terriers finally gave them the lead. BU's Bill Burlington swung a pass down the sideboards to linemate Mike Fidler behind the Vermont net. A Vermont player stole the puck from Fidler but lost control as he was trying to clear it. Fidler got it back and made an excellent pass to Ken Kuzyk in front of the net. McNamara never had a chance as Kuzyk made the score 3-2.

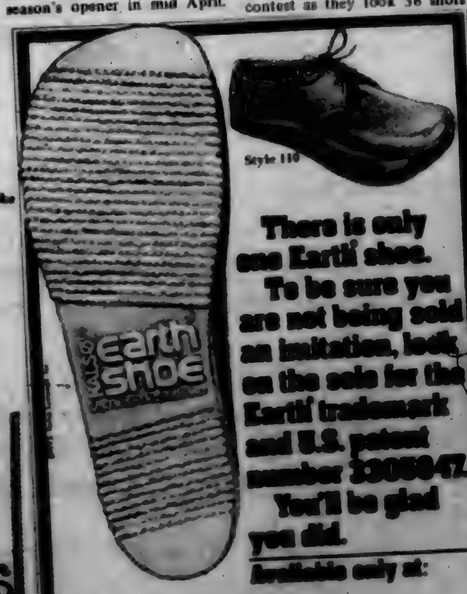
Even though the Terriers had scored 3 goals and were controlling the game the Cats didn't give up.

Michel Lebeau evened the score with some great forechecking in the BU zone. Lebeau took the puck down the ice by himself and was ridden into the boards behind the BU net by a defenseman. Lebeau scrapped for the puck and outfought two BU players for control behind the net. Michel tried to sneak the puck past Durocher as he came around the right side of the net. Durocher hit the shot with

(continued on page thirteen)

EXXON
Ralph's Exxon
on Route 7 Shelburne Road and Interstate 189
Complete Auto Service
Expert Tune up and Repairs
All Work Fully Guaranteed
Free pickup and delivery
Phone: 862-9200

10% OFF WITH VALID UVM ID.
The Classic: Shrink To Fit
$11.25 PAIR
Levi's Blue Jeans
Guaranteed to shrink, wrinkle & fade. Rugged XX blue denim with the famous LEVI'S® fit. To be sure—look for the famous tab on the back pocket . . . only on authentic LEVI'S® jeans. The jeans that won the West.
Levi's
Pants Plus
12 N. WINOOSKI AVE.
BURLINGTON, VT.
05401
802 • 864-0181



There is only one Earth shoe.
To be sure you are not being sold an imitation, look on the sole for the Earth trademark and U.S. patent number 3305947.
You'll be glad you did.
Available only at:
139 BANK STREET

The Air Force ROTC College Program has 3 things to offer that other college programs don't.
1. Scholarships.
2. $100 monthly allowance.
3. Flying lessons leading to jet training.
Enroll in Air Force ROTC.
Contact Department of Aerospace Studies
At St. Michael's College. Telephone 655-2000 Ext. 291
PUT IT ALL TOGETHER IN AIR FORCE ROTC

ALL A M
THE BEST STEAK
GREAT SEAFOOD TOO!
SIZZLING STEAK

VOLUME XCIII
NUMBER 10
MARCH 20, 1975

V

Keith Miser – New Dean of Stu

Committee F... As...

The search committee for the UVM position of Dean of Students has recommended Dr. Keith H. Miser be promoted to the position from his current post as assistant dean of students and director of residence halls at the University.

UVM President Edward C. Andrews Jr. expressed "pleasure" with the recommendation, which he said would be offered to the Board of Trustees for confirmation at the April meeting.

The position had become open last October when Dean of Students Richard Powers was named associate executive ... committee was named in early November.

Dr. William Kelly, assistant dean of the College of Agriculture, who chaired the search group, said the committee had been fortunate in having several well-qualified individuals.

"Everyone recognizes that the individual occupying the position must possess many talents and skills such as proven administrative ability, a genuine concern for student ... interest... ability t... dive... individu... He ... came t... the U... possess... excelle... and a... UVM. ... additio... times ... into t... the fi... dean ... one ... admin... Univ... "hop... stude... the ... statu... dean. ... Dr. ... demo... abili... acade... would... a full ... form... and ... prior... T... "stro... dean ...

News Analysis:

by John McDonald

On last Thursday, March 13, the Presidential Search Committee met once again in its quest for finding a replacement for resigning President Andrews. The meeting was a rather lengthy one which showed the inherent problems in eventually trying to choose the right man or woman for the job. Gov. Thomas Salmon was right when, last week, he called the job "an unenviable task."

The meeting started with the presentation of John Weiger, Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences. He concerned himself mainly with the problem of low morale on the part of faculty especially. He cited various financial reasons for the cause of the low morale. For example, department chairmen are not paid during the summer even though they are still responsible to the department and University during that time. Also, Weiger stated that there is no money for emergency situations, which causes him to say no to new things that come up more often than he would like to.

Weiger went further to discuss the "crossing of lines and blurring of authority" between Trustees and faculty. He said that the Trustees are not competent to deal with ... ridiculous problems and that ... responsibility should be ... gated solely to the faculty. ... speaking of the University ... more general terms, Weiger ... the school as an attractive ... because of its "quality, ... and location" and said "we ... not, not decrease this ... ity."

... a long time it seemed as ... Weiger was evading the ... issue ... pres... him ... com... more ... with ... Pres... most ... pres... good ... able ... desi... fac... and ... pro... cau... ma... Pre... dis... Col... the ... def... evo... the ... pa... sho... the ... 48 ... Ga... to ... us... ne... pr... P... F... w... a... c... w...

MARCH 13 1975

...on Ends: ...nell 3

...ender, Dave Christina. James Vaughn looks on.

...the slot, to ...-1. The first ...s the same ...ermont had ...pportunities. ...of play was ...of Cornell's ... with the ... Red were ...on-minute ...alties along ...nsellors. ...e out flying ...d period. It ...of "up and ...McNamara, ...to be the top ...the East, ...ed away a ...kaways and ...attempts. ...scored on a ...02 giving the ...ve O'Connell ...goal of the ...da the nation ...d again for ...of the second ...kaway he just ...d the puck ...amara's right ...score at 2-2.

...Cornell a ...t 1:50 of the ...soon to be ...e Catamounts ...ird period ...made "some ...at made him ...ues. He paired ...k Ross with ...fense; moving ...play with Ted ...alternating ...played a fine ...game, particularly when Cornell had a powerplay. Randy Koch replaced Bill on the first line, Lebesu went to the second to play with Halford and Bill Reber, and Tom Colby moved up to center the third line.

"We wanted to win this game. We don't believe that crap that consolation games mean nothing," said Cross.

Vermont's win was largely a result of wanting the game more than Cornell. They played an inspired game despite the loss to Boston University the previous night.

Unheralded defenseman Ken Yeates said following the win, "Last night against BU we played hard. It's nice to prove something. We can beat Cornell and they're a good team. It just comes easy sometimes."

With a smile on his face O'Connell added, "When you play like this, you don't want it to end. In two weeks I'll wish we were playing again."

"Next year we're going after the giants," said McNamara, in reference to Bill and Maynard.

The Catamounts' amazing showing in just their first year as a Division I team indicates that Vermont has arrived for future ECAC and NCAA championship competition. Vermont was able to turn it all around in "Cinderella" fashion. Rebounding from a 2-7 record early in the season, the Icecats won 22 of their last 27 games to conclude with a most impressive 24-12 record (14-6 in Division I).

...umps Cats

...Buddy Powers, ...l came at 13:05, ...minute after ...gust the Cats 2 ...took a high shot ...goalie Tom ...much he saved ...off McNamara's ...UVM defender's ...into the net. ...tted the score at ...seconds later as ...still trying to ...flower score. ...a minute left in ...BU put some ...pressure on the ...but was fouled ...The Vermont ...it his best as he ...out 4 or 5 point ...To McNamara's ...relief, the horn sounded with score still tied 2-2.

BU came out strong in the second period but again McNamara did a superb job for the Cats. Consistent pressure by the Terriers finally gave them the lead. BU's Bill Burlington swung a pass down the sideboards to linemate Mike Fidler behind the Vermont net. A Vermont player stole the puck from Fidler but lost control as he was trying to clear it. Fidler got it back and made an excellent pass to Ken Kuzyk in front of the net. McNamara never had a chance as Kuzyk made the score 3-2.

Even though the Terriers had scored 3 goals and were controlling the game the Cats didn't give up.

Michel Lebesu evened the score with some great forechecking in the BU zone. Lebesu took the puck down the ice by himself and was ridden into the boards behind the BU net by a defenseman. Lebesu scrapped for the puck and outfought two BU players for control behind the net. Michel tried to sneak the puck past Durocher as he came around the right side of the net. Durocher hit the shot with

(continued on page thirteen)

...OTC ...has 3 ...t other ...s don't.

...owance. ...eading

...ROTC.

...Ext. 284

...ROTC

ALL NEW MENU
THE BEST STEAK
GREAT SEAFOOD TOO!
SIZZLING STEAK

VOLUME XCIII
NUMBER 10
MARCH 20, 1975

VERMONT CYNIC

University of Vermont
Burlington, Vermont

The o...

Keith Miser -- New Dean of Students

Kappa Sig Destroyed

by Randy Jansen

A three-alarm fire which broke Sunday morning at the Kappa Sigma fraternity has killed one UVM student and injured several others.

The dead youth has been identified as Andrew Towle, 20, of Richford, Vermont. Towle's father, Dr. William H. Towle, made the identification Sunday morning. Preliminary reports say that death was due to smoke inhalation.

Also suffering from smoke inhalation, is Warren Seavy of Essex Junction. Seavy was removed unconscious from his second floor bedroom. He was rushed to the intensive care unit of the Medical Center Hospital. He is reported to be in serious but stable condition. Michael Smith of Whitehall was treated for shock and fatigue and later released.

The alarm was turned in at 4:10 a.m. Sunday from the box at Summit Street. A three-alarm fire was immediately declared, drawing all available firemen including auxiliary firemen from the Burlington area. According to Captain Henry Francais, nearly 100 men fought the blaze.

Arson has been ruled out by the Burlington firemen. Faulty electrical wiring is suspected to be the cause of the fire. Kappa Sigma was completely gutted as firemen were still on the scene late Sunday morning.

Three firemen; Alfred Boucher, Wilrose Dufault, and Fredrick Blondin were injured. DuFault and Boucher suffered smoke inhalation and were released. Blondin suffered minor burns and was also released.

Firemen believed the fire started in the cellar and traveled through the walls igniting the upper floors. Apparently, the lights were extinguished by the fire just as the brothers discovered the fire, causing considerable confusion and hampering rescue efforts.

The Kappa Sigma brothers are now living with friends on the campus. Since nearly all their possessions were destroyed in the blaze, donations of clothing, books, and money can be made to Alpha Chi at 863-3195.

University Aids Brothers

by Randy Jansen

Housing and the Greek Council responded immediately in aiding the brothers of Kappa Sigma after the disasterous fire Sunday morning. Through campus-wide appeals, the University community has been able to provide clothes, food and lodging for the brothers.

Alpha Chi is co-ordinating the Greek Council relief operations. Piles of clothes have already been collected, but more are still needed. Sisters of Alpha Chi have requested "football size" clothing as many of the brothers of Kappa Sigma are of a large size. Sheets and blankets are also urgently needed as well as toilet items (toothpaste, shaving cream, soap, etc.).

The Greek Council has handed out lists of books that students can donate or lend to the brothers. For further information, call Alpha Chi at 863-3195.

Keith Miser, director of Housing, has offered a house at Fort Ethan Allen for Kappa Sigma if they wish to stay together. The brothers have accepted this offer and are presently moving into their new housing. Miser can provide surplus chairs and beds, but much needed are a refrigerator, a stove and living room furniture.

The brothers can get an immediate $100 interest-free loan from the University. This will tide them over until insurance and parental money can arrive. Temporary I.D.'s have been provided as well as Registration materials. Kappa Sigma members can receive dinner at Waterman through a check list. Saga will compensate them for the cost of the fire.

Miser also made an appeal for clothing, jackets, etc. Donations are being accepted at the Security Office. An official letter from the Administration will be provided to enable the brothers to present it to faculty members for purposes of delay in assignments.

"Basically," Miser added, "we tried to think of everything the brothers needed and to centralize the operations, to make it easier for them."

The Fraternity Managers Association also is involved in relief for the brothers. They have offered a $50 for each member to purchase essential

(continued on page three)

Courtesy of Burlington Free Press

Committee Recommends Keith Miser As Dean Of Students

The search committee for the UVM position of Dean of Students has recommended Dr. Keith H. Miser be promoted to the position from his current post as assistant dean of students and director of residence halls at the University.

UVM President Edward C. Andrews Jr. expressed "pleasure" with the recommendation, which he said would be offered to the Board of Trustees for confirmation at the April meeting.

The position had become open last October when Dean of Students Richard Powers was named associate executive [illegible] committee was named in early November.

Dr. William Kelly, assistant dean of the College of Agriculture, who chaired the search group, said the committee had been fortunate in having several well-qualified individuals.

"Everyone recognizes that the individual occupying the position must possess many talents and skills such as proven administrative ability, a genuine concern for student interests and needs and the ability to work effectively with diverse groups and individuals."

He said Dr. Miser -- who came to UVM in 1971 from the University of Indiana-- possesses these skills, has "an excellent proven track record and a sound knowledge of UVM, which will provide additional stability in these times of shifting leadership."

"The committee entered into the search process with the firm conviction that the dean of students position is one of the very important administrative posts within the University," and expressed "hope the new dean of students will be a member of the academic council with status equal to an academic dean."

Dr. Miser, he said, "has demonstrated his interest and ability in teaching and academic development and would hopefully be considered a full partner in the business of formulating academic policy and establishing educational priorities."

The Committee also "strongly recommends the new dean of students be given an adequate supporting staff to insure that the University receives the full benefit of his potential."

UVM Executive Vice President Wayne C. Patterson, who has been designated to serve as acting president when Dr. Andrews leaves the post this June, said a new search committee would be formed to consider a replacement for Dr. Miser as assistant dean of students and director of residence halls. He indicated strongly he supported the committee's recommendation that the dean of students serve as a member of the academic council.

Dr. Miser, who is also assistant professor of education at UVM, earned his B.S., M.S., And Ed. D. degrees at Indiana University, with emphasis on student personnel programs and "minor concentrations in counseling and guidance, in sociology and in business."

His background includes teaching experience in junior and senior high schools in Indiana, where he also functioned as a high school guidance counselor; and as a member of the residence halls staff at Indiana University.

He is a member of several professional societies, has served as consultant for organizations in his field. Dr. Miser makes his home in Burlington and is married to the former Ann Buchanan, who teaches English at Essex Junior High School, and who formerly directed the Urban Youth Center in Burlington.

Dr. Patterson indicated that Dr. Miser would be asked to begin phasing into the dean of students position "immediately."

Members of the search committee, in addition to Dr. Kelly, included Judith Anderson, assistant professor, physical therapy; Donald Gregg, professor, chemistry; and Marilyn Osborn, assistant professor, home economics.

Also, the student member Anne Casavant, vice president, Inter-Residence Association; Jane Greenberg, assistant director, admissions; and John Moore, assistant vice president, academic affairs.

Andrew Towle

by Burlington Free Press

Funeral Services were held for Andrew W. Towle, 20, at the All Saints' Catholic Church at 11 a.m. Andrew Towle died in the Kappa Sigma fire at the University of Vermont Sunday.

A junior and political science major, Mr. Towle was a member of Kappa Sigma fraternity, had served on the UVM Student Association and was a student assistant at Bailey Library. He also was a member of All Saints' Parish, Richford.

He was born in St. Albans on December 6, 1954, the son of Dr. William and Anne (Carpenter) Towle.

Besides his parents, he leaves a brother, Michael J; two sisters, Mary Katherine and Elizabeth Anne, all of Richford; his maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Carpenter of Burlington; and his paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. William C. Towle of Newport.

The Rev. Joseph Romano offered a liturgy of Christian burial at the funeral. In lieu of flowers, the family wishes memorial gifts be made to the Kappa Sigma disaster fund, in care of George Cunarelis, 62 Harrington St., Burlington.

Stafford Wants Public Disclosure

WASHINGTON--U.S. Sen. Robert T. Stafford, R-Vt., said here he plans to reintroduce legislation designed to require "full and public disclosure of all congressional lobbying activities."

The Vermont Republican, who has introduced lobbying disclosure legislation in the last two sessions of the Congress, said there is a possibility he may be joined in his efforts this year by U.S. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D.-Mass.

"Senator Kennedy also favors legislation designed to provide more information about lobbying activities," Stafford said.

"We have been discussing the possibility that we may join forces to organize a strong, bipartisan effort to achieve passage of such legislation in this session of the Congress."

In his weekly radio report to Vermont, Stafford said he feels the possibilities of passage of a lobbying disclosure bill, along with other reform measures designed to open up the activities of the federal government are "greater this year than they have been in a long time."

Stafford said he will also join efforts designed to require that all meetings of executive agencies of the federal government, including Congressional committee meetings, be open to the public, with only a few exceptions. He has already voted to have committee meetings open to the public as part of the new Senate rules.

The Vermonter said he is also supporting legislation to require full and public disclosure of the financial holdings of members of Congress, along with all other senior officials and aides in the federal government. Stafford last year made public his own financial statement and plans to update it each year.

The full text of Senator Stafford's report follows:

There is growing evidence that efforts to bring more fresh air and sunshine into the operations of Congress and other branches of the federal government will have more success this year than ever before.

Already in this young session of Congress, members of each of the major political parties have voted to open up to the public and the news media the working committee meetings of the Senate that have been held behind closed doors in the past.

The time-worn objections that open meetings will lead to chaos and will inhibit free expression by members of the Senate have been swept aside by the growing agreement that the public has a right to know what is going on.

I supported the successful efforts to open up the inner workings of the Congress this year, just as I supported those efforts in the past when they failed to win majority support.

Times are changing, and more and more members of Congress have come to realize that secrecy in government can bring only trouble.

Because of that fact, I am optimistic that we may make significant gains later in this session in behalf of the public's right to know more about the operations of their government, and about the men and women who run that government.

I am going to renew my efforts to make more information available to the public, and I am finding that more and more of my colleagues are interested in those efforts.

To begin with, I intend to reintroduce the "Open Government Act," which is designed to provide full and public disclosure of all congressional lobbying activities.

The bill would require public identification of lobbyists and of their employers. It would also require disclosure of the amount of money spent in lobbying activities, as well as identification of the specific issues involved, as well as identification of members of Congress and their staffs who are being lobbied. I have introduced the same bill in the last two sessions of Congress.

(continued on page three)

News Analysis:

Search Committee Continues

by John McDonald

On last Thursday, March 13, the Presidential Search Committee met once again in its quest for finding a replacement for resigning President Andrews. The meeting was a rather lengthy one which showed the inherent problems in eventually trying to choose the right man or woman for the job. Gov. Thomas Salmon was right when, last week, he called the job "an unenviable task."

The meeting started with the presentation of John Weiger, Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences. He concerned himself mainly with the problem of low morale on the part of faculty especially. He cited various financial reasons for the cause of the low morale. For example, department chairmen are not paid during the summer even though they are still responsible to the department and University during that time. Also, Weiger stated that there is no money for emergency situations, which causes him to say no to new things that come up more often than he would like to.

Weiger went further to discuss the "crossing of lines and blurring of authority" between Trustees and faculty. He said that the Trustees are not competent to deal with curricula problems and that this responsibility should be delegated solely to the faculty.

Speaking of the University in more general terms, Weiger saw the school as an attractive one because of its "quality, size and location" and said "we must not decrease this quality."

For a long time it seemed as though Weiger was evading the issue at hand, trying to select a president. He concerned himself totally with complaining about the low morale. How does this tie in with the selection of a new President? Weiger said that the most important quality of a president is that he have "a good set of ears. He must be able to hear the frustrations, desires, and ambitions of the faculty, students, trustees, secretaries and so on. The list is endless." More simply, the very problems which presently cause the low morale should be made known to the new President "even before he discovers them."

Elmer Gaden, Dean of the College of EMBA, was next in the line of speakers and definitely the highlight of the evening. He said that from all that he was reading in the paper about what a president should and shouldn't be, he got the impression of a man with "an 800 pulse rate and 48-inch biceps."

In talking about education, Gaden felt there are presently too many colleges and universities for the national need. He also said, "too many programs have catered to the occasional tastes of faculty and the passing fancies of students which are out of tune with the times." He cited an example of an acquaintence's daughter who graduated with a degree in Political Science and Far Eastern Relations, but who is currently a bank teller. Gaden showed the unfulfilled expectations of today's graduates.

Dean Gaden saw the University surviving "only if it is both socially and morally viable to do so." He saw the public as owning the university and it is to their benefit that the university should work for. But how should this be done?

By redefining the purpose of the university, Gaden called for an "increase in academic productivity" and excellence which will only be brought about by purposeful management.

He felt that the new president must be a good manager. With very little private support and shortening public support, Gaden said that the university must begin to "earn its own keep." Also, the president must be able to understand the ever-changing nature of the role of the university and to work to assist the public needs. "The president must develop intellect and scholarship, organize and transmit knowledge and assist in the application of this knowledge to public needs."

Raymond Phillips, Dean of Continuing Education, whose father was an old Midwestern brimstone preacher, seemed to take on a similar reverent style in presenting his opinion of what the qualities of a president should entail. In a very quiet, subdued and serious manner, Phillips proposed that the president must be a kind and humane figure who treats people and causes other people to treat each other with respect and kindness. When asked if this type of personality could also manage and direct the University, he astutely replied, "This does not mean that kindness is incompatible with other necessary qualities. Anybody can learn to manage. I don't think someone can learn to be kind."

Dean Corrigan, Dean of Education and Social Services spoke next. Jumping right into the problem of presidential qualifications, he felt that "educational leadership just like any other behavior, emerges from a specific set of beliefs. It is more important to ask the candidate what he or she values than to ask what he or she would do in a given situation."

He went further to say that "a leader must make his or her beliefs understood by actions as well as words. These beliefs serve the same function as roots for a tree... they pump vitality into a leader's style and fashion its character."

The key to Corrigan's opinion laid in his tremendous faith in people. He felt that people have a greater capacity to do things than they realize, and saw it the duty of a leader to bring out the potential in all of us. As he said, "Leadership ability is creative and dynamic and convinces people they can

(continued on page nine)

Moshe Dayan Comes to UVM April 18.

Features This Week

Cynic Contests p. 2

Phoebe Snow/ Jackson Browne p. 6

Jethro Tull Review p. 7

Ski Team All-Americans p. 10

- CALENDAR and ANNOUNCEMENTS -

Winooski River Raft Race

Applications for the eighth annual Winooski River Raft Race can now be picked up at the Billings Main Desk. This year's race will be on April 19th, come rain or shine. Entries are limited to 100 on a first-come, first-serve basis. If you have any questions regarding the race, write to:

Winooski River Raft Race, 109 Harris Hall, UVM, Burlington, Vt. 05401.

L/L Program Opening

I am looking for students who want to be a part of a Living/Learning unite next year. The common purpose will be to gain a global and regional awareness of the food crisis and to understand relating economic, political and social factors. I have already submitted a proposal to L/L, yet if you have new ideas, the proposal can be modified.

I'd appreciate hearing from you as soon as possible. Echo Nowakoski, 862-7055.

Moshe Dayan At UVM

General Moshe Dayan will be speaking at UVM on the evening of Friday, April 18. The speaking event is being sponsored by SA Speakers.

A native-born Israeli, General Dayan was raised in that tradition which brought the state of Israel into being. He has labored continuously to bring about a peaceful solution to the problems among the Middle-East nations and was key to the historic disengagement agreement between Israel, Egypt and Syria.

General Dayan is presently retired from military service and is writing his memoirs soon to be published.

Details concerning this event will be printed in the next edition of the Cynic.

Billings Maintains Schedule

Billings Center will maintain its normal operating schedule through Thursday, March 20th. Friday, March 21st, it will open at 7:30 a.m. and close at 8:00 p.m. It will remain closed (excepting office hours for office business only) through Sunday, March 30th. It will resume its normal operating schedule at 7:30 a.m. Monday, March 31st.

The Catamount Den will close at 5:00 p.m. Friday, March 21st and resume normal hours at 7:30 a.m. Monday, March 31st.

Ananda Marga Lecture

An introductory lecture on Ananda Marga meditation will be given 8:30 p.m. Thursday, March 20 at the Unitarian Church in Burlington.

Introductory lectures will also be given every Thursday after vacation at the same time and place.

S.A. Presidential Elections

Elections for the next year's student association president will be held April 15, and 16. All students interested in becoming a candidate must come to the student association office and pick up the necessary petitions to become an eligible candidate.

Each candidate must collect 400 student signatures to support their candidacy. The petitions will be due the second week in April, in order to have a candidates name placed on the ballot. More information later on.

IRA Elections

IRA elections will be held April 16 in the Dining Halls.

Positions include President, Vice-President Programming, Vice President Projects, Treasurer and Secretary. Anyone interested in running, or requesting additional information should leave name and address at the Inter-Residence Association, 109 Harris Hall.

Owls Elect New Pres.

Brent Edgerton emerged the victor after more than 5 hours of heated discussion last Wednesday, March 12, in Lambda Iota's presidential elections.

Brent, a junior from Dorset, Vermont, majors in Accounting and is succeeded in his previous office of Secretary by George Jamison.

Help Needed To Move Fletcher Free Library

Move a Library in Two Easy Hours. UVM students are needed to help other community volunteers to move books out of the Fletcher Free Library and into Memorial Auditorium. The Library is being closed. Call 658-3400 Sue Mitchellides, (or 656-2062 Stuart Sawabini.)

Public Services will be temporarily suspended as of 4:30 p.m., Friday, March 14, 1975, while relocation of the Fletcher Free library collection takes place. A firm date for reopening at Memorial Auditorium will be announced later.

During the period of closing two outreach programs will continue:

1. Lunch Bunch Film Series - Wednesdays at 12:15 at the Ethan Allen Fire House.
2. Parkbrary Story Hours - Fridays at 9:30 a.m. at Leddy Rink.

Returns of borrowed material can be made at the Burlington Police Department on S. Winooski Avenue, 24 hours a day.

Vermont Cycling Slides And Movies

The Green Mountain Bicycle Club invites UVM bikeriders to attend an evening of bicycle movies and slides showing Vermont Cycling 1974 and the Montreal World's Championships at 7:00 p.m. on Tuesday, March 25th at the Lincoln Inn, Essex Junction; there will be a nominal charge. For further details, write Justin Crocker at 139 N. Willard.

Square And Contra Dance At Southwick

The UVM Folk Dance Club will be holding a New England Square and Contra dance this Friday evening, March 21. All members of the community are cordially invited. Traditional music will be provided by the Arm and Hammer String Band, and the caller will be Ben Bergstein. During the early part of the evening, dances will be taught incorporating basic steps and figures, so that as the evening progresses, everyone will be able to take part in the more interesting and lively dances.

Square and contra dancing is Vermont's traditional folk dance form. It borrows many elements from English and Scottish country dancing, as well as several other European folk dance styles. Simple dances from some of these countries will also be taught Friday evening. The program will begin at 8:00 p.m. in the Southwick Ballroom at Redstone Campus. There is no charge for members of the folk dance club; admission is one dollar for all others.

Caps And Gowns For Sale, Not Rent

ATTENTION:

Seniors who will be attending commencement ceremonies: The University Store will be offering for sale, souvenir caps, gowns and tassles INSTEAD OF THE RENTAL PROGRAM AS IN THE PAST. This will alleviate your having to line up and return the rental regalia after each ceremony. To assist us, please return the slip below to any register operator at your earliest convenience.

While we are busy returning your slip, we now have samples of the announcements and you can make your arrangements for this at the same time. As usual, your cooperation will be greatly appreciated and help prevent any unpleasant situations that might occur the day before graduation. By completing and returning the information below, we will be able to have the wide variety of sizes necessary for such a program.

Recipients of degrees will line up 30 minutes before commencement. If commencement is:

In Ira Allen Chapel – line up at Votey Hall.

In Patrick Gym– line up in Gutterson Field House.

NAME
CAP SIZE	CHEST
HEIGHT	WEIGHT

Cynic Photo Contest

The CYNIC announces the Fourth Annual CYNIC photography Contest. The rules are as follows:

1. The contest is open to all students of the University of Vermont who are amateurs. (Amateurs will be considered those people who do not support themselves by taking pictures.)
2. The pictures will be divided into the three following catagories: faces, landscaping, and other subjects. The category of other subjects will include any picture not included in the catagories of faces and landscapes.
3. All photographs will be black and white and will be approximately 8 X 10 inches. There is no limit to the numtier of photographs that each photographer may submit.
4. The picture submitted will be the property of the Vermont Cynic, which will have the consent of the photographer to publish them in the newspaper.
5. The Vermont Cynic has the right to request the photographer to submit a subject release form signed by those people who may appear in the photograph.
7. Pictures entered in the Fourth Annual Cynic Photography Contest could not have been entered in any other photography contest sponsored by the Cynic.
8. Photographs will be judged on print quality and composition by a board of judges.
9. Judges will be announced in next week's issue.
10. All photographs should be placed in the Cynic office or the Cynic box at the main desk in Billings Center.
11. The photographer's name, address, and telephone number should be lightly printed in pencil on the back of each photograph submitted, along with a title, if any.
12. Deadline for entries will be April 10, 1975.
13. One winner will be chosen from each category and the winners will be announced in the April 17, issue of the Cynic.
14. The winner in each catagory will receive $25.00.
15. All questions should be referred directly to the Cynic Office.

Creative Writing Contest

Deadline: Thursday, April 10, 1975 12 Noon

Rules

1. Three categories - short story, essay and poetry
2. All UVM students, full and part time, may enter.
3. All entries must be typed, double spaced.
4. All entries to be handed in to Cynic office with name and address on separate paper.
5. Limit of 15 pages on short story, 7 pages for essay.
6. Judges will be announced in next week's issue.
7. Winners will be announced in the issue of April 24, 1975.
8. First prize in each category: $25.00

THURSDAY, MARCH 20

1 p.m., Mathematical Sciences Seminar for undergraduates. Prof. C. L. Liu, University of Illinois, "Analysis and Synthesis of Sorting Algorithms", at 419 Waterman Building. Prof. Liu will give a graduate seminar at 3 p.m. at the same place on "Heuristic Algorithms in Discrete Optimization Problems."

4:30 p.m., The Faculty Senate meets in Memorial Lounge, Waterman.

6 p.m., The Church Street Center's course on Middle East Cooking starts today. Call 656-4221 for details.

7 p.m. Come make a joyful noise unto the Lord! Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship is having a fellowship meeting in L/L B-162. All are welcome!

7:30 p.m., The Third World Organization holds an African dance workshop, instructed by Maria Jones in Southwick Ballroom. Register by showing up 15 minutes early with $2.

7:30 p.m., SA Films presents for the 800th time on any screen, 'The Wizard of Oz', in 101 Votey. Admission is free (they should pay us for going). Maybe one of these times the wicked witch will gobble straight ol' Dorothy right up, golden slippers, golden voice and all. There will be a second showing at 9:30 p.m.

7:30 p.m., Sue Morse of UVM's English Dept. leads a discussion of "Richard II: Better Kings and Gardens", in A-180 L/L as part of the Medieval/Renaissance Program.

8 p.m., The UVM Choral Union performs tonight at the Royall Tyler Theatre. See story in this issue. Tickets by calling Ext. 3040.

FRIDAY, MARCH 21

9 a.m. to 12 noon, and 1 to 4 p.m., Today is the last day for undergraduate registration for Fall '75 courses.

7:30 p.m., An open poetry reading with R. Tinker Greene will be held at the Church St. Center. This is the first in a series of readings that will continue through March 30. Call 656-4221 for details.

7:30 and 10:00 p.m., SA Films presents "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid" at 101 Votey. Admission is $1.

8 p.m., The UVM Choral Union performs at St. Paul's Cathedral.

8 p.m., Folk dancing in Southwick Ballroom occurs every Friday night. All welcome to attend.

SATURDAY, MARCH 22

The Church Street Center's course in quilting begins today. Call 656-4221 for details.

8 p.m., The Duke Ellington Orchestra, conducted by the son of the late Duke, Mercer Ellington, will perform in a dance or listen concert at Memorial Auditorium. Tickets are general admission and are available by calling 656-3418. This is the final Lane offering of the 1974-75 season.

SUNDAY, MARCH 23

6 p.m., The Church St. Center Legislative Study Group meets at 135 Church St.

MONDAY, MARCH 24

Spring recess begins today. Classes resume March 31.

French Residence Hall Information

The French Residence Hall, La Maison Francaise, will be open during the academic year 1975-76 to Sophomore, Junior and Senior Men and Women who can and want to use the French language as their prime means of communication.

Those students desiring to live in La Maison Francaise next year should fill out and sign a special form which can be obtained in the Romance Language Department in the Secretary's Office, Room 520 Waterman, between 9:00 a.m. and 12:00 noon, and 1:00 p.m. and 4:30 p.m., Monday, March 17th through Friday, March 21st. These forms will be sent to Mme Suchet (320 Waterman) before April 1st.

Every applicant should sign a list posted in the Romance Language Department in the Secretary's Office for an interview with Mademoiselle Suchet April 2nd and 3rd between 9:00 a.m. and 11:30 a.m.

Order of Priority

1. Students who intend to major in French are encouraged to live in La Maison Francaise.
2. Students planning to spend a year in France under the VOSP are encouraged to experience by living in La Maison Francaise.
3. Seniors planning to teach French should plan to spend at least a year in La Maison Francaise.
4. Students currently living in La Maison Francaise and those returning to the U.S. after a year in Nice, France, with the VOSP.
5. All other interested students.

More information about La Maison Francaise may be obtained from Mrs. Geno, Mademoiselle Suchet or any other French Instructor.

Red Square Affair Due In April

The main campus residence halls have joined to sponsor the "Red Square Affair" on Saturday, April 26, in an effort to raise funds for a worthy charity, and present fun for all on the "square" between Bailey Library and Fleming Museum. Date for the event is April 27, and currently a committee is seeking exhibitors for the many booths they hope to fill.

Each exhibitor (arts, crafts, etc.) will be charged $5 which will go to the charity selected as the Fair's beneficiary. Exhibitors will be given an eight-foot table, plus two or three folding chairs.

In case of rain, on Sat., April 27, the Fair will be held on April 28. Even if it rains on April 28, you'll find the festivities at Gutterson.

If you would like to participate in the Fair as an exhibitor, contact Debbie Thompson at Ext. 2037 or Cindy Blanchard at Ext. 4288 or 4183, or at 864-9642.

SAGA Recess Schedule

Below is the list of hours for food service during Spring recess, March 21-30. Please take careful note of times and locations:

FRIDAY, MARCH 21: Den closes at 5 p.m. Harris-Millis and Wright open for dinner, 5 to 6 p.m.

SATURDAY AND SUNDAY, MARCH 22 and 23: All facilities closed.

MONDAY-THURSDAY, MARCH 24-27: Faculty Dining Room and Given Cafeteria open regular hours.

FRIDAY, MARCH 28: Faculty Dining Room Closed. Given Cafeteria open regular hours.

SATURDAY, MARCH 29: All facilities closed.

SUNDAY, MARCH 30: Marsh and Wright open for dinner, 5:30-6:30.

MONDAY, MARCH 31: All facilities open on regular schedules.

SAGA Office will be closed March 25-30, as well as the Coupon Bank.

Phone calls will be taken at Ext. 3155, Monday, March 24 until Thursday, March 27 from 8-3 p.m.

And there are new hours for the Coupon Bank, beginning this week and resuming after the vacation break. It is open from 8:30 to 1:30 p.m., closed from 1:30 until 2:30 and open again from 2:30 until 4 p.m.

Redstone Station will be opening April 12 from 5:30-7 p.m. But it will be closed March 22, 29, and April 5th.

YOU'RE WEARING CONTACTS.

WE CAN MAKE THE WEARING EASIER.

A lot easier.

You know that taking care of your contact lenses can be a real hassle.

You have to use a solution for wetting. Another one for soaking. Still another one for cleaning. And maybe even another one for cushioning.

But now there's Total® The all-in-one contact lens solution that wets, soaks, cleans and cushions.

It's a lot easier than having to use 4 different solutions.

There are two good ways to buy Total®—the 2 oz. size and the 4 oz. size. Total® 2 oz. has a free, mirrored lens storage case, and the new economy 4 oz. size saves you 25%.

Total® is available at the campus bookstore or your local drugstore.

And we're so sure you'll like Total® that we'll give you your second bottle free. Just send a Total® boxtop with your name, address and college name to:

Total, Allergan Pharmaceuticals
2525 Dupont Drive
Irvine, California 92664
(Limit one per person. Offer expires July 31, 1975.)

TOTAL® MAKES THE WEARING EASIER.

UNIVERSITY STORE

STOP LOOKING

for a good part-time job!!

- Good Pay
- New Opportunities
- Career Training
- Regular Promotions
- Men and Women Eligible

EARN $$$ FOR ONE WEEKEND PER MONTH, AND TRAIN FOR A REWARDING CAREER IN THE TECHNICAL SKILL OF YOUR CHOICE.

GETTING INVOLVED BECAUSE AMERICA NEEDS US

FOR MORE INFORMATION (No Obligation) CLIP AND MAIL TO: ARMY RESERVE OPPORTUNITIES, 4801 WEST DEVON AVE. RM. 108, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS 60646

NAME _____ AGE _____

ADDRESS _____

CITY _____ STATE _____

ZIP _____ PHONE _____

"IT PAYS TO GO TO MEETINGS"

"Ziggy's" Burlington Shoe repair "Smoke Stack" CIGERETTES 43¢ PACK $3.89 CARTON

BURLINGTON PLACE

"The Mini Mall"

101 Church Street Burlington, Vermont 05401

864-9555

Leather goods Jewelry candles clothing Jokes

UVM This

As hard as it may seem to believe in March, summer really does come to Vermont! And contrary to another myth and rumor, UVM does not close down and lock its doors during the months of late May through late August.

In fact, the University of Vermont, through its summer session program is developing a national reputation as an exciting, challenging, interesting and enjoyable place to pursue educational interests on both credit and non-credit levels. Last summer, UVM's summer session had the third largest growth rate among members of the Association of University Summer Sessions. It is second in size among New England state universities.

Summer session, you say?! Isn't that just like summer school?

No, Not at all!

It is true that traditionally many students and faculty have had cynical or disparaging attitudes toward summer schools. However, none of these attitudes, stereotypes or impressions should be associated with UVM's summer session.

Consider for a moment,

some of th
enrolling:

1. Tuitio in-state an students ($3
Vermonters n
for non-Verm

2. Over workshops an offered th summer (May
Many of thos
of two-week
four to mini-semest possible for up a whole se credits during as a comment graduate plans

3. Many workshops a only offer summer; som
only basis.
discovered,
that alot of very innovat
and excit refreshing ch of the cours
the regular ac

4. UVM i some very di
faculty offe summer. It
note that 7

Atomic Particles

(CPS) – Scientists from Berkeley and Stanford Universities have discovered a third, previously undetected new subatomic particle in test results which confirmed the existence of two other particles found last November. All three new particles were created by collisions of matter and anti-matter.

The explosion in discoveries of new subatomic particles has led atomic theorists to believe that man is new unde fundamental

One of advanced existence of
was that the
the existe
"quark."
theoretically of matter previously there were quarks, whic

...Stafford

(continued from page one)

Senator Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts also favors legislation designed to provide more information about lobbying activities. We have been discussin the possibility that we may join forces to organize a strong, bipartisan effort to achieve passage of of the Congress.

There are at least two other proposals designed to shed more light on the Congress and the rest of the federal government-proposals I view as companion legislation to the "Open Government Act."

One is a bill that would require that all meetings of the executive agencies of government--as well as Congressional committee meetings--be open to the public, with only a few exceptions.

The second measure would require full and public disclosure of the financial holdings and income of all members of Congress and their senior aides, and also of all high ranking officials of the government, including the President and Vice President.

Although there is no legal requirement that I do so, I have already made a public disclosure of my own holdings and income that disclos issuing a n year. Copie are made a media in Ve printed in Record.

We ha painful pe
our gove characteri
the bitter Secrecy b suspicion confidence that canno without citizens.

Both Legislative governmen public con
developme past. We m

Preside referendum
Executive of candor Congress sense that meaningf regard to it has been

I intend my efforts to greater shall do m support o
the same.

Cunningham Newm

The staff at the Newman Center would like to wish you a Joyous Easter Season. We hope your vacation time is special and that the Campus will be "Spring-like," both in appearance and in spirit when you return.

For those of you still on Campus for Holy Week, our schedule will be as follows: Monday-Wednesday: Mass at 4:15 p.m.; Tuesday: Mass also at 10 p.m.; Holy Thursday: 8:00 p.m.; Good Friday Service: 3:00 p.m.; Easter Vigil-Saturday: 11:00 p.m.; Easter Sunday: Masses 9:00 and 11:30 a.m. and 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.

FASHION SHOW: Thanks to the many of you who participated in our Fashion Show – by fashioning, coming and buying tickets, our net proceeds amounted to $702.50. We consider that a great success!

VARI
19th i Auditoriu to be in name s Holland. evening.

ACTI
weekday meet dur pick up return.

PASS with SA Passov provide food
March
3. In Living/L

Stud their ov should arrange

EXXON

Ralph's Exx
on Route 7 Shelburne Road
Complete Auto Se
Expert Tune up and
All Work Fully Guar
Free pickup and
Phone: 862-92

- CALENDAR and ANNOUNCEMENTS -

Winooski River Raft Race

Applications for the eighth annual Winooski River Raft Race can now be picked up at the Billings Main Desk. This year's race will be on April 19th, come rain or shine. Entries are limited to 100 on a first-come, first-serve basis. If you have any questions regarding the race, write to:

Winooski River Raft Race, 109 Harris Hall, UVM, Burlington, Vt. 05401.

L/L Program Opening

I am looking for students who want to be a part of a Living/Learning suite next year. The common purpose will be to gain a global and regional awareness of the food crisis and to understand relating economic, political and social factors. I have already submitted a proposal to L/L, yet if you have new ideas, the proposal can be modified.

I'd appreciate hearing from you as soon as possible. Echo Nowakoski, 862-7055.

Moshe Dayan At UVM

General Moshe Dayan will be speaking at UVM on the evening of Friday, April 18. The speaking event is being sponsored by SA Speakers.

A native-born Israeli, General Dayan was raised in that tradition which brought the state of Israel into being. He has labored continuously to bring about a peaceful solution to the problems among the Middle-East nations and was key to the historic disengagement agreement between Israel, Egypt and Syria.

General Dayan is presently retired from military service and is writing his memoirs soon to be published.

Details concerning this event will be printed in the next edition of the Cynic.

Billings Maintains Schedule

Billings Center will maintain its normal operating schedule through Thursday, March 20th. Friday, March 21st, it will open at 7:30 a.m. and close at 8:00 p.m. It will remain closed (excepting office hours for office business only) through Sunday, March 30th. It will resume its normal operating schedule at 7:30 a.m. Monday, March 31st.

The Catamount Den will close at 5:00 p.m. Friday, March 21st and resume normal hours at 7:30 a.m. Monday, March 31st.

Ananda Marga Lecture

An introductory lecture on Ananda Marga meditation will be given 8:30 p.m. Thursday, March 20 at the Unitarian Church in Burlington. Introductory lectures will also be given every Thursday after vacation at the same time and place.

S.A. Presidential Elections

Elections for the next year's student association president will be held April 15, and 16. All students interested in becoming a candidate must come to the student association office and pick up the necessary petitions to become an eligible candidate. Each candidate must collect 400 student signatures to support their candidacy. The petitions will be due the second week in April, in order to have a candidates name placed on the ballot. More information later on.

IRA Elections

IRA elections will be held April 16 in the Dining Halls.

Positions include President, Vice-President Programming, Vice President Projects, Treasurer and Secretary. Anyone interested in running, or requesting additional information should leave name and address at the Inter-Residence Association, 109 Harris Hall.

Owls Elect New Pres.

Brent Edgerton emerged the victor after more than 5 hours of heated discussion last Wednesday, March 12, in Lambda Iota's presidential elections.

Brent, a junior from Dorset, Vermont, majors in Accounting and is succeeded in his previous office of Secretary by George Jamison.

Help Needed To Move Fletcher Free Library

Move a Library in Two Easy Hours. UVM students are needed to help other community volunteers to move books out of the Fletcher Free Library and into Memorial Auditorium. The Library is being closed. Call 658-3400 Sue Mitchelides, (or 656-2062 Stuart Sawabini.)

Public Services will be temporarily suspended as of 4:30 p.m., Friday, March 14, 1975, while relocation of the Fletcher Free library collection takes place. A firm date for reopening at Memorial Auditorium will be announced later.

During the period of closing two outreach programs will continue:

1. Lunch Bunch Film Series - Wednesdays at 12:15 at the Ethan Allen Fire House.
2. Parkbrary Story Hours - Fridays at 9:30 a.m. at Leddy Rink.

Returns of borrowed material can be made at the Burlington Police Department on S. Winooski Avenue, 24 hours a day.

Vermont Cycling Slides And Movies

The Green Mountain Bicycle Club invites UVM bikeriders to attend an evening of bicycle movies and slides showing Vermont Cycling 1974 and the Montreal World's Championships at 7:00 p.m. on Tuesday, March 25th at the Lincoln Inn, Essex Junction; there will be a nominal charge. For further details, write Justin Crocker at 139 N. Willard.

Square And Contra Dance At Southwick

The UVM Folk Dance Club will be holding a New England Square and Contra dance this Friday evening, March 21. All members of the community are cordially invited. Traditional music will be provided by the Arm and Hammer String Band, and the caller will be Ben Bergstein. During the early part of the evening, dances will be taught incorporating basic steps and figures, so that as the evening progresses, everyone will be able to take part in the more interesting and lively dances.

Square and contra dancing is Vermont's traditional folk dance form. It borrows many elements from English and Scottish country dancing, as well as several other European folk dance styles. Simple dances from some of these countries will also be taught Friday evening. The program will begin at 8:00 p.m. in the Southwick Ballroom at Redstone Campus. There is no charge for members of the folk dance club; admission is one dollar for all others.

Cynic Photo Contest

The CYNIC announces the Fourth Annual CYNIC photography Contest. The rules are as follows:

1. The contest is open to all students of the University of Vermont who are amateurs. (Amateurs will be considered those people who do not support themselves by taking pictures.)
2. The pictures will be divided into the three following catagories: faces, landscaping, and other subjects. The category of other subjects will include any picture not included in the catagories of faces and landscapes.
3. All photographs will be black and white and will be approximately 8 X 10 inches. There is no limit to the number of photographs that each photographer may submit.
4. The picture submitted will be the property of the Vermont Cynic, which will have the consent of the photographer to publish them in the newspaper.
5. The Vermont Cynic has the right to request the photographer to submit a subject release form signed by those people who may appear in the photograph.
7. Pictures entered in the Fourth Annual Cynic Photography Contest could not have been entered in any other photography contest sponsored by the Cynic.
8. Photographs will be judged on print quality and composition by a board of judges.
9. Judges will be announced in next week's issue.
10. All photographs should be placed in the Cynic office or the Cynic box at the main desk in Billings Center.
11. The photographer's name, address, and telephone number should be lightly printed in pencil on the back of each photograph submitted, along with a title, if any.
12. Deadline for entries will be April 10, 1975.
13. One winner will be chosen from each category and the winners will be announced in the April 17, issue of the Cynic.
14. The winner in each catagory will receive $25.00.
15. All questions should be referred directly to the Cynic Office.

Creative Writing Contest

Deadline: Thursday, April 10, 1975 12 Noon

Rules

1. Three categories - short story, essay and poetry
2. All UVM students, full and part time, may enter.
3. All entries must be typed, double spaced.
4. All entries to be handed in to Cynic office with name and address on separate paper.
5. Limit of 15 pages on short story, 7 pages for essay.
6. Judges will be announced in next week's issue.
7. Winners will be announced in the issue of April 24, 1975.
8. First prize in each catagory: $25.00

Caps And Gowns For Sale, Not Rent

ATTENTION:

Seniors who will be attending commencement ceremonies: The University Store will be offering for sale, souvenir caps, gowns and tassles INSTEAD OF THE RENTAL PROGRAM AS IN THE PAST. This will alleviate your having to line up and return the rental regalia after each ceremony. To assist us, please return the slip below to any regimer operator at your earliest convenience.

While you are here returning your slip, we now have samples of the announcements and you can make your arrangements for this at the same time. As usual, your cooperation will be greatly appreciated and help prevent any unpleasant situations that might occur the day before graduation. By completing and returning the information below, we will be able to have the wide variety of sizes necessary for such a program.

Recipients of degrees will line up 30 minutes before commencement. If commencement is:

In Ira Allen Chapel - line up at Votey Hall.

In Patrick Gym- line up in Gutterson Field House.

NAME

CAP SIZE CHEST

HEIGHT WEIGHT

French Residence Hall Information

The French Residence Hall, La Maison Francaise, will be open during the academic year 1975-76 to Sophomore, Junior and Senior Men and Women who can and want to use the French language as their prime means of communication.

Those students desiring to live in La Maison Francaise next year should fill out and sign a special form which can be obtained in the Romance Language Department in the Secretary's Office, Room 520 Waterman, between 9:00 a.m. and 12:00 noon, and 1:00 p.m. and 4:30 p.m., Monday, March 17th through Friday, March 21st. These forms will be sent to Melle Suchet (520 Waterman) before April 1st.

Every applicant should sign a list posted in the Romance Language Department in the Secretary's Office for an interview with Mademoiselle Suchet April 2nd and 3rd between 9:00 a.m. and 11:30 a.m.

Order of Priority

1. Students who intend to major in French are encouraged to live in La Maison Francaise.
2. Students planning to spend a year in France under the VOSP are encouraged to experience by living in La Maison Francaise.
3. Seniors planning to teach French should plan to spend at least a year in La Maison Francaise.
4. Students currently living in La Maison Francaise and those returning to the U.S. after a year in Nice, France, with the VOSP.
5. All other interested students.

More information about La Maison Francaise may be obtained from Mrs. Geno, Mademoiselle Suchet or any other French Instructor.

Red Square Affair Due In April

The main campus residence halls have joined to sponsor the "Red Square Affair" on Saturday, April 26, in an effort to raise funds for a worthy charity, and present fun for all on the "square" between Bailey Library and Fleming Museum. Date for the event is April 27, and currently a committee is seeking exhibitors for the many booths they hope to fill.

Each exhibitor (arts, crafts, etc.) will be charged $5 which will go to the charity selected as the Fair's beneficiary. Exhibitors will be given an eight-foot table, plus two or three folding chairs.

In case of rain, on Sat., April 27, the Fair will be held on April 28. Even if it rains on April 28, you'll find the festivities at Gutterson.

If you would like to participate in the Fair as an exhibitor, contact Debbie Thompson at Ext. 2037 or Cindy Blanchard at Ext. 4288 or 4183, or at 864-9642.

SAGA Recess Schedule

Below is the list of hours for food service during Spring recess, March 21-30. Please take careful note of times and locations:

FRIDAY, MARCH 21: Den closes at 5 p.m. Harris-Millis and Wright open for dinner, 5 to 6 p.m.

SATURDAY AND SUNDAY, MARCH 22 and 23: All facilities closed.

MONDAY-THURSDAY, MARCH 24-27: Faculty Dining Room and Given Cafeteria open regular hours.

FRIDAY, MARCH 28: Faculty Dining Room Closed. Given Cafeteria open regular hours.

SATURDAY, MARCH 29: All facilities closed.

SUNDAY, MARCH 30: Marsh and Wright open for dinner, 5:30-6:30.

MONDAY, MARCH 31: All facilities open on regular schedules.

SAGA Office will be closed March 25-30, as well as the Coupon Bank.

Phone calls will be taken at Ext. 3155, Monday, March 24 until Thursday, March 27 from 8- 3 p.m.

And there are new hours for the Coupon Bank, beginning this week and resuming after the vacation break. It is open from 8:30 to 1:30 p.m., closed from 1:30 until 2:30 and open again from 2:30 until 4 p.m.

Redstone Station will be opening April 12 from 5:30-7 p.m. But it will be closed March 22, 29, and April 5th.

THURSDAY, MARCH 20

1 p.m., Mathematical Sciences Seminar for undergraduates. Prof. C. L. Liu, University of Illinois, "Analysis and Synthesis of Sorting Algorithms", at 419 Waterman Building. Prof. Liu will give a graduate seminar at 3 p.m. at the same place on "Heuristic Algorithms in Discrete Optimization Problems."

4:30 p.m., The Faculty Senate meets in Memorial Lounge, Waterman.

6 p.m., The Church Street Center's course on Middle East Cooking starts today. Call 656-4221 for details.

7 p.m. Come make a joyful noise unto the Lord! Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship is having a fellowship meeting in L/L B-162. All are welcome!

7:30 p.m., The Third World Organization holds an African dance workshop, instructed by Marta Jones in Southwick Ballroom. Register by showing up 15 minutes early with $2.

7:30 p.m., SA Films presents for the 800th time on any screen, 'The Wizard of Oz', in 101 Votey. Admission is free (they should pay us for going). Maybe one of these times the wicked witch will gobble straight ol' Dorothy right up, golden slippers, golden voice and all. There will be a second showing at 9:30 p.m.

7:30 p.m., Sue Morse of UVM's English Dept. leads a discussion of "Richard II: Better Kings and Gardens", in A-180 L/L as part of the Medieval/Renaissance Program.

8 p.m., The UVM Choral Union performs tonight at the Royall Tyler Theatre. See story in this issue. Tickets by calling Ext. 3040.

FRIDAY, MARCH 21

9 a.m. to 12 noon, and 1 to 4 p.m., Today is the last day for undergraduate registration for Fall '75 courses.

7:30 p.m., An open poetry reading with R. Tinker Greene will be held at the Church St. Center. This is the first in a series of readings that will continue through March 30. Call 656-4221 for details.

7:30 and 10:00 p.m., SA Films presents "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid" at 101 Votey. Admission is $1.

8 p.m., The UVM Choral Union performs at St. Paul's Cathedral.

8 p.m., Folk dancing in Southwick Ballroom occurs every Friday night. All welcome to attend.

SATURDAY, MARCH 22

The Church Street Center's course in quilting begins today. Call 656-4221 for details.

8 p.m., The Duke Ellington Orchestra, conducted by the son of the late Duke, Mercer Ellington, will perform in a dance or listen concert at Memorial Auditorium. Tickets are general admission and are available by calling 656-3418. This is the final Lane offering of the 1974-75 season.

SUNDAY, MARCH 23

6 p.m., The Church St. Center Legislative Study Group meets at 135 Church St.

MONDAY, MARCH 24

Spring recess begins today. Classes resume March 31.

YOU'RE WEARING CONTACTS.

WE CAN MAKE THE WEARING EASIER.

A lot easier.

You know that taking care of your contact lenses can be a real hassle.

You have to use a solution for wetting. Another one for soaking. Still another one for cleaning. And maybe even another one for cushioning.

But now there's Total® The all-in-one contact lens solution that wets, soaks, cleans and cushions.

It's a lot easier than having to use 4 different solutions.

There are two good ways to buy Total®—the 2 oz. size and the 4 oz. size. Total® 2 oz. has a free, mirrored lens storage case, and the new economy 4 oz. size saves you 25%.

Total® is available at the campus bookstore or your local drugstore.

And we're so sure you'll like Total® that we'll give you your second bottle free. Just send a Total® boxtop with your name, address and college name to:

Total, Allergan Pharmaceuticals
2525 Dupont Drive
Irvine, California 92664
(Limit one per person. Offer expires July 31, 1975.)

TOTAL® MAKES THE WEARING EASIER.

UNIVERSITY STORE

STOP LOOKING

for a good part-time job!!

•Good Pay •New Opportunities
•Career Training •Regular Promotions
•Men and Women Eligible

EARN $45 FOR ONE WEEKEND PER MONTH, AND TRAIN FOR A REWARDING CAREER IN THE TECHNICAL SKILL OF YOUR CHOICE.

GETTING INVOLVED BECAUSE AMERICA NEEDS US

FOR MORE INFORMATION (No Obligation) CLIP AND MAIL TO: ARMY RESERVE OPPORTUNITIES, 4601 WEST DEVON AVE. RM. 108, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS 60646

NAME AGE
ADDRESS
CITY STATE
ZIP PHONE

"IT PAYS TO GO TO MEETINGS"

"Ziggy's" Burlington Shoe repair "Smoke Stack" CIGERETTES 43¢ PACK $3.89 CARTON

BURLINGTON PLACE
"The Mini Mall"
101 Church Street Burlington, Vermont 05401
864-9555

Leather goods Jewelry candles clothing Jokes

UVM This

As hard as it may seem to believe in March, summer really does come to Vermont! And contrary to another myth and rumor, UVM does not close down and look its doors during the months of late May through late August.

In fact, the University of Vermont, through its summer session program is developing a national reputation as an exciting, challenging, interesting and enjoyable place to pursue educational interests on both credit and non-credit levels. Last summer, UVM's summer session had the third largest growth rate among members of the Association of University Summer Sessions. It is second in size among New England state universities.

Summer session, you say!! Isn't that just like summer school?

No. Not at all!

It is true that traditionally many students and faculty have had cynical or disparaging attitudes toward summer schools. However, none of these attitudes, stereotypes or impressions should be associated with UVM's summer session.

Consider, for a moment, some of th... enrolling:

1. Tuitio... in-state an... students ($3... Vermonters a... for non-Verm...
2. Over ... workshops ... offered t... summer (May... Many of the... of two-week ... four to ... mini-semest... possible for ... up a whole ... credits during ... as a connec... graduate plan...
3. Many ... workshops ... only offer... summer, som... only basis. ... discovered, ... that alot of ... very innovat... and excit... refreshing ... of the cour... the regular ... UVM ... some very d... faculty offe... summer. It ... note that 7...

Atomic Particles

(CPS) – Scientists from Berkeley and Stanford Universities have discovered a third, previously undetected new subatomic particle in test results which confirmed the existence of two other particles found last November. All three new particles were created by collisions of matter and anti-matter.

The explosion in discoveries of new subatomic particles has led atomic theorists to believe that man is ... new unde... fundamental ...

One of ... advanced ... existence of ... was that the ... the existe... "quark," ... theoretically ... of matter ... previously ... there were ... quarks, whi...

...Stafford

(continued from page one)

Senator Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts also favors legislation designed to provide more information about lobbying activities. We have been discussin the possibility that we may join forces to organize a strong, bipartisan effort to achieve passage of ... legislation to this session of the Congress.

There are at least two other proposals designed to shed more light on the Congress and the rest of the federal government--proposals I view as companion legislation to the "Open Government Act."

One is a bill that would require that all meetings of the executive agencies of government--as well as Congressional committee meetings--be open to the public, with only a few exceptions.

The second measure would require full and public disclosure of the financial holdings and income of all members of Congress and their senior aides, and also of all high ranking officials of the government, including the President and Vice President.

Although there is no legal requirement that I do so, I have already made a public disclosure of my own holdings and income... that disclos... issuing a r... year. Copi... are made a... media in Ve... printed in ... Record.

We ha... painful pe... our nove... characters ... the bitter ... Secrecy b... suspicion ... confidence ... that cann... without ... citizens.

Both ... Legislative ... government ... public con... developme... past. We m...

Preside... refreshin... Executive ... of candor ... Congress ... sense that ... meaning ... regard is ... it has been ...

I intend ... my efforts ... to greater ... shall do ... support o... the same.

Cunningham Newm...

The staff at the Newman Center would like to wish you a Joyous Easter Season. We hope your vacation time is special and that the Campus will be "Spring-like," both in appearance and in spirit when you return.

For those of you still on Campus for Holy Week, our schedule will be as follows: Monday-Wednesday: Mass at 4:15 p.m.; Tuesday: Mass also at 10 p.m.; Holy Thursday: 8:00 p.m.; Good Friday Service: 3:00 p.m.; Easter Vigil-Saturday: 11:00 p.m.; Easter Sunday: Masses 9:00 and 11:30 a.m. and 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.

FASHION SHOW: Thanks to the many of you who participated in our Fashion Show – by fashioning, coming and buying tickets, our net proceeds amounted to $702.50. We consider that a great success!

VARI... 19th. I... Auditoriu... to be in ... name a... Holland... evening. ...

ACTI... weekday... meet dur... pick up ... return. ...

PASS... with SA... Passove... provide... March ... 3, in ... Living/L...

Stud... their o... should ... arrang...

EXXON

Ralph's Exx... on Route 7 Shelburne Road a...
Complete Auto Se...
Expert Tune up and ...
All Work Fully Guar...
Free pickup and d...
Phone: 862-92...

...SDAY, MARCH 20

Sciences Seminar for undergraduates.
...y of Illinois, "Analysis and Synthesis
... at 419 Waterman Building. Prof. Liu
...ture at 3 p.m. at the same place on
... Discrete Optimization Problems."
...ty Senate meets in Memorial Lounge.

...Street Center's course on Middle East
...t 656-4221 for details.
... a joyful noise' unto the Lord!
... Fellowship is having a fellowship
...ll are welcome!
... World Organization holds an African
...ced by Morris Jones in Southwick
...wing up 15 minutes early with $2.
... presents for the 800th time on any
...Os", in 101 Votey. Admission is free
... going! Maybe one of these times the ... straight ol' Dorothy right up, golden
...d all. There will be a second showing at

...ne of UVM's English Dept. leads a
...II: Better Kings and Gardens", in ... Medieval/Renaissance Program.
...Choral Union performs tonight at the ...e story in this issue. Tickets by call...

...DAY, MARCH 21

...nd 1 to 4 p.m., Today is the last day
...ation for Fall '75 courses.
...poetry reading with R. Tinker Greene
...rch 31 Center. This is the first in a
...will continue through March 30. Call

... SA Films presents "Butch Cassidy
...t 101 Votey. Admission $1.
...Choral Union performs at St. Paul's

... in Southwick Ballroom occurs every
...e to attend.

...RDAY, MARCH 22

...ster's course in quilting begins today.

...llington Orchestra, conducted by the ... Mercer Ellington, will perform in a
...at Memorial Auditorium. Tickets are ... available by calling 656-3418. This is
... the 1974-75 season.

...AY, MARCH 23

...St. Center Legislative Study Group

...DAY, MARCH 24

...day. Classes resume March 31.

...Information

...(520 ...stands their ...experience by living in La Maison Francaise.

...id sign... 3. Seniors planning to teach ...mance ... French should plan to spend at ... in the ... least a year in La Maison ...or an ... Francaise.

...oiselle ...d 3rd ... 11:30 4. Students currently living in La Maison Francaise and those returning to the U.S. after a year in Nice, France, with the VOSP.

...ead to ... 5. All other interested ...h are ... students. ... in La

...ing to ... More information about La ...e under ... Maison Francaise may be ...ded to obtained from Mrs. Geno, Mademoiselle Suchet or any other French Instructor.

...Due In April

...hibitors ...ey hope In case of rain, on Sat., April 27, the Fair will be held on April 28. Even if it rains on April 28, you'll find the festivities at Gutterson.

..., crafts, ...S which ...elected ...eficiary. ...ven an ... two or If you would like to participate in the Fair as an exhibitor, contact Debbie Thompson at Ext. 2037 or Cindy Blanchard at Ext. 4288 or 4183, or at 864-9642.

...chedule

...H 28: ... Closed. ... regular

...CH 29:

...CH 30: ...pen for

... 31: All ... regular

...e closed ...ll as the

Phone calls will be taken at Ext. 3155, Monday, March 24 until Thursday, March 27 from 8-3 p.m.

And there are new hours for the Coupon Bank, beginning this week and resuming after the vacation break. It is open from 8:30 to 1:30 p.m., closed from 1:30 until 2:30 and open again from 2:30 until 4 p.m.

Redstone Station will be opening April 12 from 5:30-7 p.m. But it will be closed March 22, 29, and April 5th.

...pair "Smoke Stack" CIGERETTES 43' PACK $3.89 CARTON
...N PLACE
...ll"
...on, Vermont 05401
...les clothing Jokes

UVM This Summer

As hard as it may seem to believe in March, summer really does come to Vermont! And contrary to another myth and rumor, UVM does not close down and lock its doors during the months of late May through late August.

In fact, the University of Vermont, through its summer session program is developing a national reputation as an exciting, challenging, interesting and enjoyable place to pursue educational interests on both credit and non-credit levels. Last summer, UVM's summer session had the third largest growth rate among members of the Association of University Summer Sessions. It is second in size among New England state universities.

Summer session, you say!! Isn't that just like summer school?

No, Not at all!

It is true that traditionally many students and faculty have had cynical or disparaging attitudes toward summer schools. However, none of these attitudes, stereotypes or impressions should be associated with UVM's summer session.

Consider for a moment, some of these reasons for enrolling:

1. Tuition is lower for in-state and out-of-state students ($35 per credit for Vermonters and $48 per credit for non-Vermonters).

2. Over 250 courses, workshops and seminars will be offered throughout the summer (May 19-August 15). Many of these are in the form of two-week mini-courses or four-to-six-week mini-semesters. It's very possible for a student to pick up a whole semester's worth of credits during the summer and, as a consequence, accelerate graduate plans.

3. Many of these courses, workshops and seminars are only offered during the summer; some on a one time only basis. Students have discovered, to their pleasure, that alot of these courses are very innovative, experimental and exciting. Perhaps a refreshing change from many of the courses offered during the regular academic year.

4. UVM is fortunate to have some very distinguished visiting faculty offering courses this summer. It is interesting to note that 78 per cent of last summer's students rated the instructional program (courses and faculty) as either excellent or very good.

5. Many students enjoy the social, cultural and recreational activities available during the summer months in Vermont.

6. Other students enjoy the change of pace from the regular academic year, especially the opportunity to relate to faculty members who are less hassled by the demands of Fall and Spring semesters. Still others enjoy the different mixture of students (different ages - backgrounds)!

The UVM Summer Session has something to offer for almost everyone. During this year's pre-enrollment period and over Spring break, give some serious thought to UVM in the summer.

The next issue of the Cynic will have information on specific faculty members and courses including some interviews.

In the meantime, more information can be obtained from the Continuing Education Office at Grasse Mount (corner of Summit and Main Streets) or by calling 656-2085.

UYA Now Recruiting

The staff of the Office of Volunteer Programs at The University of Vermont is currently planning for the August, 1975, round of University Year for Action (UYA) placements. Through UYA, which has been operational at UVM for three years now, students commit themselves to working full-time for one calendar year in organizations serving low-income Vermonters. Students normally live in the Vermont community where they serve so as to become an integral part of that community and receive a monthly "living allowance" to this end. To date, nearly 200 UVM students have spent their internship year working in 45 human-service agencies around Vermont. The range of forthcoming UYA project assignments will, as in the past, be broad, including the areas of consumer protection, legal services, corrections, health care, education, economic development, environmental protection and social services.

UYA students benefit greatly from their interaction with sponsoring faculty and host agencies by applying their academic and human relations skills to community problems as well as by setting further personal learning goals for themselves. In addition, UYA interns have an opportunity to test out possible career options before graduation.

OVP expects to place between 50 and 60 UYA volunteers in the Fall. Through a cooperative arrangement with the Vermont State Colleges, about 25 percent of this number will be students at the State Colleges. Those interested in applying for UYA should inquire at the Office of Volunteer Programs, Mansfield House (656-2062 and 656-2063) as soon as possible.

The Exchange

New Student Directory

by Andrea Lathonen
Alice D. Outwater Counseling & Testing Center

Do you realize how much we look forward to your replies? You brighten up our week; it's like reaching into a grab bag and holding one's breath at what comes out! One theme that runs beneath the surface is a sense of being lost, not knowing where to turn for services and needs. Students living on and off campus say information is hard to get—hours the gym is open, etc. They suggested a booklet telling them about the campus, what there is to do, the study areas, procedures for red tape things (think of the red tape you could add, explaining that one!) Nancy Magnus of Counseling and Testing tries hard so include much of this in Freshman Orientation packets. This lost soul had his/her ID taken in January and didn't know where to pick it up. (Registrar's office in Waterman. Even the night operator knew this.) That smiling picture just sitting in a desk, with no one to love it! You could call Billings for/on any of these questions; also the Cat's Tail, a booklet has a quantity of information about UVM, as well as the magazine, UVM in a Nutshell at the bookstore. We learned a lot ourselves reading them.

Another freshman living in Harris-Millis says she and her friends feel this is not the spot for new students--too difficult to meet people, especially if they are not outgoing.

Are you aware of the Billings Ride Board? Apparently many are not. "Neither the people who have cars nor the people who need rides bother to check the book." This student wants it advertised in the Cynic. However, WRUV does announce the Ride Board at least three times a day, so many people are getting to their destinations. We have someone intent on saving electricity. I like this concern. Could there be five floor lamps purchased for the couch lighting in the Round Room of Billings? Also two or three desk lamps for the round tables, then the overhead lights could be turned off. Yes, poor lighting is a real detriment to reading--we've passed this one along quickly and will see what might be done.

Next week we plan to cover the parking situation--direct your comments to that, as well as anything else on your minds. Call x2068 or drop your thoughts in the EXCHANGE boxes around campus--meanwhile good luck on midterms.

Student Accomodations In N.Y.

Now it's possible for young people to find low-cost accommodations right in the heart of Manhattan at the newly opened New York Student Center. The Student Center is operated by the Council on International Educational Exchange, a non-profit organization that has been providing services for the student traveler for over 25 years.

The Student Center is open year-round and is available to students and young people who are traveling on their own or with a group. Overnight rates for the Center's accommodations vary from $6 per person for a three-or four-bedded room up to $12 for a single. No advance reservations are necessary for individual travelers and special group rates and services are available on request.

The Center is located in the McAlpin Hotel – next door to the Empire State Building and across the street from Macy's – at the busy intersection of 34th Street, Broadway and Sixth Avenue. The Center is easily reached by bus from Pennsylvania Railroad Station, Grand Central Station, Port Authority Bus Terminal and the East Side Airlines Terminal.

The staff of the Student Center knows New York inside and out: they'll answer visitors' questions on where to go and what to see in New York and provide them with the best New York guidebooks and maps as well as tickets to many of New York's attractions.

The office of the New York Student Center is located in Suite 2200 of the McAlpin Hotel, 34th Street and Broadway, New York 10001.

The office is open seven days a week from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m.; the telephone number is (212) 695-0291.

...University Aid

(continued from page one)

items at the Book Store. The UVM Book Store responded by offering $25 free to each brother for "anything they need."

The following are the list of books needed by the brothers of Kappa Sig. If you can provide any of these, Alpha Chi have requested that you call them at 863-3195 and give your name, address and telephone number.

Accounting 60, Anthropology 26, Biology 3, Business Law 17 & 18, Botany 4, Civil Engineering 163, Children's Literature & Language Arts, Economics 11 & 12, Education 146, English 10 & 14, Forestry 105, Geography 11, 12, 102, 103, History 23 & 52, Home Economics 65, Intermediate Accounting 162, Math 115 & 126, Marketing, Math & Creating Thinking in Elementary School, PEP 100, 155, 167, & 182, Political Science 5, 172, & 264, Psychology 1, Psychology of Coaching, Symbolic Logic, Statistics, Tech Science and Social Studies in Elementary School, Vote 162.

...Atomic Particles Discoveries

(CPS) – Scientists from Berkeley and Stanford Universities have discovered a third, previously undetected new subatomic particle in test results which confirmed the existence of two other particles found last November. All three new particles were created by collisions of matter and anti-matter.

The explosion in discoveries of new subatomic particles has led atomic theorists to believe that man is on the verge of a new understanding of the fundamental nature of matter.

One of the theories advanced to explain the existence of the new particles was that they are produced by the existence of a fourth "quark." A quark is a theoretically fundamental unit of matter. Physicists have previously speculated that there were three kinds of quarks, which combine to form electrons, protons, neutrons and other basic atomic particles.

If the new theory is correct, the fourth or "charmed" quark combines with the other three to produce the new heavy particles that have been discovered.

"The charmed particle theory is the leading candidate to explain what's going on," said Dr. Burton Richter, head of Stanford University's Linear Accelerator where three of the particles have been found.

...Stafford

(continued from page one)

Senator Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts also favors legislation designed to provide more information about lobbying activities. We have been discussin the possibility that we may join fofces to organize a strong, bipartisan effort to achieve passage of such legislation in this session of the Congress.

There are at least two other proposals designed to shed more light on the Congress and the rest of the federal government--proposals I view as companion legislation to the "Open Government Act."

One is a bill that would require that all meetings of the executive agencies of government--as well as Congressional committee meetings--be open to the public, with only a few exceptions.

The second measure would require full and public disclosure of the financial holdings and income of all members of Congress and their senior aides, and also of all high ranking officials of the government, including the President and Vice President.

Although there is no legal requirement that I do so, I have already made a public disclosure of my own holdings and income. I intend to keep that disclosure up to date by issuing a new statement each year. Copies of the statement are made available to the news media in Vermont, and it is also printed in the Congressional Record.

We have just concluded a painful period in the history of our government--a period characterized by secrecy and the bitter fruits of that secrecy. Secrecy builds suspicion, and suspicion weakens public confidence in a government that cannot function properly without the trust of its citizens.

Both the Executive and Legislative Branches of our government have lost much public confidence because of developments in the recent past. We must change that.

President Ford has brought refreshing change to the Executive Branch with his style of candor and openess. The Congress must do the same. I sense that the possibility for meaningful reform in this regard is greater this year than it has been in a long time.

I intend to press ahead with my efforts to open government to greater public view, and I shall do my best to enlist the support of my colleagues to do the same.

Fifth Symposium For A and S

"New Interests and Directions" is the broad topic of the College of Arts and Sciences' fifth symposium, with sessions scheduled for April 3 and 9.

Each semester the College presents a symposium to provide the opportunity for people in several departments of the College to meet and discuss topics of mutual interest. The symposium format also allows presentations to be made on subjects of a broader scope than the normal professional paper. Students, faculty and townspeople have met in the past to hear presentations ranging from a commemoration of Copernicus to "subjectivity-objectivity" as seen from various points of view.

"New Interests and Directions," while seemingly an exceptionally broad topic, will be devoted to discussions of important, recent developments in the various disciplines.

Each symposium begins at 3:15 p.m., in Memorial Lounge, Waterman Building. Coffee, tea and cookies will be served between the presentations, and the audience should feel free to attend any or all talks on each occasion.

Here, then, is the schedule of presentations:

SESSION ONE: April 3 Thursday, Memorial Lounge, Waterman, 3:15-5:30 p.m., "How the 'New Economics' Became 'Old Hat'," by Professor Richard Chase of the Economics Department, plus "Plate Tectonics in Geology" by Professor Rolfe Stanley of the Geology Department. Also: "Modern Trends in Cultural Anthropology" with Professor Paul Magnarella, Anthropology Department.

SESSION TWO: April 9, Wednesday, Memorial Lounge, Waterman, 3:15-5:30, with "The New Geography" by Professors Thomas Leinbach and Aulis Lind of the Geography Department, and "History From the Bottom Up" by Professor Susan Jackson of the History Department. Plus: "Two Germanys Or One?" with Professor David Scrase of the German Department.

Billings Bedlam

Billings Center Governing Board proudly announced the fourth semi-annual Billings Bedlam, Friday April 4.

As usual there will be a dance band, Downpour, from 12 to 3; a Barbershop Quartet for listening, and a jazz band. Tournaments and contests are about the same as before including pie eating, ping pong, paper airplane flying, cribbage, and more. There will be folk dancing and refreshments.

Movies will be shown. There will be a major movie along with short flicks. This year the Governing Board is planning to have programs so you will know what is happening and where throughout Billings that night.

Don't forget that is Friday, April 4, All Night starting at 8. WRUV AM will be there also, why don't you.

Cunningham Newman Center

The staff at the Newman Center would like to wish you a Joyous Easter Season. We hope your vacation time is special and that the Campus will be "Spring-like," both in appearance and in spirit when you return.

For those of you still on Campus for Holy Week, our schedule will be as follows: Monday–Wednesday: Mass at 4:15 p.m.; Tuesday: Mass also at 10 p.m.; Holy Thursday: 8:00 p.m.; Good Friday Service: 3:00 p.m.; Easter Vigil–Saturday: 11:00 p.m.; Easter Sunday: Masses 9:00 and 11:30 a.m. and 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.

FASHION SHOW: Thanks to the many of you who participated in our Fashion Show – by fashioning, coming and buying tickets, our net proceeds amounted to $702.50. We consider that a great success!

VARIETY SHOW: April 19th in the Southwick Auditorium. If you would like to be in it, stop and give your name and talent to Fr. Holland. Should be a fun evening.

ACTIVITIES: Our usual weekday activities will not meet during vacation, but will pick up again as soon as all return.

Hillel

PASSOVER: Arrangements with SAGA Food Service for Passover meals. Saga will provide acceptable Passover food items from Monday, March 31, to Thursday, April 3, in Wright and the Living/Learning cafeteria.

Students who will bring their own Kosher frozen meals should contact Saga, for special arrangements.

EXXON
Ralph's Exxon
on Route 7 Shelburne Road and Interstate 189
Complete Auto Service
Expert Tune up and Repairs
All Work Fully Guaranteed
Free pickup and delivery
Phone: 862-9200

Don't let the price of a college education stop you.

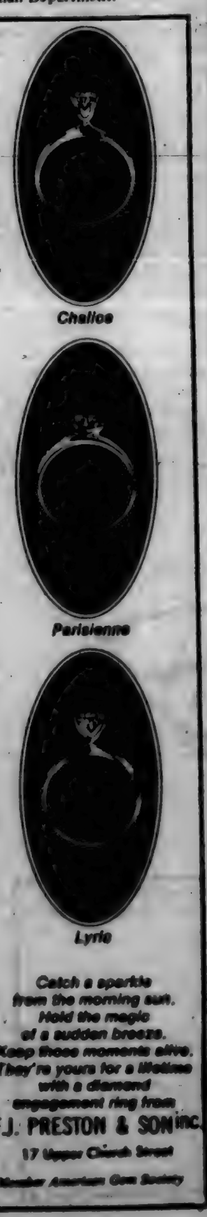
The price of a college education is skyrocketing. Fortunately the Air Force has done something to catch up with it. For the first time, the Air Force ROTC Scholarships include the 2-year program, for both men and women.

If you can qualify, the Air Force will pay for the remainder of your college education. Not only do AFROTC 2-year college scholarships cover full tuition, but reimbursement for textbooks, lab and incidental fees, as well as a tax-free monthly allowance of $100.

To cash in on all this just apply, qualify, and enroll in the Air Force ROTC at Department of Aerospace Studies, St. Michael's College. Telephone 656-2000 Ext. 291

It's a great way to finish your college education in the money, and build a future where the sky's no limit...as an officer in the Air Force.

MAKE THE MOST OF IT



Chalice
Parisienne
Lyric
Catch a sparkle from the morning sun. Hold the magic of a sudden breeze. Keep those moments alive. They're yours for a lifetime with a diamond engagement ring from
F.J. PRESTON & SON inc.
17 Upper Church Street
Member American Gem Society

VERMONT'S COMPLETE BACKPACKING EQUIPMENT SPECIALISTS
DAKINS VERMONT MOUNTAIN SHOP
227 MAIN ST
BURLINGTON VT
tel-864-4122
GRAND OPENING SALE
3 DAYS THURS.-FRI. 9AM-9PM SATURDAY 9AM-6PM
★ SLEEPING BAGS CLOSEOUTS ★ PACKS REDUCED
★ TENTS NORTH FACE SIERRA REG $140 SALE $125 TIMBERLINE REG $75 SALE $65 ★ CLIMBING ROPES NEAR WHOLESALE
★ SNOW SHOES 25% OFF
★ JOGGING SHOES "NIKE" RATED no.1 10% OFF
★ RUGBY SHIRTS REG $23.00 SALE $17.95
★ HIKING BOOTS VASQUE SEQUOIA II 25% OFF OTHER CLOSEOUTS
★ CHAMOIS SHIRTS REG $14.95 SALE $11.95
★ DOWN JACKETS 10% OFF
FREE PARKING IN REAR
REGULAR HOURS MON-TUES-SAT 9AM–6PM WED-THUR-FRI 9AM–9PM
The "Country Boys" Have Come To Burlington

VERMONT CYNIC

Founded In 1883

Editor-in-Chief . . . . . Randy Jensen '77
Assistant Editor . . . . . Wyatt Kash '77
Managing Editor . . . . . Mark S. Vella '76
News Editor . . . . . Kathy Stannard '77
Assistant News Editor . . . . . Mark Sroyer '77
Feature Editor . . . . . Stephen M. Tanner '76
Arts Editor . . . . . Robert DeMike '77
Sports Editor . . . . . Norm Robinson '77
Copy Editor . . . . . Teri Dodi '77
Advertising Manager . . . . Debbie Powell '76

Editorial

False Alarms Can Be Dangerous

The tragedy of the Kappa Sigma fire was a sad and unfortunate misfortune to befall UVM. Our deepest sympathy goes out to Andrew Towle's family and the Kappa Sigma brothers.

It is unfortunate that an incident like this has to occur before we realize our inadequacies and responsibilities toward fire protection. The Greek Coordinating Council met last Monday to discuss preventive and contingency measures to prevent further mishaps. Can we as students and the University as an organization also face up to our duties?

On the night of the fire, three false alarms were pulled on the UVM campus at Harris Millis, Living/Learning and Wright. Was this the action of supposedly intelligent and responsible college students? When are we going to learn that fire alarms are there for our protection, and not for playing games or for some drunk to pull for his entertainment? The continual pulling of these alarms lessens the impact they are supposed to achieve. When they occur so often as to be commonplace, they lose their effectiveness. Obviously, when a fire does occur and a fire alarm is pulled, the students are placed in great danger because no protection is taken.

In view of Sunday's accident, the University should expell any student caught pulling a false alarm. Perhaps, a security guard could be hired to investigate false fire alarms and check for fire hazards. If students are permitted to pull fire alarms with impunity, this type of action will continue unchecked.

The Greek Council is aware of the problems of fire and is attempting to deal with it. If they do succeed in implementing their measures, they should be commended. UVM students and the University also have a responsibility to realize the danger of fire. Efforts should be redoubled to deal with irresponsible students and increase the effectiveness of the University's vigilance. We have so much to gain from responsible action and so much to lose from foolish and negligent action.

R.J.

UVM Responds To Fire

UVM reacted to the Kappa Sigma fire with overwhelming generosity. Keith Miser has done everything within his position to aid the brothers. The Greek Council, acting in a cooperative spirit, which hasn't been seen in years, coordinated relief efforts from the students. Individual students have responded with donations of money and clothing. Even the UVM Bookstore contributed money to the brothers for essentials.

It is gratifying to see the University community act with such speed and unselfish actions. The University of Vermont has many problems and has been criticized often. But, when it comes to human tragedy and suffering, we have shown ourselves to be generous. The University and its students should be commended for these ways in which we have conducted ourselves.

R.J.

Letters To The Editor

Fire Alarms Alarming

To the Editor:

In a fit of drowsed, dazed pissed-off anger I'd like to say "Damn those fire alarms!" But really, the alarms have nothing to do with my irritation, (at this hour of 2 in the morn). So I'll say, more correctly, Goddamn those immature flunkies who pull the alarms! It is against my principles to accuse my fellow students of 'immaturity'— We get enough of those accusations from the fat cats. But I really must say it on this occasion because neither my suite-mates nor myself took the fire alarm seriously. We stayed in our suite— fuming—and held the attitude: well, the R.A. will come get us if it is real... Well, hells bells! We all know that if it is real, it's too late to save the teddy bears!

Quite a theatre of the absurd! What to do? Lynch 'em? How 'bout just a plea to respect your compadres' safety...?

Sincerely,
Louisa Hinrichs Beinecke
Living/Learning
Center

P.S. What begins with F and ends with UCK?

Answer: Fire Truck!

Constable On Patrol

To the Editor:

This is in regard to the recent criticism of Security:

It is our intention to inform you about the activities of one of your officers, namely Officer Lee Mumley. In the course of his duties, he has proven to us that there is efficiency in Campus Security at UVM.

Officer Mumley has always been friendly and agreeable, when encountering the students. He never gets flustered or angry when he is performing his tasks or in the face of an emergency. He has proven extremely skillful in apprehending traffic violators, especially those on greens or mid-campus sidewalks.

Furthermore, there has never been a harsh word spoken about this fine gentleman and we believe he deserves a good pat on the back for a job well done. For example: Last December he quieted a drunken maniac at 5 a.m. right on our floor. In all seriousness, we think Officer Mumbley is consistently on the ball and has great potential in the field of law-enforcement.

Buckham Political Action Committee
Buckham Hall (1st floor)

The Tassle Hassle

To the Editor:

The senior class council, be it this year's or last, has made a rather unfashionable decision to require the wearing of caps and gowns to graduation. But these aren't any ordinary gowns—we no longer have to rent, but have been given the privilege of buying one time-to-be used regalia at the cost of $6.44. But of course this is understandable since we have the option of saving them as souvenirs of our years at UVM.

In this day and age of "liberated" standards it still seems that tradition reigns. It seems much easier and economical to allow the wearing of neat attire (i.e., a jacket and tie, a dress, a pants suit, finely pressed dungarees and flannel shirts) rather than "garbage gowns." Uniform dress (or pants) at graduation is more a thing of the past. I'm sure students can carry their diplomas without the aid of disposable caps and gowns.

Maybe next year's senior class will see the light. If so we say cap's off. Let's get rid of the tassle hassle.

Sincerely,
Names, Caps and
Gowns withheld

Scholastic Peasantry

To the Editor:

In response to Mr. Francis R. Murphy's contribution to last week's Cynic, I would like to try to clarify a couple of things for Mr. Murphy and the Cynic's readers.

The Faculty Senate does not give college deans permission to allow students to drop courses late without penalty, except for medical reasons. The colleges' Committees on Academic Standing can, however. Most of the colleges ignore this Senate rule; the Deans of the College of Arts and Sciences have chosen not to. As I see it, Mr. Murphy, you are perhaps passing the buck by attacking the wrong source for a legitimate gripe.

You have also managed, in your criticism of Barbara O'Reilly, to attack one of the more responsive and sensitive representatives of this institution, in our opinions.

I am sure if the Dean of Arts and Sciences' Office acquires an opening for a "scholastic peasant," they'll let Mr. Murphy know!

Sincerely,
Sue Longenecker
Sherry Lauzon

P.S. Mr. Murphy should at least have indicated that his petition was finally approved.

Criticism Of a A Critic's Critique

To the Editor:

Wouldn't it be a great idea if the next time Mr. Elliot Freeman went to the Royall Tyler Theatre to review a show, he sat in the last row so that there would not be a lady sitting behind him.

Mr. Freeman's article is not a critical review of the show, it is only a very limited account of the reactions of too small an audience. Obviously, the lady sitting behind the "critic" proved too distracting, and Mr. Freeman should have asked her politely to be quiet.

A better idea would be for Mr. Elliot Freeman to end there his career as a critic.

Sincerely,
Simone Suchet

Underpass Bill Passed

To The Editor:

There appears to be some confusion over the Cynic's reporting of the State Senate action on S.93. The Senate did not defeat S. 93, as your editorial and news headline stated. They passed it. S.93 is a bill to prevent construction of the underpass. It was passed by the Senate, will go to the House, and if signed into law will negate the previous legislation calling for an underpass to be built.

You inadvertantly praised Peter MacAusland for the wrong reasons: he was arguing for S.93 and against the underpass, not against S.93 which would by definition be for the underpass.

Margo Howland

Thoughts & Reflections

by Ken Markowitz

All sorts of records for longevity have been set recently. A fossil of a giant winged reptile more than sixty million years old was discovered by fossil hunters in Texas. The Texas Pterosaur is said to have a wingspan of fifty-one feet, nearly six times the wingspan of the condor, the largest bird now alive. An F-4 fighter plane has a wingspan of only 39 feet. And you thought Tolkien's flying dragons of Modred were imaginary, didn't you...

One of the largest cakes ever made in San Francisco was created for the wedding of Nita Anosi and Atiliani Tafaerona. It was thirteen and a half feet high with twelve tiers. Dig in everybody!

Roberto Duran of Panama retained his lightweight title by KOing "Lightning" Ray Lampkin of Portland, Oregon. Poor O'l "Lightning" was seemingly struck by his namesake in the 14th round. He did not regain consciousness until a full 80 minutes later. When questioned afterwards about Lampkin, Duran, who was rather worried for a while, said straightfaced, "He's lucky I didn't hit him with a good punch!"...

If you think that's brutal, a real tragedy occurred during a championship soccer game south of the border in Mexico. While a member of the victorious team was walking off the field, he shouted epithets at the opposition. Before his teammates could come to his aid, the members of the opposing team literally beat him to death. When an official asked what measures would be taken, he merely shrugged his shoulders, saying, "It's an emotional game." ...

But don't despair. All the chandeliers have not been shattered. John and Yoko are back together again! After 18 months of separation the 34-year-old former Beatle and his 42, that's right, 42-year-old wife have decided to give it another try...

Mayor Daley is back again too as the Mayor of Chicago for an unprecedented sixth term. The mayor garnered 66% of the vote as he swept to an easy victory. Now people can sleep comfortably at night knowing that that quaint folk hero, the American Boss, has not yet vanished from the political scene. Daley is alive and well in Chicago...

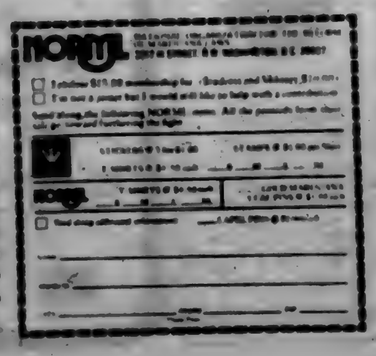
Oscar time is coming around again and rumor has it that the two frontrunners are Godfather Two (eleven Academy Award nominations) and Chinatown. Godfather Two, although not as good as the original, is a finely-acted, fast-moving picture depicting both the rise and fall of the Corleone dynasty. Al Pacino is excellent as the young Don. Over all, it's a good evening's take. Chinatown, however, is an extremely overrated, dull, and insipid film. The only action occurs three-quarters of the way through the movie when the hero detective, portrayed by Jack Nicholson, gets his nose slit. By that time, if the part of the anatomy about six inches lower had been cut, you couldn't have cared less. Anybody who liked this one wins sympathy, a table of anti-logs, and a free autographed copy of Milton's Paradise Lost.

In Venezuela, you don't say, "Hey, can you lend me a buck?" Rather you say, "Hey, can you lend me a 'Bolo'? A Bolo is the every-day term for the Bolivar, a monetary unit named after independence hero, Simon Bolivar. With all the oil down there, they are really pulling in the Bolos, too! ...

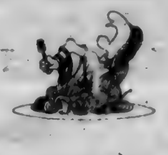
Saying for the week: This out of all will remain — They have lived and have tossed: So much of the game will be gain, Though the gold of the dice has been lost. — Jack London, Love of Life.

No. Nothing is ever "almost legal." Especially marijuana. Last year alone 420,000 people were arrested for marijuana offenses. Of those 90% were for simple possession.

But now a growing number of Americans are thinking seriously about changing the present marijuana laws. In fact, some laws have already been changed. The state of Oregon has successfully de-criminalized the personal use of marijuana. The American Bar Association, The National Council of Churches, Consumers' Union and The National Education Association have urged other states to do the same. An inevitable chain of events has begun. Become part of that change. Help us help you.



Bratt's Club The Sirloin Saloon: A Steak Out



by Jay Jenkins

Where is the most popular steak out in town? At the Sirloin Saloon. They have perfected a theme: the twilight ambiance of steaks and salad bar, martinis and cheesecake and a quick release back into a night still young. For Joe G.E., it is the fun of a good Saturday night hostling in a crowd, it is the realm of gourmand gastronomy, of bread and butter simplicity where one rents space and leaves it with a shift of gears, a hitch on the double-knits, leaving it like a deserted parking place. Most people who look for more than a welter of activity and don't equate bombardment of the sensibilities with a good meal find the saloon impersonal and schematized.

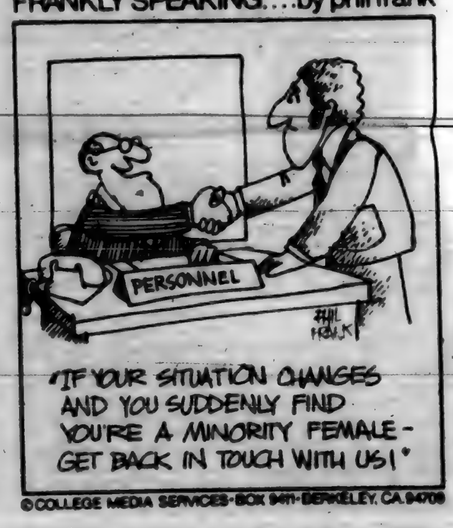
On a busy night, I feel as though I am eating in a sexed-up Lums or Howard Johnson's where their existence depends upon volume. They sell me one steak, but they will sell a hundred steaks that night, a thousand a week, truckloads a month. A herd of grazing cattle is blighted so I can have my N.Y. Sirloin medium rare. As I cut into it, I can sense the hoof and the bellow, I imagine sides of butchered beef hanging cold before the searing grill. I see steaks strewn on the fire and know that I am part of a gnawing majority, I've come out to savor my carnivorous morsels. I may sound like a raving misanthropist, but I fail at breaking down volume ledgers into something personal.

I must admit that their lounge has a persuasive appeal, it makes me forget the killing, just for a minute. It is a tastefully done high Victorian/art nouveau salon; one is tempted to ask for absinthe on principle. However, as my wandering eye gets swamped in the lush wallpaper I begin to feel the transport of a swirling velvet dream. There seems to be something unreal about the place, two consecutive glances bring me a potted palm, illuminated by tiny red Christmas blinkers, and a moose head, stoic, brute. Kitsch art; yet it is dense and sends one's senses reeling for a moment. Only the sound of my name on the intercom brings me back to my table.

The hostess, who is wearing an "admire me" button, shoehorns me into my seat, and my order is quickly taken by a solicitous waiter. The smell of steak and the sound of music is in the air. I begin to feel anonymous, not so much because of a sense of unimportance, but of their presumptions. Their game is rigid and serious; they have an hour more or less to sell a consistent and enjoyable but unsurprising meal, served with a dash of class, and to show you to the door pleased with the fare. To them, you are merchandise to be moved, you are the factory piece work to be completed and begun again, again, and again that night.

(continued on page eight)

FRANKLY SPEAKING....by phil frank



©COLLEGE MEDIA SERVICES-BOX 9411-BERKELEY, CA 94709

The Cynic welcomes and encourages articles, columns, and letters from all interested students, faculty, and members of the community. All material must be submitted no later than Monday noon before the Thursday of publication. Material must be signed, names will be withheld upon request. If you are interested in writing or perhaps curious about how things are done, stop in — we are downstairs at Billings Center — or call 658-4911.

VERMONT CYNIC

NEWS: Margo Howland, Andy Morse, Mary Gilbertson.
FEATURE: Paul Ajamian, Paul Cain, Carol Dufault, Mike Henry, Pam Hogarth, Andy Hunt, Sue Perkins.
ARTS: Dave Mandel, Larry Selden, Mark Seralnick, Jay Williams.
COLUMNISTS: Peter Cobb, Elliot Freeman, Ken Markovitz, Sue Perkins, Stephen Rice, Larry Selden, Scott Skinner, Peter Campbell.
SPORTS: Randy Briggs, Gary Brooks, Rick Katz, Don Rose, Richard Rothkov.
PRODUCTION: Rick Barney, Elly Clay, Sarah Clay, Beth Cohen, John Lunde, Barb Tarbuck
ADVERTISING: Katherine Bowers, Stephen Lee Brown, Sherry Grancey, Debbie Powell.
BUSINESS MANAGER: Nancy Slusnik.

Opinions expressed in editorials, cartoons, or columns in the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the University administration, faculty, or staff, or the State of Vermont. Opinions expressed by the columnists do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the majority of the members of the CYNIC Editorial Board.

Published yearly during the college year by the students of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College. Editorial and business offices in the Billings Center, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone: 658-4911. Deadline for notices is one week prior to date of publication.

Founded in 1883. Subscription rate $2.00 per year, single copy ten cents.

Win O

by Knut Rostad

(continued from last week)

So what are the solutions for the disgruntled from the illusionary desire for an outraged Pre Griffith suggests that a public relations campa general decline in pretense coupled with a dee myth of the omnipotent President" would he may now be transpiring, as Gerald Ford stum seventh month as Chief Executive. Ford has office to such an extent that many of his pol are at a loss of what to make of him.

In sharp contrast to his two predecessors adept at deceiving their "enemies" by avoidin covering up mistakes and personalizing confli has carried out the duties of his office wit degree of integrity. He has consistently displa to all views, as exemplified in the economi September that allowed the Presi recommendations from liberal John Kenne conservative Milton Friedman. His resulting t proposal directed at combating inflation qui the tube as the economic downward trend s direction. Though criticised for being inconsis in economic concerns, Ford has displayed many Presidential observers of the last decade difficult to recognize. His personal appearanc of a House Judiciary subcommittee explaini Richard Nixon hardly satisfied many of his c willing to face his opposition, and did not hi of 'executive privilege'. Even those who v with the pardon usually admitted that he was and were even impressed with the elem involved in his appearance. In his relations w of State, though he may not agree wit Trudeau of Canada, or West German Chanc evidently has succeeded in restoring a sense which could certainly be effective when strained. James Reston has even gone as far the President has "restored some kind of debate" and was "beginning to restore belief.

But most important of all, Ford's humani Office has caused a general decline of p admits he does not have all the answers, searching. What he has found most rec pleasing to many members of his party. fantastic deficits and appointed liberals to He seems to have a working relationship leaders and Al Ullman, chairman of the Hou Committee, who is probably the most i devising the Democrats economic propo started compromising.

Hopefully, Ford's private public rela humanize his office has started closing the

Who's Afraid O

by Neil Klotz

(Editors: This is the third in a continu on collective bargaining in higher educatio students.)

(CPS) — During the pickets, protests, an activism in the 60's, the few students lob state legislatures were largely shunted papers.

The lobbyists have returned in force around an issue more well-defined than not less powerful for that: collective barga

More and more students have come to bargaining is not just another "faculty issu directly affect them — through higher t loss of class time during teacher diminished rights in campus governance.

For many students, however, collective hit a little late — after administration-fa have ended. Lobbying has been seen by tactic, precisely because it seeks to guara outset, before legislatures pass laws bargaining in the public sector.

MAU-MAUING THE LEGISL

Since collective bargaining began in 1966, about 20 states have passed la procedure.

Faculties can bargain without a state l arrangement with their board of regents, not to negotiate the teachers haven't strike. State laws have attempted to employee strikes by formalizing when must bargain.

Student lobbyists have attempted to during bargaining by pushing fo participation in the negotiations or a li and administrations can bargain over.

Students in Wisconsin have gotten There the United Council of student the support of several legislators for l students silent observer status at negoti governance issues from bargaining.

If campus governance is relegated to the students have argued, then student or all-college council committees would

In Maine, students at the state univer been planning a lobbying effort. Altho employee bargaining bill before the provisions for student participation, come out in favor of limited stud decisions concerning tuition hikes.

A more active "third party" role endorsed by the Student Body California, where several bargaining bi One bill would open all negotiations students to participate as independen however, a part in formulating contra

Another bill with stronger supp role in bargaining, but the Univers body has been advocating an amend least give students the right to attend and issue an educational impact state is ratified. The students involved at the University of California Student L

The lobby has succeeded in attach bargaining bill passed during the pas was vetoed by former Gov. Reag opposed public employee bargain Democrat Edmund Brown, has reportedly is "having trouble" wit

VERMONT CYNIC

Founded In 1883

Editor-in-Chief ..... Randy Jensen '77
Assistant Editor ..... Wyatt Kash '77
Managing Editor ..... Mark S. Vella '76
News Editor ..... Kathy Shimel '77
Assistant News Editor ..... Mark Strayer '77
Features Editor ..... Stephen W. Thomas '76
Arts Editor ..... Robert DeMike '77
Sports Editor ..... Norm Robinson '77
Copy Editor ..... Bari Bell '77
Advertising Manager ..... Debbie Powell '76

Editorial
False Alarms Can Be Dangerous

The tragedy of the Kappa Sigma fire was a sad and unfortunate misfortune to befall UVM. Our deepest sympathy goes out to Andrew Towle's family and the Kappa Sigma brothers.

It is unfortunate that an incident like this has to occur before we realize our inadequacies and responsibilities toward fire protection. The Greek Coordinating Council met last Monday to discuss preventive and contingency measures to prevent further mishaps. Can we as students and the University as an organization also face up to our duties?

On the night of the fire, three false alarms were pulled on the UVM campus at Harris Millis, Living/Learning and Wright. Was this the action of supposedly intelligent and responsible college students? When are we going to learn that fire alarms are there for our protection, and not for playing games or for some drunk to pull for his entertainment? The continual pulling of these alarms lessens the impact they are supposed to achieve. When they occur so often as to be commonplace, they lose their effectiveness. Obviously, when a fire does occur and a fire alarm is pulled, the students are placed in great danger because no protection is taken.

In view of Sunday's accident, the University should expell any student caught pulling a false alarm. Perhaps, a security guard could be hired to investigate false fire alarms and check for fire hazards. If students are permitted to pull fire alarms with impunity, this type of action will continue unchecked.

The Greek Council is aware of the problems of fire and is attempting to deal with it. If they do succeed in implementing their measures, they should be commended. UVM students and the University also have a responsibility to realize the danger of fire. Efforts should be redoubled to deal with irresponsible students and increase the effectiveness of the University's vigilance. We have so much to gain from responsible action and so much to lose from foolish and negligent action.

R.J.

UVM Responds To Fire

UVM reacted to the Kappa Sigma fire with overwhelming generosity. Keith Miser has done everything within his position to aid the brothers. The Greek Council, acting in a cooperative spirit, which hasn't been seen in years, coordinated relief efforts from the students. Individual students have responded with donations of money and clothing. Even the UVM Bookstore contributed money to the brothers for essentials.

It is gratifying to see the University community act with such speed and unselfish actions. The University of Vermont has many problems and has been criticized often. But, when it comes to human tragedy and suffering, we have shown ourselves to be generous. The University and its students should be commended for these ways in which we have conducted ourselves.

R.J.

Letters To The Editor

Fire Alarms Alarming

To the Editor:

In a fit of drousod, dazed pissed off anger I'd like to say "Damn those fire alarms!" But really, the alarms have nothing to do with my irritation, (at this hour of 2 in the morn). So I'll say, more correctly, Goddamn those immature flunkies who pull the alarms! It is against my principles to accuse my fellow students of 'immaturity'— We get enough of those accusations from the fat cats. But I really must say it on this occasion because neither my suite-mates nor myself took the fire alarm seriously. We stayed in our suite— fuming—and held the attitude: well, the R.A. will come get us if it is real... Well, hells bells! We all know that if it is real, it's too late to save the teddy bears!

Quite a theatre of the absurd! What to do? Lynch 'em? How 'bout just a plea to respect your compadres' safety...?

Sincerely,
Louisa Hinrichs Beinecke
Living/Learning
Center

P.S. What begins with F and ends with UCK?

Answer: Fire Truck!

Constable On Patrol

To the Editor:

This is in regard to the recent criticism of Security:

It is our intention to inform you about the activities of one of your officers, namely Officer Lee Mumley. In the course of his duties, he has proven to us that there is efficiency in Campus Security at UVM.

Officer Mumley has always been friendly and agreeable, when encountering the students. He never gets flustered or angry when he is performing his tasks or in the face of an emergency. He has proven extremely skillful in apprehending traffic violators, especially those on greens or mid-campus sidewalks.

Furthermore, there has never been a harsh word spoken about this fine gentleman and we believe he deserves a good pat on the back for a job well done. For example: Last December he quieted a drunken maniac at 5 a.m. right on our floor. In all seriousness, we think Officer Mumbley is consistently on the ball and has great potential in the field of law-enforcement.

Buckham Political Action Committee
Buckham Hall (1st floor)

The Tassle Hassle

To the Editor:

The senior class council, be it this year's or last, has made a rather unfashionable decision to require the wearing of caps and gowns to graduation. But these aren't any ordinary gowns—we no longer have to rent, but have been given the privilege of buying one time to be used regalia at the cost of $6.44. But of course this is understandable since we have the option of saving them as souvenirs of our years at UVM.

In this day and age of "liberated" standards it still seems that tradition reigns. It seems much easier and economical to allow the wearing of neat attire (i.e., a jacket and tie, a dress, a pants suit, finely pressed dungarees and flannel shirts) rather than "garbage gowns." Uniform dress (or pants) at graduation is more a thing of the past. I'm sure students can carry their diplomas without the aid of disposable caps and gowns.

Maybe next year's senior class will see the light. If so we say cap's off. Let's get rid of the tassle hassle.

Sincerely,
Names, Caps and
Gowns withheld

Scholastic Peasantry

To the Editor:

In response to Mr. Francis R. Murphy's contribution to last week's Cynic, I would like to try to clarify a couple of things for Mr. Murphy and the Cynic's readers.

The Faculty Senate does not give college deans permission to allow students to drop courses late without penalty, except for medical reasons. The colleges' Committees on Academic Standing can, however. Most of the colleges ignore this Senate rule; the Deans of the College of Arts and Sciences have chosen not to. As I see it, Mr. Murphy, you are perhaps passing the buck by attacking the wrong source for a legitimate gripe.

You have also managed, in your criticism of Barbara O'Reilly, to attack one of the more responsive and sensitive representatives of this institution, in our opinions.

I am sure if the Dean of Arts and Sciences' Office acquires an opening for a "scholastic peasant," they'll let Mr. Murphy know!

Sincerely,
Sue Longenecker
Sherry Lauzon

P.S. Mr. Murphy should at least have indicated that his petition was finally approved.

Criticism Of a A Critic's Critique

To the Editor:

Wouldn't it be a great idea if the next time Mr. Elliot Freeman went to the Royall Tyler Theatre to review a show, he sat in the last row so that there would not be a lady sitting behind him.

Mr. Freeman's article is not a critical review of the show, it is only a very limited account of the reactions of too small an audience. Obviously, the lady sitting behind the "critic" proved too distracting, and Mr. Freeman should have asked her politely to be quiet.

A better idea would be for Mr. Elliot Freeman to end there his career as a critic.

Sincerely,
Simone Suchet

Underpass Bill Passed

To The Editor:

There appears to be some confusion over the Cynic's reporting of the State Senate action on S.93. The Senate did not defeat S. 93, as your editorial and news headline stated. They passed it. S.93 is a bill to prevent construction of the underpass. It was passed by the Senate, will go to the House, and if signed into law will negate the previous legislation calling for an underpass to be built.

You inadvertantly praised Peter MacAusland for the wrong reasons: he was arguing for S.93 and against the underpass, not against S.93 which would by definition be for the underpass.

Margo Howland

FRANKLY SPEAKING....by phil frank

©COLLEGE MEDIA SERVICES-BOX 9411-BERKELEY, CA 94709

The Cynic welcomes and encourages articles, columns, and letters from all interested students, faculty, and members of the community. All material must be submitted no later than Monday noon before the Thursday of publication. Material must be signed, names will be withheld upon request. If you are interested in writing or perhaps curious about how things are done, stop in — we are downstairs at Billings Center — or call 658-4911.

Thoughts & Reflections

By Ken Markowitz

All sorts of records for longevity have been set recently. A fossil of a giant winged reptile more than sixty million years old was discovered by fossil hunters in Texas. The Texas Pterosaur is said to have a wingspan of fifty-one feet, nearly six times the wingspan of the condor, the largest bird now alive. An F-4 fighter plane has a wingspan of only 39 feet. And you thought Tolkien's flying dragons of Modred were imaginary, didn't you...

One of the largest cakes ever made in San Francisco was created for the wedding of Nita Ancel and Attiliani Tafaserona. It was thirteen and a half feet high with twelve tiers. Dig in everybody!

Roberto Duran of Panama retained his lightweight title by KOing "Lightning" Ray Lampkin of Portland, Oregon. Poor O'l "Lightning" was seemingly struck by his namesake in the 14th round. He did not regain consciousness until a full 80 minutes later. When questioned afterwards about Lampkin, Duran, who was rather worried for a while, said straightfaced, "He's lucky I didn't hit him with a good punch!"...

If you think that's brutal, a real tragedy occurred during a championship soccer game south of the border in Mexico. While a member of the victorious team was walking off the field, he shouted epithets at the opposition. Before his teammates could come to his aid, the members of the opposing team literally beat him to death. When an official asked what measures would be taken, he merely shrugged his shoulders, saying, "It's an emotional game." ...

But don't despair. All the chandeliers have not been shattered. John and Yoko are back together again! After 18 months of separation the 34-year-old former Beatle and his 42, that's right, 42-year-old wife have decided to give it another try...

Mayor Daley is back again too as the Mayor of Chicago for an unprecedented sixth term. The mayor garnered 66% of the vote as he swept to an easy victory. Now people can sleep comfortably at night knowing that that quaint folk hero, the American Boss, has not yet vanished from the political scene. Daley is alive and well in Chicago...

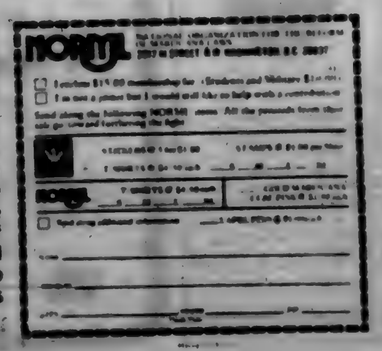
Oscar time is coming around again and rumor has it that the two frontrunners are Godfather Two (eleven Academy Award nominations) and Chinatown. Godfather Two, although not as good as the original, is a finely-acted, fast-moving picture depicting both the rise and fall of the Corleone dynasty. Al Pacino is excellent as the young Don. Over all, it's a good evening's take. Chinatown, however, is an extremely overrated, dull, and insipid film. The only action occurs three-quarters of the way through the movie when the hero detective, portrayed by Jack Nicholson, gets his nose slit. By that time, if the part of the anatomy about six inches lower had been cut, you couldn't have cared less. Anybody who liked this one wins sympathy, a table of anti-logs, and a free autographed copy of Milton's Paradise Lost.

In Venezuela, you don't say, "Hey, can you lend me a buck?" Rather you say, "Hey, can you lend me a 'Bolo'? A Bolo is the every-day term for the Bolivar, a monetary unit named after independence hero, Simon Bolivar. With all the oil down there, they are really pulling in the Bolos, too! ...

Saying for the week: This out of all will remain – They have lived and have tossed: So much of the game will be gain, Though the gold of the dice has been lost. – Jack London, Love of Life.

No. Nothing is ever "almost legal." Especially marijuana. Last year alone 420,000 people were arrested for marijuana offenses. Of those, 90% were for simple possession.

But now a growing number of Americans are thinking seriously about changing the present marijuana laws. In fact, some laws have already been changed. The state of Oregon has successfully de-criminalized the personal use of marijuana. The American Bar Association, The National Council of Churches, Consumers' Union and The National Education Association have urged other states to do the same. An inevitable chain of events has begun. Become part of that change. Help us help you.



Bratt's Club
The Sirloin Saloon: A Steak Out

by Jay Jenkins

Where is the most popular steak out in town? At the Sirloin Saloon. They have perfected a theme: the twilight ambiance of steaks and salad bar, martinis and cheesecake and a quick release back into a night still young. For Joe G.E., it is the fun of a good Saturday night hostling in a crowd, it is the realm of gourmand gastronomy, of bread and butter simplicity where one rents space and leaves it with a shift of gears, a hitch on the double-knits, leaving it like a deserted parking place. Most people who look for more than a welter of activity and don't equate bombardment of the sensibilities with a good meal find the saloon impersonal and schematized.

On a busy night, I feel as though I am eating in a sexed-up Lums or Howard Johnson's where their existence depends upon volume. They sell me one steak, but they will sell a hundred steaks that night, a thousand a week, truckloads a month. A herd of grazing cattle is blighted so I can have my N.Y. Sirloin medium rare. As I cut into it, I can sense the hoof and the bellow, I imagine sides of butchered beef hanging cold before the searing grill. I see steaks strewn on the fire and know that I am part of a gnawing majority, I've come out to savor my carnivorous morsels. I may sound like a raving misanthropist, but I fail at breaking down volume ledgers into something personal.

I must admit that their lounge has a persuasive appeal, it makes me forget the killing, just for a minute. It is a tastefully done high Victorian/art nouveau salon; one is tempted to ask for absinthe on principle. However, as my wandering eye gets swamped in the lush wallpaper I begin to feel the transport of a swirling velvet dream. There seems to be something unreal about the place, two consecutive glances bring me a potted palm, illuminated by tiny red Christmas blinkers, and a moose head, stoic, brute. Kitsch art; yet it is dease and sends one's senses reeling for a moment. Only the sound of my name on the intercom brings me back to my table.

The hostess, who is wearing an "admire me" button, shoehorns me into my seat, and my order is quickly taken by a solicitous waiter. The smell of steak and the sound of music is in the air. I begin to feel anonymous, not so much because of a sense of unimportance, but of their presumptions. Their game is rigid and serious: they have an hour more or less to sell a consistent and enjoyable but unsurprising meal, served with a dash of class, and to show you to the door pleased with the fare. To them, you are merchandise to be moved, you are the factory piece work to be completed and begun again, again, and again that night.

(continued on page eight)

VERMONT CYNIC

NEWS: Margo Howland, Andy Morse, Mary Gilbertson.
FEATURE: Paul Ajamian, Paul Cain, Carol Dufault, Mike Henry, Pam Hogarth, Andy Hunt, Sue Perkins.
ARTS: Dave Mandel, Larry Seiden, Mark Sersinick, Jay Williams.
COLUMNISTS: Peter Cobb, Elliot Freeman, Ken Markovitz, Sue Perkins, Stephen Rice, Larry Seiden, Scott Skinner, Peter Campbell.
SPORTS: Randy Briggs, Gary Brooks, Rick Karr, Don Rose, Richard Rotkov.
PRODUCTION: Rick Barney, Elly Clay, Sarah Clay, Beth Cohen, John Laude, Barb Tashia
ADVERTISING: Katherine Bowen, Stephen Lee Brown, Sherry Grancey, Debbie Powell.
BUSINESS MANAGER: Nancy Shanik.

Opinions expressed in editorials, cartoons, or columns in the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the University administration, faculty, or staff, or the State of Vermont. Opinions expressed by the columnists do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the majority of the members of the CYNIC Editorial Board.

Published yearly during the college year by the students of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College. Editorial and Business offices in the Billings Center, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone: 658-4911. Deadline for notices is one week prior to date of publication.

Founded in 1883. Subscription rate $2.00 per year, single copy ten cents.

Win O

by Knut Rostad

(continued from last week)

So what are the solutions for the disgruntled from the allusionary desire for an outraged Pre Griffith suggests that a public relations campa general decline in pretense coupled with a dee myth of the omnipotent President" would he may now be transpiring, as Gerald Ford stum seventh month as Chief Executive. Ford has office to such an extent that many of his pol are at a loss of what to make of him.

In sharp contrast to his two predecessors adept at deceiving their "enemies" by avoidin covering up mistakes and personalizing confli has carried out the duties of his office wit degree of integrity. He has consistently displa to all views, as exemplified in the economi September that allowed the Presi recommendations from liberal John Kenne conservative Milton Friedman. His resulting proposal directed at combating inflation qui the tube as the economic downward trend e direction. Though criticised for being inconsis in economic concerns, Ford has displayed many Presidential observers of the last decade difficult to recognize. His personal appearance of a House Judiciary subcommittee explain Richard Nixon hardly satisfied many of his willing to face his opposition, and did not hi of 'executive privilege'. Even those who with the pardon usually admitted that he was and were even impressed with the ele involved in his appearance. In his relations of State, though he may not agree with Trudeau of Canada, or West German Chanc evidently has succeeded in restoring a sense which could certainly be effective when strained. James Reston has even gone as far the President has "restored some kind of debate" and was "beginning to restore belief.

But most important of all, Ford's humani Office has caused a general decline of pr admits he does not have all the answers, searching. What he has found most rec pleasing to many members of his party. fantastic deficits and appointed liberals to He seems to have a working relationship leaders and Al Ullman, chairman of the Hou Committee, who is probably the most i devising the Democrats economic propo started conpromising.

Hopefully, Ford's private public rela humanize his office has started closing the

Who's Afraid O

by Neil Klotz

(Editors: This is the third in a continu on collective bargaining in higher educati students.)

(CPS) – During the pickets, protests, an activism in the 60's, the few students lo state legislatures were largely shunted pages.

The lobbyists have returned in force around an issue more well-defined than not less powerful for that: collective barga

More and more students have come to bargaining is not just another "faculty issu directly affect them – through higher t loss of class time during teacher s diminished rights in campus governance.

For many students, however, collective hit a little late – after administration-f have ended. Lobbying has been seen by tactic, precisely because it seeks to guar outset, before legislatures pass laws t bargaining in the public sector.

MAU-MAUING THE LEGISL

Since collective bargaining began in 1966, about 20 states have passed la procedure.

Faculties can bargain without a state l arrangement with their board of regents, not to negotiate the teachers haven't strike. State laws have attempted to employee strikes by formalizing when must bargain.

Student lobbyists have attempted to during bargaining by pushing f participation in the negotiations or a l and administrations can bargain over.

Students in Wisconsin have gotten There the United Council of student the support of several legislators for l students silent observer status at negot governance issues from bargaining.

If campus governance is relegated to the students have argued, then student or all-college council committees would

In Maine, students at the state unive been planning a lobbying effort. Altho employee bargaining bill before the provisions for student participation, come out in favor of limited stud decisions concerning tuition hikes.

A more active "third party" role endorsed by the Student Body California, where several bargaining bi One bill would open all negotiations students to participate as independen however, a part in formulating contrac

Another bill with stronger supp role in bargaining, but the Univers body has been advocating an amend least give students the right to attend and issue an educational impact state is ratified. The students involved at the University of California Student L

The lobby has succeeded in attach bargaining bill passed during the pre was vetoed by former Gov. Reag opposed public employee bargain Democrat Edmund Brown, has reportedly is "having trouble" wit

ers

e Editor

Constable On Patrol

to the rority to inform es of one Officer course of een to us ency in VM has always ngressable,
ing the er gets hen he is or in the
He has skilful in violators, greens or mid-campus sidewalks.

Furthermore, there has never been a harsh word spoken about this fine gentleman and we believe he deserves a good pat on the back for a job well done. For example: Last December he quieted a drunken maniac at 5 a.m. right on our floor. In all seriousness, we think Officer Mumbley is consistently on the ball and has great potential in the field of law-enforcement.

Buckham Political Action Committee
Buckham Hall (1st floor)

olastic Peasantry

Francis bution to would like mpir of and the ate does deans dents to without medical olleges'
Academic
Most of his Senate
e College
ees have se it. Mr.
perhaps attacking

the wrong source for a legitimate gripe.

You have also managed, in your criticism of Barbara O'Reilly, to attack one of the more responsive and sensitive representatives of this institution, in our opinions.

I am sure if the Dean of Arts and Sciences' Office acquires an opening for a "scholastic peasant," they'll let Mr. Murphy know!

Sincerely,
Sue Longenecker
Sherry Lauzon

P.S. Mr. Murphy should at least have indicated that his petition was finally approved.

PEAKING...by phil frank

SERVICES-BOX 9411-BERKELEY, CA 94709 comes and encourages articles, columns, and terested students, faculty, and members of All material must be submitted no later than fore the Thursday of publication. Material ames will be withheld upon request. If you riting or perhaps curious about how things

– we are downstairs at Billings Center – or

MONT CYNIC

...roland, Andy
...rson,
...d Ajamian,
...Dufault, Mike
...garth, Andy
...
...ndel, Larry
...rabach, Jay
...
...Peter Cobb,
...mon, Ben
...e Perkins,
...arry Seiden,
...et Campbell.

SPORTS: Randy Briggs, Gary Brooks, Rick Katz, Don Rose, Richard Rothbe.
PRODUCTION: Rick Barney, Lily Clay, Sarah Clay, Beth Cohen, John Lundo, Barb Tenhis
ADVERTISING: Katherine Bowers, Stephen Lee Brown, Sherry Grancey, Debbie Powell.
BUSINESS MANAGER: Nancy Shenk.

...expressed in editorials, cartoons, or the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the
the University administration, faculty, or State of Vermont. Opinions expressed by
...ns do not necessarily reflect the opinion
...rity of the members of the CYNIC
...ard.
...d yearly during the college year by the
the University of Vermont and State College. Editorial and business offices in Center, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone:
Deadline for notices is one week prior to
...ication.
...d in 1892. Subscription rate $8.00 per copy ten cents.

Win One For The Gipper

by Knut Rustad

(continued from last week)

So what are the solutions for the disgruntled voter suffering from the illusionary desire for an outsized President? Thomas Griffith suggests that a public relations campaign advertising a general decline in pretense coupled with a deemphasis of "the myth of the omnipotent President" would help. That, in fact, may now be transpiring, as Gerald Ford stumbles through his seventh month as Chief Executive. Ford has humanized the office to such an extent that many of his political adversaries are at a loss of what to make of him.

In sharp contrast to his two predecessors who were keenly adept at deceiving their "enemies" by avoiding confrontation, covering up mistakes and personalizing conflicts, Gerald Ford has carried out the duties of his office with a remarkable degree of integrity. He has consistently displayed a willingness to all views, as exemplified in the economic conference in September that allowed the President to hear recommendations from liberal John Kenneth Galbraith to conservative Milton Friedman. His resulting thirty – one point proposal directed at combating inflation quickly went down the tube as the economic downward trend apparently altered direction. Though criticized for being inconsistent, if not inept in economic concerns, Ford has displayed a flexibility that many Presidential observers of the last decade probably found difficult to recognize. His personal appearance before members of a House Judiciary subcommittee explaining his pardon of Richard Nixon hardly satisfied many of his critics, but he was willing to face his opposition, and did not hide behind a claim of 'executive privilege'. Even those who violently disagreed with the pardon usually admitted that he was telling the truth, and were even impressed with the element of integrity involved in his appearance. In his relations with foreign heads of State, though he may not agree with Prime Minister Trudeau of Canada, or West German Chancellor Schmidt, he evidently has succeeded in restoring a sense of faith and trust which could certainly be effective when official ties are strained. James Reston has even gone as far as to suggest that the President has "restored some kind of integrity to the debate" and was "beginning to restore belief."

But most important of all, Ford's humanization of the Oval Office has caused a general decline of pretense. He freely admits he does not have all the answers, but still continues searching. What he has found most recently is not very pleasing to many members of his party. He has proposed fantastic deficits and appointed liberals to cabinet positions. He seems to have a working relationship with Congressional leaders and Al Ullman, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, who is probably the most influential force in devising the Democrats economic proposals. He has even started compromising.

Hopefully, Ford's private public relations campaign to humanize his office has started closing the "expectancy gap."

Very much related to the public relations campaign, the Democrats are in a much less fortunate position. Though forced to endure the primary scramble that destroyed them in 1972, the hopes of most party pros rests in a deadlocked convention that will force the ultimate decision making process into the back rooms. Once accomplished, the likely result would be the selection of a 'dark horse' candidate who carries no political scars, and is thus able to unite the party the only way feasible: by rising above the party severing issues and running a negatively oriented campaign, castigating Gerald Ford at every turn.

This is fine and dandy, and I wish them the best of luck. They may even win. With a continuing decline in the economy, the rising political influence of our Arab friends, a sudden departure of a popular Secretary of State, and a continually dissatisfied electorate, even Hubert Humphrey would look good. But I only hope the voters do not fall for the public relations campaign of the Democratic demagogue that will undoubtedly be necessitated for political expediency.

Capital Watch: Topic: Access To Public Documents H.276

by Barry Steinhardt, VPIRG Staff

H.276 introduced by Rep. Lew Kedroff, provides that all documents which are collected or produced by a state or local governmental agency are public with the exception of 15 specific categories of documents e.g. student's records, personal records, etc., which are confidential.

The bill would require a governmental agency to reply to a request for a record within two business days or one calander week, whichever is shorter. If the agency intends to deny the request it will have to do so in writing and state reasons for its denial. In the event that an agency did deny a request for a document the citizen would have the right to appeal the decision.

The bill is very important because at present Vermont has no documents law. Governmental agencies have been able to arbitrarily withhold documents, to charge excessive costs for copying and to endlessly prolong the period that a citizen has to wait to receive a document.

H.276 came about in part because of the Highway Department's practice of withholding important public information from VPIRG and other persons interested in highway and environmental policy. Last year, after the personal intervention of the Governor, VPIRG won the right to xerox public information in the Highway Department's files. Cost of xeroxing was $.06 per copy. Since that time the cost has jumped to $.12 and then to $.15 per copy.

As citizens and taxpayers we should all have the right to see exactly what it is that our government is doing. Effective citizen control over government cannot be accomplished when governments operate in secret. H276 will open up government papers to full view.

What Can You Do To Help?

The bill is now in the House Committee on General and Military Affairs. The vote to recommend passage will be close. You can help by writing or calling your representative in support of the bill.

Be sure to mention to the legislator that he or she should vote to retain the provision in the bill which would allow the governmental agency to charge only the actual cost of xeroxing. If this provision is taken out it would price many important documents, especially highway documents, out of the price range of the average citizen.

All Things Considered...

Little Feat

by larry seiden

Kiss it off. Roll it easy and let it slide. We pretend to be younger than yesterday yet our vision is truly myopic. We sit in our concrete streamlined cages and rattle off the names of present and past masters–Hendrix, Page, Dylan, Zappa, Joni, the Beatles, the Stones, all masters of the vinyl we selflessly enslave ourselves to. But what of the future, for the past is warped onto time like a record left on the backshelf of an old '55 parked in the midsummer's sun.

So it's 1975 and the Maharaji is still a perfect 14 year old master and will always be a 14 year–old master even though he is really 27. Heroes are hard to find. They were a dime a dozen in the sixties. But the future needs new saints to walk with us down the rocky road. I'm not proclaiming another Dylan but I'm telling you of a great band, not a Liverpool resurgence but – Little Feat; they are possibly the finest American Band right now and tomorrow too. I know they're not a household word yet, but wait till the shit hits the fan. I can say that because I buy a dozen albums a week and shoot up stylus cleaner and I have rock and roll dreams. Not standing up in front of 15,000 kids half my age but vivid apolitical illusions of the ultimate teenage nervous breakdown.

The big toe of Little Feat is Lowell George. In terms of song writers, I will weight Lowell behind Dylan and Joni. He embodies the best of both: the wit of Dylan and the ability to crystalize love and life into a song, like Joni's view of "the relationship." Like a fat man in the bathtub, a little water is going to spill over. And like Lowell's wry tunes, a little is going to spill over into your speech and might even affect the sway in your walk. It's like a kiss for the asking, you know it's coming but it still hits the spot that gets the hottest.

I won't go into the linsup and history of the band, but I'll tell you, the funky, rockin' music is infectious. Their mellower, slower material is food for your empty head. Jimmy Page and Bonnie Raitt call Feat their favorite American band. A listen to the current "Feats Don't Fail Me Now" or "Dixie Chicken" will make you a believer too. I can hear you moanin' now. It's that good.

What separates Feats from the hardcore of Rock N' Roll is versatility. Zeppelin will tell you that's what keeps a band growing. I know Peter Townshend would nod his head in agreement. Stagnation is for golden oldies. Feat aren't afraid to change, to go back and regenerate a song that they did previously. They took two splendid songs from Sailin' Shoes, their second album and redid them into a medley called "COLD, COLD, COLD/ Tripe Faced Boogie" on Feats Don't Fail Me Now.

Dylan (witness "Blood On The Tracks") is a classicist in his lyrical imagery. He is the Yeats of modern songwriting even though some people subscribe to the theory that he lost his pen when he hit thirty. I don't, but if Dylan be the Yeats, then Lowell George is the William Carlos Williams. He takes the everyday alphabet and puts it in combinations that would boogie the sneakers off your little sister. Add to that a touch of steamin' funk and you have the best and least heard American music since Grin hit the big turntable. (author's aside: once you're convinced Feat are for real, link up with one of Grin's four albums.)

If you're afraid of layin' the bucks on an unknown commodity, give a call to WRUV-FM. (90.1 Mhz) They are

(continued on page eight)

Who's Afraid Of Collective Bargaining:

Lobbyists Press For Larger Student Role

by Neil Klotz

(Editors: This is the third in a continuing series of articles on collective bargaining in higher education and its impact on students.)

(CPS) – During the pickets, protests, and strikes of student activism in the 60's, the few students lobbying for change in state legislatures were largely shunted to the media's back pages.

The lobbyists have returned in force, this time grouped around an issue more well-defined than "student power," but not less powerful for that: collective bargaining.

More and more students have come to realize that collective bargaining is not just another "faculty issue," but one that can directly affect them – through higher tuition, larger classes, loss of class time during teacher strikes and through diminished rights in campus governance.

For many students, however, collective bargaining angst has hit a little late – after administration-faculty contract talks have ended. Lobbying has been seen by many as an effective tactic, precisely because it seeks to guarantee input from the outset, before legislatures pass laws to regulate collective bargaining in the public sector.

MAU–MAUING THE LEGISLATURES

Since collective bargainng began in higher education in 1966, about 20 states have passed laws that regulate the procedure.

Faculties can bargain without a state law, under an informal arrangement with their board of regents, but if a board decides not to negotiate the teachers haven't much recourse except strike. State laws have attempted to avoid rampant public employee strikes by formalizing when and how the two sides must bargain.

Student lobbyists have attempted to protect student rights during bargaining by pushing for either guaranteed participation in the negotiations or a limit on what faculties and administrations can bargain over.

Students in Wisconsin have gotten behind both issues. There the United Council of student governments has gained the support of several legislators for legal provisions to grant students silent observer status at negotiations and also exclude governance issues from bargaining.

If campus governance is relegated to collective negotiations, the students have argued, then student input in faculty senate or all-college council committees would be virtually worthless.

In Maine, students at the state university in Orono have also been planning a lobbying effort. Although the present public employee bargaining bill before the state legislature has no provisions for student participation, the bill's sponsor has come out in favor of limited student observer status in decisions concerning tuition hikes.

A more active "third party" role for students was recently endorsed by the Student Body Presidents Council in California, where several bargaining bills have been introduced. One bill would open all negotiations to the public and allow students to participate as independent third parties, without, however, a part in formulating contract provisions.

Another bill with stronger support excludes any student role in bargaining, but the University of California student body has been advocating an amendment to it that would at least give students the right to attend meetings, voice opinions, and issue an educational impact statement before any contract is ratified. The students involved at California call themselves the University of California Student Lobby.

The lobby has succeeded in attaching a similar rider to the bargaining bill passed during the previous legislature. The bill was vetoed by former Gov. Reagan who has consistently opposed public employee bargaining. The new governor, Democrat Edmund Brown, has backed bargaining but reportedly is "having trouble" with the student role in it suggested by the student lobby.

To the north, a newly revitalized Associated Oregon Student Lobby has backed both a stronger third party role for students as well as a limit to bargainable issues.

The lobby, which represents seven state schools, has advocated that students receive equal voting representation in all negotiations concerning the university.

Regardless of the bargaining set-up, according to University of Oregon lobbyist Robert Liberty, students should continue to fully participate in decisions affecting curriculum, promotion and tenure, budgeting, degree requirements, admissions policy, campus design, student housing, conduct codes, long range planning or faculty evaluation.

Adding a new twist to the issue of student input are two bills backed by the Montana Student Lobby, one which calls for one student representative from the university system to be included in negotiations as "public employer."

"Even if we were allowed to participate as a third party," explained a spokesman for the Montana lobby, "we would not be in a position to influence the process, because a lot of negotiation is done in secrecy and caucuses. So we have decided to take one side. We are not employers, but have a vested interest in employees."

The second Montana bill would provide for student compensation if a strike or work stoppage interrupted their education. The two bills may be conflicting, however. In the first, students as public employers would be partially responsible for a strike, but in the second they ask for their money back if a strike occurs.

A WAY TO START

Exactly how much say students should have in negotiations has been a matter of dispute among student bargaining activists. Lobbyists, citing the slow-moving nature of state legislatures, have generally opted for "getting-what-you-can" approach. Students who would set up actual unions to bargain independently are somewhat unrealistic, they say.

A major proponent of limited student participation gained through lobbying has been Alan Shark, director of the Research Project on Students and Collective Bargaining, a group preparing a report on inroads students have made in bargaining.

"If students were to have full bargaining rights, assuming that could be done," Shark told CPS, "the costs involved would be prohibitive. We're talking about thousands of dollars for lawyers fees. The other sides have lawyers, so it would be foolish for students to walk in with some sense of equality without legal counsel.

"They can do an awful lot without a so-called legal vote," he argued. "It's a way to start. You don't just go in there and ask for everything because it would never happen."

The Irrational Debt

by Joseph Hammond – "The Peasant Poet"

Vaguely I remember – it seems so many years ago
Tracers filled the air above me – bodies filled the earth below
Some friends of mine died heroes – but I'll never understand,
How it's good to be a hero – lying lifeless neath the sand.

Now that the years have passed I'm older – yet my mind can't comprehend,
Why so many lives just started were sent to such an early end.
I've studied and I've hunted – yet nowhere have I found,
A cause so just to justify those fifty thousand in the ground.

You would think such pain would show us it is best to let things be,
Yet as a nation we are stubborn – sometimes we just refuse to see,
Bitterness helps no one – Vengence has no worth:
Such entities are sterile – from which no good can have its birth.

Yet the tragedy continues from that far off Asian war,
Even though our troops have long since left – though its KIA's are found no more.
Let's not forget those sons of ours who just refused to fight.
Not all our sons donned uniforms – there were those who opted flight.

Those boys have also suffered – their ordeal's not nearly through.
"Other boys have fought and died – those men must suffer too."
That's the way some men feel – our righteous president leads the list.
It seems when he chose his values – some important ones he missed.

Why should amnesty be partial – from where comes this morbid debt?
Why should men suffer needlessly – what can such sickness get?
Let's not forget while pondering – those men were probably right.
Why should they risk their pleas and hopes for some far off nation's fight?

Should it not be different if our own soil were trod upon?
Can we tell ourselves for sure those men would still have gone?
Those men could have heard their conscience – so who are we to say
"Take part in Ford's new program – or forget the USA"?

THE NUMBER ONE KILLER OF YOUNG AMERICANS IS YOUNG AMERICANS.

You don't mean to be. But you are. The numbers are simple.

Latest available figures show that 8,000 American people between the ages of 15 and 25 died in alcohol related crashes. And almost all the drunk drivers who caused those crashes were also under 25.

1,380 died in combat. 3,420 committed suicide. 2,731 died of cancer.

It's incredible, but one of the most dangerous things you can do is to have a few bottles of wine with friends and drive home.

You can change it. You have to.

You march against war. You fight for clean air and clean water. You eat natural foods. You practice yoga. You are so much for life. And you are so much against killing.

It would be unthinkable for you to kill another human being on purpose.

So then, why is this happening?

DRUNK DRIVER, DEPT. Y*
BOX 1969
WASHINGTON, D.C. 20013

I don't want to get killed and I don't want to kill anyone. Tell me how I can help.*Youths Highway Safety Advisory Committee.

My name is _____
Address _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____

STOP DRIVING DRUNK.
STOP KILLING EACH OTHER.

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Browne and Snow: Sensitive and Satisying

by Bob DeNike

Monday evening's Jackson Browne/Phoebe Snow concert at Memorial Auditorium was surprising from the outset.

The show had sold out by mid-afternoon. It began only a mere fifteen minutes off schedule, making the concert literally a "rarity from the get-star Outward, unrestrained signs of rostiness were also missing but most enlightening of all was the unexpected originality and spontaneity of the two most talented artists Burlington has hosted under a single billing since Yes and the J. Geils Band.

Phoebe Snow exhibited a style as refreshing and developed as Joni Mitchell or Bonnie Raitt. She proved also to be an accomplished guitarist which, when combined with her inexhaustible vocal strength, provided Jackson Browne with a difficult task of shining through as unquestionably the higher quality artist.

Snow showed a love for jazz and blues, revealing at one point Billie Holiday as her favorite singer (and in honor of the "mistress of the blues" performed Holiday's archetypal "No Regrets"). Snow began her set with a slow shuffle (a characteristic tempo of her style) which was given a jazz flint with the help of the full tones of another guitarist's hollow-body electric instrument.

Throughout, she sang with the vocal versatility of Joni Mitchell, thoroughly exploring different scales and professionally intermingling extreme lows and highs, almost alternately, within each measure. On long-sustained notes her voice adopted a gutteral, nearly rasping, bluesy tone while at other times she "squeaked" in an impressive display of high-register vocal virtuosity that resembled the sound of a muted trumpet blown by no one less than Louis Armstrong. Her closest approach to rock was an adaptation of Neil Young's "Don't Let It Bring You Down" in which she accurately imitated Young's whining vocal style (whether intended or not) and added to it a soulish, funky variation of her own.

Even as she turned to leave the stage the audience immediately and simultaneously sprang to their feet in what seemed a response of unprecedented enthusiasm for a Burlington audience. She rendered a single encore to end her 50-minute performance and the crowd did not wait this second time for her to finish and thank them. The floor of people was on its feet in a standing ovation as she was still nourishing the final crescendo.

More than two hundred people had been stranded outside for two-thirds of Phoebe Snow's performance because of an alleged excess of forged tickets. Police sealed off the entrance by the orders of the producers who discovered Memorial Auditorium had prematurely filled to capacity. Additional rear seats and aisle space accommodated the overflowing turn-out. Those unfortunates were relatively sedate and unruled (only one riotous attempt at rushing the door was made) in confidence that Jackson Browne would make the wait more tolerable, even worthwhile. UVM students proved once again they really know their shit.

"We'll probably end up playing everything we know", Jackson Browne explained to those in the audience shouting specific requests. Two hours of knowledge isn't much for even an average artist but it was enough that night to expose every mood of Browne's musical personality. And it didn't take long for him to evoke these antithetical emotions whole-heartedly in his listeners.

After a weak, failing start of both technical and artistic causes (feedback was emitted from an unknown source and the band lost the beat, tempo and finally their place altogether, in one song), audience sympathy was stirred by two familiar tunes, "Rock Me on the Water" and "Takin' It Easy".

Some slower, mellower tunes followed in which Browne showed the reputed "sensitivity" of his musicianship. And, really, that is the only way of describing Browne's vocal, instrumental and song-writing style in a single term.

Like Phoebe Snow, Browne has strong vocal ability which never lacks emphasis in his songs, though his voice is somewhat deficient in range and most comfortable in the middle of the scale, sometimes straining to reach the high and low extremities. Yet it is this vocal quality alone that determines the direction each song takes in affecting the listener and what is felt as a result. Harmonies as sweet as a chorus of canaries (though I suppose you have to be a philornithist or a canary yourself to appreciate such an analogy) were achieved with the contributions of a banjo picking colleague.

The band did not attempt to disguise further inconspicuous mistakes that robbed the band of a needed, polished smoothness. "I feel like I'm standing in a mirror—everything's backwards", Browne mysteriously explained, referring to a reversed set-up of equipment. He even went so far as to confess, "I'm feeling a little unsettled", attributing the confusion to typical St. Patty's Day topsy-turviness. Perhaps Browne's concentration was more on wine and women before the performance and less on song.

Any doubts about the whereabouts of Browne's thoughts were dispelled with the first pounding piano chords

(continued on page eight)

Cash Sings Western Hits

by Jay Williams

"Hello, I'm Johnny Cash!" And his astounded audience ascended to their feet, applauding this immortal from Arkansas in concert at the not too spacious Memorial Auditorium the evening of March thirteenth.

Never-aging Carl Perkins and the Tennessee Three opened the first half of the sold-out show with such rock and roll favorites as "OC Rider" and "Matchbox Blues". The latter Perkins wrote himself in '59 which was eventually recorded by four chaps from England. To finish his solo and prove his long-lasting dexterity, the burley Perkins burst into a flavorable rendition of his classic "Blue Suede Shoes."

His performance instantly pleased the demanding crowd and in the same breath he wasted no time by introducing one of the best backup bands in Country Western music, the Tennessee Three. A new member has been added in the likes of Jerry Hensley, a guitar prodigy in his mid-twenties, who picked his way through "Rollin in My Sweet Baby's Arms."

Gordon Terry demonstrated what an Alabaman can do on a fiddle. Stepping up to the mike he introduced his piece: "I'd like to do a song that touches my heart. It's a pretty thang," he said and broke into a riff sounding like a rabbit on the run.

I was disappointed by fellow guitarist Bob Wootton and bassist Marshal Grant who were not given an opportunity to display their musicianship. Both have been with Cash and company for over ten years. Ditto for percussionist Fluke Holland. However, time was running short for a finicky audience.

Bring on the Cash daughters, Rosie, Roseann, and step-daughter Anita. It was indeed Anita who shined through with her vocal solo of "Sweet Memories". "...My world is a river as dark as it is deep," she sang, her blue eyes reflecting the emotion in every word.

A few groups of songs followed and after the final group effort of "Wabash Cannonball", the stage lights dimmed. A blue strobe reflected off a mirrored globe hanging from center stage. The sparkling effect was like winter in Vermont.

Then came Cash. The man in black sauntered on stage to the backbeat of "I walk the Line." Lights on, he drew his guitar across his chest and flashed that famous knife-scarred smile. "Hello, I'm Johnny Cash!" The people loved it.

Inspired by the response of the people, Cash moved into "The Ring of Fire", his voice sounding as concrete as some prison cells he has known. At this point, Mr. Cash exhibited smooth southern manners towards the many flash camera buffs by never complaining. He only grimaced.

(continued on page nine)

Dance To Jazz Of The Duke

The first 'dance concert' in the 20-year history of the University of Vermont Lane Series will conclude the 1974-75 season on March 22, when Mercer Ellington conducts the Duke Ellington Orchestra founded by his late father. The concert had originally been scheduled for March 8, but was delayed because of the orchestra's overwhelming successful tour of North Africa under the auspices of the U.S. Department of State. Concert-goers may sit and listen, or dance, or both. There will be no reserved seats- all tickets are $4 and may be obtained from the UVM Lane Series Office, 234 Waterman Bldg., tel. 656-3418. There is no set program. Mercer Ellington, for nine years a member of the band's trumpet section and manager of the group's affairs, will announce the compositions from the stage.

Homicide On The Far East Railroad

by Bark Bennett

After reading one of Agatha Christie's books, I always sit back and think, "Wow, so that's how it was done!" Even after a couple of days have passed, my mind is still remembering clues which were, at the time, very unnoticeable — and sometimes that didn't help — and really figure out where it fit into the story. I had to do it quickly because another clue would pop right up after it. Most of the clues were simply slips of the tongue. Hercule Poirot, the detective in most of Agatha Christie's stories, deceptively triggered these mistakes and, given an inch, he would take a mile. Albert Finney fit the role as perfectly as only he could. If the name Hercule Poirot implies anything, he looked like it. Everything from his greasy-neat hair down to his shoes were picture perfect. He handled everything so cooly, knowledgeably, taking care of every situation with interested innocence. He deciphered every hint, put it into the correct context of the story, and stored it for further use.

As you've probably seen in the advertisement, there are a number of stars in this film. This makes it very difficult to name an outstanding character because "everyone had just about the same importance and amount of lines, Albert Finney being the exception. It was the first film I saw in which Sean Connery did not play James Bond. He played an English Royal Army officer returning from India to divorce his wife and marry his charming and lovely friend, who was played by Vanessa Redgrave.

Michael York and Jacqueline Bisset played an insecure couple that clung to each other constantly, sometimes comically. Lauren Bacall was a talkative, biddy widow in her forties who chewed gum and bickered about anything and never failed to mention how her dead second husband would've handled a certain situation. Anthony Perkins portrayed a young, insecure boy in his mid-twenties who had no interest in girls and was incurably nervous. The acting went as smooth and unruffled as the silk on the seats of the train. Every actor was superb in his role.

Some of the characters' insecurity came from being rich. The clothes the people murdered, supposedly a man who made his money by selling baby food.

(continued on page seven)

This film brings out the best of the famous authoress and has all the mind-boggling qualities of the book.

I had to watch every detail

Montreal Is A "Wonder" Land

by Mary Partridge

Jive, jazz, swing and soul coalesced in perfection at Stevie Wonder's Montreal concert last Wednesday night. The Montreal forum was host to a crowd which encompassed the hoodlums, the high-school girls, the super-cool no-shit and the semi-soulful best-dressed. This variegated lot became a single, ecstatic whole in response to the artistry and the charisma of Stevie Wonder.

The concert opened with Stevie's back-up band, Wonder love, which was composed of three female singers, a trumpet, a sax, drums, a bass, two guitars, a piano and an organ. In addition, there was an array of synthesized instruments including a clavinet, a mini crog, an arp synthesizer and an arp string synthesizer. Wonderlove played for about an hour, during which time the audience was somewhat inattentive. Many people were still getting settled into their seats, and those who had found their places were continually being lured away in quest of Molsoff's, which was on sale in the lobby. Despite the restless activities of much of the audience, Wonderlove got quite a good reception. Especially fantastic were the three black female singers who were dressed in scintillescent white. Their movements were excellently synchronized, their aura was positively sexy.

A word of qualification: The audience may have been settled and attentive in the better seats, but in the second to the last row of the Forum where the music was indistinct and the band seemed light years away, there was considerable shuffling and confusion.

Stevie opened with "Boy of Beauty", a song from his most recent album, Fulfillingness' First Finale. (During the course of this song, I left my rotten seat to rot and got very close to the stage.) Stevie Wonder started off the concert on a peak, and took it higher and higher. He went from organ to piano to drums and back again, and while the band carried the tune, he danced. He danced with each of the three lovely women, with himself, with his instruments and with the audience. He had every foot tapping and every finger snapping in the Forum.

Each of the band members seemed absolutely attuned to Stevie. It was not a display of rigid and rehearsed perfection, but rather a demonstration of unanimity, harmony and cooperation. The love between Stevie and his band is reciprocal. He dedicated "You are the Sunshine of My Life" to them; and they call themselves Wonderlove. At one point, Stevie spoke briefly about love. He urged all to try to regard love in much broader, more all- encompassing terms than simply the love between two people. He would like to see the world enveloped in unifying love.

With each of his actions, he gained fans. He won them with his musical talent, with his loving effluence, with his funky orgasmic dancing, and, if for none of these reasons, he won them by playing an insurpassable old- soul medley which began with "I was made to love her" and incorporated the Supremes, Aretha Franklin, the Four Tops, Marvin Gaye and others. Without a doubt it was one of the best concerts I shall ever hope to participate in. Stevie Wonder remains revered by many, equaled by none.

Low-Priced Blues

by Dave Hurwitz

The fourth annual Vermont Blues Festival will take place this year on Saturday, April 26 in the UVM Patrick Gym. Tickets will be only 3.50 with a UVM ID and 4.50 for general admission. The festival will be presented by UVM SA Concerts, who have been organizing the event since the middle of February.

This years festival will feature Mose Allison, The Luther Johnson Chicago Blues Band, The Son Seals Blues Band, Robert Junior Lockwood and a headline artist to be announced. Originally, Albert King was to headline the show, but unfortunately routing problems made it impossible for him to appear. At the present time, the possibilities for a headline artist include Muddy Waters and Freddie King.

Mose Allison, a piano player who is also famous for his unique vocal style, has effectively fused blues and jazz. He is a brilliant composer and is famous for a number of tunes including "Parchment Farm" which has been recorded by John Mayall, and "If You Live" which was recorded by Brian Auger.

Luther Johnson has been making quite a name for himself in the Burlington area through his club appearances, but his appearance at this year's Blues festival will mark his first straight blues performance i clubs, he is play dance m strays from th is playing harmonic, who Luther J Waters band after playing three years the long l musicians to band. Thes Spann, Junior Cotton. Lut with his own of 2 guitars, drums.

Chris Ha Real Paper "the best blue ist in town." distinguishes canyon full is style, Johnson styl

Son Seals, came out on was recently Chicago Blu year. He has numerous and newspap Solomon of said, "The Band sure his ilk look comparison. Daily Cardi "Son's musi the Kings, B. where B.B horn arran

(continued)

A Wispy Jeth

by Bob DeNike

In a puff of pink smoke, clad in a suit of psychedelic pastels, guitarist Martin Barre announced the arrival of Jethro Tull to Boston Garden with an extensive and explorative electric lead melody.

As miraculously, a black-and-white striped Jeffrey Hammond-Hammond materialized to the left bearing a matching zebraed bass guitar. Immediately he began hopping and skipping to every corner of the stage in a frantic jig that he would sustain for two hours.

Finall ceremoni from a f and the r Anderson in his stork-like

The blue-leot knee of first not "Aqualu long, sil much lik Shakesp long, cur beard.

Vermont Cynic
MOVIE GUIDE

Century I & II
DORSET STREET
I Towering Inferno
II Young Frankenstein

MERRILL'S SHOWCASE I & II
SO. BURLINGTON
I Stepford Wives
II Lenny

STATE THEATRE
BANK STREET
Amarcord

FLYNN THEATRE
MAIN STREET
Pajama Game

ESSEX TWIN CINEMA
ESSEX JCT.
I Freebie and the Bean
II Ultimate Thrill

CINEMA I & II
BURLINGTON PLAZA
SHELBURNE ROAD
I Murder on the Orient Express
II The Four Musketeers

call theatres for times
Not Good for bargain nights
or special showings

THE SILVER KEG
Presents In Concert
AT MEMORIAL AUDITORIUM
B. B. KING
MEM. AUDITORIUM — WED. APRIL 16
TICKETS AVAILABLE AT — 8 PM
BAILEY'S MUSIC ROOMS — $5 in advance
THE SILVER KEG — $6 at the door

THIS WEEK AT THE SILVER KEG
FRANK — MARCH 20-22
HARPY — MARCH 24-29 - Back by popular demand
(TEN) 10 CENT NITE EVERY WEDNESDAY
Your entertainment dollar buys more at the Silver Keg

What could be better than The Three Musketeers?
It's all new!
THE 4 MUSKETEERS
OLIVER REED RAQUEL WELCH MICHAEL YORK as D'Artagnan FAYE DUNAWAY as Milady CHARLTON HESTON as Cardinal Richelieu
7 & 9:05 PM
...it's four for fun and fun for all!
Coming Soon 'Godfather II'
Bargain Matinee of Both Show Sat & Sun
The greatest cast of suspicious characters ever involved in murder.
ALBERT FINNEY LAUREN BACALL MARTIN BALSAM INGRID BERGMAN JACQUELINE BISSET JEAN PIERRE CASSEL SEAN CONNERY
AGATHA CHRISTIE'S "MURDER ON THE ORIENT EXPRESS"
"A marvelously intricate whodunit! A joyous experience. A feast in any season!"
7 & 9:20 PM
BURLINGTON PLAZA CINEMA 1 & 2
PHONE 862 5070 ANYTIME

dunham
Headquarters for CONTINENTAL TYROLEANS
194 North St.

SA FILMS PRESENTS
THURSDAY, MARCH 2
THE WIZARD OF OZ (1
Garland, Bert Lahr
101 Votey – 7:30 & 9:3
FRIDAY, MARCH 21
BUTCH CASSIDY & TH
KID (1971) – Paul Newm
Redford
101 Votey – 7:30 & 9:3
MONDAY, MARCH 31
KING OF HEARTS (19
Directed by Phillipe De
101 Votey – 7:30 & 9:3

Jazz Of The Duke

...in the Department of State. Concert-goers may sit and listen, or dance, or both. There will be no reserved seats— all tickets are $4 and may be obtained from the UVM Lane Series Office, 234 Waterman Bldg., tel. 656-3418. There is no set program. Mercer Ellington, for nine years a member of the band's trumpet section and manager of the group's affairs, will announce the compositions from the stage.

ntreal Is nder" Land

...soul ...on at ...ntreal ...night. ...s host ...passed ...school ...ssist ...negated ...ecstatic ...to the ...ma of ...d with ...band, ...h was ...female ...a sax, ...uitars, a ...an. In ...array of ...uments ...a mini ...r and an ...ssizer. ...or about ...time the ...mewhat ...ple were ...nto their ...d found ...ntinually ...quest of ...on sale in ...e restless ...of the ...got quite ...specially ...ree black ...ho were ...t white. ...ts were ...ed, their ...y. ...ifications ...have been settled and attentive in the better seats, but in the second to the last row of the Forum where the music was indistinct and the band seemed light years away, there was considerable shuffling and confusion.

Beauty", a song from his most recent album, Fulfillingness First Finale. (During the course of this song, I left my rotten seat to rot and got very close to the stage.) Stevie Wonder started off the concert on a peak, and took it higher and higher. He went from organ to piano to drums and back again, and while the band carried the tune, he danced. He danced with each of the three lovely women, with himself, with his instruments and with the audience. He had every foot tapping and every finger snapping in the Forum.

Each of the band members seemed absolutely attuned to Stevie. It was not a display of rigid and rehearsed perfection, but rather a demonstration of unanimity, harmony and cooperation. The love between Stevie and his band is reciprocal. He dedicated "You are the Sunshine of My Life" to them; and they call themselves Wonderlove. At one point, Stevie spoke briefly about love. He urged all to try to regard love in much broader, more all- encompassing terms than simply the love between two people. He would like to see the world enveloped in unifying love.

With each of his actions, he gained fans. He won them with his musical talent, with his loving effluence, with his funky orgasmic dancing, and, if for none of these reasons, he won them by playing an insurpassable old- soul medley which began with "I was made to love her" and incorporated the Supremes, Aretha Franklin, the Four Tops, Marvin Gaye and others. Without a doubt it was one of the best concerts I shall ever hope to participate in. Stevie Wonder remains revered by many, equaled by none.

Bargain Matinee Both Show Sat & Sun

PHONE ...ANYTIME

dunham

Headquarters for CONTINENTAL TYROLEANS

MARINER

134 North St.

Low-Priced Blues S.A.

by Dave Hurwitz

The fourth annual Vermont Blues Festival will take place this year on Saturday, April 26 in the UVM Patrick Gym. Tickets will be only 3.50 with a UVM ID and 4.50 for general admission. The festival will be presented by UVM SA Concerts, who have been organizing the event since the middle of February.

This years festival will feature Mose Allison, The Luther Johnson Chicago Blues Band, The Son Seals Blues Band, Robert Junior Lockwood and a headline artist to be announced. Originally, Albert King was to headline the show, but unfortunately routing problems made it impossible for him to appear. At the present time, the possibilities for a headline artist include Muddy Waters and Freddie King.

Mose Allison, a piano player who is also famous for his unique vocal style, has effectively fused blues and jazz. He is a brilliant composer and is famous for a number of tunes including "Parchment Farm" which has been recorded by John Mayall, and "If You Live" which was recorded by Brian Auger.

Luther Johnson has been making quite a name for himself in the Burlington area through his club appearances, but his appearance at this year's Blues festival will mark his first straight blues performance in a few years. In clubs, he is often forced to play dance music which often strays from the blues form. It is playing straight blues, however, where Luther shines.

Luther left the Muddy Waters band five years ago after playing with them for three years and he continues the long line of excellent musicians to come from that band. These include Otis Spann, Junior Wells and James Cotton. Luther now travels with his own band consisting of 2 guitars, bass, harp and drums.

Chris Hamel of Boston's Real Paper has called Luther "the best blues guitarist--vocalist in town." He added, "what distinguishes Luther from that canyon full of blues imposters is style, and what gives Johnson style is experience."

Son Seals, whose first album came out on Alligator last year, was recently selected as the Chicago Blues Artist of the year. He has been praised by numerous music publications and newspapers. Linda Solomon of Rock magazine said, "The Son Seals Blues Band sure makes Mayall and his ilk look insignificant by comparison." According to the Daily Cardinal of Wisconsin, "Son's music has the sound of the Kings, B.B. and Albert. But where B.B. has mellowed with horn arrangements and fancy

(continued on page eight)

Edsel Peacock's Guide To Recordings Of The 'Rockin' Gender

Well, some contend that rock and roll is bad for the body, bad for the soul, but actually it's bad for the wallet. This constant stream of concerts and records, hurts the supply of green. So I lay this one on you. You can get records for as low as $1.99, yes folks the unbelievable price of less than two dollars. They are called "cutouts". That means the record companies are no longer keeping these titles in their catalog. Which means for any number of reasons these records are to be sold out. So you can profit and fill in some spots in your collection for little scratch. In this here Burlington area, there are a few stores with loads of these cutouts currently in stock. The best selection can be found in Upstairs Records, Discount Records, Gaynes, Woolworth's, and even the University Bookstore. That's the good word.

For a more current or lyric word you have to pay current high prices, but if what I've heard this week is any indication of the future, then it is worth the five spot for a new album. That means this has been an absolute primo week, all A's and B's.

PHYSICAL GRAFFITI/led zeppelin -- It took two years to get this album out and it's worth the wait. It is the best Zep to date. This album leaves no doubt to LZ's versatility as a premiere rock n' roll band. The group has grown older and shown the changes of time, enlightened by the roads that they have passed. This is an album of changes and reaffirmation. Jimmy Page is a true master, a genius, who understands the words rough, raunchy and raw. The drummer, John Bonham, uses the bass pedals as effectively as Thor uses his hammer. One standout cut (which are hard to pinpoint) is "Custard Pie", a crackass and raunchy roller as strong as Mitch Ryder's vocal chords. Page's synthesizer wails and wails, but the power of the song is in the chord changes on the guitar. The other song is from the third side of this double album, and it's called "Down By the Seaside". The third side is the strongest and most varied side. "Seaside" is an exquisitely tempered song of alienation. Yes, even Led Zeppelin with all their millions must feel alone sometimes. This album is worth the investment, if just for the cover design. (A, rainbows in the sand colors)

LET THE MUSIC PLAY/orleans -- Another gem from Orleans. Their first album Orleans is an unheard of classic. But this is new Orleans, L.A. Orleans. Side one has five songs on it. The first four are the "old" orleans style, acoustic, crisp, and breathtaking, including "Time Passes On," the shattered romance captured as an eternal memory. Some night this will do something nice for your head. The fifth song is rock and roll, so "Let the Music Play" straight ahead. Side two is "new" Orleans. A unique style that sounds like the Eagles' silky vocals and harmony with average White Band soul music. The last song, on the album called "You've Given Me Something", is an off centered reggae paradoxical love song. It is a beautiful album with snappy, intelligent lyrics and a black edge. With Lullabyes and love songs, it is so good it is thrilling. The swift Telecaster rhythms from the first album are expanded to capture the awe of a Woodstock, N.Y. band walking the sharp edge of L.A. funk. (A+, sunshine in production colors)

NO MYSTERY/return to forever -- Chick Corea and Co. return to prove their mastery of multiplicity of rhythms and sound. This is the vanguard of their electric jazz. Everyone in this band is a virtuoso on their respective instruments. For openers, listen to Stanley Clarke's magical mystery runs on the Fender Bass. Too much for words, plenty for ears. (B+, no limit to the colors)

NILS LOFGRIN/nils lofgrin -- I'll admit to prejudice here. Or call it devotion. Nils used to be the larger part of one of the best American bands-- Grin. They put out four of the best rock n' roll albums that never were heard by most. So Grin faded and Nils returns on his own album. It's Nils doing the singing, guitaring, and keyboarding and that's alot because this feels like gold in my hands. This is an album of teenage nervous breakdown romances and an insecure artist's apologies for being an insecure artist. It is also a showcase of one man's talent: Nils used to play with Crazy Horse and Neil Young. Drummer Ansley Dunbar, a former Mother, reduces his wildman flailing to a sturdy chop-chop, a perfect rock foundation. I was surprised guitarists as great as Nils can see inspiration in others. "Ode to Keith" (Richards) sums up the power of the Stones' music. The real title of this album could be "The Sweet Bird of Youth." "Thinking young and grayin' older ain't no sin" Nils recounts in his splendid version of Carole King's "Goin' Back" (made famous by the Byrds). It is a positive song to end a most positive album. (A+, another master shines)

SONGBIRD/ jessie colin young -- Jessie has a very distinguished vocal style that carries his music above the classification of country or light rock-jazz. The soft textural music that Mr. Young is famous for is fully exhibited here. This album contains two of my favorite Youngblood tunes, "Sugar Babe" and the hauntingly beautiful "Josienne", both redone in a bluesier style. This is not going to be a commercial killer like

"Song for Juli" but it is a qualified statement from a solidified Marin County song man. (B, punchy horns & plenty colors)

PAPER MONEY/montrose -- Maybe something sounds fake in that title maybe it's just the lack of an arousing sound but this is a strong metal band that's sinking under it's own weight. Ronnie Montrose used to play guitar for Van Morrison (Tupelo Honey) and Edgar Winter (They Only Come Out At Night) and he has ably demonstrated he knows where he's taking his axe. But I think he's on a dead-end street right now. The only redeeming quality to this album is it presents a new Jagger/Richard composition called "Connection." (C, heard-it-all-before colors)

A Wispy Jethro Tull Blows Into Boston

by Bob DeNike

In a puff of pink smoke, clad in a suit of psychedelic pastels, guitarist Martin Barre announced the arrival of Jethro Tull to Boston Garden with an extensive and explorative electric lead melody.

As miraculously, a black-and-white striped Jeffrey Hammond-Hammond materialized to the left bearing a matching zebraed bass guitar. Immediately he began hopping and skipping to every corner of the stage in a frantic jig that he would sustain for two hours.

Finally the master of ceremonies himself blossomed from a final smoky explosion and the mystical, legendary Ian Anderson stood at center stage in his familiar one-legged, stork-like stance.

The foot of one blue-leotarded leg rested on the knee of another as he blew the first notes of "Wind Up" (an "Aqualung" favorite) on his long, silver flute. He looked much like an actor cast for a Shakespearean play with his long, curly hair and full, brown beard. A bulbous, black supporter cupped his crotch and his blue tights stretched from the tops of calf-high leather boots to his waist, provocatively outlining every muscle and curve on his legs and small, round buttocks.

Over a year ago lucky Bostonians had been narcotized by the lively antics and mesmerizing music of Jethro Tull's "Passion Play" [illegible] As a result, Anderson had led his group into hibernation from which he threatened never to return. Bostonians were feeling themselves very fortunate last week to be reliving an experience of feasibly once-in-a-lifetime uniqueness.

After a medley of "Thick as a Brick" and "Passion Play" themes, a svelte, young lady brought Anderson's guitar to him from off stage. "She's in remarkably good condition for her age", Anderson commented as the long-and bare-legged beauty in a red, sleeveless, one-piece suit wiggled back to her place in the shadows until Anderson had need for her attending services and other instruments later.

He sung "Wond'ring Aloud" softly and resonantly to a background of delicate finger-picking in a way that made many in the audience slowly nod their heads, feel the first nasal tingle of prospective tears with mouths paralyzed open and whisper chokedly, "My God he's beautiful."

Further cuts from the immortal Aqualung album were tactfully interspersed throughout the entire evening's program, including "Cross-Eyed Mary", "Locomotive Breath", "My God" and the title track itself.

Throughout the performance Anderson pranced and strutted dramatically across the stage, leaping spread-eagled into the air appropriately at numerous crescendoes. He crouched with microphone in hand at other times, squatting at the edge of the stage taunting and beckoning to the audience.

Both sides of the stage extended forward into the audience serving as showcases for individual exposition. A walkway elevated above the rear of the stage formed a parapet that Anderson ran back and forth across at various desired points.

Material from Tull's newest, War Child album was featured late in the concert. "Skating Away on the Thin Ice of the New Day" (like "Wond'ring", a mellow classic), "Sea Lion" (an ode to God who Anderson sees as "balancing the world on the tip of his nose like a sea lion with a ball"), "Two Fingers," "Back Door Angels," "Bungle in the Jungle," and the title track, "War Child", were all performed with typical Tull excellence and finesse.

Following a long instrumental jam without Anderson near the concert's finale, the charismatic character returned with only the acoustic guitar for company. His band left him in a single spotlight, a lonely vigil compared to the kaleidoscopic colors of the preceeding light show. His strumming grew softer with his voice and just before the music halted, he said quietly, "See ya" and disappeared into blackness.

I sincerely hope we see ya, Ian. In the meantime, we'll be avidly waiting, listening, preparing and doing a whole lot of thinking about what you've shown us.

Erica Jong's Fearful Fling

by David Mandell

Erica Jong's best seller, Fear of Flying, has given me an intense Fear of Reading. This book, supposedly an insight into today's life style falls flat on its face. If anything, Fear of Flying presents a good case for the virtues of illiteracy.

Along with All the President's Men, Fear of Flying is the hottest book on the market today. Believe it or not, sex and Watergate make a great combination. Erica Jong, despite a massive effort, is unable to completely hide her talent, but does a pretty good job at it. Entering into specific details, she attempts to portray the travails of a young woman struggling to succeed in a neurotic society. Inventing a character named Isadora White Stollerman Wing, Jong takes her readers through a torturous three hundred eleven pages in which we are forced to learn all the perversions, dreams, and fetishes of a hopelessly neurotic woman and her lovers, all of whom deserve to be in straight jackets. By the middle of the book, as crushing boredom begins to set in, the main question becomes not of how the book will end, but when the damn book will end, so that readers can be taken out of their misery. Jong never seems to understand that noboay gives a damn about the insipid Isadora's sex life. Anyone who would read three hundred eleven pages hoping to find some juicy sexual passages might as well hang it up and head for Times Square and West Forty Second Street.

Why Fear of Flying is selling so well is beyond me. The book is simply trash, but in a society that considers Jonathan Livingston Seagull and Jaws as literature and Rod McKuen a poet, there is bound to be a place for Fear of Flying.

It is difficult to believe that Erica Jong is as talentless as her novyl suggests. Apparently in pursuit of the almighty dollar, she has tossed her skill out the window, and forced herself to believe that making money is indicative of literary ability. But if Norman Mailer can cease writing quality works and lower himself to Marilyn and the Johnny Carson-Merv Griffin circuit, it is only fair that Erica Jong be given the same rights to debase herself.

Poor as it is, Fear of Flying is not totally without merit. The viability of modern marriage and our questionable institutions could have made an interesting book. Perhaps someday Erica Jong might even want to write a serious novel about them. For now however she has settled for the original Fear of Flying. The only description of relevance about the novel would be to refer to it as a semi-pornographic Love Story.

Good Luck!

...Murder In The Orient

(continued from page six)

were were nothing but the best. The men wore tweeds and the women the most fashionable outfits of their time. The train was so luxurious and fantastically expensive-looking that it had to be the only one of its kind in Istanbul. Everything was either silk, gold, or diamond.

Although this was a magnificently produced and adapted film, one aspect disturbed me. The plot was thicker than frozen molasses. All one could do throughout the film was simply guess at certain clues that were randomly thrown at you. In order to understand this story, you must realize each person's position to each other. This is the most important task one must do. Without it, you are sunk and must pick up the pieces either by asking a friend to explain it (they may be just as confused) or by waiting for the end to come to let Hercule Poirot explain it to you. The people's relation to the story is just as subtle as the clues are and is very difficult to pick up. This is an intellectual film in which your mind will be working all the time, sometimes against you.

In conclusion, John Brabourne's production of an Agatha Christie suspense thriller was done with an eloquent manner and an intellectual and international flair. This film must've been quite expensive as the props alone were worth thousands, to say nothing about the expense of all those stars! I left the Theater in deep respect towards the famous authoress and said to myself: "So that's how it was done!"

summer in europe
65 DAY ADVANCE PAYMENT REQUIRED
U.S. GOVT APPROVED
TWA PAN AM TRANSAVIA
707 707 707
CHARTERS LESS THAN 1/2 REG. ECONOMY FARE
CALL TOLL FREE 1-800-325-4097

BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE
FANTASTIC SELECTION OF BEERS, ALES AND LIQUORS & IMPORTED WINES
AT GREAT SAVINGS

CLASSIFIED

Ride wanted to Washington, D.C., March 21, 22, or 23. Please call Kacey at 985-8575.

For Sale: Olin Mk II Skis, 195 cm. Good condition. Recently refinished. $30.00. Call Jack at 656-3827.

Pie for Hire -- A new approach to pie-in-the-face. Reasonable rates, 655-3650.

For Sale: 7" reel-to-reel tape recorder. Built-in speakers. Three recording channels for sound-on-sound. VU meters $50. Call Mary or Chris at 878-8316.

78 rpm Record Sale -- The UVM Music Department's collection of approx. 250 albums of 78 rpm records is to be disposed of. Prospective bidders may view the collection at the Music Building, 70 S. Williams, during normal business hours. All bids must be received by March 28, 1975.

American Indian Jewelry: Turquoise, coral, obsidian in silver; authentic Handmade, prices way below retail; call David 862-1910.

For Sale: K-2 (three) skis w/ Marker M-4 toe & Betamax metal heel. "Never been skied on." 3 pair available in various sizes. Call Tom at 864-7807. $220.00 new! Selling for $100.00.

Allegheny slashes air fares for small groups.

Our new 4 to 9 Plan cuts roundtrip air fares up to 20%.

Allegheny's new savings plan is great for any kind of small group. Because it can save you money. Here's how it works.

Just put together a group of 4 to 9 people. Then make reservations and purchase tickets at least 48 hours ahead of time. Fly together to and from selected cities and stay at least 3 days—but no more than thirty. Leave before noon on Monday through Friday—anytime on weekends.

It's ideal for going home, to that big game or concert. Or to get away over semester break.

And when your family comes to see you, they can save. Up to 20% for adults. Up to 50% for children under 12 when accompanied by at least one passenger 12 or older.

That's all there is to it.

So, see your Travel Agent or call Allegheny for information and reservations. You'll see how big a break your little group can get on Allegheny.

ALLEGHENY.
America's 6th largest passenger-carrying airline.

Yankee Trader

ENTERTAINMENT
NOW THRU MARCH 29
MOTHER NATURE
ONE OF CANADA'S FINEST
Open 8:00 PM
OLD BARD
130 Shelburne Rd. 864-6631

SA FILMS PRESENTS

THURSDAY, MARCH 20
THE WIZARD OF OZ (1939) -- Judy Garland, Bert Lahr
101 Votey -- 7:30 & 9:30 -- Free

FRIDAY, MARCH 21
BUTCH CASSIDY & THE SUNDANCE KID (1971) -- Paul Newman, Robert Redford
101 Votey -- 7:30 & 9:30 -- $1

MONDAY, MARCH 31
KING OF HEARTS (1967) -- Alan Bates, directed by Philippe DeBroca
101 Votey -- 7:30 & 9:30 -- Free

...Low Priced Blues Festival

(continued from page seven)

nightclub' shows, and Albert has cemented himself into his patented riffs. Son Seals at 30 has still refused to put a limit on what he hopes to do with his instrument.

Son was recently quoted as saying "I used to hear kids say they wouldn't pay money to hear the blues. Now I am starting to listen now. I believe the future of the blues is going to be all right." Son Seals will definitely be a part of that future.

Robert Junior Lockwood is a guitarist--vocalist who has been called one of the few living bluesmen who represent the transition from traditional acoustic blues to the modern electric blues of today. Robert now plays mostly electric guitar and tours with a four piece band. One person who listened to Robert Junior Lockwood as often as he could during the late 40's was someone named Riley King. Riley is doing pretty well these days using a couple of initials instead of his old first name!

With the inclusion of either Muddy Waters (what can be said that hasn't been said before--Muddy is simply the grandfather of Chicago blues) or Freddie King (Freddie has had a tremendous influence on Eric Clapton. Note Freddie's "Hideaway" on the Mayall "Bluesbreakers" LP and "Have You Ever Loved a Woman" on "Layla"), this year's Blues Festival should prove to be the most exciting yet. Again, that's at the UVM Patrick Gym on Saturday, April 26. Tickets will be only $3.50 with a UVM ID and $4.50 general admission, and will go on sale in early April.

...The Sirloin Saloon

(continued from page four)

Perhaps it is presumptious of me to look for more, but the cold efficiency of the place irks me. It may be the imp of the perverse which summons visions of the assembly line, but I'd sooner jump the track than participate in the machinery. I have no quarrel with the relative quality of food or the competency of service at the Saloon; my distaste for the place is a more general nausea. Doses of eating en masse at other restaurant chains have left me symptomatic of a consumer malaise, succumbing uneasily to the spirit of the crowd. If city living leaves one overheated and sprawling on the head of a pin, then a busy night at the Sirloin Saloon is liable to stir up a similar amount of bile. Their essential popularity is the very thing which saps its appeal.

...The Sports Scene

(continued from page ten)

create a different system.

If the number of competent teams turns out to be an odd number, create byes, with the best moving directly into the next round without facing an opponent.

If the quality of play continues to diminish, the quantity of pay will do likewise. So the post-season tourney makers had better beware; if you dance to the music, you've got to pay it to the piper.

...Jackson Browne And Phoebe Snow

(continued from page six)

of "Doctor My Eyes", a lyrical as well as musical masterpiece. Browne then confirmed many beliefs that never "Will the Circle Be Unbroken."

"Fountain of Sorrow" preceded a piece dedicated by Browne to the late student, Andrew Towle who died in the recent fraternity fire. This had the effect of firmly stifling any activity or restlessness and feasibly made many hearts beat a little faster and a lot heavier.

A fiddle reel played at a volume intended to "shatter the enamel of our teeth" was played in commemoration of St. Patrick by the lead guitarist and nearly razed the rafters.

The Beach Boys' unoriginal hit, "Do You Wanna Dance", led unexpectently into a final, rockin' "Little One", a purfectly energized ending.

Though no encore followed, the audience seemed more than satisfied with what Browne had given them, which, as he had promised, was his all.

"Down to earth", one listener commented on Jackson Browne. Another could only say, "Surprising". And very pleasantly so, I might add.

Saga Sez...

Looking Into The Crystal Ball

SAGA SEZ

Here is a pot pourri of things (A) that have been, (B) not are, and (C) that are yet to be:

(A) The year so far, has been interesting, unique and frustrating for all of us at SAGA. Interesting because there has not been a dull moment nor a day when we didn't learn something new about the Vermont Plan. Frustrating because we still aren't satisfied with the way we're managing the program. We found the Vermont Plan to be under-priced and not a sound arrangement, financially. Our efforts to improve in the Financial area were painful to undertake. We had to lay off employees during the school year for the first time ever at UVM. We had to raise prices in the snack bars and reduce service hours in the regular dining halls. These moves have caused you -- our customer -- to be somewhat less than totally happy with us and we, being human, don't enjoy always being on the receiving end of the Flak.

(B) So here we are -- we like the concept of the Vermont Plan, with its great flexibility and innovative service features, but it isn't priced right. In fact, because it's priced a bit too low this year the average student eating 12-15 meals a week is paying less than they did last year.

(C) Looking ahead -- we must adjust the Vermont Plan pricing to reflect the economic Facts of Life as we believe they will be next year. At the same time we intend to keep the unique and flexible features of the current plan.

Cost increases in anything these days are unpopular. The Vermont Plan cost increase will be unpopular. There is no such thing as a Free Lunch and there can't be a Vermont Plan next year without an increase over this year's prices. The amount of the increase will be in the neighborhood of a 20% increase in cost. In addition, you'll be required to buy enough coupons to cover 10% more meals next year.

Other colleges around New England will also be raising their board costs. It is too early to report the exact amount of most other schools increases as they haven't been approved by their respective Boards yet. Most will be in excess of $200 higher than UVM as best as we can determine. UVM's will be much less than that fine people and they love you to call and talk back to your radio. Ask for Feat, ask for Grin, ask for anyone. Give them a buzz, they'll melt some sounds on your overworked mind.

...All Things Considered

(continued from page five)

The sun rises everyday and sets the same way and nothing is going to change until you do. So open your ears, Give Little Feat a chance. If it runs amuck, call a duck. Please excuse the lack of closing parenthesis, they're all too final.

.....

Refraction: Deception is the key to understanding yourself (incongruous ?hiding myself from myself?)

S.A. Films Presents...

Before you all rush off on your vacations, take a few hours off and return to the world of childhood and fantasy. For tonight SA Films is presenting The Wizard of Oz. This marvelous color film stars Judy Garland, Frank Morgan, Ray Bolger, Bert Lahr, Jack Haley, Billie Burke, and Margaret Hamilton and presents a fairybook story of wizards, witches, goblins, pixies and a place where good always triumphs. A cyclone lifts Dorothy and her dog Toto out of Kansas and plops her on the cap of the Wicked Witch of the East. Wanting to get back home, Dorothy sets off for the Emerald City to see the Wizard of Oz to ask his help. She acquires three loveable companions along the way -- The Scarecrow (searching for brains), the Tin Woodman (wanting a heart), and the Cowardly Lion (desiring courage). Adventures pile up and with the aid of the Wizard, each of the travellers gets his wish. This is a marvelous film and it will be shown in 101 Votey tonight, Thursday, March 20, at 7:30 and 9:30.

On Friday night, if you are still in town, you should come out and see Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid. This film classic stars Paul Newman, Robert Redford and Katharine Ross (in case you have forgotten) and is directed by George Roy Hill. Newman (Butch) and Redford (Sundance), two extremely likable, amiable bank-train robbers who shy away from violence flee to escape a posse and the closing of the 1905 Western frontier. They pick up Ross, Sundance's school teacher mistress, and the trio sets furth on a memorable tour of nightlife in Manhattan before they sail for Bolivia to start life anew. Ross gives the men a crash course in conversational Spanish and they begin to rob banks and trains again. Some local bandidos play dirty, and since they are cornered, Butch is forced to kill for the first time. The dialogue is sharp, the humor abundant and witty, and Burt Bacharach's music is memorable. The film will be shown at 7:30 and 9:30 in 101 Votey. Admission is $1.

On the first Monday after vacation, March 31, another film classic, the French film King of Hearts will be shown. This 1967 color film was directed by Philippe De Broca and stars Alan Bates, Genevieve Bujold, and Micheline Presle. It is near the end of World War I, and logic is not what it once was. Sent into a small French village with a box of explosives and a cage of carefully trained carrier pigeons, Private Alan Bates is somewhat surprised by what he finds. The citizens have fled and, thoughtfully, unlocked the gates of the local insane asylum before they went. Now the inmates, unconscious of anything but their own imaginations, are having a fine time dressing up, parading and generally doing all the things sane people are much too busy to enjoy. When they see Bates, they dub him their KING OF HEARTS and hand him right over to a young tightrope walker. When they see the two armies clash in their midst, they are charmed by the overacting. And soon Bates has a choice to make: whether to go loyally back to his regiment or throw in his lot with the loonies. In Film Quarterly Pauline Kael says, "De Broca's kind of comedy stays aloft in its own sphere, and his technique calls up similar pleasures and the same sweet melancholy: the beauty of his compositions is so evanescent it disappears before one has time to seize it, to fix it in memory; his films leave one both happy and nostalgic. His originality as a director is in his use of incongruities and in the idiosyncrasies of his characters, which turns out to be the substance of the film." The film will be shown on March 31, Monday, at 7:30 and 9:30 in 101 Votey.

World's Most Complete Hi-Fi & Electronics Center

LAFAYETTE RADIO ELECTRONICS LRE ASSOCIATE STORE

137 Pearl St., Essex Jct.

Sale Prices In Effect Thru Sat., March 22

A WORLD OF SOUND AT DOWN-TO-EARTH SALE PRICES!

LAFAYETTE Criterion PICKERING Garrard

Sale! Lafayette-Garrard-Pickering-Criterion Stereo System — Save a BUNDLE on Fine Sound

Great system for apartments, smaller setups where high power is not needed. The LR-6000 stereo FM-AM receiver is a true performer with excellent credentials: tuning meter, stereo light, tape monitor, speaker selector, all the inputs and outputs you need for fine stereo sound from any source. The Garrard SLX3 automatic is a popular model with every feature for fine record play — it comes with a base and installed Pickering P/ATE-1 cartridge. And the Criterion 333 speakers make any magnetic cartridge. And the Criterion 333 speakers make any magnetic cartridge. And the Criterion 333 speakers make any magnetic

...nto The Crystal Ball

...of things (A) that have been, (B) not ...to be.

...y, has been interesting, unique and ...t SAGA. Interesting because there has ...ent nor a day when we didn't learn ...the Vermont Plan. Frustrating because ...d with the way we're managing the ...Vermont Plan to be under-priced and ...nt, financially. Our efforts to improve ...re painful to undertake. We had to lay ...e school year for the first time ever at ...e prices in the snack bars and reduce ...egular dining halls. These moves have ...ever – to be somewhat less than totally ...being human, don't enjoy always being ...the Flak.

... we like the concept of the Vermont ...ibility and innovative service features, ...t. In fact, because it's priced a bit too ...e student eating 12-15 meals a week is ...d last year.

... we must adjust the Vermont Plan ...nomic Facts of Life as we believe they ...the same time we intend to keep the ...ures of the current plan.

...ything these days are unpopular. The ...ase will be unpopular. There is no such ...and there can't be a Vermont Plan next ...over this year's prices. The amount of ...the neighborhood of a 20% increase in ...be required to buy enough coupons to ...ext year.

...d New England will also be raising their ...ity to report the exact amount of most ...as they haven't been approved by their ...Most will be in excess of $200 higher ...e can determine. UVM's will be much

...ings Considered

...ue)

...ove you to call and talk back to your ...k for Grin, ask for anyone. Give them a ...sounds on your overworked mind.

...ay and gets the same way and nothing is ...you do. So open your ears, Give Little ...e amuck, call a duck. Please excuse the ...sis, they're all too final.

••••••••

... is the key to understanding yourself ...yself from myself?)

...lms Presents...

...h off on ...e a few ...n to the ...od and ...SS Films ...rd of Oz. ...film stars ...Morgan, ...hr, Jack ...rke, and ...on and ...story of ...goblins, ...ore good ...cyclone ...dog Toto ...ps her on ...d Witch of ...get back ...ff for the ...the Wizard ...help. She ...loveable ...e way – ...rching for ...Woodman ...and the ...(desiring ...a pile up ...the Wizard, ...re gets his ...elous film ...wn in 101 ...Thursday, ...d 9:30.

...if you are ...ould come ...ously and ...This film ...Newman, ...Katharine ...ou have ...irected by ...Newman ...Redford ...extremely ...bank-train ...away from ...ape a posse ...the 1905 ...ey pick up ...'s school ...d the trio ...strable tour ...Manhattan ...Bolivia to ...p gives the ...course in ...panish and ...hanks and ...me local ...and more ..., Butch is forced to kill for the first time. The dialogue is sharp, the humor abundant and witty, and Burt Bacharach's music is memorable. The film will be shown at 7:30 and 9:30 in 101 Votey. Admission is $1.

On the first Monday after vacation, March 31, another film classic, the French film King of Hearts will be shown. This 1967 color film was directed by Philippe De Broca and stars Alan Bates, Genevieve Bujold, and Micheline Prele. It is near the end of World War I, and logic is not what it once was. Sent into a small French village with a box of explosives and a cage of carefully trained carrier pigeons, Private Alan Bates is somewhat surprised by what he finds. The citizens have fled and, thoughtfully, unlocked the gates of the local insane asylum before they went. Now the inmates, unconscious of anything but their own imaginations, are having a fine time dressing up, parading and generally doing all the things sane people are much too busy to enjoy. When they see Bates, they dub him their KING OF HEARTS and hand him right over to a young tightrope walker. When they see the two armies clash in their midst, they are charmed by the overacting. And soon Bates has a choice to make: whether to go loyally back to his regiment or throw in his lot with the loonies. In Film Quarterly Pauline Kael says, "De Broca's kind of comedy stays aloft in its own sphere, and his technique calls up similar pleasures and the same sweet melancholy. the beauty of his compositions is so evanescent it disappears before one has time to seize it, to fix it in memory; his films leave one both happy and nostalgic. His originality as a director is in his use of incongruities and all the idiosyncrasies of his characters, which turns out to be the substance of the film." The film will be shown on March 31, Monday, at 7:30 and 9:30 in 101 Votey.

LITTLE PROFESSOR BOOK CENTER®

...St. | Largest Paperback Selection in Vermont
Complete Study Notes

...ning | Small presses & some far-out reading

OVP Volunteer Opportunities

by Wendy Pearce

In an age when the complexity of just plain living is increasing at a dizzying rate, an agency such as the Office of Volunteer Programs (OVP) is desperately needed. The benefits for all involved are great. Particularly as a woman caught up in the crushing pressures of planning the most from college, while planning ahead for future happiness and fulfillment, OVP may provide just the extra support, direction and insight necessary.

Basically, OVP is in the business of making people happy, not by whitening their teeth, adorning their bodies or perfuming their skin, but more fundamentally by providing support, information, counseling and a "helping hand" to those in need. An increase in personal dignity, a renewed feeling of self-worth, and an easing of life's burden are often the result. OVP fulfills the vital function of connecting the University and surrounding community, helping to match volunteers with specific programs coordinated through the office. Voluntary action opportunities encompass all aspects of the community and are as diverse as people themselves. These include work with the aged, with youngsters, in counseling, dispensing information, perhaps simply brightening someone's day.

There exist two main types of volunteer experience. University Year for Action (UYA) is a full-time voluntary commitment. While working for twelve months in a designated program, the student continues to carry a complete academic course load. Thus, job and academics should be carefully complimented and related so that the volunteer may pursue his course work in the forms of independent study or special classes. The projects usually focus on problems of Vermont's low income areas and deal with such aspects as legal aid, education and health. Part-time voluntary action is more flexible and thus may be of more interest to a student bound by rigid curriculum. Here, volunteers from UVM and the community contribute their spare time in the hopes of making life a bit warmer, more productive and worthwhile for others, while gaining for themselves the opportunity to achieve heightened self-growth and perception. The possibilities are myriad, offering something of interest to everyone. Especially applicable to students, OVP proffers new experiences and alternative learning situations which possess potential for growth and development of new interests, skills and ideas.

For women, this type of experience can be particularly useful and rewarding. In the tradition of the "feminine mystique", education for females has often been considered necessary only in that she benefit as a better wife and mother. Today, the horizons are broadening, and women are stepping into new roles, careers and life styles. Unfortunately, a traditional education for women is often sadly lacking in those skills most necessary to a broader, more professionally competitive life. Through such programs as OVP, the young co-ed may supplement her academic preparation with increased perception, self-growth and skills in the areas of communication, human relations and dealing with the "real" world. Fundamentally valuable, these skills may then later be applied to all sectors of life and particularly to job situations. Beginning as a volunteer, and discovering a real interest, one might later use this experience as a mechanism for working into a paid staff position. OVP, for instance, now has several women in permanent positions, their responsibilities ranging from Placement Counselor to Project Manager for the new Information and Referral Service.

The National Organization for Women (NOW) has condemned voluntary action for women, arguing that, among other things, it reinforces the exploitational second class status of women and devalues greatly the "worth" of their time. Perhaps this is so for those who are out of school and might otherwise be getting the satisfaction and monetary benefits of paid employment. In the case of a college co-ed, however, the situation is slightly different. This type of extracurricular work might prove an occasion to assess one's own abilities, realize new goals and potential and gain proficiency in manifold directions. Couple this with the immense personal satisfaction of such "giving work", and one comes up with an experience difficult to equal. The atmosphere of OVP is relaxed, warm, friendly and supportive, striving to integrate you and the community on a volunteer level, thus making our area a happier, more productive place to live and work. Though the cited benefits are particularly attractive to women, they are enriching for anyone and bear looking into. Perhaps while serving another, your life too will acquire an added dimension.

Buckley Amendment Now Law

by Sandy Campbell

The controversial Buckley amendment dealing with a student's right to know certain information finally became a law on January 2 of this year. The effects it has had on the UVM administration and students have been wide-spread.

Students now have the right to view information that the University has on file pertaining to their academics. Confidential statements and recommendations prior to January 1, 1975, parents confidential statements, and medical or psychiatric records are excluded by the amendment.

Departments that have been affected include Admissions, Financial Aid, registrar, ROTC, Residential Life, and the faculty. Most of these departments sought a ruling from University lawyer Matt Katz before releasing information.

The records Dept. in the office of the Registrar made it clear that there was no change in the manner in which they dealt with the student's record. Their policy has always been to release their records upon student request and not to release records unless they had the student's permission. Initially, the registrar was swamped with students demanding, under the Buckley Amendment, to see their records. Ironically, this privilege had always been the students' to exercise, but many students have been indoctrinated from closed files in high school.

Admissions sometimes depends on confidential recommendations to offset or de-emphasize grades and board scores. Candor and honesty are now subject to the student's perusal although the student has the right to waive his claim to viewing the recommendation so that an honest recommendation might be obtained more readily.

The department of Residential Life is currently undertaking its selection of next year's Resident Assistants.

The recommendations that each applicant submits play an important role in the panel's final decision. This year, in accordance with the Buckley amendment, Dr Miser has made it known to the applicants as well as the people who make the recommendations that the files will be open to those applicants who desire to see their recommendations as well as how they did on their interviews. The bulk of the recommendations were filled out by the present Resident Assistants.

The student now has the right to omit his name from the Student Directory. The release of a student's address and telephone number also are subject to student permission.

If a student feels there is a discrepancy on his or her record, then they are entitled to a hearing by a committee appointed by the President of the University. Any information that may be misleading can be deleted if the student's objection is approved by the committee.

Mr. Katz, the UVM lawyer, was unclear as to what stand the UVM Security takes as far as retaining a record on a student. Although the Security force have the power to arrest students, it is rarely exercised. The local police department are usually called on to make an arrest so the record of the offence will be at the Burlington Police Department and not in his or her permanent file.

The ROTC department is dependent on information concerning the upcoming freshmen for their recruiting program. They received a favorable ruling on their request for freshmen names and addresses because ROTC has been defined as a academic program with educational interests.

Boycott Coordinators Give Talk

Last Friday, March 14, Mr. Nick Jones and his wife Virginia gave a talk on the United Farm Workers boycott of Gallo wine products. The Jones' are the main coordinators of the New England area strike. Both Mr. Jones and his wife have worked with Cesser Chavez and his union for a considerable length of time. At the Friday night talk, Mrs. Jones who is a former field worker of Chicano background, gave a moving description of the inequities of life as a migrant worker. Her husband informed the audience on the current situation in the California fields, and how the problem is based on the fight between the International Brotherhood of Teamsters and the United Farm Workers Union led by Chavez. It is not a case of a reenactment of Steinbeck's Grapes of Wrath but rather a case of the powerful Teamsters Union against a struggling young United Farm Workers Union. The UFW says that the Teamsters are guilty of a "sweet heart" contract with Gallo. This contract gave the workers less representation in the fields and less protection from the pesticides used on the grapes. The UFW believes that the teamsters do not in any way represent the majority of farm workers and they are just trying to gain total control of the production cycle from harvesting through to the distribution in the stores.

In Burlington the movement has not got off the ground yet, while in Boston sales are down 50-60%, due to the strike. On a nationwide scale the Wall Street Journal says "Gallo sales are down 10%." At the Friday night meeting sign up sheets were passed around, for people to picket the Burlington First National. The picketing on Saturday was the first of more to come. The UVM movement is led by Jesse Clemens who has reported a sympathetic response from the students. Clemens also said he will welcome any invitations to speak about the Boycott, and has an excellent movie about the UFW struggle, that is worth seeing.

Ringo Turns Actor

(EARTH NEWS) -- Ringo Starr reportedly has turned down a $3 million guarantee to become the second ex-beatle to make a cross-country concert tour of the U.S. The reason is that Ringo didn't want a lengthy tour to interfere with his efforts to build his film career.

Ringo, who is studying acting at the Actor's Studio in New York, is very serious about his movie career. He's making plans to set up his own independent movie production companies in Hollywood and London, and he's reportedly buying several movie scripts, which he would produce and star in himself. Ringo's latest film, That'll Be The Day, has brought him rave reviews. Ringo also has starred in such films as The Magic Christian, Candy, and 200 Motels – in addition to the Beatles' movies.

The Tax Man Cometh

by Curt Koehler

(CPS) – With visions of income tax rebates dancing in many an inflation-weary head, more and more people are becoming excited about Congress' new tax program.

The tax plan currently before the House provides for a rebate of about 10 percent of taxes due on 1974 income. The rebates would not go above $200, nor in most cases below $100. If you paid less than $100 you'll receive back all you paid, but no more.

But first, the bad news. The rebates, if they're enacted into law, probably won't be mailed to you until late spring or early summer.

And second, more bad news. You have to file your tax return by April 15th, compute your taxes as though there were no rebate and pay according to printed tax tables accompanying your tax form.

It must be emphasized that this plan is still nothing but a plan. But while the exact figures may vary, some form of rebate seems inevitable.

To receive your rebate, all you have to do is file your 1974 income tax form. The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) will compute and automatically send you your rebate based on your return.

Many students, though, are due refunds that are independent of any rebate plans. Students often don't earn enough to be liable for taxes, yet have taxes withheld by employers anyway. By filing a tax return, you will get back your money.

Legally, you are required to file a return if you have an income of $2050 or if you made $750 in interest, dividends or trust income outside of wages. Married students must file together if they made $2800.

Nowadays, almost everything is taxable income. Whether you've collected a bundle on a quiz show, made a killing at the gambling tables, won a poetry prize or served on a jury, the law says you have to report it.

Of more importance to students is scholarship money. If you're not required to do anything but go to school to earn the scholarship, the money is not taxable.

If, however, you perform "work" – whether it's grading papers, manning a library desk or guarding dirty towels in a locker room – the scholarship is considered "wages" and must be reported accordingly. If in doubt here, check with your financial aid office for the terms of your scholarship.

If you're confused or have complicated deductions, however, don't go to a tax preparation service. Save yourself some money and call the IRS. They've set up toll-free numbers all across the country plus walk-in information centers in most major cities.

Finally, remember to file as soon as possible, particularly if you have a refund coming. If you've delayed because you haven't received a W-2 form from your employers, contact them immediately. It's long overdue.

By filing early you'll eliminate the possibility of interest and penalty payments on taxes owed and filed after April 15th.

...Johnny Cash

(continued from page six)

Carrying us through some fifteen-plus songs such as, "The Man in Black", Kristofferson's "Sunday Morning Coming Down", and "Lady Came From Baltimore", Cash seemed to be genuinely enjoying himself. The audience sensed his enthusiasm and joined in with hand-clapping and foot-stomping all the way. He never ignored his sidemen, making sure they received proper recognition after each song.

Well, every man needs a woman and the lady in Johnny Cash's life is the beautiful June Carter. She came into his life when he needed her most. The need is still being fulfilled. The two joined together for a tight version of "Jackson" and a very heavy "Help Me Make it Through the Night". Then it was June's turn to solo.

She too donned a guitar and strummed out an old standard country love song, "Ain't It Sad To Be Alone?" It must be for tears flowed from her eyes.

Almost too quickly she left the stage to make room for her husband's surprise. Hanging in the air behind him was a backdrop screen just waiting to be used. You guessed it. Home movies! But these were of old locomotives and the men who ran them. What better live sound track could have been used than Johnny Cash himself performing "Folsom Prison Blues", "Hey Porter", and "Orange Blossom Special!" None.

That skit lasted approximately fifteen minutes and carried over into a grand finale by all band members. They laughed, well-wished and tittered their way through "Precious Memories", "Will the Circle Be Unbroken" and a romping "Daddy Sang Bass." Oh, how that concert didn't want to end.

Needed: One Arts and Entertainment Editor for Fall '75. Several hours per week is a small price for FREE TICKETS to every local concert. For free entertainment, call Bob DeMike at 656-2026.

I have a play written by myself, and will be willing to pay someone at least $5.00 for typing it, as soon as I complete the play. Contact William Shepherd, Allen House, 57 W. Allen St., Winooski, 658-9865.

Reviewer Needed for "Pajama Game," Thursday-Sunday at Flynn Theater. Must be familiar with or interested in Broadway musicals. Two free tickets available through Bob DeMike,

...Search Committee Continues

(continued from page one)

do things they ought to do, even when they think they do not have the capacity to do them."

Corrigan presented the qualities of a true leader and was optimistic and confident that the right man or woman would be chosen. His ending was very good: "We do not precisely know what tomorrow and the days thereafter may bring, but we do know that we need the kind of president who can help us put all of the talent in this University together to create the future, not merely to inherit it."

The last speaker, Dr. William Luginbuhl, Dean of the College of Medicine, was not so optimistic. He saw the world in a time of serious problems and incredible change. In a very serious style, Luginbuhl felt that the number one quality of the president was academic leadership. The president should provide leadership in creating and carrying out a plan for the University. His emphasis was not that the planning be done by the president alone, but that the president be responsible for the process of planning actually taking place. Whereas Corrigan felt that there are plenty of good leaders around, Luginbuhl believed that there is serious shortage of them.

From optimistic to pessimistic, manager to "benevolent autocrat," the job of choosing a new president is a difficult one.

ALL NEW MENU
THE BEST STEAK
GREAT SEAFOOD TOO!
SIZZLING STEAK

AT THE BONE
43 KING ST., BHC.
(Corner S. Champlain & King)
Happy Hour
4 until 9 Sun-Thur
Gold requisite Nite
Sun 7-11

FACTORY OUTLET PRICES!
NEW SHIPMENT INDIAN TEE-SHIRTS STARTING AT 2.99
PRINTS-TIE DYES-SOLIDS
RIBBED COTTON TURTLENECKS WERE 4.99 NOW 3.99
INDIA PRINT BEDSPREADS STARTING AT 6.99
BEAUTIFUL PRINTS
30,000 SWEATERS JUST ABOUT ANYTHING YOU WOULD EVER WANT SUMMER BLAZERS & TOPS NOW ARRIVING SAVE!
MEN'S MID-WEIGHT JACKETS $14.95
CHARLESTOWN MILL STORE
65 LOWER MAIN ST
OPEN 9-9, SAT 9-5

VALUABLE COUPON
SPECIAL TO STUDENTS AND FACULTY MEMBERS
(prescriptions excluded)
10% DISCOUNT
ON YOUR PURCHASES AT
CAMPUS PHARMACY
ACROSS FROM
The Medical Center

The Great Whitewall Tire Sale!!
Mobil Cushion 78
Small Cars $25.00
Medium Cars $27.00
Large Cars $31.00
Mobil Cushion 78 Whitewall Sale* Prices.
*These are just a few Examples of our Sale Sizes
Mobil®
Spillane's Servicenter
A FULL SERVICE Mobil STATION
811 Williston Rd. - Next to Gaynes & 1st Nat'l.
OPEN 24 HOURS
863-2996

UNIVERSITY YEAR FOR ACTION (U.Y.A.)
APPLICATIONS NOW BEING ACCEPTED!
AVAILABLE AT: The Office of Volunteer Programs
Mansfield House
656-2062
STOP IN FOR INFORMATION AND U.Y.A. PRELIMINARY INTERVIEWS

THE SPORTS SCENE

by Norm Robinson

When is a tournament not a tournament? The answers to this question are easy. The, NCAA, NCIT, and the NIT, basketball tourneys.

It's no longer the best teams that compete in tournaments. Now, if you are in the right conference, you can have a so-so record and still go to a big tourney.

One questions the reasoning behind the NCAA's expansion into a 32-team field. Supposedly, it is to allow more teams a shot at the title, yet does San Diego State, with a 14-12 record deserve that opportunity, while the defending National champs, North Carolina State, doesn't even get into the playoffs?

When looking over the pairings in the first round of the NCAAs, such teams as Kansas State at 18-8, Georgetown (17-9), Oregon State (18-10), Notre Dame (18-8) and Michigan at 19-7 are entered. To be sure, these are great records, but it doesn't seem possible that these should have a shot at the national championship.

In the National Commissioners Invitational Tournament, Arizona is the only team with six losses at 20-6, while all the remaining teams have more. Drake and Purdue lead the list for poor records at 16-10. Imagine losing 10 games and still being invited to a tournament!

Things are a little better in the National Invitational Tournament. Lafayette with a 22-5 mark has the best record with most of the six squads sporting eight losses or more.

Manhatten and St. Peter's trail the pack with 13-11 and 15-11 records respectively.

The question is, why are so many poor, or mediocre teams in post-season tournaments. As in most sports, professional or otherwise, it is money ... hard, cold cash.

Television carries many of the NCAA and NIT games regionally and some make national TV. In many schools, the money received from a network keeps their program running. It seems self-defeating however. If the caliber of play continues to drop, the importance of the tournaments will drop as well, and telecasts, with the finances, will reduce or cease.

I find it inconceivable that the 32nd team in the NCAA tourney will get past the quarter finals, let alone the finals.

The answer lies in taking the best from the East, Mideast, Midwest and West and letting them compete. The top four, no matter how many from each conference, should compete in each regional and then the top four teams in the national collide. If the Atlantic Coast Conference, or any other has three teams, as they did this year, that are capable of competing, let them compete, no matter who is left out.

As far as the other two tournaments are concerned, as their names indicate, they are invitationals. Therefore, the remaining teams that have had good seasons, yet not in the NCAA's should be invited. If a team declines, don't fill the slot with a mediocre squad, but find another capable team or else

(continued on page eight)

Speak Out!

The sports page is going to add a new dimension in the upcoming weeks, and if it is a success, it will continue.

We're going to let you – the readers – voice your opinions, complaints, or wishes in a new feature, "The Fans Speak Out."

Your letters on any sports subject, whether it is campus, state, national, or international, will be printed so your views can be heard.

If you've got a complaint, complain about it. If you disagree with someone, let us know. If you've got a question, ask it, and we will do our best to answer it.

Here is your chance to improve the Cynic and the type and quality of sports that go in. Don't pass it by.

The issue of April 4 will be the first with "The Fan Speaks Out". Just mail or drop your letters off at the Cynic office, lower Billings, by noon on Monday each week.

You will make this a success or failure! Let's hear from you!

Tennis

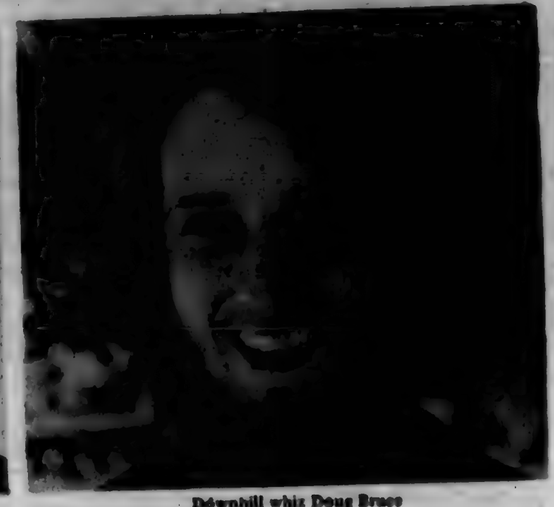
Faculty, staff, any students interested in learning this new game of paddle tennis: there is a new complex opening across from the Crosscourt Tennis Facility, Farrell Road, South Burlington.

Mr. Bob Benson, Manager of the facility, advises there will be an open house beginning March 16. Play will be free for a week.

Contact Mr. Benson at 862-5267 (business) or 864-4002 (home) for further information.

Ski Team Has Five All- Americans

Dick Erdman 1 a third in the slalom



Downhill whiz Doug Bruce

by Chris Brown

Each year after the National Championships the NCAA Selection Committee meets to select first and second All-American teams based on the results of that meet. The skiers named to these teams are the best in the country.

Since UVM emerged as a stong contender for national champion in 1973 we have had five individuals named to this team. From the Middlebury NCAA's in 1973 there were Petter Kongsli, Bob Cochran and Chris Brown named to the first–string All–American ski team and Dave Dodge to the second. Last year in Jackson, Wyoming, Dick Erdman made it. This year, Vermont had five skiiers selected All-American, equal to the number named from both '73 and '74.

Freshman Doug Bruce and senior co-captain Dick Erdman were named to the first string All–American team. Doug was third in the NCAA downhill this year, a notable performance especially in view of the fact that it was his first downhill competition of the season. Not to underrate the Purgatory Ski Area downhill course at the nationals this year, it should be mentioned that Doug was third in the Junior National Downhill last year. It is unfortunate for him and others who are good in that event that more downhill competitions are not held in the East. For Dick if was his second selection in two years. Starting from the first seed in the slalom, Dick finished third in that event and was selected on that basis. Last year he was second in the alpine combined.

Bill Rathbone, a junior, shining in his third NCAA championships, was named to the second team along with senior Dave Dodge and junior Stan Dunklee. Bill was fifth in the Alpine combined scoring which is based on results from the slalom and downhill. He had a late seed in both events and, not a particularly notable finish in the downhill, came back with an amazing seventh in the slalom, considering his seed, or starting position, for his outstanding combined finish.

Dave Dodge, who was fifth in the combined and fourth in the slalom as a sophomore in 1973 and named to the second team then, was fourth in the downhill this year. After missing last year due to a severe knee injury, he was named to the second team again for 1975.

Stan Dunklee, sometimes referred to as an animal or machine, was named All-American for steaming his way around the 15 kilometer NCAA cross-country course through heavy snow and thin air to a sixth place. Stan's case is somewhat unusual also in that he is an American named to the All–American team for nordic skiing. Most of the others are from Norway.

There were others on the team that except for a fall at the wrong time, a touch of the flu, or just an "off" weekend might have made it too. Among these were Petter Konsli, Morten Gaourd, Joe Lamb and Trygve Roisoth who were with the All–Americans named to All–East team based on the total year's performance.

UVM SPORTS

Lacrosse Club Preps For Season

by Norm Robinson

The University of Vermont's Lacrosse Club is starting its second season this weekend with a trip to New York State.

On Saturday and Sunday, the club will take on Siena, and then move down to Long Island and stay at Dowling College for the entire week. On Monday they will face Suffolk Community College, and on Friday, Dowling will be their opponent. They will play North Country Community College on Saturday, March 29 before coming home.

Head coach Bruce Casagrande will be running double practice sessions on the days that no games are scheduled; keeping the boys busy.

The financing for the Spring trip came from the Student Association, which donated approximately $1,800; the selling of bumper stickers collected $1,000 and donations contributed more.

If you are interested in helping out the team, bumper stickers are on sale at the bookstore for one dollar.

The money raised has gone to equipment, and the majority to traveling expenses.

Coach Casagrande's salary also comes out of expenses.

Lacrosse is run just like a varsity sport. Practices, which began in January, are mandatory if you want to play. The team practices five times a week; on Monday, Wednesday, and Thursday nights and Saturday and Sunday afternoons. Once good weather rolls around, the workouts will be six days a week.

Lacrosse is much like a combination of hockey and soccer. The field is like a soccer field, 110 feet by 60 feet, with the nets approximately 20 feet from the end lines, allowing play behind the net.

The hard rubber ball is shot at six by six foot nets with sticks with a type of tight netting on the end. Much like a fish net only much more sturdy.

Ten men make up a squad. There are three attackers, three midfielders, three defenders, and a goaltender.

The attackers must stay beyond midfield, in the attacking zone; while the defenders can't go past midfield. The midfielders can go anywhere, and thus, because they run much more, are substituted almost as often as a hockey line.

Hitting is allowed. You can put your shoulder into the ball carrier and can smash his stick with yours if he has the ball.

The game is divided into four, fifteen minute quarters, with penalties being a minute-and-a-half.

Lacrosse is a fast moving game, like hockey, with set plays as in basketball Although the unknowledgeable observers may have a tough time at first, it is an easy game to pick up and follow.

The team is still in its early stages, but Casagrande, along with assistant coaches Brian Burns and Howard Martin have built a 20 game schedule with five home games.

They are: April 5-Castleton, April 19-St. Lawrence, April 21-St. Michaels, April 24-Plymouth State, April 26-New Hampshire College.

Lacrosse is an up and coming sport, and is a growing one. A good number of young men have gone out for this years team. Come out and see them in action. You may be a bit confused at first but it's an exciting and fast moving sport. You'll enjoy it!

Cross Named Coach Of The Year

The University of Vermont has another award to one of its members. Jim Cross, coach of the hockey Catamounts, has been named New England College Hockey coach of the year.

Cross was presented the Clark Hodder Award by Bill Cleary, coach at Harvard University at the New England Hockey Writers Association Dinner Tuesday night.

The Association selects the winners each year. Last year Cleary was the recipient.

Cross led the Catamounts to third place in the ECAC Division I in this, the first year in the Division.

Finishing with a 14-6 record in the Division, and 24-12 overall, Vermont surprised even the experts.

In ten years as head coach at UVM, Cross has a 164-105 won-lost record and only two ties.

In two hockey polls Vermont ends the season tied for sixth in one, and seventh in the other.

Tim O'Connell added another honor to his list as he was named to the All-New England Hockey first team. Last week he was named to the All-American Division I hockey team.

Hockey Team Lands Six Standouts

Ranked third in the nation, the University of Vermont hockey team has landed six hopefuls for the 75-76 season.

Coach Jim Cross went to Massachusetts to pick up four of the players and one each from New York and Ontario. They are defensemen Chuck Stahlen of Rye Country Day School in Westchester County, N.Y.; Joey Oslin from Canton, Mass.; Greg Wilkie of Tewksbury High School, Mass.; and forwards Colin Ahearn of Tewksbury High School; Benjamin Lord of Lawrence Academy in Groton, Mass.; and Gord MacFarlane of Aurora, Ontario.

Stahlin plays in the New York Metropolitan League and is his team's captain and Most Valuable Player.

A member of the Junior All-American team last year, Joey Oslin is currently enrolled in Choate School in Connecticut.

Wilkie and Ahearn were a part of Tewksbury High School, which was a semifinalist in the Eastern Massachusetts Division II tournament this year. Ahearn was drafted by the New England Whalers last year as a junior while Wilkie was a Junior All-Star.

MacFarlane is touring Sweden with a Canadian All-Star team for the second year in a row. He played for the Aurora Tigers, a provincial Junior A league team in Ontario.

PFG -Schedule

PATRICK FORBUSH GUTTERSON RECREATION SCHEDULE

WEEKEND OF MARCH 21,22, 23

FRIDAY, MARCH 21

GYM – Faculty-Staff 7:00–10:30 p.m.

POOL – Faculty-Staff 7–10:30 p.m. (7–8 under 15)

TENNIS COURTS – Faculty-Staff 7–10:30 p.m.

TRACK – Faculty-Staff 7–10:30 p.m. (Track only)

SATURDAY, MARCH 22

Spring Recess – shut down

SUNDAY, MARCH 23

Spring Recess – shut down.

HANDBALL AND SQUASH COURTS: By appointment only. Call 656-3069.

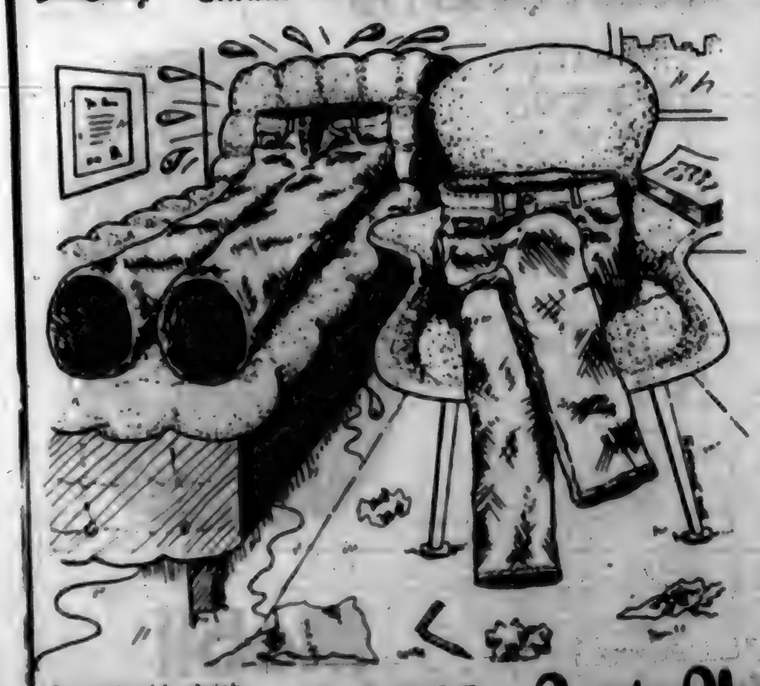
All Recreation may be superseded by varsity activities or special events.

WEEK OF MARCH 24:

Recreation for students, faculty, and staff 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. as available – when maintenance work not being performed. Wednesday, March 26, all facilities down at 3 p.m. All facilities closed to recreation Saturday and Sunday, March 29 and 30. Pool closed all week.

Appalachian
THE GAP
9 Mechanics Lane
India Imports
Leather Goods
Silver Jewelry
Baskets
Frye Boots
Levis
Landlubbbers

LEVI'S The Classic: Shrink To Fit Levi's® Blue Jeans



Guaranteed to shrink, wrinkle & fade. Rugged XX blue denim with the famous LEVI'S® fit. To be sure—look for the famous tab on the back pocket . . . only on authentic LEVI'S® jeans. The jeans that won the West.

$11.25

Pants Plus
12 N. WINOOSKI AVE.
BURLINGTON, VT.
10% off with UVM id.

"My parents sold me my Nimbus waterbed"

"When I told my parents I was gonna buy a waterbed, I expected kind of a lukewarm reaction . . . no pun intended. But mom's a nurse and she said that waterbeds had been used in hospitals for years, that the support of a waterbed eliminates pressure on the body that can cause bed sores and restrict circulation. She said a lot of patients preferred waterbeds because they were more comfortable. Then my father chimes in about how he had slept on a waterbed on a business trip a couple of years ago . . . but now he calls ahead to request one. He's even looked into getting a waterbed for the house and told me about Nimbus, cross-buckled construction, triple-protection against leaks and a 10 year guarantee. Imagine that! The same two people who thought that Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young was a law firm sold me my Nimbus Waterbed."

The Emerald City of OZ Ltd.
71 St. Paul St.
Burlington, Vermont
862-4298

Because of Nimbus... America will sleep a little easier tonight.

DAVE'S AUTOMOTIVE
ROUTE 2, WILLISTON
862-7686
FOREIGN CAR SPECIALIST
INCLUDING THE FINEST IN MICHELIN RADIAL TIRES
VW BUG BRAKE JOB $49.95
VW Beetle Exhaust Complete $29.95
COMPLETE VW ELECTRONIC FUEL INJECTION DIAGNOSTIC SERVICE

THE SPORTS SCENE

by Norm Robinson

When is a tournament not a tournament? The answers to this question are easy. The NCAA, NCIT, and the NIT, basketball tourneys.

It's no longer the best teams that compete in tournaments. Now, if you are in the right conference, you can have a so-so record and still go to a big tourney.

One questions the reasoning behind the NCAA's expansion into a 32-team field. Supposedly, it is to allow more teams a shot at the title, yet does San Diego State, with a 14-12 record deserve that opportunity, while the defending National champs, North Carolina State, doesn't even get into the playoffs?

When looking over the pairings in the first round of the NCAAs, such teams as Kansas State at 18-8, Georgetown (17-9), Oregon State (18-10), Notre Dame (18-8) and Michigan at 19-7 are entered. To be sure, these are great records, but it doesn't seem possible that these should have a shot at the national championship.

In the National Commissioners Invitational Tournament, Arizona is the only team with six losses at 20-6, while all the remaining teams have more. Drake and Purdue lead the list for poor records at 16-10. Imagine losing 10 games and still being invited to a tournament!

Things are a little better in the National Invitational Tournament. Lafayette with a 22-5 mark has the best record with most of the six squads sporting eight losses or more.

Manhatten and, St. Peter's trail the pack with 13-11 and 15-11 records respectively.

The question is, why are so many poor, or mediocre teams in post-season tournaments. As in most sports, professional or otherwise, it is money ... hard, cold cash.

Television carries many of the NCAA and NIT games regionally and some make national TV. In many schools, the money received from a network keeps their program running. It seems self-defeating however. If the caliber of play continues to drop, the importance of the tournaments will drop as well, and telecasts, with the finances, will reduce or cease.

I find it inconceivable that the 32nd team in the NCAA tourney will get past the quarter finals, let alone the finals.

The answer lies in taking the best from the East, Mideast, Midwest and West and letting them compete. The top four, no matter how many from each conference, should compete in each regional and then the top four teams in the national collide. If the Atlantic Coast Conference, or any other has three teams, as they did this year, that are capable of competing, let them compete, no matter who is left out.

As far as the other two tournaments are concerned, as their names indicate, they are invitationals. Therefore, the remaining teams that have had good seasons, yet not in the NCAA's should be invited. If a team declines, don't fill the slot with a mediocre squad, but find another capable team or else

(continued on page eight)

Speak Out!

The sports page is going to add a new dimension in the upcoming weeks, and if it is a success, it will continue.

We're going to let you – the readers – voice your opinions, complaints, or wishes in a new feature, "The Fans Speak Out."

Your letters on any sports subject, whether it is campus, state, national, or international, will be printed so your views can be heard.

If you've got a complaint, complain about it. If you disagree with someone, let us know. If you've got a question, ask it, and we will do our best to answer it.

Here is your chance to improve the Cynic and the type and quality of sports that go in. Don't pass it by.

The issue of April 4 will be the first with "The Fan Speaks Out". Just mail or drop your letters off at the Cynic office, lower Billings, by noon on Monday each week.

You will make this a success or failure! Let's hear from you!

Tennis

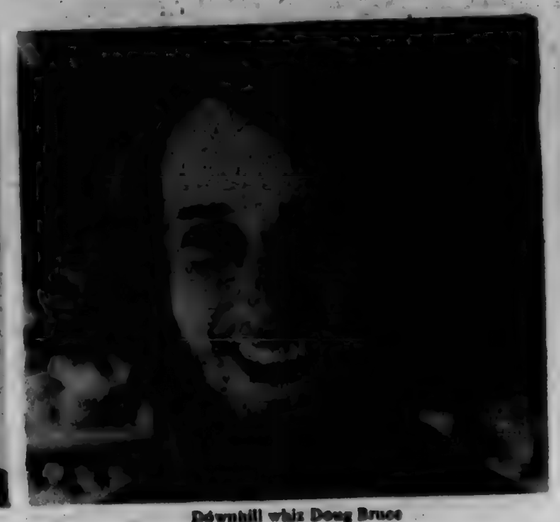
Faculty, staff, any students interested in learning this new game of paddle tennis: there is a new complex opening across from the Crosscourt Tennis Facility, Farrell Road, South Burlington.

Mr. Bob Benson, Manager of the facility, advises there will be an open house beginning March 16. Play will be free for a week.

Contact Mr. Benson at 862-5267 (business) or 864-4002 (home) for further information.

Ski Team Has Five All- Americans

Dick Erdman – a third in the slalom



Downhill whiz Doug Bruce

by Chris Brown

Each year after the National Championships the NCAA Selection Committee meets to select first and second All-American teams based on the results of that meet. The skiers named to these teams are the best in the country.

Since UVM emerged as a stong contender for national champion in 1973 we have had five individuals named to this team. From the Middlebury NCAA's in 1973 there were Petter Kongsli, Bob Cochran and Chris Brown named to the first–string All–American ski team and Dave Dodge to the second. Last year in Jackson, Wyoming, Dick Erdman made it. This year, Vermont had five skiiers selected All-American, equal to the number named from both '73 and '74.

Freshman Doug Bruce and senior co-captain Dick Erdman were named to the first string All–American team. Doug was third in the NCAA downhill this year, a notable performance especially in view of the fact that it was his first downhill competition of the season. Not to underrate the Purgatory Ski Area downhill course at the nationals this year, it should be mentioned that Doug was third in the Junior National Downhill last year. It is unfortunate for him and others who are good in that event that more downhill competitions are not held in the East. For Dick if was his second selection in two years. Starting from the first seed in the slalom, Dick finished third in that event and was selected on that basis. Last year he was second in the alpine combined.

Bill Rathbone, a junior, shining in his third NCAA championships, was named to the second team along with senior Dave Dodge and junior Stan Dunklee. Bill was fifth in the Alpine combined scoring which is based on results from the slalom and downhill. He had a late seed in both events and, not a particularly notable finish in the downhill, came back with an amazing seventh in the slalom, considering his seed, or starting position, for his outstanding combined finish.

Dave Dodge, who was fifth in the combined and fourth in the slalom as a sophomore in 1973 and named to the second team then, was fourth in the downhill this year. After missing last year due to a severe knee injury, he was named to the second team again for 1975.

Stan Dunklee, sometimes referred to as an animal or machine, was named All-American for steaming his way around the 15 kilometer NCAA cross-country course through heavy snow and thin air to a sixth place. Stan's case is somewhat unusual also in that he is an American named to the All–American team for nordic skiing. Most of the others are from Norway.

There were others on the team that except for a fall at the wrong time, a touch of the flu, or just an "off" weekend might have made it too. Among these were Petter Konsli, Morten Gaourd, Joe Lamb and Trygve Rolsoth who were with the All–Americans named to All–East team based on the total year's performance.

UVM SPORTS

Lacrosse Club Preps For Season

by Norm Robinson

The University of Vermont's Lacrosse Club is starting its second season this weekend with a trip to New York State.

On Saturday and Sunday, the club will take on Sienna, and then move down to Long Island and stay at Dowling College for the entire week. On Monday they will face Suffolk Community College, and on Friday, Dowling will be their opponent. They will play North Country Community College on Saturday, March 29 before coming home.

Head coach Bruce Casagrande will be running double practice sessions on the days that no games are scheduled; keeping the boys busy.

The financing for the Spring trip came from the Student Association, which donated approximately $1,800; the selling of bumper stickers collected $1,000 and donations contributed more.

If you are interested in helping out the team, bumper stickers are on sale at the bookstore for one dollar.

The money raised has gone to equipment, and the majority to traveling expenses.

Coach Casagrande's salary also comes out of expenses.

Lacrosse is run just like a varsity sport. Practices, which began in January, are mandatory if you want to play. The team practices five times a week; on Monday, Wednesday, and Thursday nights and Saturday and Sunday afternoons. Once good weather rolls around, the workouts will be six days a week.

Lacrosse is much like a combination of hockey and soccer. The field is like a soccer field; 110 feet by 60 feet, with the nets approximately 20 feet from the end lines, allowing play behind the net.

The hard rubber ball is shot at six by six foot nets with sticks with a type of tight netting on the end. Much like a fish net only much more sturdy.

Ten men make up a squad. There are three attackers, three midfielders, three defenders, and a goaltender.

The attackers must stay beyond midfield, in the attacking zone; while the defenders can't go past midfield. The midfielders can go anywhere, and thus, because they run much more, are substituted almost as often as a hockey line.

Hitting is allowed. You can put your shoulder into the ball carrier and can smash his stick with yours if he has the ball.

The game is divided into four, fifteen minute quarters, with penalties being a minute-and-a-half.

Lacrosse is a fast moving game, like hockey, with set plays as in basketball Although the unknowledgeable observers may have a tough time at first, it is an easy game to pick up and follow.

The team is still in its early stages, but Casagrande, along with assistant coaches Brian Burns and Howard Martin have built a 20 game schedule with five home games.

They are: April 5-Castleton, April 19-St. Lawrence, April 21-St. Michaels, April 24-Plymouth State, April 26-New Hampshire College.

Lacrosse is an up and coming sport, and is a growing one. A good number of young men have gone out for this years team. Come out and see them in action. You may be a bit confused at first but it's an exciting and fast moving sport. You'll enjoy it!

Cross Named Coach Of The Year

The University of Vermont has another award to one of its members. Jim Cross, coach of the hockey Catamounts, has been named New England College Hockey coach of the year.

Cross was presented the Clark Hodder Award by Bill Cleary, coach at Harvard University at the New England Hockey Writers Association Dinner Tuesday night.

The Association selects the winners each year. Last year Cleary was the recipient.

Cross led the Catamounts to third place in the ECAC Division I in this, the first year in the Division.

Finishing with a 14-6 record in the Division, and 24-12 overall, Vermont surprised even the experts.

In ten years as head coach at UVM, Cross has a 164-105 won-lost record and only two ties.

In two hockey polls Vermont ends the season tied for sixth in one, and seventh in the other.

Tim O'Connell added another honor to his list, as he was named to the All-New England Hockey first team. Last week he was named to the All-American Division I hockey team.

Hockey Team Lands Six Standouts

Ranked third in the nation, the University of Vermont hockey team has landed six hopefuls for the 75-76 season.

Coach Jim Cross went to Massachusetts to pick up four of the players and one each from New York and Ontario. They are defensemen Chuck Stahlen of Rye Country Day School in Westchester County, N.Y.; Joey Oslin from Canton, Mass.; Greg Wilkie of Tewksbury High School, Mass.; and forwards Colin Ahearn of Tewksbury High School; Benjamin Lord of Lawrence Academy in Groton, Mass.; and Gord MacFarlane of Aurora, Ontario.

Stahlin plays in the New York Metropolitan League and is his team's captain and Most Valuable Player.

A member of the Junior All-American team last year, Joey Oslin is currently enrolled in Choate School in Connecticut.

Wilkie and Ahearn were a part of Tewksbury High School, which was a semifinalist in the Eastern Massachusetts Division II tournament this year. Ahearn was drafted by the New England Whalers last year as a junior while Wilkie was a Junior All-Star.

MacFarlane is touring Sweden with a Canadian All-Star team for the second year in a row. He played for the Aurora Tigers, a provincial Junior A league team in Ontario.

PFG -Schedule

PATRICK FORBUSH GUTTERSON RECREATION SCHEDULE

WEEKEND OF MARCH 21,22, 23

FRIDAY, MARCH 21

GYM – Faculty-Staff 7:00–10:30 p.m.

POOL – Faculty-Staff 7–10:30 p.m. (7–8 under 15)

TENNIS COURTS – Faculty-Staff 7–10:30 p.m.

TRACK – Faculty-Staff 7–10:30 p.m. (Track only)

SATURDAY, MARCH 22

Spring Recess – shut down

SUNDAY, MARCH 23

Spring Recess – shut down.

HANDBALL AND SQUASH COURTS: By appointment only. Call 656-3069.

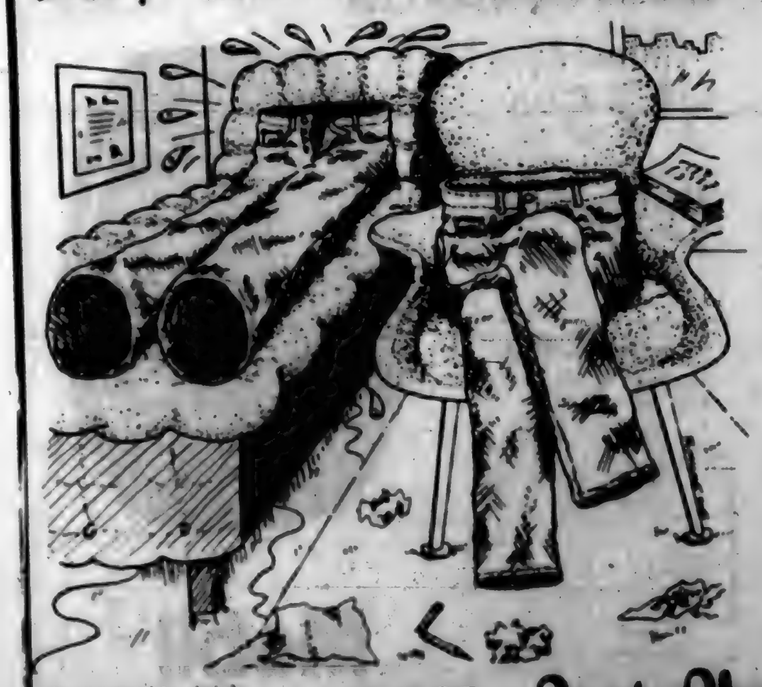
All Recreation may be superseded by varsity activities or special events.

WEEK OF MARCH 24:

Recreation for students, faculty, and staff 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. as available – when maintenance work not being performed. Wednesday, March 26, all facilities down at 3 p.m. All facilities closed to recreation Saturday and Sunday, March 29 and 30. Pool closed all week.

Appalachian
THE GAP
9 Mechanics Lane
India Imports
Leather Goods
Silver Jewelry
Baskets
Frye Boots
Levis
Landlubbbers

LEVI'S The Classic: Shrink To Fit Levi's® Blue Jeans



Guaranteed to shrink, wrinkle & fade. Rugged XX blue denim with the famous LEVI'S® fit. To be sure—look for the famous tab on the back pocket ... only on authentic LEVI'S® jeans. The jeans that won the West.

$11.25

Pants Plus
12 N. WINOOSKI AVE.
BURLINGTON, VT.
10% off with UVM id.

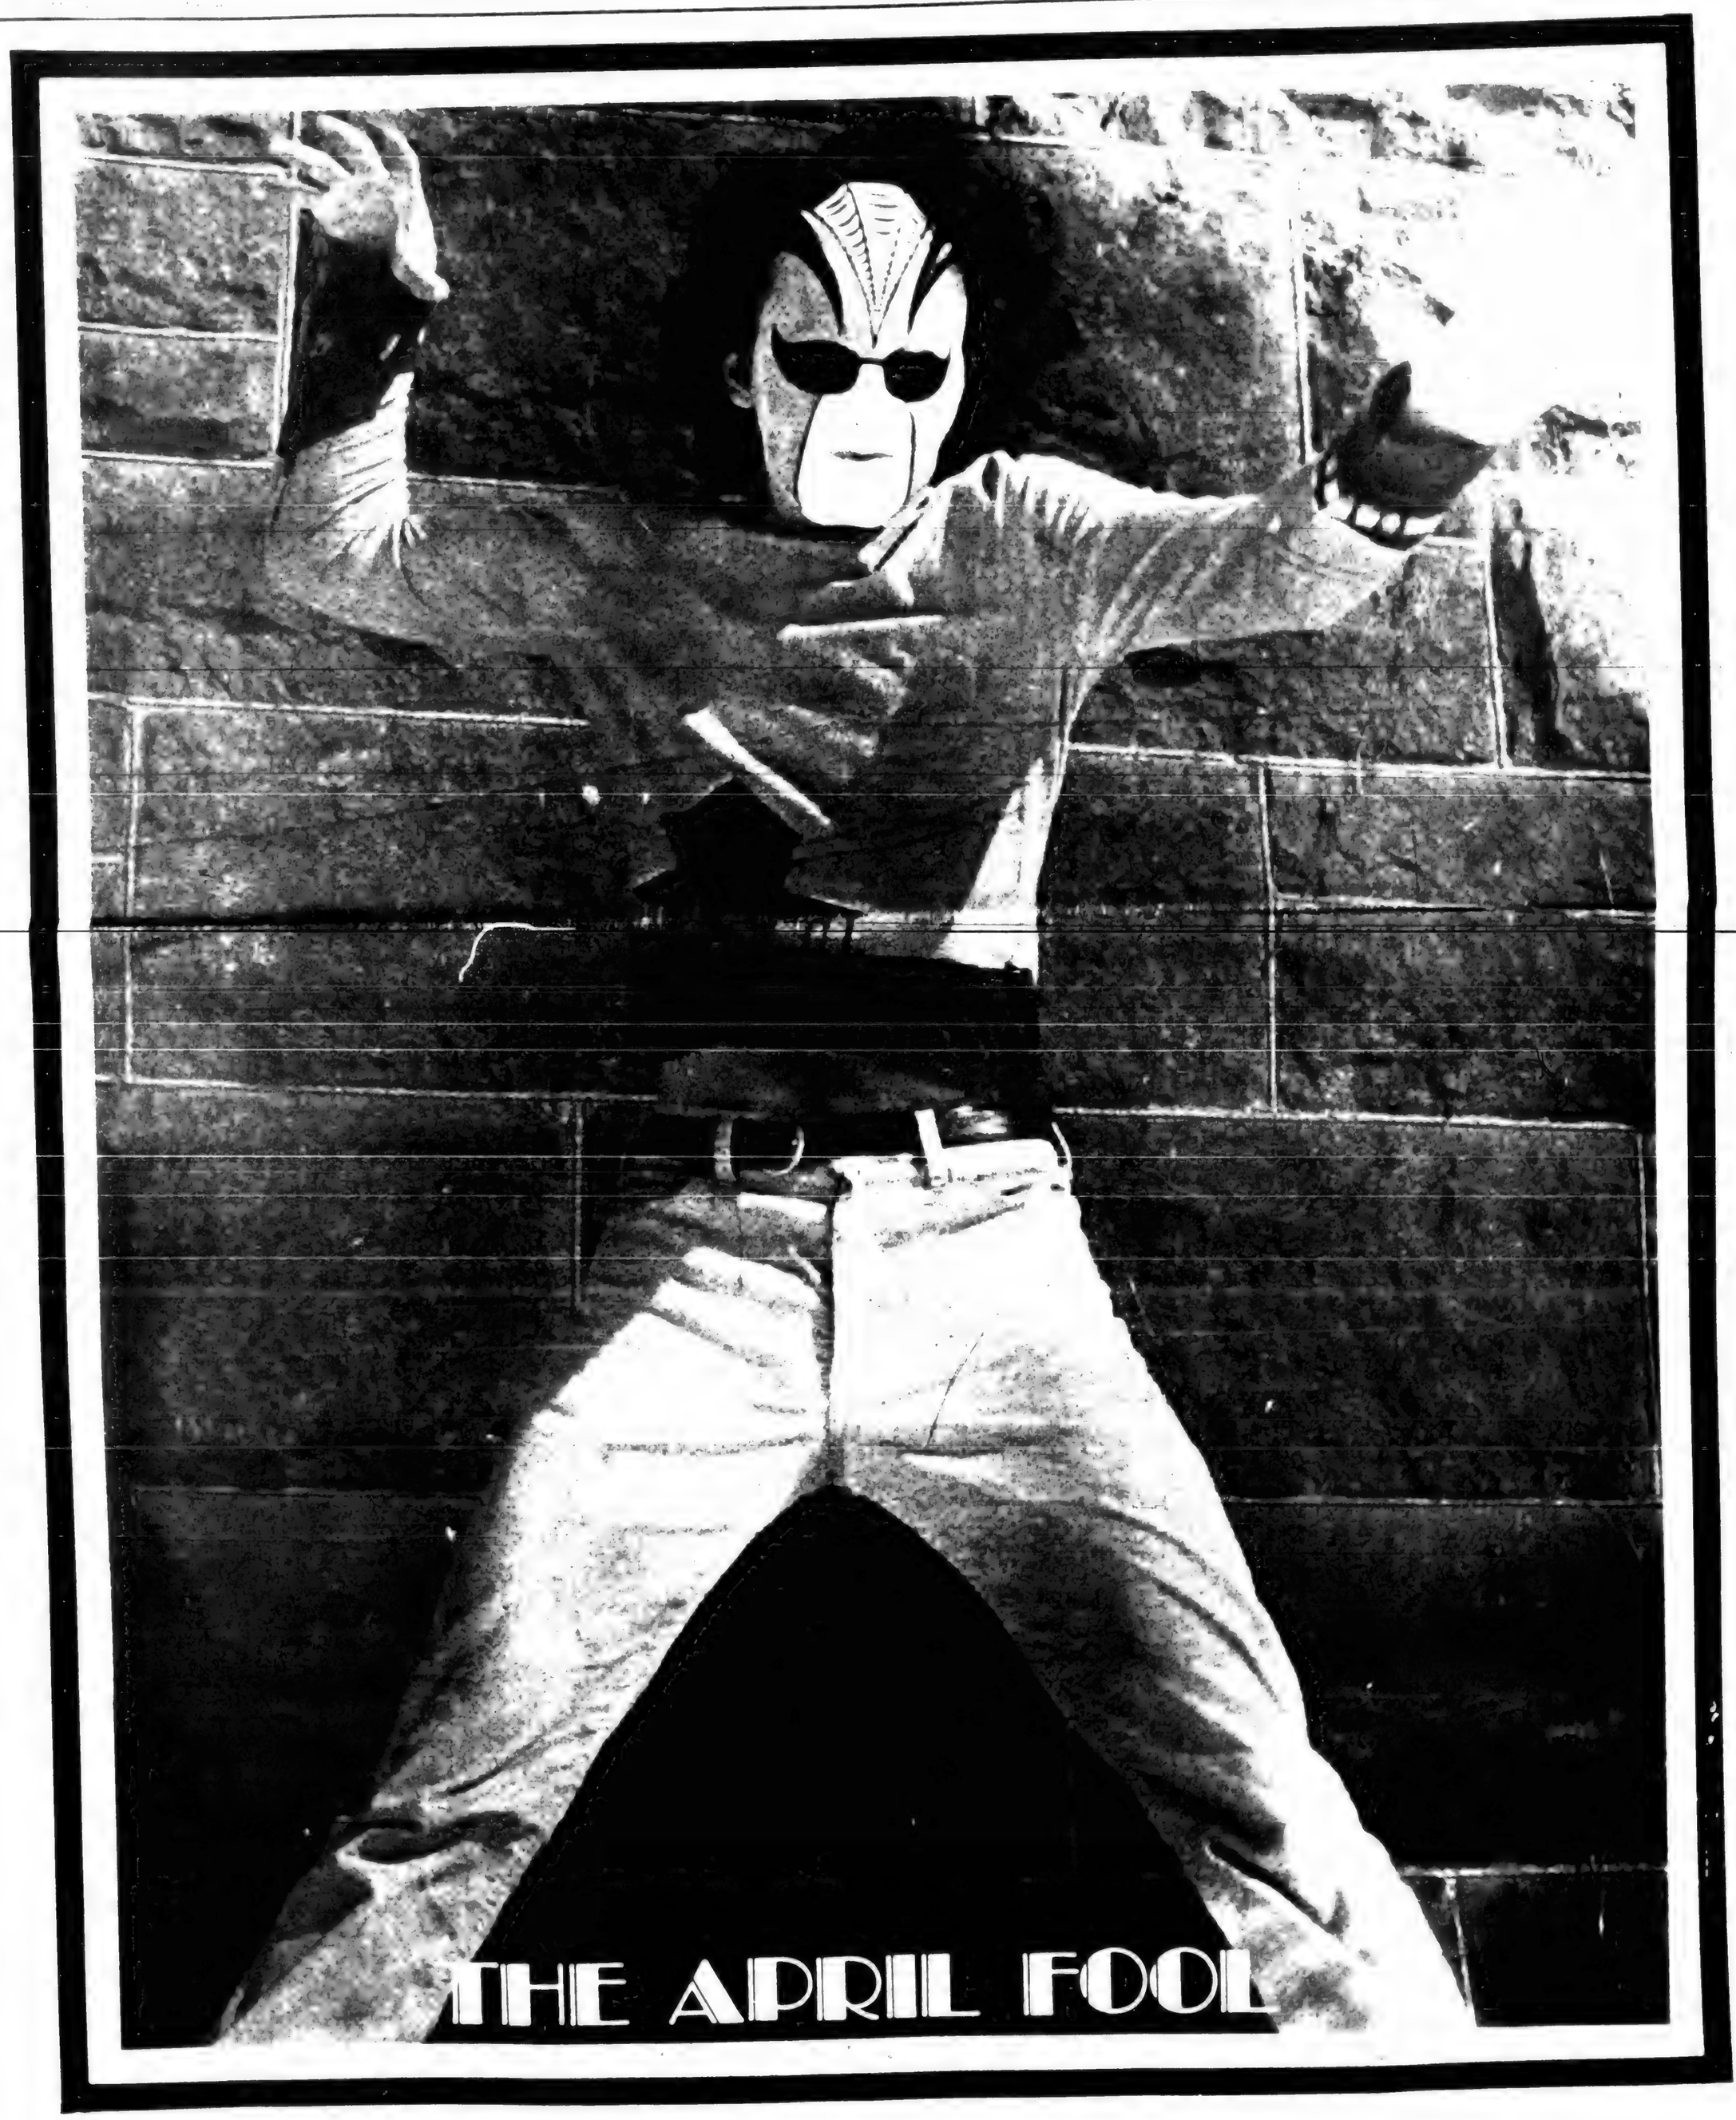
"My parents sold me my Nimbus waterbed"

"When I told my parents I was gonna buy a waterbed, I expected kind of a lukewarm reaction . . . no pun intended. But mom's a nurse and she said that waterbeds had been used in hospitals for years, that the support of a waterbed eliminates pressure on the body that can cause bed sores and restrict circulation. She said a lot of patients preferred waterbeds because they were more comfortable. Then my father chimes in about how he had slept on a waterbed on a business trip a couple of years ago . . . but now he calls ahead to request one. He's even looked into getting a waterbed for the house and told me about Nimbus, cross-buckled construction, triple-protection against leaks and a 10 year guarantee. Imagine that! The same two people who thought that Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young was a law firm sold me my Nimbus Waterbed."

The Emerald City of OZ Ltd.
71 St. Paul St.
Burlington, Vermont
862-4298

Because of Nimbus... America will sleep a little easier tonight.

DAVE'S AUTOMOTIVE
ROUTE 2, WILLISTON
862-7686
FOREIGN CAR SPECIALIST
INCLUDING THE FINEST IN MICHELIN RADIAL TIRES
VW BUG BRAKE JOB $49.95
VW Beetle Exhaust Complete $29.95
COMPLETE VW ELECTRONIC FUEL INJECTION DIAGNOSTIC SERVICE



THE APRIL FOOL

calendar annoucements

Pre-Med/Pre-Dent Meeting Why Research In Nursing

The Premedical Predental Advisory Committee is holding a meeting for all premedical predental students Tuesday April 8 [illegible] Votey 101 The purpose of the meeting will be discussing the various fields of medicine usually chosen by students preparing for a career in medicine or dentistry The meeting will also provide students with the opportunity to meet the members of the Premedical Predental Advisory Committee Members of the Advisory Committee will present their fields of specialty including some of the lesser options that their than medicine dentistry available to students majoring in those specific areas

All freshmen and sophomores are urged to attend the meeting. The information presented will be helpful in the selection of a major Upper classmen are welcome There will be a question and answer period dealing with specific concerns

On Monday April 7, Dr Eileen G. Hasselmeyer Program Director, Perinatal Biology and Infant Mortality Branch National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, will be the guest of the School of Nursing She will meet during the day with faculty and nursing service personnel and present a talk to students at 4:00 p.m. in 242 Rowell Her topic will be "Why Research in Nursing", a discussion of the application of nursing research to practice Dr Hasselmeyer, a well known nurse researcher, consultant, teacher and practitioner earned her M.A. and Ph.D degrees from New York University She has done research on premature infant behavior and the newborn

Freshman Review

REMINDER Freshmen who haven't picked up their review books may do so at the SA office in Billings Center from 4:00 to 4:00

Math Sciences Seminar

Thursday, April 3, 1975 4:10 p.m. 107 Perkins (Geology Building) Professor William I. Grosky, Assistant Professor of Information and Computer Science, Georgia Institute of Technology, Atlanta, Georgia, will speak on "Topics in Parallel Automata Theory."

The Age Of Elegance In Music

The Age of Elegance, the Baroque and Renaissance periods will meet music at its in Springfield Saturday April 5 when the University of Vermont Baroque Ensemble plays "Sonnights and Shepard's Songs and Sighs from the Age of Elegance" in the UVM Lane Series.

The [illegible] in the auditorium of Springfield High School [illegible] features six musicians of the Ensemble re-creating the music of earlier periods in the instruments for which it was composed and first performed.

One purpose of the Baroque Ensemble, formed in 1965 at UVM, is to offer programs ranging from Medieval through late Baroque music performed on instruments copied from original specimens of the period, surviving in museums around the world. Several archaic instruments will be featured in the Springfield concert.

The concert is co-sponsored by the Southeast Council on the Arts and by the Lane Series, gifts from local individuals and organizations, and proceeds from program advertising.

Admissions, $3.50 for adults and $1.50 for students, are available at various outlets in Bellows Falls, Chester, Ludlow and Springfield, and in Charlestown and Claremont, N.H., and by mail from the Southeast Council on the Arts, P.O. Box 392, Springfield, Vt.

For further information telephone 885-2767 in Springfield.

Brass Ensemble and Quintet Concert

Sunday afternoon April 6 the Robert Hull Fleming Museum, UVM is presenting a recital by the UVM Brass Ensemble and the Vermont Brass Quintet. The recital is being presented in connection with the Museum's current exhibition, Art and the Sacred.

Director Professor Clyde Wigness, the Brass Ensemble will perform a program of Renaissance, Baroque, and contemporary music. The Vermont Brass Quintet is composed of area professionals, David Brubaker and Dean Williams on trumpets, Chapin Kaynor on the horn, Professor Wigness on trombone and Forrest Newton on the tuba. The public is invited to the concert at 2:00 p.m. in the Marble Court of the Museum. Admission is free.

Auditions For Theatre Group Ltd.

Theatre Group Ltd., a professional theatre company in residence this summer at Middlebury High School, will hold local auditions on April 5 at the Charter House (opposite Congregational Church on Rte 7 north) in Middlebury from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m.

The season (from June 28 through August 19, including rehearsals) will consist of Jacques Brel, The Skin of Our Teeth, Tombeleers, a modern adaptation of G. Dini's A Servant of Two Masters, and "Fascinatin' Rhythm", a Gershwin revue.

Needed: singers, actors, musicians. Singers please bring sheet music. Bring resumes if available. Actors auditions 10-12. Singer-actors and Musicians, 12-2.

Apprenticeships and paid positions available.

Folk and Blue Grass Festival

Middlebury College Activities Board is sponsoring its first annual Folk and Blue Grass Festival and Competition to be held on May 2 and 3, 1975. Competition will be limited to the first 50 performers. A total of $300.00 in prize money will be awarded. April 20 is the deadline for competition applications. For information concerning the festival and applications, write Box 2099, Middlebury College, Middlebury, Vt. 05753.

College of Agriculture Honors Day

Students will be featured at the Honors Day observances of the College of Agriculture April 16 in the Fitzsimmons Alumni Spear Street.

The arrangements committee voted against having a featured speaker so that more time and emphasis could be given to the presentation of awards.

The group is also arranging for a catered chicken barbecue to be served by a special team of students and faculty. The price will be $3 for faculty but only $2 for students. Saea meal tickets will be honored at a rate of 40 cents each.

Student agricultural exhibits and student horse demonstrations are planned.

Honors day activities, which of course are free, will start at 4 p.m. The barbecue will be at 5 p.m. Persons attending Honors Day are under no obligation to stay for the barbecue. However, if they plan to attend the barbecue, they must buy tickets in advance. Tickets will be available from the dean's office or at locations to be announced in Hills, Carrigan, Adams, and Marsh Life Science.

The barbecue will feature half chickens, cole slaw, rolls, UVM ice cream and milk or coffee.

Royall Tyler Exhibit

The Department of Communication and Theatre, University of Vermont, is sponsoring the First Annual Exhibition of Scenery and Costume Design in the Craftsbury Room at the Royall Tyler Theater. The exhibit will run through April 18.

The Theatre Design exhibit includes the work of many college and professional designers who are currently working in Vermont theatres. Costume and Scenery designs will be accompanied by representative constructions, which were used in actual productions.

A reception honoring the artists whose work is displayed will be held on Sunday April 6, from 3 to 5 p.m. in the Craftsbury Room. The public is cordially invited to attend.

At the Fleming Museum through April 12 "Art and the Sacred" is on view in the Main Gallery. The exhibit features works from area churches and private collections assembled by UVM students in Religious Studies. On Friday a special gallery talk will be held on "Oriental Art as A Spiritual Path" at the museum.

An art display by elementary education majors is on view through April 21 on the third floor, Waterman Bldg.

Through April 18 at the Craftsbury Room, Royall Tyler Theatre a display of scenery and costume design.

Royall Tyler box office, Ext. 2094, is open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. for ticket sales for Francis Beaumont's "The Knight of the Burning Pestle" which will run April 18-20 and 24-26.

Tickets for "The Real Inspector Hound," to be performed April 9-13 at the Billings Center Apse, are on sale April 7 and 8 from 12 noon to 3 p.m. and 5 to 11 p.m., at Billings.

THURSDAY, APRIL 3

10 a.m. to 6 p.m., A Dasamar print sale will be held in Billings' Marsh Lounge through tomorrow, sponsored by the Billings Center Governing Board.

12 noon to 3 p.m., Tickets are on sale for the upcoming performance of "The Real Inspector Hound" to be performed April 9 through 13. Sales continue from 5 to 11 p.m. at the main desk, Billings, through April 11.

12 noon, the Non-Academic Employees' Council meets in Memorial Lounge, Waterman. Note that on April 17, the Council's guest will be Prof. Samuel Feitelberg, assistant to President Andrews, who will discuss unions.

3:15 p.m., The College of Arts and Sciences Spring Symposium features a wide variety of lectures, covering such topics as: "How the 'New Economics' Became 'Old Hat'" by Prof. Richard Chase, "Plate Tectonics in Geology" by Prof. Rolfe Stanley, and "Modern Trends in Cultural Anthropology" with Prof. Paul Magnarella. Memorial Lounge, Waterman is the site and refreshments will be served. The second session is slated for April 9.

4:10 p.m., A Mathematical Sciences seminar with Prof. William Grosky of the Georgia Institute of Technology will deal with the topic of "Parallel Automata Theory" in 107 Perkins - Geology Bldg.

7:30 p.m., Prof. Manuel Nunez-de-Cela of UVM's Romance Languages Dept. will speak in A-180, L/L on the Spanish Renaissance as part of the Medieval/Renaissance Program.

7:30 p.m., The Third World Organization sponsors a workshop in African dance instructed by Monta Jones. Register at 7:15 with a fee of $2 at Southwick Ballroom.

7:30 p.m., An English Majors' Evening Seminar in Old Mill's Dewey Lounge will feature Prof. Richard Sweterlitsch who will discuss "Folklore in American Literature."

8 p.m., Seminar with Alfonso Holliday, who was to have spoken on "Health Care in the Inner City" has been CANCELED.

FRIDAY, APRIL 4

Trustee committees meet on the following schedule: Buildings and Grounds, 8 a.m.; Investment, 10 a.m.; Alumni, Development and External Affairs, 12:30 p.m.; Educational Policy, 1:30 p.m.; Student Activities, 2:30 p.m.; and Finance and Budget, 3:30 p.m. All are held in Memorial Lounge, Waterman. The full board meets tomorrow.

10 a.m. to 6 p.m., concluding day of Dasamar print sale at Billings Center.

12 noon to 3 p.m., tickets are on sale in Billings' main lobby for the April 9 to 13 performance in the Apse of "The Real Inspector Hound." Sales continue from 5 to 11 p.m. at the main desk.

4 p.m., "Friday at Four" presents "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," an operetta performed by the Williston Central School and directed by Mrs. A. Reit. Admission free at Royall Tyler Theatre.

7:30 and 10 p.m., SA Films presents "My Little Chickadee" and "Abbott and Costello Meet Frankenstein," 101 Votey; admission is $1.

8 p.m. Friday until 8 a.m. Saturday, "Billings Bedlam," 12 hours of fun and games presented by the Billings Center Governing Board.

8 p.m., a gallery slide-talk will be held at the Fleming Museum in conjunction with their current show, "Art and the Sacred." Guest speaker is Dr. John Brzosposky of NYU and Cooper Union. His topic - "Oriental Art as a Spiritual Path."

SATURDAY, APRIL 5

7:30 p.m., SA Films presents "A Woman Under the Influence", 101 Votey, Admission $2., see ad this issue.

8:30 a.m., Board of Trustees meets at Memorial Lounge, Waterman Bldg (NOTE: This meeting was originally scheduled for April 19, but has been moved up)

8 p.m., UVM Jazz Band performs in a free, public concert at Ira Allen Chapel.

SUNDAY, APRIL 6

2 p.m., UVM Brass Ensemble gives a free concert in the Marble Court, Fleming Museum.

6 p.m., Church Street Center's Legislative Study Group meets, at the Center (135 Church St. - the old firehouse)

7 p.m., St. Anselm's Chapel (a coordinated effort by the Episcopal and Protestant Campus Ministry) hosts Prof. Robert Stanfield, sociology, who will discuss the relationship between his academic discipline and his participation in Christ's church. The site is St. Anselm's Chapel, Redstone Campus. This is the first in a series of four such talks by UVM professors.

MONDAY, APRIL 7

A display of artwork by Elementary Education majors is exhibited on the third floor of Waterman through April 21.

Tickets on sale for "Inspector Hound" (to be performed April 9 through 13) in Billings' main lobby. Sales continue from 5 to 11 p.m. at the main desk.

2 p.m., "Haven't been a student for a while?" If you haven't, why not attend a group meeting at the Counseling and Testing Center with Alice D. Outwater.

5 p.m., VPIRG meets, Conf. Room C, Billings Center.

7 p.m., L/L Nutrition Program hosts exercise class and nutritional counseling, 115 Commons.

4 p.m., School of Nursing presents Dr. Eileen Hasselmeyer, National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, "Why Research in Nursing," 242 Rowell Bldg.

7:30 and 9:30 p.m., SA Films presents "Claire's Knee," 101 Votey, free.

8 p.m., Cross Cultural lecture, Prof. Stanislas Staron, "Great Britain: Whither Socialism?" in D-170 L/L Center.

7:30 p.m., instruction in square and contra dancing is given at 107 Perkins Geology Bldg. for inexperienced dancers. The Burlington Scottish Dancers hold an 8:15 p.m. session for the more advanced, too. Details from Ben or Dot Stein, 863-4105.

8 p.m., the Cross Cultural program presents Prof. Stanislaw Staron, political science, who will discuss "Great Britain Whither Socialism" at D-107 Living/Learning.

TUESDAY, APRIL 9

12 noon, Alice D. Outwater leads a study habits workshop at the Counseling and Testing Center.

2 p.m., "Learning to Deal with Tension" is the theme of group meetings at the Counseling and Testing Center.

7 p.m., The Intervarsity Christian Fellowship's series of Bible discussions continues tonight at 205 So. Prospect St., Apt. 2. All are welcome.

7:15 p.m., The English Dept.'s "Shakespeare Film Series features "Macbeth" this week with Maurice Evans and Judith Anderson, shown in 101 Votey. Admission is $1.

8 p.m., "Agriculture and War" is the topic of UVM alumnus Don Luce, head of the Clergy and Laity Concerned, at 120 Commons, Living/Learning Center, presented by SA Speakers and East Asian Cultural Exchange.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 9

9 a.m., Medical Technology Student Bake Sale, while the supplies last. In the brick courtyard between Rowell and Given. Proceeds will be used in sending students to the American Society for Medical Technologist Convention in Sand Francisco in June.

12 noon, Nancy Koch leads an hour of relaxation and meditation at the Counseling and Testing Center.

12:15 p.m., The Lunch Bunch Film Series presents "In Robinsons Vermont" and "New England Folk Painter" at the Church Street Center, 135 Church St. Free.

3:15-5:30 p.m., second and concluding session of the College of Arts and Sciences' spring symposium. Come for any or all of the following talks at Memorial Lounge, Waterman Bldg. First, Profs. Thomas Leinbach and Aulis Lind will discuss "The New Geography." "History from the Bottom Up" is the topic of Prof. Susan Jackson of the history department, and "Two Germanys or One?" is the question to be posed by Prof. David Scrase of the German department. All talks are under the general heading of "New Interests and Directions," the topic of the spring symposium.

4 p.m., "Tertulia," an informal gathering of students, faculty and staff interested in speaking Spanish (all levels of ability welcome). Place is the Hispanic Apts., third floor, Bldg D., Living/Learning.

7 p.m., Black Educators hold a meeting at the President's Dining Room, fifth floor, Waterman Bldg. Election of new officers is on the agenda.

7 p.m., Living/Learning Nutrition Program presents an exercise class and counseling in nutrition, 115 Commons, L/L. Repeated Mondays.

7:30 p.m., Outing Club meets, 305 Votey Bldg.

8 p.m., "The Real Inspector Hound," a satirical whodunit mystery, begins tonight in the Apse of Billings Center, running nightly through Sunday April 13.

8:15 p.m., second in a series of lectures examining the relevance of John Dewey's thought to work in one area of contemporary philosophy. Prof. Charles Frankel will speak to social philosophy in John Dewey Memorial Lounge, Old Mill. Prof. Frankel is a member of the Columbia University faculty.

Big Mac Shortcut

Since only one out of seventeen are keen eared enough to grasp a lyric by the third time around, and only one out of 1732 can recite the "BIG MAC" chorus. Here's a short cut. Pronounce it all in one word: "Twoallbeefpatties specialsaucelettucecheese picklesonionsonasesameseed-bun." Simple! No? Take a bigger breath.

Solo Cello Performance

Works of Bach, Britten and Kodaly will be performed by Earl Williams on Sunday, April 6, 3:00 p.m. at the Unitarian Church in Burlington. General admission is $2.00, students $1.00.

practically on campus

GAYNES SHOPPERS WORLD

open daily til 9 pm

gaynes pharmacy

★★ call us or stop by and check our discount prescription prices

★★ within easy walking distance of the university campus and infirmary

★★ fast, friendly prescription service

phone us: 863-4597

THE CLOG WITH THE BACK from Denmark

Men's and Ladies Sizes
JUST ARRIVED

the SKI shop, inc.
388 SHELBURNE ROAD BURLINGTON, VERMONT
862-5488

RUGBY SHIRTS ARE FOR EVERYONE

DAKINS MOUNTAIN SHOP

227 MAIN ST.

tel-864-4122

Long & Short Sleeved

BACKPACKING
MOUNTAINEERING
OUTDOOR CLOTHING

HOURS:
Mon.-Tues.-Sat. 9-6
Wed.-Thurs.-Fri. 9-9

FREE PARKING

Clydesdales At

The Eighth Annual Vermont Maple Festival will take place on April 4 [illegible] St. Albans.

One of the many featured events will be a flea market/antique show which has always been a favorite. Featured at the flea market will be antiques and collectables offered by many dealers from throughout the state and surrounding areas. The event will take place at Holy Angels School between the hours of [illegible] on April 5 and 6. Admission will be 50 cents. Persons wishing additional information may contact the [illegible] Hudson at [illegible].

Horses are an important part of the Vermont Maple [illegible] English and

Don Luce

Don Luce, a native Vermonter and alumnus of UVM will be visiting Burlington on April [illegible]. Don Luce is a journalist agronomist, and is presently director of Clergy and Laity Concerned. Mr. Luce has spent many years in Vietnam, speaks fluent Vietnamese and has an indepth understanding of the Vietnamese people. In 1970 Don Luce made world headlines when he, along with two other congressmen discovered the notorious tiger cages in one of South Vietnam's largest prisons. He later formed the Indo China Mobile Education Project that traveled around the U.S. informing the American people about the Vietnamese [illegible] Magazine has said of him: "Don Luce is to the South Vietnamese what Ralph Nader is to General Motors."

Monday, April 7, 6:40 p.m. "An Evening with Don Luce." Potluck supper. Don Luce will share his recent ecumenical visit to Vietnam and his [illegible] present politics. Baptist Church, Street.

Tuesday, April [illegible] Agriculture [illegible] Luce will relate [illegible] of the Vietnam [illegible] the war, [illegible] relationship to [illegible] problem. At 20

Renaissanc

A three day interdisciplinary Renaissance Symposium, including concerts, lectures, an art show, [illegible] held jointly at UVM and St. Michael's College on 10-12 April.

Renaissance history, technology, aesthetics, and literature will be discussed by Professors Louis Martz of Yale, Walter Davis of Notre Dame, John Olin of Fordham and Thomas Settle of Brooklyn Poly. In addition all four guest scholars will be available for informal discussion with interested students and faculty on Friday afternoon, April 11.

The Sym [illegible] Thursday, Michael's w visiting sch a concert [illegible] by the [illegible] Friday, [illegible] Fleming's featuring medieval style artwo

Then a me banquet at [illegible] in fifth floo over coffee of the mea UVM Bard last there Renaiss

St. Anselm's Ch

Sunday, 7 p.m., Choir, in the Chapel.

Sunday, 7 p.m., Associate Professor Robert Stanfield will speak.

Monday, 7:15 p.m. Inquirers' Class, the topic for April is "Prayer."

SERVICES

Sunday, 9 a.m. Holy Eucharist with sermon; 5 p.m., Evening Prayer.

Tuesday night, 10 p.m. Holy Eucharist.

Monday through Friday, Morning Prayer, 7:15 a.m., Evening Prayer, 5:00 p.m.

ANNOUNCING: A Program of Sunday night presentations at St. Anselm's Chapel, Redstone Campus, UVM.

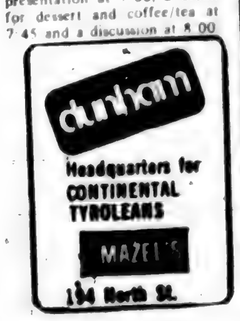
On Sunday evening, the 6th of April and continuing for the next three Sunday nights, four professors will present their thoughts concerning the relationship between their academic discipline and their participation in Christ's Church. Each will develop his thoughts according to his own perspective which is informed by his discipline and the worshipping community in which he participates.

The program will include a presentation at 7:00, a break for dessert and coffee/tea at 7:45 and a discussion at 8:00.

There will [illegible] at 8:30 fo move on [illegible] things, bu to continu encourage We are following April 6, Robert S April 2 Schmokel Assistant Bucke. C be announ

This opportuni in anothe urged t meeting participa sense perspec unity welcome of them interest t

Presen Chapel, the Epi ministr Appleya Jean Re



durham

Headquarters for CONTINENTAL TYROLEARS

MAZEL'S

134 North St.

Clydesdales At Maple Festival

The Eighth Annual Vermont Maple Festival will take place on April 4, 5 and 6 in St Albans.

One of the many featured events will be a flea market antique show which has always been a favorite. Featured at the flea market will be antiques and collectables offered by many dealers from throughout the state and surrounding areas. The event will take place at Holy Angels School between the hours of 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. on April 5 and 6. Admission will be 50 cents. Persons wishing additional information may contact the chairman Ann Hudson at 524-2362.

Horses are an important part of the Vermont Maple Festival. The Budweiser Clydesdales will be making a return appearance at the Festival. They will be stabled for the weekend at the Northwest Riding and Driving Club located on Vermont Route 104. The Clydesdales will be at the Highgate Shopping Plaza for the Kiddie Parade on Saturday, at 10 a.m. They will be participating in the featured grand festival parade on Sunday afternoon at 2 p.m. along with the Morgan Horses.

A Morgan stallion will lead the parade and following the parade will be featured in a demonstration at Taylor Park. There will be a demonstration of English and Western Riding and Driving. The exhibition will feature different aged horses in various stages of training. A commentator will be present to tell about the history of the breed and the history of the particular horses involved.

Throughout the Maple Festival weekend there will be an Arts and Crafts show at St Albans City Hall. There will be a variety of arts and crafts both on display and for sale. All will be produced by individual craftsmen from the greater Vermont area.

Other attractions for the Vermont Maple Festival include an Art Show, Saturday, Kiddee Parade, Wood Chopping Exhibitions, and much more.

The Exchange

Stealing Clothes! What Next

by Andrea Lentonen '75
Alice D. Outwater Counseling and Testing

A piece of advice that is foremost in the instruction books for scoutmasters is "never do for a boy what a boy can do for himself." This week's EXCHANGE sheets seem just about evenly divided between what students can do for themselves and what UVM can do for the students. One young man feels that smoking in classes is upsetting. It is, and it is also against the rules we've discovered! The same student suggests keeping windows and firedoors closed. They can be.... but really... can we expect UVM to do this behind each student or can they act as if UVM is their home and take care of it themselves?

Another student walked into the Laundry room at Mills and lamented over clothes strewn about and even hanging out of the dryers. She said a 'plastic laundry basket was stolen, also three pairs of jeans were lifted from a dryer (not by the owner). Good heavens, you KNOW how costly they are– a recent ad in Paris reads 'invest wisely, Levis $17. new, $30 used.' She goes on to say, "Can you believe that students who are going to be doctors, lawyers, teachers, etc. – trustworthy citizens supposedly, are going around stealing other's clothes?" O.K. the laundry is provided and surely students are capable of keeping it in order. Can you imagine Captain Scott, of Security, over there counting flowered panties, slips and other unmentionables as they come out of the dryers? The same student observes that the doors and windows of HAM are being broken. "If a door is locked, don't kick it in – PLEASE." She rightly pointed out the breakage can only result in higher costs for everyone. Clocks are asked for in each classroom. This is most important but when the clocks are broken as several were recently in Votey, can we expect tuitions and taxpayers to replace them each year. More student responsibility in these areas would be an obvious solution, so the damage isn't done initially.

There were more inquiries and suggestions about the add–drop situation. I learned that the UVM Senate is most concerned about this and a new policy is being formed so that perhaps the possibility of adding or dropping courses can be extended provided the instructor and department concur. It is a tough problem that the faculty faces and hopefully some balance will be drawn between convenience and scholarly discipline. This has been adjusted from year to year and the optimum solution has not yet been found.

Keep your comments coming; you brighten our days! Fill out the EXCHANGE sheets, or call x-2058.–We hope your mid-terms went successfully.

Don Luce Visits UVM

Don Luce, a native Vermonter, and alumni of UVM will be visiting Burlington on April 7, 8, 9. Don Luce is a journalist, agronomist, and is presently director of Clergy and Laity Concerned. Mr. Luce has spent many years in Vietnam, speaks fluent Vietnamese and has an indepth understanding of the Vietnamese people. In 1970, Don Luce made world headlines when he, along with two other congressmen, discovered the notorious tiger cages in one of South Vietnam's largest prisons. He later formed the Indo-China Mobile Education Project that traveled around the U.S. informing the American people about the Vietnamese. Time Magazine has said of him, "Don Luce is to the South Vietnamese what Ralph Nader is to General Motors."

Monday, April 7, 6:30 p.m. "An Evening with Don Luce" Potluck supper. Don Luce will share his recent ecumenical visit to Vietnam (short film) and his insights into the present political situation. First Baptist Church, 81 St. Paul Street.

Tuesday April 8, 8:00 p.m. "Agriculture and War" Don Luce will relate the experience of the Vietnamese throughout the war, specifically in relationship to the world food problem. 120 Livine/Learning Center.

Don Luce will spend the three days here at the four Burlington High Schools in seminars and workshops. This is being sponsored by AFSC, SA Speakers' Bureau, East Asian Cultural Exchange, Center For World Education UVM. For further information, call Amy Demarest at 862-7860.

Martin Sheen At UVM

A special seminar will be held with actor Martin Sheen in Room 103, Rowell, at 4:30 p.m. on Monday, April 7. Everyone is invited. Film clips of his performance in The Badlands and other recent films will be presented, followed by a question and answer discussion.

Martin Sheen is currently starring in The Badlands, which is scheduled to begin its Vermont run at the Flynn Theatre on April 9. He has also received critical acclaim in the title role of the The Execution of Private Slovak, seen on NBC-TV last spring. In addition, Mr. Sheen has portrayed Bobby Kennedy in Missles of October and has many other credits in TV, stage and screen.

For more information concerning the actor's visit, contact Dr. Worden, Department of Communication and Theatre.

Life Guard Positions Available

HEAD LIFE GUARD POSITION: Interviewing will take place during April for the position of UVM head lifeguard for the academic year 1975-76. Students holding current certification in WSI and First Aid may apply by submitting a typed resume, including: name, address, phone; previous aquatic and safety training; aquatic and safety certifications with date received; professional experience; two references (one from UVM).

Please apply to: Miss Sandra Farrell, Southwick Building, by Friday, April 11. Interviews will be scheduled thereafter. For further information, call 656-3240.

LIFE GUARD POSITION: Applications will be accepted through April 15th for life guard positions at the UVM pool for the academic year 1975-76. Any student currently certified in WSI and First Aid may apply by submitting the following information in typed form: name, address, phone; training and certifications with date and place received; experience in guarding and/or teaching; one reference.

Please apply to: Miss Sandra Farrell, Southwick Building. Pool sessions will be scheduled later in April. For further information, call 656-3240.

GI Bill Educates Vets

Veterans and military service personnel who dropped out of high school will benefit from recent GI Bill increases when they enroll in "catch up" training program, the Veterans Administration reported today.

Educational allowances averaging 23 per cent higher are now payable to Vietnam-era veterans who take advantage of a unique provision permitting them to complete high school or refresher courses and not have the payments charged against their basic GI Bill entitlement. Nearly 650,000 educationally disadvantaged veterans have used the GI Bill of whom 390,000 have used "free" time, according to VA.

A single veteran enrolled in the program full time receives $270 monthly. Rates are higher with dependents.

Persons eligible for "catch up" benefits include anyone who did not complete four years of high school or who does not have an equivalency certificate. High school graduates may also use the program if they need additional courses to qualify for higher education.

VA officials cite several reasons for growing interests in the "free entitlement" provision. Among these are outreach efforts by campus-based VA counselors who contact and encourage educationally disadvantaged veterans to use the program. The obvious need for higher education and training levels among job seekers is also considered an important factor.

Veterans interested in GI Bill information are urged to contact any VA office or representatives of veterans service organizations.

Renaissance Symposium At St. Mike's

A three day, interdisciplinary Renaissance Symposium, including concerts, lectures, an art show, a banquet, and a fair, will be held jointly at UVM and St. Michael's College on 10-12 April.

Renaissance history, technology, aesthetics, and literature will be discussed by Professors Louis Martz of Yale, Walter Davis of Notre Dame, John Olin of Fordham, and Thomas Settle of Brooklyn Poly. In addition, all four guest scholars will be available for informal discussion with interested students and faculty on Friday afternoon, April 11.

The Symposium begins on Thursday, the 10th, at St. Michael's with a reception for visiting scholars, a lecture, and a concert of Renaissance music by the KMC Chorale. On Friday, UVM will hold a similar reception at the Fleming's Marble Court, featuring a collection of medieval and Renaissance style artwork by Vermonters.

Then a medieval Rehaissance banquet at Living/Learning will include roast suckling pig and, over coffee after the main part of the meal, a concert by the UVM Baroque Ensemble. At last there will be a lecture on Renaissance arts and technology.

Saturday will offer two lectures on English Renaissance literature, one at St. Michael's and one at UVM. Beginning at noon, the medieval/Renaissance Fair will take over the proceedings at UVM, with dancers, swordsmen, jugglers, minstrels, medieval plays, and booths selling food and crafts.

All events are free and open to everyone. However, the banquet–concert on Friday costs $5 per person. In addition, Professor James Howe, English, would like to know as early as possible who plans to attend the banquet, so that there will be time to order a sufficient number of suckling pigs.

For further information about any aspect of the Symposium, contact Professor Howe at his office, 309 Old Mill, or by phone, ext. 3056.

St. Anselm's Chapel

Sunday, 7 p.m., Choir, in the Chapel

Sunday, 7 p.m., Associate Professor Robert Stanfield will speak.

Monday, 7:15 p.m. Inquirers' Class the topic for April is "Prayer."

SERVICES

Sunday, 9 a.m., Holy Eucharist with sermon. 5 p.m., Evening Prayer.

Tuesday night, 10 p.m., Holy Eucharist.

Monday through Friday, Morning Prayer, 7:15 a.m., Evening Prayer, 5:00 p.m.

ANNOUNCING A Program of Sunday night presentations at St. Anselm's Chapel, Redstone Campus, UVM.

On Sunday evening, the 6th of April and continuing for the next three Sunday nights, four professors will present their thoughts concerning the relationship between their academic discipline and their participation in Christ's Church. Each will develop his thoughts according to his own perspective which is informed by his discipline and the worshipping community in which he participates.

The program will include a presentation at 7:00, a break for dessert and coffee/tea at 7:45 and a discussion at 8:00. There will be a formal rap-up at 8:30 for those who need to move on to bigger and better things, but anyone who wishes to continue the discussion, is encouraged to do so.

We are fortunate to have the following persons presenting: April 6, Associate Professor Robert Stanfield, Sociology; April 20, Professor Wolfe Schmokel, History; April 13, Assistant Professor David Bucke, Geology; April 27, to be announced.

This is an excellent opportunity to see one another in another dimension. You are urged to attend all four meetings for we hope as participants, you will develop a sense of both distinct perspectives and a certain unity. However, please feel welcome to come to any one of them which is of special interest to you.

Presented by St. Anselm's Chapel, a coordinated effort by the Episcopal and Protestant ministries. Chaplain Jon Appleyard (656-3883) and Ms. Jean Reidel (658-2790).

ETV Auction Has Lots To Offer

Things are really hopping at the Vermont Educational Television studios in Winooski. "The Auction," Vermont's ETV's fund raiser to beat all fund raisers, is well underway, with new merchandise, antiques, art, and special items pouring in every day.

The auction will be on the air April 10-13, from 6 p.m. to midnight with a vast variety of items ranging from a key ring from Bob Hope to a Farnham ultra-feeder to 24 quarts of motor oil to a tree to gift certificates galore.

"Go-getters," volunteers who are soliciting merchandise from merchants throughout Vermont, northeastern New York and the Montreal area, have had great success and plan to continue working through March.

Parties of all sizes will be a special feature people may want to plan to bid on. They range in size from an "Upstairs, Downstairs" reception for up to 100 in a Victorian mansion, to an old fashioned picnic by a pond with a beautiful view of Mt. Mansfield, to dinner for two gift certificates at restaurants from southern Vermont to Montreal.

Among travel items there are a week in Texas at the Lakeway World of Tennis Club, an 11-day escorted motor coach tour for two to Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island from Vermont Transit, for a week for two in Barbados with round trip air fare out of Montreal from Air Canada.

There are things for the outdoorsman, too. Author John Bland, M.D. will take the highest bidder on a nature walk – his speciality is lichens and mosses. Or Author Ronald Rood of Lincoln will host a visit in the country. There's also sport equipment, including a Slazenger tennis racquet, a woman's snowmobile suit, and a bowling ball, to name a few.

For those with a passion for celebrities, Vermont ETV volunteers have collected a number of live ones. Walter Cronkite will call the highest bidder at home for a conversation on anything. CBS Newsman and Author Dan Rather will have lunch in New York with two people and air fare is included.

Smaller celebrity items include an autographed Johnny Carson tie, a television script from the NBC show Lucas Tanner, an autographed Arthur Fiedler record with the Boston Pops, a baseball signed by the New York Yankees and a football signed by the New England Patriots.

There are plenty of "sensible" things, too, like four hours of repair labor on a car from European Auto, vinyl flooring from the Bard Home Decorating Center, an hour of therapy for an overweight person and 20 pairs of tire chains from the Champion Cable Co. of Swanton.

There are a lot of items that would make excellent surprises for children. UVM hockey team members will play street hockey with a neighborhood team, Michael Belenky and Troupe will present a mini-circus for a child's birthday party and F.W. Woolworth has donated an electric child's organ.

This is really just a small selection of the more than a thousand items that will be up for auction April 10 to 13.

Vermont ETV relies on the support of its viewers. The auction is sure to be entertaining for the whole family but more importantly, it will keep ETV on the air with the programs so many people enjoy.

Hillel

HILLEL

There will be a Sunday Morning Fireside Brunch, April 6 at 11 a.m. The topic of discussion following the Brunch will be "the meaning of Jerusalem to Christianity." The discussion will be led by Prof. Kahn.

Cynic Photo Contest

The CYNIC announces the Fourth Annual CYNIC photography Contest. The rules are as follows:

1. The contest is open to all students of the University of Vermont who are amateurs. (Amateurs will be considered those people who do not support themselves by taking pictures.)
2. The pictures will be divided into the three following catagories: faces, landscaping, and other subjects. The category of other subjects will include any picture not included in the catagories of faces and landscapes.
3. All photographs will be black and white and will be approximately 8 X 10 inches. There is no limit to the number of photographs that each photographer may submit.
4. The picture submitted will be the property of the Vermont Cynic, which will have the consent of the photographer to publish them in the newspaper.
5. The Vermont Cynic has the right to request the photographer to submit a subject release form signed by those people who may appear in the photograph.
7. Pictures entered in the Fourth Annual Cynic Photography Contest could not have been entered in any other photography contest sponsored by the Cynic.
8. Photographs will be judged on print quality and composition by a board of judges.
9. Judges will be announced in next week's issue.
10. All photographs should be placed in the Cynic office or the Cynic box at the main desk in Billings Center.
11. The photographer's name, address, and telephone number should be lightly printed in pencil on the back of each photograph submitted, along with a title, if any.
12. Deadline for entries will be April 10, 1975.
13. One winner will be chosen from each category and the winners will be announced in the April 17, issue of the Cynic.
14. The winner in each catagory will receive $25.00.
15. All questions should be referred directly to the Cynic Office.

Creative Writing Contest

Deadline: Thursday, April 10, 1975 12 Noon

Rules

1. Three categories - short story, essay and poetry
2. All UVM students, full and part time, may enter.
3. All entries must be typed, double spaced.
4. All entries to be handed in to Cynic office with name and address on separate paper.
5. Limit of 15 pages on short story, 7 pages for essay.
6. Judges will be announced in next week's issue.
7. Winners will be announced in the issue of April 24, 1975.
8. First prize in each catagory: $25.00

Judges Announced

The judges for the Cynic Creative Writing Contest are: Kenneth Rothwell – Chairman of the English Department; Mark Jane Dickerson – English Department; Alan Broughton – English Department.

The judges for the Cynic Photography Contest are: Wynn Gold – SPS; Dick Lew – SPS.

Total.
The lazy way to take care of your contact lenses.

You may not even be lazy. Just very busy. Who has time for a solution to wet contacts, another for soaking, still another to clean them and maybe one for cushioning? It gets pretty complicated to say nothing of the expense.

Now there's Total® The all-in-one contact lens solution that does it all. Total® wets, soaks, cleans and cushions your contacts. And you only have to use a single solution.

Try Total® See how much more comfortable your contact lenses can be. And cleaner. And a lot easier to use.

There are two good ways to buy Total®—the 2 oz. size and the 4 oz. size. Total® 2 oz. has a free, mirrored lens storage case, and the new economy 4 oz. size saves you 25%.

Total® is available at the campus bookstore or your local drugstore.

And we're so sure you'll like Total® that we'll give you your second bottle free. Just send a Total® boxtop with your name, address and college name to:

Total-Allergan Pharmaceuticals
2525 Dupont Drive
Irvine, California 92664
(Limit one per person
Offer expires
July 31 1975)

Total® makes contact lenses easier.

UNIVERSITY STORE

UNIVERSITY YEAR FOR ACTION (U.Y.A.)
APPLICATIONS NOW BEING ACCEPTED!
AVAILABLE AT: The Office of Volunteer Programs
Mansfield House
656-2062
STOP IN FOR INFORMATION AND U.Y.A. PRELIMINARY INTERVIEWS

durham
Headquarters for CONTINENTAL TYROLEANS
MAZEL
184 North St.

news

UVM Students Feeling Shitty

by Gorko T. Moose

The old gumball machine joke which cites the author of Run to the Outhouse as being the notable Will E. Maykit, is about as humorous as the condition that caused the poor soul to bolt for the nearest water closet in the first place. Unfortunate for many UVM students in the last couple of weeks, Will has not been the only one on the run.

The cause for the recent surge of stomach cramped dashes to relieve the runs has not yet been confirmed. Researchers in the sociology department believe in the possibility that it is this year's college fad invention, noting that case studies showed a high degree of spontaneity in students when leaving for the bathroom. Members of the medical community are still working hard on the matter, though no information has been received yet from their Florida convention.

The consequences manifested by the problem have taken several dimensions. Use of Billings Center's facilities has risen three fold in the last week before vacation. Panicky waiting lines for stall space has been observed in several dormitories. And there seems to be a sudden urgency among those running in the halls of Waterman.

Despite the late arrival of students to and sudden departure from classes, most class sessions have not been too disrupted. One not so fortunate professor did have to cancel one class...via messenger from the john.

There has been some conjecture that students are suffering from so called "Green Death", a condition of stomach misery from eating SAGY (thymes with boggy) food. A spokesman for the food service said he doubted that the food was directly responsible, though the possibility of a communicative disease spreading from the kitchen was not impossible. Exact figures for the number of stomach cramp sufferers have not yet been produced, but the apparent percentage of victims seems quite large. So large in fact, that several steps have been taken to help "relieve" matters.

—New bright orange directing signs are to be installed in all buildings marking the fastest routes to respective bathrooms.

Billings Centr is now waiting for six new Standard toilets to help reduce standing room only conditions during rush hours. One compassionate dining hall manager innovatively installed a Kaopectate tap on the milk dispenser. Last reports were that 27 gallons had already passed through the dispenser.

Hopefully, the week vacation provided ample time for most of the afflicted to recuperate from their woes. Those still to get it will perhaps be a bit consoled to know that they are not the only ones feeling so shitty (sorry, I couldn't resist.)

Florida Mobbing Sends Sunshine State Sailing Off Into The Atlantic

by Rennat W. Nehpets

Hundreds of thousands of sun-bathing college coeds who reclined on the chaise-lounges of Fort Lauderdale beaches were surprised and jubilant last Saturday as they watched the continental United States sink into the sunset from their "state adrift."

The Florida peninsula had broken off from the mainland Saturday afternoon, the result of a massive influx of vacationing collegians the previous week. They brought with them their portable radios, sun tan oil, surfing jams, and sun umbrellas.

"I'm surprised and jubilant," said Browning Backs, a University of Vermont journalism student. "When I heard that Florida had broken from the Union I went apeshit thinking about the legitimate excuses I had for incompletes. I didn't have to use the excuses I had been thinking up all week. Saying that I packed my sunglasses, but forgot my reading glasses, or that sharks ate my erasable bond weren't nearly as good as this one."

Professor Ignewous Sands, Geologic Specialist at Shale University, explained the occurrence in terms of his Nitell Prize winning "Broken See-Saw Theory."

"The situation in Florida is like a broken see-saw" said Sands. "Imagine the Florida border as the fulcrum of a see-saw. When people leave the peninsula it rises in the ocean, when people travel onto it, it bends downward at the fulcrum point.

"In Florida's case, it is as if a circus fat man suddenly leapt onto the high side of the see-saw and snapped it off at the fulcrum. The additional weight of those thousands of spring vacationers just snapped the state off at the border."

National and state officials have been put on emergency alert and have activated the navy in hopes of pushing the land mass back to the U.S.

Hundreds of the stranded coeds have tied their beach towels together to create a gigantic sail to stop the Navy's efforts. Placards reading "Equator or Bust" have been plastered to the Fort Lauderdale Hilton Hotel which is being used as a mast.

Other pranksters have set up mile-long rows of skulling seats along the beaches of both sides of the peninsula to propel the state still farther into the Atlantic.

Still others have solicited numbers of outboard motors in "Emergency Marine Propulsion Drives" which have been attached to the Northernmost shore of the state and are now driving it southward.

President Yerreg Dorf has called the incident "a egnarts ecnerucco." Reports have if that he is doing everything within his power to retrieve the state (including sending his hunting dogs after it), while others contradict saying the separation was the work of the CIA in an effort to raise land values for real estate owners on the nearby island of Key Biscayne.

Florida officials meanwhile have begun "Operation Umbillical Cord", an eighty-mile long cable which would keep Florida on a 'leash' until the situation could be resolved. This plan was aborted, however, when it was learned that the Carribean currents would have swung the floating state to collide with Cuba, which would send the country into the Panama Canal like a champagne cork.

"Champagne for all" has been the battle-cry in most collegian holiday crowds. Already the state liquor stores are worried about shortages at sea as the bars remain mobbed.

Many colleges have closed their doors temporarily to wait for their stowaway student bodies to return, but not one prominent New England University which led one of the newspaper's journalist's to write, "A student at UV is worth a thousand at sea." And don't you forget it.

You And Your Plant

by Ted Flanagan
Extension Garden Specialist
Plant & Soil Science Dept.

Someday someone will plant a garden with just green leaves and golden fruits and flowers - in total devotion to UVM's color scheme. Chances are your garden will have a multitude of colors - red tomatoes, purple cabbage, green beans, brown potatoes, etc., etc., and a wealth of healthy green foliage.

You may have gotten a headstart on all this by seeding some of your own vegetables indoors. Starting your own vegetable transplants has lots of advantages. Most of all, you can get a headstart on spring having healthy young plants all ready to set out in your garden the moment it's ready and frosts are gone.

Another reasons is that you can have your particular variety and not have to depend on what the local market has to offer. It's economical too; the costs of growing your own are only pennies.

Tomatoes, eggplants and peppers should be started by now. It's probably not too late yet for you'll get a good six weeks of growth before the garden is ready. Cabbages, cauliflower, broccoli and kohl-rabi would have been started some time back, but even with these, it's not too late to grow small transplants.

Keep your young transplants cool, don't overwater them and give them as much light as possible. In addition to windowlight, you may need to keep a lamp on for them so they get their full 16 hours of light. Not enough light, overwatering, too warm will make your transplants spindly. Treat them right and they'll grow stocky and dark green.

Pay Toilets

St. Louis - (Earth News) - The movement to outlaw pay toilets is striding toward another victory in Missouri. A state legislative committee has given approval to a bill that would prohibit more than half of the facilities of public restrooms in the state from being pay toilets.

The committee approved the measure over the objections of David Anderson, manager of the NICK-O-LOCK company, which distributes pay toilets. Anderson warned that pay toilets are needed to cut down on vandalism and perversion in public restrooms. He added that his company provides building managers with keys to the pay units in case of emergencies, when people don't have the money to get in.

Church Street Center's Future Shaky

by David Ryan

Cynic: Who provides funding for the Center?

Representative: The program was started by UVM essentially underwriting the program for one year. UVM agreed to guarantee our salaries, rent and a budget that included overhead and supplies. They also provided equipment, chairs and things like that. We were expected to generate income and work towards a state of self-sufficiency. There was some discrepancy about how immediate the need was to become self-sufficient. When the program was first agreed upon, there were some thoughts that we could become self-sufficient in a year. However, in meeting with a review committee, they were aware that risks must be taken in establishing a new program and that it would take some time. UVM agreed to a budget of about $20,000 for the first year.

Cynic: What programs are being offered every 6 weeks?

Representative: There are a variety of things offered. Every six weeks we offer new programs. Within each six weeks we offer 15-20 mini-courses of anywhere from 3-6 weeks duration of one meeting a week, evenings or daytime. We also offer 1 or 2 workshops every Saturday and study groups, usually about community problems, city and educational planning. There are also a number of activities such as free poetry readings, lunch-bunch film series, and legislative study groups which study key issues before the legislature. We are also constantly involved with information giving to the general public. We try to keep ourselves fully informed on all educational opportunities available and then provide it to other people in order to avoid duplication of services.

Cynic: Who is eligible to take advantage of the Center?

Representative: Anyone is eligible. There are no academic requirements and still we have a high caliber of learning. People come because they want to learn and teach because they have something to teach. The only eligibility requirement is that there is a fee attached to the mini-courses and that does exclude some people, regretably, but we try to do things at a low-cost. We have to charge because of the requirement that we become self-sufficient. The average age of the people we reach is in the mid-30's, that is, we have the ability to reach those with no other educational opportunities.

Cynic: What are the objectives of the Center?

Representative: Our objectives number about three. One was to link UVM and the Community, to bring UVM to the community and the community to UVM through a downtown, storefront center. This means to have activities here that relates to the community which people don't relate to things happening at UVM. Also, we have a lot of information that relates to UVM. People come here to get catalogs, materials and information about events. It's sort of soft-sell public relations. We also help a lot of people find their way around UVM, who to see or talk to in a department. I also see it as a learning link because it is an opportunity for instructors to teach to a different kind of population. It's also a way for people to get linked up with others that share their interests. UVM can be a very isolated community, so in that sense we are one of several other links to the community.

Secondly, we offer a stimulating range of non-credit activities. We are part of continuing education in that we must answer to continuing education. We're kind of a local, non-credit extension of this Department. Dean Phillips is very active in helping us get going and deserves a lot of credit.

Thirdly, we see ourselves in a position of addressing community needs with education. This means using education as a strategy for change. It is an opportunity for people to analyse, share and study to bring learning to bear on community problems. In this way they can be more effective citizens and move in more appropriate directions. It is a kind of citizen education function.

Cynic: Do you feel you are successful?

Representative: I feel we are. We are developing new educational targets. People are coming here that don't initially go and take a course at the University, that wouldn't try things if they didn't have

(continued on page five)

THE CORNER BOOKSTORE The CORNER BOOKSTORE The CORNER BOOKSTORE The CORNER BOOKSTORE

Zen and the Art of Motorcycle Maintenance

by Robert M. Pirsig (B8880. $2.25. Nonfiction. 416pp.)

In the summer of 1968, Robert Pirsig and his 11-year-old son set out on a motorcycle trip that would take them from Minnesota to San Francisco. The trip developed into an extraordinary journey of self-discovery for Pirsig, which he recorded in a book entitled Zen and the Art of Motorcycle Maintenance, making its Bantam paperback debut in April.

Despite the seemingly curious title for a volume which, according to the author, does not pertain to "that great body of factual information relating to orthodox Zen Buddhist practice" and is "not very factual on motorcycles, either," this 400-page "Inquiry Into Values" took the literary world by storm when it was published in hardcover last year. Critics unanimously praised it as one of the most profoundly important works of our time; George Steiner in The New Yorker went so far as to compare it to Moby Dick. It was a Book-of-the-Month Club alternate and was named one of the best books of 1974 by both Time and Newsweek.

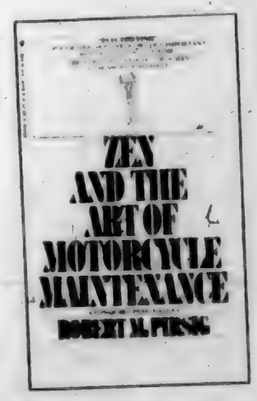
ZAMM (as it's becoming known) has already sold more than 70,000 hard-cover copies for William Morrow, and the Bantam edition, due April 1st, will have a first printing of 233,000 copies.

To add further distinction to the paperback, the cover has been given the "Selectacolor" promotion treatment, which was first introduced with Future Shock.

ZAMM is, on one level, a description of Pirsig's trip with his son and two adult friends. As they ride, however, he delivers a series of "Chautauquas"—"an old-time series of popular talks intended to edify and entertain, improve the mind and bring culture and enlightenment to the ears and thoughts of the hearer." These cover many topics, from motorcycle maintenance itself to inquiries into "what is best," the nature of truth and quality, the basis of human relationships and the philosophies of existence.

But the book moves into yet another level—an autobiographical one—at Pirsig talks about an alter ego named "Phaedrus." Phaedrus is the ghost of Pirsig's former self—a brilliant, questioning man who, under the burden of his pursuit of ideals, went mad, was institutionalized, underwent shock therapy and died. Passing through the Montana town where he once taught college, Pirsig finds himself on the verge of insanity again and is forced to confront the returning Phaedrus. In addition, he confronts his deteriorating relationship with his son, who has himself been diagnosed as suffering the beginning symptoms of mental illness.

Robert Pirsig was born in 1928 in Minneapolis, Minn. He received his B.A. in chemistry and philosophy and his M.A. in journalism from the University of Minnesota, and he studied Oriental philosophy at Benares Hindu University in India. He has for some years been a writer of technical manuals and, on the basis of Zen and the Art of Motorcycle Maintenance, has recently been awarded a Guggenheim Fellowship, to work on a new book.



Paperbacks - Main Floor

the corner bookstore

"One-stop shopping for books, stationery and art supplies"

THE CORNER BOOKSTORE The CORNER BOOKSTORE

1975 summer program of goddard college

ALTERNATE ENERGY AND AGRICULTURE

wind, water, methane, solar social ecology studies

June 2-August 22 15 credits

An intensive 12 week program in social ecology and environmental sciences, exploring alternative technologies, a no-growth economy, organic agriculture, urban decentralization, the politics of ecology, and the design and construction of experimental models for wind, solar, and methane-powered energy production.

Goodard is located in a rural Vermont community, rich in both natural and human resources, in a state noted for its progressive environmental legislation.

The summer program is directed by MURRAY BOOKCIN, author of Post Scarcity Anarchism, Our Synthetic Environment, and Limits of the City. Visiting Faculty will include outstanding national experts in the fields of alternate technology and communities such as KARL HESS, Community Technologies, SAM LOVE, Environmental Action, JOHN and NANCY TODD, founders New Alchemy Institute, WILSON CLARK, author of Energy for Survival, STEVE BAER, Zomeworks, JOHN SHUTTLEWORTH, publisher of Mother Earth News, ROBERT BERNES, Integrated Life Support Systems Labs, and STEWART BRAND, publisher of The Whole Earth Catalog.

For detailed illustrated brochure write:

D. Chodorkoff
Social Ecology Program
Goddard College Box 1E
Plainfield, Vermont 05667

Medieval/Renaissance At L/L

The Medieval/Renaissance Program in the Living/Learning Center is recruiting students now for its 1975-76 membership. Professor James Howe, English, directs the program, and urges all interested students to contact him in his English Department office, or by phone at ext. 3056.

The program is interdisciplinary and residential. Students will live in one of six suites adjoining one another, and surrounding an inner courtyard on two levels. Each student must take two courses in the Middle Ages or Renaissance, and from different departments, in the fall.

The new course, numbered English 195 and titled "Problems in the Middle Ages and the Renaissance," is to be an introduction to the different ways different disciplines approach the fulfillment of human curiosity, as well as an introduction to basic topics in the two ages. Professors from such disciplines as history, romance languages, philosophy, religion, English, and art history will demonstrate their various methods of acquiring knowledge by discussing a particular medieval or Renaissance topic. Students will do their term projects in a discipline in which they have developed competence, and under the supervision of a professor in that discipline.

The Program is designed to be a semi-immersion situation in the two ages. Students sharing a common interest but having different kinds of expertise, based on both academic majors and hobbies, live together, share common core course assignments, and share their different kinds of knowledge.

Extracurricular as well as curricular activities are encouraged. In the past year, concerts, slide shows, banquets, plays, and the coming Medieval/Renaissance Fair on April 12 are examples of student learning and enthusiasm being made into fun events. Such events get students working together, applying their academic knowledge to real situations, and sharing what they have learned with others from outside the Program.

Perhaps it should be noted that the Medieval/Renaissance Program is not a new major. Student members can, of course, take a major in European Studies, or on an individual design. However, most students pursue majors within conventional departments, and take Program-associated courses as electives or to fulfill distribution requirements. Students from as wide a variety of fields as possible are desired, in order to emphasize the Program's interdisciplinary nature.

This week's cover photograph was shot by Sherry Grancey. The mask is compliments of the Joker. Belly button by Holy Holes Inc. The new logo and litles were designed by Debbie Powell.

The Tre

by roger lewis

This paper has been prepared under the auspices of Dr. Rosebloom's Agricultural Studies Committee. As of this date, no attempt to verify this story has been attempted. In keeping with the venerable tradition of pure, theoretical research, no justification was ever demanded for the large award granted to me by a government agency who respectfully requests anonymity.

The study was to focus on the practicality of applied cactus irrigation techniques in middle America.

Although forensic agriculture is not new, this somewhat arcane and esoteric facet of the science had a rather inexplicable appeal. hence my decision to apply for the position of chief investigator. This is my story.

1 p.m., June 3rd, 1974. This is the country. A semi-arid belt of lowlands, somewhere just west of the Mississippi and just east of Lincoln, Nebraska. The exact location is not important. The morning had passed serenely enough, and I was engaged in the taking of copious notes on the terrain's vegetation.

Without warning, a torrid and unremitting sun had gassified the liquid in the cooling system of my conversation piece. It is no longer functio realize with a neither will I be
The questio
this point simply academ person would should be so.
fact that the n
only 3 miles a become increa
the story unfol
The town
Reflection,
curiously fittin
misfortune.
The town named to des existence. It Apocalypse, a due vast.
personality traditional Reflection on navigational difficult at t possibly at w
the enigmatic thriving apoca
What to d
In a semi-this, charac
more than sa
one does no time unthink rainy season wait it out considerable began the t
I had go when an bore down u

Keith Miser Speak

by Randy Jansen

Keith Miser, Assistant Dean of Students, has been recommended by a search committee to become Dean of Students subject to approval by the Trustees. In a Cynic interview, Miser talked about his new position and what it entails.

Miser feels that the Dean of Students is a "very broad position," encompassing a wide range of experiences. He especially enjoys dealing with different interest and population groups.

What are the duties of the Dean of Students? Miser's view is that he should be an "advocate for the students," representing their needs and viewpoints to the administration. He will constantly strive to achieve that goal. To many people, the Dean of Students suffers from the "missionary syndrome," because he must work with students Miser, however, finds the job "exciting," working with and solving the problems of students. Miser terms "inaccurate" the traditional impression of the Dean of Students primary role as "to control student behavior." "Only one to two percent of the Dean's time is spent with discipline," said Dr. Miser. "Most of the time is for the students."

The Dean is the manager of student services dealing with many diverse activities from orientation to direction of Residence Halls. Miser finds it necessary to have a variety of skills to cope with the divergent responsibilities of the Dean of Students.

Among those responsibilit and Testing,
S.A. Caree
Planning
Pre-Dent
Students, t that he must and support departments
"needs for future," and to meet tho
"Student vital part said Dr. Mi
the cognit
"person developm student interest encourage of attitud enhance t
the stud example, over 70
campus of learning ex very impo
education
all falls in Personnel S
Miser w office of
"be more there sho between leaders a
"I'll think that," he

Miser
his own Dean wh
the Dean former D
Miser to Due to t conclus chuckling make it

S·A· Elec

Elections for the next student association presi will be held April 15, and All students interest becoming a candidate
come to the stu
association office and pic
the necessary petition become an eligible candi
Each candidate must ob
400 student signature support their candidacy petitions will be due second week in April, in to have a candidates placed on the ballot
information later on

RESEARCH PAPERS
COLLEGIATE RESEARCH SYSTEMS

d Your Plant

on what the local market has to offer. It's economical too, the costs of growing your own are only pennies.

Tomatoes, eggplants and peppers should be started by now. It's probably not too late yet for you'll get a good six weeks of growth before the garden is ready. Cabbages, cauliflower, broccoli and kohl-rabi would have been started some time back, but even with these, it's not too late to grow small transplants.

Keep your young transplants cool, don't overwater them and give them as much light as possible. In addition to windowslight, you may need to keep a lamp on for them so they get their full 16 hours of light. Not enough light, overwatering, too warm will make your transplants spindly. Treat them right and they'll grow stocky and dark green.

Toilets

manager of the Nick-O-Lock company, which distributes pay toilets. Anderson warned that pay toilets are needed to cut down on vandalism and perversion in public restrooms. He added that his company provides building managers with keys to the pay units in case of emergencies, when people don't have the money to get in.

ce At L/L

in the two ages. Students sharing a common interest but having different kinds of expertise, based on both academic majors and hobbies, live together, share common core course assignments, and share their different kinds of knowledge.

Extracurricular as well as curricular activities are encouraged. In the past year, concerts, slide shows, banquets, plays, and the coming Medieval/Renaissance Fair on April 12 are examples of student learning and enthusiasm being made into fun events. Such events get students working together, applying their academic knowledge to real situations, and sharing what they have learned with others from outside the Program.

Perhaps it should be noted that the Medieval/Renaissance Program is not a new major. Student members can, of course, take a major in European Studies, or on an individual design. However, most students pursue majors within conventional departments, and take Program-associated courses as electives or to fulfill distribution requirements. Students from as wide a variety of fields as possible are desired, in order to emphasize the Program's interdisciplinary nature.

This week's cover photograph was shot by Sherry Grancey. The mask is compliments of the Joker. Belly button by Holy Holes Inc. The new logo and titles were designed by Debbie Powell.

The Trek To Reflection

by roger lewis

This paper has been prepared under the auspices of Dr. Rosebloom's Agricultural Studies Committee. As of this date, no attempt to verify this story has been attempted. In keeping with the venerable tradition of pure, theoretical research, no justification was ever demanded for the large award granted to me by a government agency who respectfully requests anonymity.

The study was to focus on the practicality of applied cactus irrigation techniques in middle America.

Although forensic agriculture is not new, this somewhat arcane and esoteric facet of the science had a rather inexplicable appeal, hence my decision to apply for the position of chief investigator. This is my story.

1 p.m., June 3rd, 1974. This is the country. A semi-arid tract of lowlands, somewhere just west of the Mississippi and just east of Lincoln, Nebraska. The exact location is not important. The morning had passed serenely enough, and I was engaged in the taking of copious notes on the terrain's vegetation.

Without warning, a torrid and unremitting sun had gasified the liquid in the cooling system of my conversation piece. It is no longer functional and soon, I realize with a growing dismay, neither will I be.

The question of survival at this point was more than simply academic. A reasonable person would ask why this should be so, in view of the fact that the nearest town was only 3 miles away. This should become increasingly clear as the story unfolds.

The town's name was Reflection, an appelation curiously fitting in light of my misfortune.

The town had been so named to designate its unique existence. It lay to the west Apocalypse, a town 100 miles due east, now bore the personality, features and traditional characteristics Reflection once had. Without navigational aids, it would be difficult at best, and suicide possibly at worst to seek out the enigmatic alter-ego of a thriving apocalypse.

What to do.

In a semi-arid region such as this, characterized by little more than sand and scrubbrush, one does not squander one's time unthinkingly. There is no rainy season here, I could not wait it out. Thus it was with considerable misgivings that I began the trek to Reflection.

I had gone nary 500 feet when an ennervating thirst bore down upon me. The sun, torrid and unmerciful, had given me pause. I contemplated returning, with visions of a radiator spigot teeming with re-liquified gas haunting my mind. I had not completed a 180 degree turn, however, before I remembered the 20% concentration of Zerox.

Now, if it be allowed that: W = water, Z = zerox (20%), T = turn (180 degrees), L = lethal, H = Potential hazard.

We find that: (T - Z) = 160 degrees. This conclusion results inevitably as a function of (W + Z = L. Thus. E (W + Z + L) = H which results invariably in two cognitive perceptions at variance with one another.

As I was to recall it later, these computations occurred with such rapidity in my mind that it was only with considerable effort and perseverance that I was able to elucidate the step-by-step process as I relate it to you now. Thank God for such uncanny faculties.

My problems began to compound, though not geometrically. I had lost sight of my car, thus was unable to ascertain, with the necessary precision, my direction. I remembered having walked into the sun's rays. But at what angle? Of a sudden, long forgotten remnants of school physics sent me reeling. Of course! The more direct the sun's rays, the greater the heat subsequently accummulated. Here was my answer. But how was I to determine just how direct or, for that matter, how oblique the sun's rays were at the time I had initially set out? The answer was somewhat less abstruse than I had previously imagined. Feverishly I rummaged about my shirt pocket, and yes! there it was. An unwrapped tiparillo. Its dark leaf covering would provide the clue. Everyone knows that dark objects are better than light ones for heat collection.

With sanded fingertips I carefully felt about the outside surface. And yes! there was indeed temperature variation across its surface! The surface that had been exposed to the sun!

Triumphantly, I carefully replaced the cigar and assumed my original course, all the while sneering ungraciously into the face of the gods. Yet...

My next surprise could not have been foreseen by even the most practiced of the ancient prophets.

It was now 4 p.m. and as sultry as ever. I was less than a thousand yards from my goal. On hands and knees I struggled to remain conscious. The buzzards' whistling wings overhead transposed in my

(continued on page seventeen)

Finally!!!

The Wisconsin state law that prohibits the sale of contraceptives to unmarried people has been ruled unconstitutional by a Federal court. The judges ruled that "the decision whether to become pregnant as a result of sexual intercourse is a fundamental right of women, married or unmarried," and by extension, of every man also. Wisconsin unsuccessfully argued that the sale of contraceptives to single people would indirectly violate the Wisconsin state law against fornication.

This suit was brought against Wisconsin by long time family planning activist William Baird and Wisconsin citizen Mary Extrom, who was refused non-prescription contraceptives at three Madison drug stores because she was single. This ruling has been made in a state where the state legislature has consistently turned back bills which would legalize the sale of contraceptives to single people.

More Good News

A landmark decision is expected soon in New York State that hopefully will follow the example set by California in September 1974. At that time a new law was signed into effect that permits any California retail store to sell condoms (eliminating the requirement that only licensed pharmacists be allowed to sell condoms). The new law requires that condoms be hermetically sealed, labeled with the date of manufacture and sold with instructions on their use and information on the nature and prevention of venereal disease. Manufacturers and mail order vendors must maintain records on the wholesale distribution of condoms, and recall from market any that do not meet statutory standards of quality. This law, however, does not repeal the California prohibition against the sale of condoms in vending machines.

The current New York situation is based on a 101-year-old law that restricts condom marketing to licensed pharmacists, limits the sale of condoms to persons over 16, and bans the display and advertisement of condoms.

BUT UNFORTUNATELY... 'COURT UPHOLDS BAN ON BIRTH CONTROL DISCUSSION... On December 23rd the U.S. Supreme Court affirmed a lower court decision which upheld Michigan's ban on the discussion of birth control in the public schools of that state. In this case (Mercer versus the Michigan State Board of Education), the Court upheld Michigan's law that expressly prohibits any person from offering, or giving any instruction on birth control in public schools, or from offering advice or information on the subject. How this ruling will affect the counseling process in the Michigan public schools remains an open question.

Raped, Screwed And Shafted

As a result of automation as well as a declining workload, the University must take steps to reduce our work force. A plan has been developed which appears the most equitable under the circumstances. Under the plan, older employees will be retired early, thus permitting the retention of employees who represent the future of the school.

A program to phase out older personnel by the end of the current school year via early retirement will be placed into effect immediately. The program will be known as RAPE (Retire Aged Personnel Early).

Employees who are RAPED will be given the opportunity to seek other jobs within the university community provided that while they are being RAPED, they request a review of their employment status before actual retirement takes place. This phase of the operation is called SCREW (Survey of Capabilities of Retired Early Workers).

All employees who have been RAPED and SCREWED may also apply for a final review. This will be SHAFT (Study by Higher Authority Following Termination).

Program policy dictates that employees may be RAPED once and SCREWED twice, but may get the SHAFT as many times as the university deems appropriate.

Prez Sez, "I Just Wanna See Bright Lights!"

by Fred Potter

President Edward Andrews confirmed the wild fire rumors which had been consuming a vast majority of the gossip flowing around UVM last week at a formal meeting of the newly dissolved faculty senate. "I've always loved the stage. Maybe that's why I've always looked forward to graduation day so much," remarked Andrews to President-to-be Dr. Archibald McSteelin, a resident of Grosse Point, Michigan, and president of the Chase Manhasset, Texaco United, and New Jersey Federal Banks. Andrews is to begin the folk dance circuit this summer touring with that world renounced dance group, "The Tasmanian Scallions." They are said to be masters of the ever-popular Midway Shuffle, Hivvi Setback, and Samoan Dance of the Snakes (this last one is supposedly the President's specialty).

The decision was by no means a hasty one. President Andrews has been known as a South Seas Island buff for some time. His interest in South Pacific culture is said to have been first sparked by that now classic motion picture, Krakatowa: East of Java. "It was so real, such an earthy movie," Andrews said, "and it infused in my heart a deep concern for the fate of all inferior peoples."

When asked if the current financial problems of the University had any bearing on this decision to leave, his answer was, "I just wanna see bright lights."

Keith Miser Speaks Out ... Church Street

by Randy Janson

Keith Miser, Assistant Dean of Students, has been recommended by a search committee to become Dean of Students subject to approval by the Trustees. In a Cynic interview, Miser talked about his new position and what it entails.

Miser feels that the Dean of Students is a "very broad position," encompassing a wide range of experiences. He especially enjoys dealing with different interest and population groups.

What are the duties of the Dean of Students? Miser's view of [illegible] is to be "advocate for the students," representing their needs and viewpoints to the administration. He will constantly strive to achieve that goal. To many people, the Dean of Students suffers from the "missionary syndrome," because he must work with students. Miser, however, finds the job "exciting," working with and solving the problems of students. Miser terms "inaccurate" the traditional impression of the Dean of Students' primary role as "to control student behavior." "Only one to two percent of the Dean's time is spent with discipline," said Dr. Miser. "Most of the time is for the students."

The Dean is the manager of student services dealing with many diverse activities from orientation to direction of Residence Halls. Miser finds it necessary to have a variety of skills to cope with the divergent responsibilities of the Dean of Students.

Among those responsibilities are Counseling and Testing, Residence Halls, S.A., Career Placement and Planning, Pre-Med, Pre-Dentistry, Minority Students, etc. Miser explained that he must "co-ordinate, help and support" the various departments. He assesses the "needs for students in the future," and "builds programs to meet those needs."

"Student Services are a very vital part of the University," said Dr. Miser. They "focus on the cognitive areas," to aid "personal growth and development." It is "the student as a person" that interests Miser. He also encourages "the development of attitudes and values" to enhance the formal education the student receives. For example, Miser adds, there are over 70 organizations on campus offering many varied learning experiences. "They are very important to the total education," said Miser. "This all falls in with the Student Personnel Services."

Miser wants to open up the office of the Dean in order to "be more accessible." He feels there should be more contact between himself and student leaders and student groups. "I'll think I'll be able to do that," he added.

Miser is currently fulfilling his own duties as Assistant Dean while taking on some of the Dean's duties. Dick Powers, former Dean, is helping Dr. Miser to make the transition. Due to the added work, Miser concluded the interview chuckling, "My first goal is to make it to summertime."

S·A· Elections

Elections for the next year's student association president will be held April 15, and 16. All students interested in becoming a candidate must come to the student association office and pick up the necessary petitions to become an eligible candidate. Each candidate must collect 400 student signatures to support their candidacy. The petitions will be due the second week in April, in order to have a candidates name placed on the ballot. More information later on.

Darwicenomics

by W. Aldo

dar/wic/enomics: (fr. Eng. Darwinism/wicked/economics derived from three areas within the scholastic spectrum: science, heretical aura, business)

1. Serves as the theoretical basis for the fiscal dealings and wheelings of our corporation. Several corporators have been vested with the future (members) of this community and it seems as if they are at odds with a minority of their largest investors. Due to the present financial pinch an increase in the prices of tuition, room, and board have been offered as the solutions to ease and increase the decrease in capital investments. Unfortunately Robin Hoodism expired a long time ago; eg: the rich (will) get along with their present vixenousness while the poor are placed out of the picture. However, 3,000 out of the lower 10,000 does not equal 6,000 out of the upper 50,000; thirty percent hardly equals twelve percent. In an era when food, oil, and self sacrifice have become the foundations of a new cold war, it seems only in keeping that fiscal suicide be the course of action for our demogeraztics.

Marx, Engel, and Lenin may have disagreed with Ricardo on some of their basic economic theories, but they all believed in one fundamental law of nature: many small feet can crush a few big heads.

Biologists Urge Genetic Safeguards

(CPS) – In an action rarely seen in the history of science, an international group of scientists has recommended that certain types of genetic research be funded only when safeguards are established to prevent accidents.

Specifically, the recommendation deals with experimental techniques involving injection of new genetic material into bacteria cells, called gene grafting.

Since the discovery of the technique 18 months ago, biologists have been engaged in fierce debate over whether or not safeguards should be imposed to prevent the possibility of a new strain of bacteria or virus, created by gene grafting, from escaping from a laboratory and causing hazards or death.

As a result of this concern, a committee of US biologists advocated last summer that gene-grafting experiments stop until the implications could be carefully thought out. That process was undertaken by scientists from 16 nations who met in California under the sponsorship of the U.S. National Academy of Sciences.

The consensus of the 83 U.S. and 53 foreign biologists was that the experiment should be resumed, but that careful safety standards should be established.

The methods suggested by the scientists for containment of laboratory-created bacteria and viruses ranged from procedures currently used in many hospitals to "Andromeda Strain" labs with airlocks and protective clothing.

The scientists, however, all basically agreed that research should go ahead despite the risks. "The technique is going to generate the most exciting thing in biology for the next 10 years," said Dr. Sydney Brenner of Britain's Medical Research Council.

Semester Internship Program

Semester Internship Program
District Office
Office of Representative
Elizabeth Holtzman

Each semester our office invites three students to work full-time in our District office in Brooklyn on case work, community issues and research in addition to other office responsibilities.

Our experience indicates that this semester program is more satisfactory to students and to our office than one day a week or lasting a month or six weeks or only a few days a week. The semester program can be combined with a summer internship, if the student wishes.

Because our office receives so many applications for internships it is helpful if we hear from students applying for the fall semester as early in the spring as possible. Because there are many more applicants than openings, we require a personal interview, if possible, either in New York or Washington to help us evaluate each application.

Most students join us on the basis of a work study or independent study program through which they receive some academic credit. There are no outside funds available for defraying expenses while students are in Brooklyn. Students make their own living arrangements.

Students who feel they are qualified for our internship program should send a letter and a resume to Ms. Marilyn Shapiro, Administrative Assistant, 1027 Longworth House Office Building, Washington D.C. 20515.

More Than Tuna Noodle?

Eugene, Oregon Independent researchers involved in a university project this week determined that people eat more than tuna-noodle casserole and peanut butter sandwiches in the real world. Their findings are based on extensive lab and field studies.

Variety May Not Be Spice Of Life

(CPS) – Felt frustrated lately? According to a recent study headed by Columbia University professor Amitai Etzioni, the sexual revolution has cooled down as people have found that sexual variety without affection leads to "frustration, tension and jealousy."

The study was conducted among 215 single persons living in Greenwich Village and 50 couples at Rutgers University who had lived together before getting married.

Etzioni said he [illegible] the pendulum of sexual [illegible] was now swinging back to a "new synthesis, a new middle."

Robert Kolodny of the Reproductive Biology Research Foundation, agreed with Etzioni. "We have found that a strictly mechanical, hedonistic approach to sex... is falling by the wayside," he noted.

Freshmen More "Middle Of The Road"

(Earth News) – This year's freshman class is less liberal and more middle-of-the-road than any in the past decade. At least, that's the finding of an annual poll by the American Council on Education. Based on responses from 190,000 fresmen at 364 colleges, the council reports that the percentage of first year students who call themselves liberal has dropped from 32.6 to 28 percent during the last year. The percentage of conservatives remains the same as a year ago, 13.9 percent. But the middle-of-the-road group jumped from 50.7 percent to 55.1 percent, the highest it has been in the nine-year history of the survey. Surprisingly, the survey also found that enrollment of black freshman has continued to decline after peaking at 8.7 percent in 1972. This year's figure is 7.4 percent, 15 percent below the 1972 figure.

RESEARCH PAPERS
COLLEGIATE RESEARCH SYSTEMS
(800) 351-0222 (IN CALIFORNIA (213) 477-8474)
1000 E. FERRY AVE. BLDG. SUITE 208, CAMDEN N.J. 08104

Summer Language Programmes offered in Toronto
English language courses offered in Toronto at the Scarborough College
Summer Language Institute
French, Spanish and German language courses Ancient Greek and drama courses offered in Saint-Pierre et Miquelon
French language courses offered in Mexico City
Spanish language and civilization courses enquiries
University of Toronto
School of Continuing Studies
119 St. George Street, Toronto M5S 1A9
(416) 928-2400

C.W. POST
...A BEAUTIFUL WAY TO INVEST A SUMMER
We make summer matter with a full range of undergraduate, graduate, Weekend College and Continuing Education courses on one of America's most beautiful campuses... and with special institutes and workshops, modern residence halls and our good teachers.
3 SESSIONS (day and evening):
May 21-June 20, June 23-July 25 and July 28-Aug. 29
Call or write for the Summer Bulletin.
Summer Session Office, C.W. Post Center
Long Island University
Greenvale, L.I., N.Y. 11548 • (516) 299-2431
C.W. post center
LONG ISLAND UNIVERSITY

There is only one store in this city where you can buy Earth shoes.
Many stores sell shoes that look like the Earth brand shoe, but only one sells Anne Kalso's original patented invention.
Located at:
139 BANK STREET

editorials and opinions

VERMONT CYNIC
Founded In 1883

Chief Editor ..... Elliot Freeman
Editor-in-Chief ..... Randy Jansen
Assistant Editor ..... Wyatt Kash
Managing Editor ..... Mark S. Vella
News Editor ..... Mark Sawyer
Feature Editor ..... Stephen W. Tinney
Arts Editor ..... Robert DeNike
Sports Editor ..... Norm Robinson
Copy Editor ..... Sari Brill
Advertising Manager ..... Debbie Powell

Who Cares?

Driving the backroads of the Green Mountain State this time of year, one is apt to notice the vast numbers of sap buckets hanging upon the maple trees waiting for the first sweet rushes of nature's springtime juices... who cares?

April has arrived and the promise of sunshine, warm fresh breezes and carefree living is in the air... who cares?

The earth is thawing. The rivers begin to flow again. Buds begin to swell, rebirth is upon us... who cares?

In South East Asia all hell breaks loose. In India and Africa thousands starve to death. In the Middle East a good old fashioned war is ready to start. In Harlem a family sits down to eat dog food for dinner... who cares?

The Student Association dissolves. Tuition goes up. President Andrews resigns. The hockey team wins. Board of Trustees meet. Graduation commences... who cares?

Jesus Christ returns. President Kennedy is alive and well. Lenny Bruce opens next month in Chicago. The Bomb is banned. The hungry are fed. The sick are healed. We are saved... who cares?

It is April, fools... who cares?

E.M.F.

Peter's Project

by Knut Rostad

A hearty congratulations to Peter MacAusland. After almost 12 months of battling with the administration and state legislature, it appears that the Senate will follow the House in passing Bill S. 93, and thus halting construction of the current administration-inflicted evil, the pedestrian underpass. Upon closer examination one may begin to wonder as to the reasons behind and ramifications of Peter's Project.

In a February letter to the Burlington Free Press, Peter lists five reasons for his opposition. He claims the construction is opposed by the majority of the citizens as well as being an "excessive financial obligation." Also Peter maintains that alternatives have yet to be explored, the problem clearly defined, nor justification met.

Apparently, the citizens of Chittenden County do not approve of the tunnel. I wonder how he came to the conclusion. Perhaps he is basing it on the letters-to-the-editor in the Burlington Free Press. In his February 25, 1975 "Statement of Support for Bill S. 93", Peter has conveniently gathered a few of those letters. There are thirteen of them in his report written during the Spring of 1974 and February of this year. One letter supports the tunnel while twelve voice opposition. To understand the meaningfulness of the letters, I'll quickly summarize them. Peter wrote two, while the person assisting in the preparation of his report, Scott Bauer, wrote another one. In that letter, Mr. Bauer claims that students have been opposing construction of the tunnel for one year. Are those the same students who were given the opportunity to voice their feelings before a District Environmental Commission (DEC) hearing held at the Living Learning Center on 10/2/74, because they care so much and have "voiced strong opposition"? I was a bit confused and wanted to make sure that Mr. Bauer and myself were referring to the same students. Reason being, at that October 2nd hearing, one UVM student appeared and "voiced strong opposition." Peter was there.

Of the remaining nine letters, one suggests diverting Winooski River under Rt. 2 to be crossed by a ferry, another suggests that the money would be better spent on mass transportation, a third letter proposes using a gondola, escalator, or Airforce surplus troop carrier to move students, and a fourth letter maintains: "The people who build things at college must have potatoes growing in their ears." A fifth letter suggests an overpass, while the sixth writer criticises the closing down of the Day Care Center. The seventh letter calls the tunnel a "psychoceramic (college talk for crackpot) idea." Letter number eight primarily deals with the hopeful existence of another solution, while the last letter calls for a reevaluation of priorities in this recessionary time. All of the letters oppose the construction. Some call for alternative methods. Others resort to name calling and fantacizing. Most of them display a general lack of understanding with the proposal itself, the financial arrangements involved, or the history of the project. Peter has to produce better evidence supporting his conviction of strong citizen opposition other than these nine mediocre letters.

Peter calls the tunnel an excessive financial obligation for the state of Vermont. That type of conclusion is completely subjective as it involves individual bias and preference. Using a personal opinion as basis for personal opinion may be of dubious foundation and worth.

Thirdly, Peter states that "exploration and possible implementation of alternatives have been neglected." This claim is highly disputable. He is well aware of the fact that an overpass was justifiably ruled out for many reasons. The on-grade crosswalk alternatives were examined and even recommended by the Board of Trustees in February of 1972. Unfortunately, the Burlington Planning Commission (BPC) and the DEC did not heed the Trustees recommendation, and even stipulated that one grade-separation crossing be built as a requirement for the construction of the Living Learning Center. The idea that the administration has not explored alternatives is one with a great deal of evidence challenging it.

Fourthly, if Peter maintains that the problem which is to be solved by the underpass is inadequately defined, and there is insufficient justification for the tunnel, I can only suggest that he spend some time at the crosswalk and observe the UVM style of Russian roulette. If he still insists that there is neither enough danger nor stupidity involved to produce the minimum requirement of casualties, then I only wonder where he draws the line, and how many injuries are necessary per year for sufficient justification? Perhaps what is needed is an occasional death. But, since it would most likely be the fault of a careless student, then that's just the way the cookie crumbles – because, we are college students now. We are all grown up; out of diapers and able to take care of ourselves. If we can not even cross a road by ourselves, it is our own problem. The last thing we need is administration-inflicted safety devices. But when the fateful day arrives, and the stunned parents inquire as to why such a heavily traveled road could be so inadequately regulated, I only hope that Peter is around to explain. He can take out his charts and statistics and graphically show them why there was insufficient justification for an underpass. No doubt they will understand.

The ramifications of Peter's success could prove to be interesting. Theoretically, the BPC and the DEC could close down the Living Learning Center. Both these commissions set the stipulation of a grade separation crossing as a requirement for its construction. Until now the university has shown good will in fulfilling that requirement. The passage of Bill S. 93 will dramatically change the picture. Peter states that Mr. Kirk Carter of DEC "doubted that the Living Learning Center would be closed if the underpass is not built." I hope his appraisal of that hypothetical situation is accurate. Another thought to entertain is that with the passage of Bill S. 93, the state legislature has ignored the ruling of the DEC (which required the underpass). The DEC is a commission created from Vermont's controversial environmental and land planning Bill, Act 250. By passing this Bill, the legislature has set a precedent allowing state agencies the privilege of not adhering to the guidelines of Act 250. This precedent could open the way for many an interesting court case aimed at testing the legitimacy and strength of Act 250.

Peter's alternative proposal of using fences to direct a much larger percentage of the student traffic to the crosswalk, and then having the light operate independently from the lights at the jughandle in order to be more receptive to student demand, has been repeatedly rejected by authorities within and outside the university. The complications involved in disturbing the main flow of traffic in this manner are evidentally enormous. Every study conducted has verified that fact. But Peter maintains that his idea is workable.

A slightly different perspective of the entire problem raises further questions. The traditional student-administration conflict apparently centers around student demands for more and better goods and services for less cost. Tuition is always too high, while quality education is always lacking somewhere. The 1000 student signatures supporting the halt of the tunnel construction represents a complete about-face. The students are rejecting an additional service for which they would bear none of the construction cost.

Perhaps it is commendable for the students to say 'thanks but no thanks, spend the money elsewhere,' but I wonder about the degree and seriousness of their concern for the multi-million dollar deficit that the state faces this coming fiscal year. Do they really think that some road in East Pownal should be straightened while the most heavily traveled road in the state of Vermont continues to be inadequately handled? Or is it just a widely held assumption that anything coming out of Waterman is to be considered highly suspect and probably worth confronting. Certainly recent history has provided a case in point. The "Philosophy Four" episode, tuition hikes, and unpopular cut backs such as the nursing program, football team and Day Care Center all produced student protest that may have contributed to the already skeptical student body. But, on the other hand, the honest feeling that a $550,000 tunnel is simply unnecessary may be the predominant consensus of opinion.

Which is what the whole issue boils down to: is the underpass, as the only completely safe means of crossing Main Street, necessary? The final determination will depend on the strength of Peter's argument claiming insufficient justification based on casualty figures versus the administration's assertion of desperate need which is only substantiated by a genuine concern for the well-being of the student.

Lost In The Stripes While Searching For The Stars

To the Editor:

I am presently taking two courses at the University of Vermont, they're terrible. Both are at the graduate level. The people at this level depress me very much, they just don't think through things. They rarely question anything. I rarely see students questioning the teachers' beliefs, actions, or statements. They are programmed products of our work – save – buy – use – throw-away culture. Don't think, just buy – use – Throw-away. The president said that's what is good for the economy.

Because of who I am, what I am, and how I live, I come in contact with many people. From these interactions, I feel the people of America, as a whole, are weak. (This is the reason America would lose any war, not because we don't have the "BULLET"). There is little here to develop the person, so it is not surprising. There is no individualization, no feeling of cooperation, no sense of our brotherhood.

I recently asked a cousin of mine if I could bring his set of drums with me to Vermont from Trenton, N.J. He said no, because someday, he said, he may sell them, they are financially valuable. Meanwhile they sit in an attic and remain a holder for dust, he lives in Boston.

This is one of the million examples from our lives that demonstrate to me we have been brought up to consider money as the priority, not people. (How many people in America have rooms in their houses they never use? How many families live in two or three rooms?) We strive for money, for investments, for pension plans. We are not a people for the people. We wish to help others, but we don't. We are not a community of people who share their wealth. All around me stores have 100's of basketballs on their shelves. The kids I teach have one with a thumbtack in it. My friends and I have none, we can't play.

An office here on campus has many machines which they discourage usage of, they are afraid they may be hurt or damaged. Things can't be hurt or damaged if no one uses them. If no one uses them, why have them there in the first place? Things break because people use them and that's good! It is a shame that people become so attached to material objects, that they are so afraid of having them broken. Because of this, they hide them, they cover them. Things become surrounded with hands-off signs.

There is a difference between proper usage within limits, so as to preserve it as long as possible, and never permitting something to be used. But most people in this country have lost the distinction. What a loss to all of us this is!

When I think about it, so many distinctions have been lost, so many purposes, goals, etc. have become lost or blurred.

People spend time on jobs they hate waiting for their two week vacation. People spend money on cadillacs, and don't have money for medical care. Schools are locked after 3:30. The people have numerous hassles getting the government to help us.

"Americans have got lost in the stripes while searching for the stars."

James S. Bulitt
N. Ferrisburg, Vt.

Locker Room Losses

To the Editor:

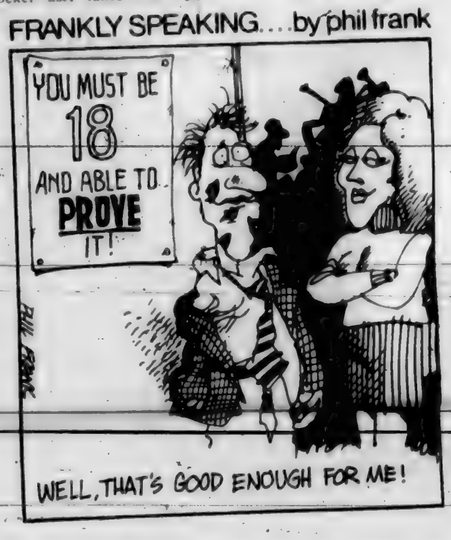
In response to the letter of Laurie Barnett, Day Matron, Women's Locker Room, Patrick Gym – a diligent attempt at smoke screening a violation of rights with insults and rationalizations. The fact remains that personal possessions were willfully seized and destroyed under the authority of Ms. Barnett, without prior publicity of intent. (Except a note on the bulletin board of the locker room itself.) How ironic she should choose the school newspaper as the vehicle for her defense!

The University claims no responsibility for locker contents. Understandably, for no such institution can be expected to protect one from fellow students. This risk the locker user takes knowingly. However, one does not expect vandalism from the very ones who issue the "protective" lockers. Nor does one realize that she is at the mercy of Ms. Barnett's arbitrary value judgements: "I feel that if the owners of these things did not care enough about them to come over to the gym and get them within a month after the beginning of the semester, then they can't have been that valuable."

In the future, I suggest Laurie Barnett devise a more valid test of the college student's "reading ability." A public announcement might awaken her to the aptitude of the student, as well as avoid a repitition of this flagrant wastefulness.

Sincerely,
Martha Raab

FRANKLY SPEAKING... by phil frank



Otto And God

by Edward Morrow Jr.

Otto trudged through the cold, dirty slush of the city totally despondent. Cars rushed by honking and threatening him. His thin jacket let the cold seep in around his waist as he walked along the sidewalk. He felt very old. He was passing an old fat woman dressed in black and holding a tamborine when he slipped in the slush and came down heavily on the wet cement with his knee.

"Jesus Christ!" he gasped in pain.

"But Jesus fills your heart with love and by his love will show you the way to true happiness." said the fat woman.

"You wouldn't lie to me would you?"

"Of course not! Ask of God and He will answer."

"Okay, It's a deal." Otto struggled to his feet.

Otto went to church that night. He sat through the entire service and bowed his head in silent prayer until the church was empty. Then he searched the church and after finding no one, went up to the altar.

"God?" he asked.

There was no reply.

"God?"

No answer. He got down on his knees.

"God?"

He lay flat on the floor kissing the foot of the altar.

"God? Are you listening?"

There was silence.

"God?"

Otto got up and turned off all the lights.

"God? Are you there? I want to ask you a question."

The only light in the church came from a small red glass candle holder which Otto had been told symbolized the presence of Jesus Christ. Otto addressed himself to it.

"God?"

No answer.

Otto looked around the church.

"God?" he asked the massive crucifix.

"God?" he asked the four walls.

His eyes fell to his feet.

"God." he signed.

"Yes?" answered his left foot.

"Are you God?" he asked his left foot.

"No, I'm your left foot." sneered his left foot. "Of course I'm God!"

"Golly."

"I thought you had a question." God asked.

"Yes I do God."

"Go on."

"What is the Secret of the Universe?"

"Grmyl urp ap."

"What do you mean?"

"Grmyl urp ap."

"Are you putting me on God."

"No. You just don't understand."

"You are omnipotent God. Tell me why I don't understand so I can learn to understand."

"That's simple: you are stupid."

"Please explain it to me God."

The lights switched on. A young priest stormed in and angrily booted him out of the church with a kick in the ass.

Otto sat where he fell in a snow bank. The wind blew snow in his face.

"Gryml urp ap?" he muttered to the ground. The ground gently heaved. Otto leaped to his feet. He ran to a telephone pole, climbed it and jumped off. Just before he hit the ground he screamed

"GRYML URP AP!"

His fall reversed. He was hurtling into the heavens. Higher and higher he went. He leveled off at ten thousand feet where he glided arms out stretched in lazy circles above the clouds.

"grymlurp ap" he breathed

He descended in a slow spiral. Otto never spoke to His foot again.

The Cynic welcomes and encourages articles, columns, and letters from all interested students, faculty, and members of the community. All material must be submitted no later than Monday noon before the Thursday of publication. Material must be signed, names will be withheld upon request. If you are interested in writing or perhaps curious about how things are done, stop in – we are downstairs at Billings Center – or call 658-4911.

VERMONT CYNIC

NEWS: Margo Howland, John MacDonald, Peter Sherwin, Jerry Weil, Dave Ryan, Peter Duquette.
FEATURE: Paul Ajarman, Paul Cilin, Carol Dufault, Mike Henry, Pam Hogarth, Andy Hunt, Sue Perkins
ARTS: Dave Mandel, Larry Seiden, Mark Seratnick, Jay Williams.
COLUMNISTS: Peter Cobb, Elliot Freeman, Ken Markovitz, Sue Perkins, Stephen Rice, Larry Seiden, Scott Skinner, Peter Campbell
PRODUCTION: Rick Barney, Ellis Clay, Sarah Clay, Beth Colleen, John Lunde, Barb Lusha.
SPORTS: Randy Briggs, Don Rose, Richard Rottkov, Pat Taves.
ADVERTISING: Katherine Bowers, Stephen Lee Brown, Sherry Grancey, Debbie Powell.
BUSINESS MANAGER: Nancy Shank.

Opinions expressed in editorials, cartoons, or columns in the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the University administration, faculty, or staff, or the State of Vermont. Opinions expressed by the columnists do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the majority of the members of the CYNIC. Editorial Board

Published yearly during the college year by the students of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College. Editorial and Business offices in the Billings Center, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone 658-4911. Deadline for notices is one week prior to date of publication.

Founded in 1883. Subscription rate $8.00 per year, single copy ten cents.

No Ka

Reprinted by permission. ©1975 The New Yorker Magazine, Inc.

Weinstein lay under the covers, staring at the depressed torpor. Outside, sheets of humid air pavement in stifling waves. The sound of traffic at this hour, and in addition to all this his bad Look at me, he thought. Fifty years old. Half a year, I will be fifty-one. Then fifty-two. Un reasoning, he could figure out his age as much a the future. So little time left, he thought, and accomplish. For one thing, he wanted to learn Adelman, his friend who used to play dreidel Rush Street, had studied driving at the Sorbon handle a car beautifully and had already driven himself. Weinstein had made a few attempts father's Chevy but kept winding up on the sidew

He had been a precocious child. An intellect he had translated the poems of T.S. Eliot into some vandals had broken into the library and t into French. And as if his high I.Q. did not isola he suffered untold injustices and persecutions religion, mostly from his parents. True, the member of the synagogue, and his mother, too never accept the fact that their son was Jewish happen?" his father asked, bewildered. My face Weinstein thought every morning as he shaved mistaken several times for Robert Redford occasion it was by a blind person. Then there his other boyhood friend. A Phi Beta Kappa ratting on the workers. Then a convert t Communist agitator. Betrayed by the Part Hollywood and became the offscreen voice cartoon mouse, Ironis.

Weinstein had toyed with the Communists a girl at Rutgers, he had moved to Moscow and Army. When he called her for a second date, sh someone else. Still, his rank of sergeant in the would hurt him later when he needed a secur order to get the free appetizer with his dinner Also, while at school he had organized some and led them in a strike over work conditions not so much the politics as the poetry of Ma got him. He was positive that underneath every one would learn the lyrics to "Ring Ding away of the state" was a phrase that had stay since his uncle's nose had withered away in S one day. What, he wondered, can be learned essence of social revolution? Only that if attempted after eating Mexican food.

The Depression shattered Weinstein's l kept his fortune under the mattress. When th the government called in all mattresses and pauper overnight. All that was left for him the window, but he lacked the nerve and of the Flatiron Building from 1930 to 1937.

"These kids with their pot and their sex, kind of orgies. Do you know what it is to for seven years? There you see life. Of looks like ants. But each year Tessie peace-made the Seder right out there on th gathered round for Passover. Oy, nephew! coming to when they have a bomb that ca than one look at Max Rifkin's daughter."

Weinstein's so-called friends had all kno House Un-American Activities Committ turned in by his own mother. Sharpstein w answering service. Weinstein had been called and admitted he had given money to the C and then added, "Oh, yes, I bought Stalin He refused to name names but said if the he would give the heights of the people meetings. In the end he panicked and, in Fifth Amendment, took the Third, which beer in Philadelphia on Sunday.

Weinstein finished shaving and got in lathered himself, while steaming water bulky backs. He thought. Here I am at some and space, taking a shower. I, Isaac Weins creatures. And [redacted] on the soap floor and rammed his head out of the towel bad week. The previous day he had got was still not over the anxiety it had cau barber had snipped indecently but soon had gone too far. Put some h unreasonably.

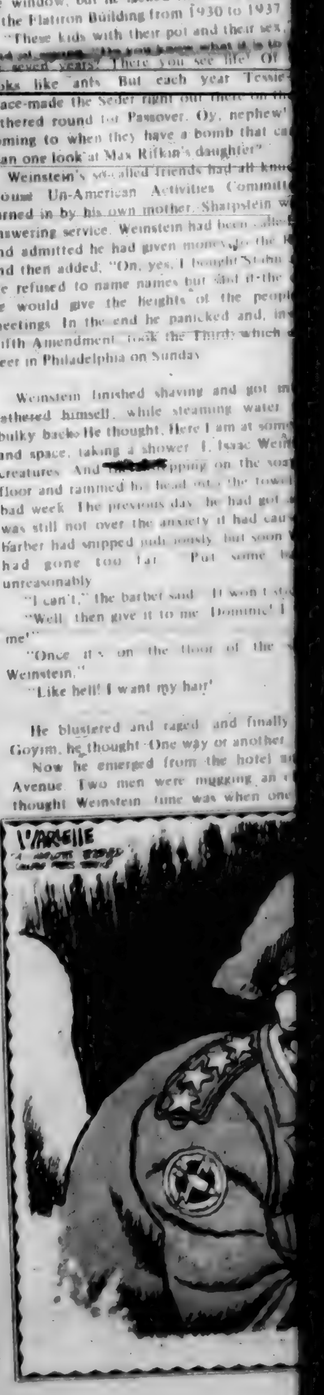
"I can't," the barber said. "I won't be "Well, then give it to me. Dominic! I me!"

"Once it's on the floor of the Weinstein."

"Like hell! I want my hair!"

He blustered and raged, and finally Goyim, he thought. One way or another Now he emerged from the hotel Avenue. Two men were mugging an thought Weinstein. Time was when one



tters to e editor

Room Losses

...However, one does not expect ...tenance from the very ones ...who cause the "protective" ...actions. Nor does one realize ...that she is at the mercy of Ms. ...Barnett's arbitrary value ...judgements. "I feel that if the ...owners of these things did not ...care enough about them to ...come over to the gym and get ...them within a month after the ...beginning of the semester, then ...they can't have been that ...valuable.

In the future, I suggest Laurie Barnett devise a more valid test of the college student's "reading ability." A public announcement might awaken her to the aptitude of the student as well as avoid a compilation of this flagrant wastefulness.

Sincerely,
Martha Raab

EAKING... by phil frank

d

...ell on 6 snow days. The wind blew snow in ...he ground. The ground ...e feet. He ran to a telephone ...ollapsed. Just before he hit the ground ...

...He was looking into the heavens. Higher ...than two thousand feet where ...ney, in a way, spoke above the clouds ...

...never spoke to His foot

...omes and encourages articles, columns, and ...erested students, faculty, and members of ...f material must be submitted no later than ...ure the Thursday of publication. Material ...mes will be withheld upon request. If you ...iting or perhaps curious about how things ...we are downstairs at Billings Center — or

MONT CYNIC

...land, Vt. PRODUCTION Rick Barney, ... Shannon ... Sarah Clay, Beth ... Ryan Peter ... John Lunde, Barb ...

... Avenue SPORTS Randy Riggs, Don ... Ross, Richard Rathbun, Pat ... Smith, Andy ...

... ADVERTISING Katherine ... Bowers, Stephen Lee Brown, ... Sherry Grancey, Debbie ... Powell

... BUSINESS MANAGER Nancy Shand

...s expressed in editorials, columns, or ... the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the ... the University administration, faculty, or ... State of Vermont. Opinions expressed by ...ers do not necessarily reflect the opinion ...hers of the members of the CYNIC ...ard.

...ued weekly during the college year by the ... the University of Vermont and State ... College. Editorial and business offices in ... Center, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone ... Deadline for notices is one week prior to ...blication.

...ed as 4th Class matter at the Burlington, Vermont Post Office. Subscription rate $8.00 per ... copy ten cents.

No Kaddish For Weinstein

by Woody Allen

Reprinted by permission ©1975
The New Yorker Magazine, Inc.

Weinstein lay under the covers, staring at the ceiling in a depressed torpor. Outside, sheets of humid air rose from the pavement in stifling waves. The sound of traffic was deafening at this hour, and in addition to all this his bed was on fire. Look at me, he thought. Fifty years old. Half a century. Next year, I will be fifty-one. Then fifty-two. Using this same reasoning, he could figure out his age as much as five years in the future. So little time left, he thought, and so much to accomplish. For one thing, he wanted to learn to drive a car. Adelman, his friend who used to play dreidel with him on Rush Street, had studied driving at the Sorbonne. He could handle a car beautifully and had already driven many places by himself. Weinstein had made a few attempts to steer his father's Chevy but kept winding up on the sidewalk.

He had been a precocious child. An intellectual. At twelve, he had translated the poems of T.S. Eliot into English, after some vandals had broken into the library and translated them into French. And, as if his high I.Q. did not isolate him enough, he suffered untold injustices and persecutions because of his religion, mostly from his parents. True, the old man was a member of the synagogue, and his mother, too, but they could never accept the fact that their son was Jewish. "How did it happen?" his father asked, bewildered. My face looks Semitic, Weinstein thought every morning as he shaved. He had been mistaken several times for Robert Redford, but on each occasion it was by a blind person. Then there was Feinglass, his other boyhood friend. A Phi Beta Kappa. A labor spy, ratting on the workers. Then a convert to Marxism. A Communist agitator. Betrayed by the Party, he went to Hollywood and became the offscreen voice of a famous cartoon mouse. Ironic.

Weinstein had toyed with the Communists, too. To impress a girl at Rutgers, he had moved to Moscow and joined the Red Army. When he called her for a second date, she was pinned to someone else. Still, his rank of sergeant in the Russian infantry would hurt him later when he needed a security clearance in order to get the free appetizer with his dinner at Longchamps. Also, while at school he had organized some laboratory mice and led them in a strike over work conditions. Actually, it was not so much the politics as the poetry of Marxist theory that got him. He was positive that collectivization could work if everyone would learn the lyrics to "Rag Mop." "The withering away of the state" was a phrase that had stayed with him ever since his uncle's nose had withered away in Saks Fifth Avenue one day. What, he wondered, can be learned about the true essence of social revolution? Only that it should never be attempted after eating Mexican food.

The Depression shattered Weinstein's Uncle Meyer, who kept his fortune under the mattress. When the market crashed, the government called in all mattresses, and Meyer became a pauper overnight. All that was left for him was to jump out the window, but he lacked the nerve and sat on a windowsill of the Flatiron Building from 1930 to 1937.

"These kids with their pot and their sex," Uncle Meyer was fond of saying. "They just know what it is to sit on a windowsill for seven years." There you see life. Of course, everybody looks like ants. But each year Tessie-may she rest in peace-made the Seder right out there on the ledge. The family gathered round for Passover. Oy, nephew! What's the world coming to when they have a bomb that can kill more people than one look at Max Rifkin's daughter?"

Weinstein's so-called friends had all knuckled under to the House Un-American Activities Committee. Blotnick was turned in by his own mother. Sharpstein was turned in by his answering service. Weinstein had been called by the committee and admitted he had given money to the Russian War Relief, and then added, "Oh, yes, I bought Stalin a dining-room set." He refused to name names but said if the committee insisted he would give the heights of the people he had met at meetings. In the end he panicked and, instead of taking the Fifth Amendment, took the Third, which enabled him to buy beer in Philadelphia on Sunday.

Weinstein finished shaving and got into the shower. He lathered himself, while steaming water splashed down his bulky back. He thought, Here I am at some fixed point in time and space, taking a shower. I, Isaac Weinstein. One of God's creatures. And then, stepping on the soap, he slid across the floor and rammed his head into the towel rack. It had been a bad week. The previous day, he had got a bad haircut and he was still not over the anxiety it had caused him. At first the barber had snipped judiciously, but soon Weinstein realized he had gone too far. "Put some back!" he screamed unreasonably.

"I can't," the barber said. "It won't stick."

"Well, then give it to me, Dominic! I want to take it with me!"

"Once it's on the floor of the shop it's mine, Mr. Weinstein."

"Like hell! I want my hair!"

He blustered and raged, and finally felt guilty and left Goyim, he thought. One way or another, they get you.

Now he emerged from the hotel and walked up Eighth Avenue. Two men were mugging an elderly lady. My God, thought Weinstein, time was when one person could handle that job. Some city. Chaos everyplace. Kant was right. The mind imposes order. It also tells you how much to tip. What a wonderful thing, to be conscious! I wonder what the people in New Jersey do.

He was on his way to see Harriet about the alimony payments. He still loved Harriet, even though while they were married she had systematically attempted to commit adultery with all the "R"s in the Manhattan Telephone Directory. He forgave her. But he should have suspected something when his best friend and Harriet took a house in Maine together for three years without telling him where they were. He didn't want to see it-that was it. His sex life with Harriet had stopped early. He slept with her once on the night they first met, once on the evening of the first moon landing, and once to test if his back was all right after a slipped disc. "It's no damn good with you, Harriet," he used to complain. "You're too pure. Every time I have an urge for you I sublimate it by planting a tree in Israel. You remind me of my mother." (Molly Weinstein, may she rest in peace, who slaved for him and made the best stuffed derma in Chicago-a secret recipe, until everyone realized she was putting in hashish.)

For lovemaking, Weinstein needed someone quite opposite. Like LuAnne, who made sex an art. The only trouble was, she couldn't count to twenty without taking her shoes off. He once tried giving her a book on existentialism, but she ate it. Sexually, Weinstein had always felt inadequate. For one thing, he felt short. He was five-four in his stocking feet, although in someone else's stocking feet he could be as tall as five-six. Dr. Klein, his analyst, got him to see that jumping in front of a moving train was more hostile than self-destructive but in either case would ruin the crease in his pants. Klein was his third analyst. His first was a Jungian, who suggested they try a Ouija board. Before Klein, he attended "group," but when it came time for him to speak he got dizzy and could only recite the names of all the planets. His problem was women, and he knew it. He was impotent with any woman who finished college with higher than a B-minus average. He felt most at home with graduates of typing school, although if the woman did over sixty words a minute he panicked and could not perform.

Weinstein rang the bell to Harriet's apartment, and suddenly she was standing before him. Swelling to maculate giraffe, as usual, thought Weinstein. It was a private joke that neither of them understood.

"Hello, Harriet," he said.

"Oh, Ike," she said. "You needn't be so damn self-righteous."

She was right. What a tactless thing to have said. He hated himself for it.

"How are the kids, Harriet?"

"We never had any kids, Ike."

"That's why I thought four-hundred dollars a week was a lot for child support."

She bit her lip. Weinstein bit his lip. Then he bit her lip.

"Harriet," he said, "I...I'm broke. Egg futures are down."

"I see. And can't you get help from your shiksa?"

"Can we forget it?" Her voice was choked with recrimination. Weinstein had a sudden urge to kiss her, or, if not her, somebody.

"Harriet, where did we go wrong?"

"We never faced reality."

"It wasn't my fault. You said it was north."

"Reality is north, Ike."

"No, Harriet. Empty dreams are north. Reality is west. False hopes are east, and I think Louisiana is south."

She still had the power to arouse him. He reached out for her, but she moved away and his hand came to rest in some sour cream.

"Is that why you slept with your analyst?" he finally blurted out. His face was knotted with rage. He felt like fainting but couldn't remember the proper way to fall.

"That was therapy," she said coldly. "According to Freud, sex is the royal road to the unconscious."

"Freud said dreams are the road to the unconscious."

"Sex, dreams-you're going to nitpick?"

"Goodbye, Harriet."

It was no use. Rien a dire, rien a faire. Weinstein left and walked over to Union Square. Suddenly hot tears burst forth, as if from a broken dam. Hot, salty tears pent up for ages rushed out in an unabashed wave of emotion. The problem was, they were coming out of his ears. Look at this, he thought. I can't even cry properly. He dabbed his ear with Kleenex and went home.

Three Sheets To The Wind

by Elliot Freeman

From the desk of Kleras Bell
Aspen, Colorado
April 2, 1975

Dear Elliot,

Life is funny, you know what I mean? I keep having this crazy dream that I am Chistmas shopping in New York City and go into Saks Fifth Avenue to get a pair of slippers for my father and the salesman is Jesus Christ. How do I know that it is Jesus Christ?... because he gets me the right size slippers before I even tell Him how big my father's foot is. So anyway, as he is wrapping the slippers I ask Him.. I say, "Jesus, what is life?". He stops wrapping the package and pulls a dirty hanky out of His back pants pocket and blows His nose and shrugs His shoulders and says, "Life is funny."

After Barry Montpelier and I left Miami, strange things began to happen. The accelerator pedal on Barry's car kept getting stuck down to the floor. We brushed close with death... also a trailer truck, a VW van and a stop sign... then Barry hooked up a wonderful invention that saved our asses. It consisted of a piece of rope, one end fastened to the accelerator pedal and the other end held by the driver. When you wished to slow down or cease forward motion completely, you would not only have to step on the brake, but also give a little tug on this rope. Barry named his invention the Pull-stop. Clever, eh?

About six hours or so north of Miami we got hungry and Pull-stopped into a root beer stand on the side of the highway. I was sitting in the car talking with Barry and eating a cheeseburger when I noticed a house, I guess you could call it a cottage, about fifty feet away. A typical run down American cottage, it was painted white and had blue shutters and a yard full of junk. Maybe it was the way the sun was shining that day but I couldn't stop looking at that scene.

Right down the middle of the yard was a clothesline. To the left of that was a wheeless car sitting on some cement blocks, the trunk and hood were opened and all the doors were gone. Lying on the ground around the car were rusted engine parts, hub caps, exhaust pipes... in fact you name it, and I believe that it was somewhere in that pile.

On the opposite side of the yard was a shed whose roof had fallen in. This shed sat crippled in a sea of garbage... tin cans, broken baby carriages, old vacuum cleaners, bottles, leaky garden hoses, ... endless garbage.

Barry had gotten out of the car and went to the men's room. I was waiting for the waitress to bring another order of fries when I saw the back door to the cottage swing open and this fat lady came waddling out wearing a raggedy dress and carrying a basket of laundry. She set the basket down and started to hang the wash upon the line. It was very breezy that day so she was having a bit of trouble but it didn't bother her at all, she just took her time. Barry returned and started to complain about the service. Where the hell is the waitress he said. I stared out the window at the lady.

With as much warning as had preceded her arrival, the fat lady, after having only hung a few things on the line, picked up her basket, and waddled towards the house.

That is when it happened. I was watching the three sheets that the fat lady had hung on the line waving in the wind. I knew that one chapter of my life had ended and a new one was about to begin.

I left Barry waiting for the french fries and hitched back to Miami where I picked up Kitty and the kids. We caught the first plane to Denver and arrived here in Aspen yesterday. We are thinking about buying a place up in the back country and maybe starting a cattle ranch or something. We are not exactly sure, but we are on our own now, I guess... only time will tell.

This is good-bye, Elliot. So long. I am retiring. I am free. Please start sending me my pension checks and don't forget that subscription to National Geographic that you promised.

Like I said, Life is funny.

yours in transit
KLERAS BELL

From the desk of Elliot Freeman
Burlington, Vermont
April 3, 1975

Dear Reader,

When my grandparents were alive my family would spend thanksgiving with them at their big old house in the country. My mind drifts back to a thanksgiving when I was but a young lad of five years. And with my grandfather in his study.

My grandmother had just stuck her head in the door and told us that dinner was almost ready and that we should wash up. Gramps said that we would be down in a couple of minutes. Then he picked me up and carried me over to his desk and stood me up on it. He put his arms around me and hugged me and said, "Elliot you know I love you." I said that I knew that and that I loved him too. He looked at me for a couple of seconds and then kissed me on the forehead. I gave him a kiss on his cheek.

Then he did a strange thing. He stepped back from the desk a few feet and told me to jump to him. I said that I was afraid, which I was. He asked me, afraid of what? I said afraid that I will fall. I will catch you don't worry he assured me. I said no gramps. I am afraid.

Spreading his arms out he said to jump goddamnit... I'll catch it. I pulled at my shirt and shrugged my shoulders, built up my courage and faith, . then leaped off the desk. Gramps took a giant step backwards and I hit the floor with the grace of a lead zeppilin.

Gramps picked me up and wiped the tears off my face and said Elliot, Elliot I just want you to remember... Never trust anybody.

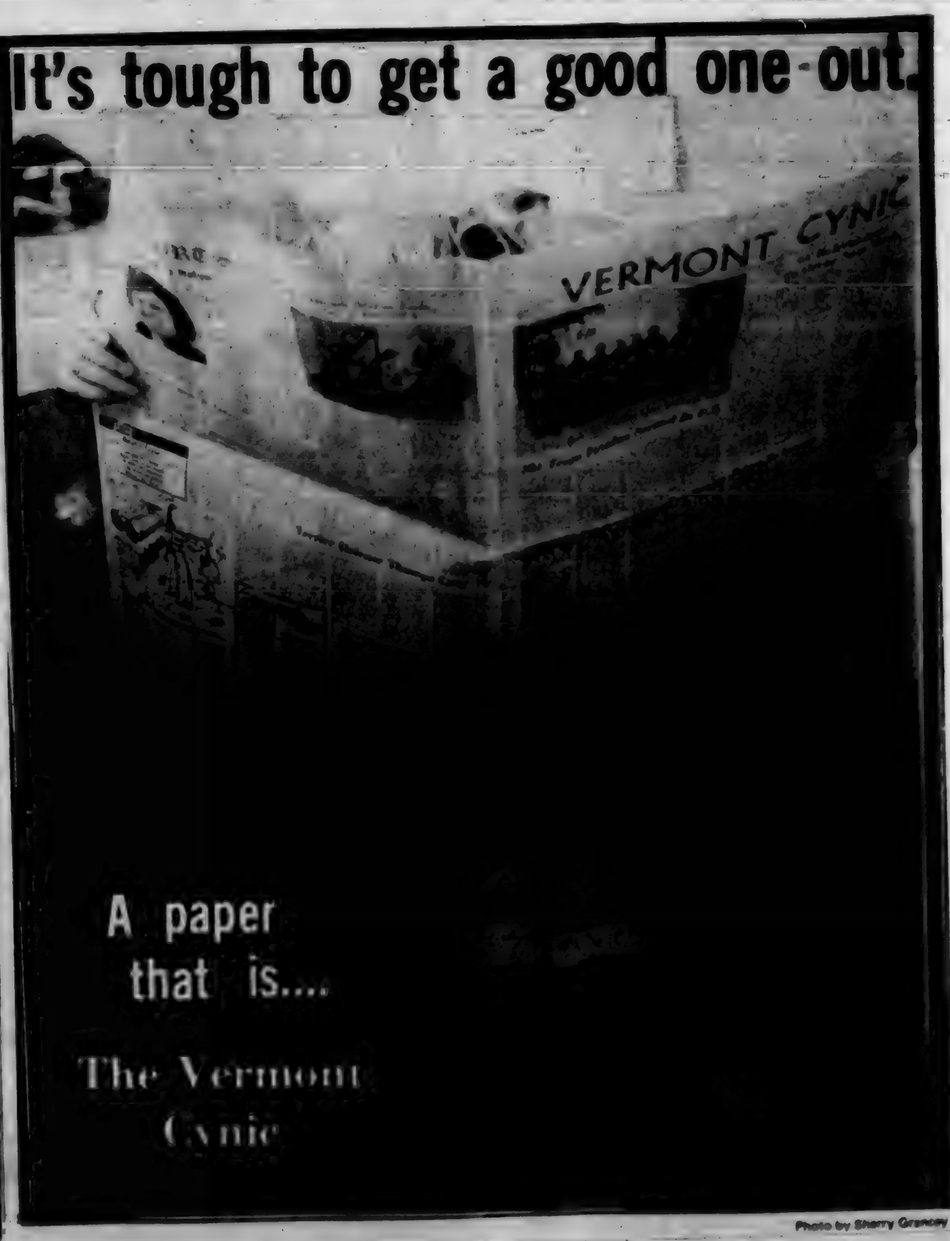
I have always hated the old fart for doing that to me. Not that his advise is all that bad really, in the long run, it is probably true (unfortunately) but for a little kid of five it is too much reality to cope with at once.

Two years ago I went to visit Gramps on his deathbed. I told him I thought he was an old fart who shouldn't have done what he had done to me. He had lost the capacity to speak, at that point he was in pretty bad shape, so he wrote me a message on a pad. Just three words. Such is life. I guess old farts never die, eh?

So Kleras Bell, my once trusted main character, has left the literary life for the peace and quiet of family life in the mountains of Colorado. God bless him.

My friends there is little more for me to say. I will leave you with these few words of advise... stay away from canned mushrooms and cigarettes... they will only do you harm.

Yours in transit
Elliot Freeman



ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Ellington's Reminiscings Drag

by Carol Hamilton

Saturday evening, March 22, the Burlington music-loving Lane Series audience was treated to an evening of listening and dance by the Mercer Ellington Band. The concert/dance at Memorial Auditorium was one of many one night stands. The Auditorium was nearly full – full of the Duke's teenagers grown older as well as the new generation. Every manner of dress possible was seen that night, from the inevitable blue jeans to long fashionable evening dress, all in anticipation of hearing what was billed as "the Duke's son conducting the old orchestra."

The old standards of Ellington and other big bands were heard – "Satin Doll," "A-Train," "Basin Street Blues," "Sophisticated Lady," and many more. It was good to hear the big brass sound again; 3 t-bones and 3 trumpets. Of the old band, only Chuck Conners (t-bone) and Money Johnson (trumpet) were in evidence. The rest of the group was made up of perfectly adequate young musicians. The orchestra played well, they were together, with a fairly continuous beat for dancing. However, what was meant to be jamming was unfortunately mere exercise. It was evident that a lot of the audience was there to dance, as the floor was full most of the time. But by 10:00 there were people leaving, the evening had not been all that inspiring.

The high spot of the concert was the vocalist, Ms. Anita Moore. She really has a voice, doing tunes like "I Let A Song Go Out of My Heart," "12th of Never," "Don't do Nothin' 'Till You Hear from Me."

Her voice was rich and deep and very well controlled, and it was evident that she meant to sing just what came out. (Although this reviewer had a feeling that she had learned her stuff, listening only to Nina Simone). There is no way to fault this gal's voice for manner and effectiveness.

The band took two short intermissions and when they came back the last time they did an involved version of "Caravan," complete with drummer Freddie Waits doubling on flute, and one of the sax men on the piccolo. The seemingly endless drum ride at the end went on and on and on.

A good number of dedicated people stayed to the last minute (11:30) hoping against hope to hear what they had come to hear: The good old Ellington Sound. Mercer kept them there. I had the feeling that he was working really hard to give the people their money's worth, and time-wise, they did; sound-wise it was ok. Yet it was all mechanics, and not an ounce of spontaneity or feeling.

The Lane Series' idea of an evening of "Listen and Dance" is quite obviously what the Burlington audience is looking for. However, I feel that their money might have been better spent if they had recruited an established combo of local eager musicians whose music would not have been just another job for another night.

Pajama Game Induces Sleep

by David Godkin and Karen Trott

The Pajama Game, Lyric Theatre's latest musical production, opened at the Flynn Theatre on Thursday, March 20, to an enthusiastic audience. Director Howard Delano seems to have made an excellent choice in focusing attention on the larger production numbers, which supported the show's lukewarm plot to its predictable denouement. Unfortunately, an illness removed leading man Jim Fitzpatrick from the production, and forced Delano to assume the role of Sid with only two days' notice. Despite this casualty, the show maintained a high energy level from start to finish, with Delano filling in admirably.

Cindy Harryman, who had a lovely voice, was believable as ingenue Babe Williams, head of the Sleep-Tite Pajama factory's grievance committee, as well as Superintendent Sid's romantic interest. In addition to Babe, the factory employed quite a cast of charming characters, most notably secretaries Mabel (Lili Johnson), a fun-loving, middle-aged red-head and Gladys, the "devoted" girlfriend who couldn't keep her eyes on boyfriend Hines. Mrs. Johnson was the first to prompt the audience to spontaneous applause during a song and soft shoe with Hines! "I'll Never Be Jealous Again."

Hinesy the Time Man, played with personality by Steve Plumb, gave a strong performance, although at times overpowering. Marcella Fulmer, as Gladys, was delightful, especially in one of the second act highlights, "Hines' Dream Sequence", in which she Carol Burnetted her way through a barrage of bedroom buddies. The chorus had a well-developed full sound, along with an enthusiasm which enhanced their "Once a Year Day" annual employes picnic and especially the rendevous at "Hernando's Hideaway". Both numbers, along with the opening scene "Racing with the Clock", were beautifully choreographed by Polly Nulty and well-polished by the performers.

Although not technically perfect, the production reflected the hard work of many Burlington area residents, and provided the community with an extremely enjoyable evening of musical entertainment.

Inspector Hounds Intimate Apse

Photo by Alan Sookdak

Tom Stoppard's scintillating comedy, The Real Inspector Hound, will open on Wednesday, April 9 and continue nightly through April 13. The play has become smashingly popular on college campuses, since its recent success in London and New York. Despite its popularity, directors Keith Gaylord and John Milligan have decided to produce the play in the apse of Billings Center, limiting the audience to 118 per night.

When pressed to explain what prompted the decision to use the apse, the directors explained, "the intimate nature of the play requires an equally intimate audience. The fact that it was the only place available had nothing to do with it."

Cast and crew members of The Real Inspector Hound are keeping mum on the subject of what the play is all about, but word has leaked out that it is a brilliant and witty parody of mystery melodramas which unflinchingly satirizes contemporary theatre critics along the way.

Due to the limited seating capacity of the intimate apse, the public is strongly advised to purchase tickets before the second week of April rush. Remember, real Real Inspector Hound tickets can be purchased only at Billings Center. All other centers for ticket sales are suspect. Performances begin at 8:00 p.m. Chaperones are not required.

Smothers Brothers Reunite

By Jay Williams

Remember the Smothers Brothers? Tom and Dick? How about Mason Williams, Pat Paulsen, John Hartford, and Leigh French? Come on, think. They were all on the original Smothers Brothers Show cancelled by CBS in '69 for saying dirty words on the air. Now you remember.

The Monday evening of March 3 reunited probably the greatest comedy troupe ever on television. All performing, reminiscing, dancing, and having a good down to earth time like old school friends should. Mason guitar soloed, Leigh "sipped a little tea with Goldie", Pat Paulsen endorsed the CIA, and John fiddled around. Pat Paulsen by the way, will not run for president in '76.

Fortunately for us the Smothers Brothers have returned to TV with a new Smothers Brothers Show; this time on NBC, and will once and for all rid us of Norman Lear's brand of humor. Thus sparing our country from futher depression. It's been a long five years for the brothers two. They have mellowed politically so there are only a few Ford jokes, one or two Henry's, but no Rocky's because he hasn't done anything yet. On their first show they reflected the 60's through satire. For the 70's they are into fantasy with Tom still on our left and Dick on the right.

To quote Mason Williams, "Talent is a cheap trick". I didn't feel cheated seeing and hearing the greatest.

Beach Boys Bust Themselves

(Earth News) – The Beach Boys have instituted a "group law" against the taking of any illegal drugs on the road. According to the upcoming edition of Crawdaddy, the group fines any violating member $1,000 per offense.

The regulation was instituted at the urging of Al Jardine and Mike Love, both of whom teach Transcendental Meditation. Both feel it would reflect badly on them if anyone in the group got busted. In the mid-Sixties, most of the group members experimented with drugs, notably LSD. But now, says former drummer Ricky Fataar, "I guess they've just had their day as far as getting high is concerned."

Corea And Coryell In Ct.

by Bob DeNike

Chick Corea and Larry Coryell compromised the dynamic double-billing that entertained the youth of Greenwich, Ct. last Sat. night. Though both acts were of an excellence equalling if not surpassing that of any UVM or Burlington concert held this semester, the site was not a municipal auditorium and the sponsors were not commercial producers. It was the eighth grade students of Greenwich High School that brought these two modern jazz-rock masters and their bands to southern Connecticut listeners on the evening of March 29.

Over 3000 youths packed the gymnasium to hear this powerfully talented duo, another impressive figure in view of the sparse attendance of most Burlington concerts to date.

The Greenwich High School juniors proved very tasteful and judicious in their choice of musical entertainment: the concert lasted over three hours and Coryell alone gave the audience their $5.50-worth of music.

Opening with a solo, acoustic number entitled "The Restful Mind", Coryell employed a variety of techniques and styles, showing from the start a thorough and extensive knowledge of the guitar. He mixed the sounds of jazz, rock and classicism expertly with a genuine sensitivity that constantly yielded new themes and prevented even the slightest trace of monotony or repetition from ever showing through.

Though Coryell exercised a casual authority in directing the evening's program, his control and leadership was to the point and never flamboyant. Verbally, he was the most intelligently expressive musician I've heard speak into a microphone yet. With his heavy, black-framed glasses and matching head of wavy curls, he could carry a pile of law books under his arm instead of a guitar and look perfectly in character. It was with an air of conciseness and precision, always accompanied with a mood of ease, that Coryell announced each number and conducted the evening's events.

From his faded blue jeans to his style of guitarmanship, there was nothing phony or showy about Coryell. Yet his music captured the listener's attention omnipotently, in the process stiffening every muscle in the body. When Coryell and his Eleventh House rested between songs, the audience momentarily relaxed empathetically along with the musicians. The jazz-rock style of Coryell is similar to the sound of Mahavishnu John McLaughlin and demands absolute audience involvement. Every note was delivered with force; each had been carefully deliberated and each, therefore, carried with it and conveyed maximum meaning. Nothing about Coryell so much as hinted of bullshit.

Next to guitarist Coryell, Eleventh House drummer stands as a secondary mind-blowing highlight. Surrounded by a drum set that nearly buries him beneath six cymbals, six tom-toms, two bass drums, a high-hat and snare, he is as much a visual spectacle as an auditory superstar. He possesses all the speed and light-handed dexterity of Billy Cobham (popularly known as the master of modern jass-rock drumming techniques) and often dominates the center of attention as he violently strikes the semicircle of cymbals around him so rapidly he seemingly crashes all six simultaneously.

Coryell and his Eleventh House would have contented my ears and sufficiently sustained the high energy level of my electrified soul for the remaining 1½ hours alloted Chick Corea. Though Corea picked up on keyboard skill where the Eleventh House pianist-organist-clavinetist had merely scratched the surface of

(continued on page nine)

"Pestle!?"

Scurrilous rumors to the contrary, Spring is on its merry way and the Royall Tyler Theatre plans to greet it with a lusty flourish. On April 18th the Department of Communication and Theatre will present Francis Beaumont's The Knight of the Burning Pestle. Never heard of it? You're not alone, but don't be put off by the decidedly classical ring of the title. Though Pestle is laden with "forsooths" and "i'faiths", it is still a frolicksome farce, bumptious and bawdy, a riotous romp for the celebration of spring.

James Wimsatt still hasn't graduated and is directing this cacophonous comedy. He has assembled a comely cast, featuring many if not all of Your Old Favorites, and some others who we're sure you've never heard of. James is the founder of the famous "Stay Loose Directing School." Those who saw his productions of The Fascinating Foundling and Passion, Poison, and Petrifaction will recall that he is blissfully unconcerned with the subtler elements of comedy.

Tickets for this memorable and melodious masterwork will go on sale beginning Friday at the Royall Tyler Theater. Call 656-2094 for reservations. The Knight of the Burning Pestle will be merrily in performance April 18–20, and 24–26. (That's two weekends of Bacchanalian Bombast – the management is considering hiring Bedecked Beauties to serve refreshments; more on this anon.)

Don't miss this precious piece, for you're not likely to see it again. Get your garlands out of the garage and go!

Vermont Cynic
MOVIE GUIDE

Century I & II
DORSET STREET
I Earthquake
II Young Frankenstein

MERRILL'S SHOWCASE I & II
SO. BURLINGTON
I Chinatown
II Lenny

STATE THEATRE
BANK STREET
The Great Waldo Pepper

FLYNN THEATRE
MAIN STREET
French Blue

ESSEX TWIN CINEMA
ESSEX JCT.
I Airport 1975
Front Page
II Day of the Jackel

CINEMA I & II
BURLINGTON PLAZA
SHELBURNE ROAD
I Godfather Part II
II The Four Musketeers

call theatres for times
Not Good for bargain nights
or special showings

What could be better than The Three Musketeers?
7 + 9:05 PM
It's all new!
THE 4 MUSKETEERS
OLIVER REED
RAQUEL WELCH
MICHAEL YORK as D'Artagnan
FAYE DUNAWAY as Milady
CHARLTON HESTON as Cardinal Richelieu
Bargain Mat. Sat. Sun. 2 P.M.
...it's four for fun and fun for all!
BURLINGTON PLAZA
CINEMA 1 & 2
RT 7 AT 1189 SO BURLINGTON
PHONE 862-5070 ANYTIME

THE SILVER KEG
Presents In Concert
AT MEMORIAL AUDITORIUM
B. B. KING
MEM. AUDITORIUM
TICKETS AVAILABLE AT BAILEY'S MUSIC ROOMS
THE SILVER KEG
WED. APRIL 16
8 PM
$5 in advance
$6 at the door
THIS WEEK AT THE SILVER KEG
DAVIS BROTHERS GARAGE - APRIL 3-6
SUN. 6 - ROUND OAK
APRIL 7-10 - STONE CROSS
APRIL 11-13 OAK
(TEN) 10 CENT NITE EVERY WEDNESDAY
Your entertainment dollar buys more at the Silver Keg

IF you like good food and drink, you will just love the BLACK CAT
180 Bank Street

SA FILMS PRESENTS
APRIL 4 – FRIDAY
MY LITTLE CHICKADEE (1940) – Mae West, W.C. Fields
ABBOTT AND COSTELLO MEET FRANKENSTEIN (1948) – Bela Lugosi, Lon Chaney
101 Votey – 7:30 & 10:00 – $1
APRIL 5 – SATURDAY
A WOMAN UNDER THE INFLUENCE (1974) – Peter Falk, Gena Rowlands
101 Votey – 7:30 – $2
APRIL 7 – MONDAY
CLAIRE'S KNEE (1971) – Directed by Eric Rohmer
101 Votey – 7:30 & 9:30 – Free

Tales From The Ozones
Blow By B

by Paul Prior

The saga of Jeff Beck begins with the Yardbirds, the legendary names of Page, Clapton, and Beck all graced the group's lead guitar position at one time in the mid-to-late sixties. As each guitarist matured, he left the Yardbirds to form a more progressive sounding group. Clapton went on to Cream, followed by many other interesting ventures. Page formed Led Zeppelin still counted among one of the more progressive groups around. Beck chose to form a fairly accomplished band, consisting of Rod Stewart, Ron Wood, Mick Waller and at times Nicky Hopkins. The history of this band was plagues with ego hassles: Rod Stewart eventually left primarily because Beck didn't want to share the spotlight with anyone else. After two excellent albums, Truth and Beck-Ola, the band was extinct. Beck went through a number of problems, car crack-ups and an inability to get along with any other musicians for any length of time.

Rough and Ready marked a distinct change in the Beck sound. He played funkier and continually turned out licks that kept the fans happy. The music was a fusion of funk and heavy metal. This band stayed together for only two albums though, having exhausted the possibilities of the band's growth. Beck's all time low followed. His abortive experience with Bogart and Appice, thankfully album ever surfac

BBA Then nothin
Beck's addition began circulating came as no surpri
who saw him tou and Appice.

He made an London's Rain
during the "Fair
of Bowie and his Mars, but he stay spotlight and "s
towards the sta
Much like Clapto
through the ser
during his gig at
And again, like
he has triumpha
from the livi produce an exc entitled Blow By

The personn
guitars; Phil C and Richard Bai percussion with (from Beck's ou keyboards. The Funky, and a of pace". Bec amazing and first rate. He co
of the songs w performs two w
Wonder, and ev fit in one by a
the names of McCartney (Sh

The music is of jazz and funk soul thrown measure. Few managed to pla emotion or int
'Cause We've H is a fine examp
soulful licks.

The Band With No H

by Clarry Net

The UVM Marching Band has already begun preparing for the fall semester's marching program. Plans have been made to march at some soccer games, and practice began last week so the band could be ready in time. Actually, a great deal more than musical preparation is involved because unlike football, soccer rules prohibit the use of hands for playing. An intensive program of learning to walk for sustained periods of time on one's hands along with exercises to increase pedal dexterity will continue through the summer right up to the world's first upside-down halftime show.

Prim Dingaling, band majorette, will be permitted to use her hands to conduct, but in order to be seen in proper perspective she will be suspended from a moving crane -upside down also. Her uniform is perfect for such a position.

Says Kenn
president.
(Bored of Tru the stink the to raise if football. Now play with bar donations can special socks them to n
toeing of instr

When as feasability of Hubert Schli
simply said,
been a lot h could have feat, but okay, anyway

No infor uncovered i plans of the rumored tha are going t behind their pom-poms
in all it looks season ahead.

...Corea & Cor

(continued from page eight)

the keys, the intricate rhythm changes, different jazz melodies and infinitely inexhaustible scale explorations of Coryell's guitarwork was entrancing and proved almost a sacrifice with the introduction of Chick Corea and the Return of Forever.

The audience seemed best pleased with this second act however, recognizing most of Corea's selections and applauding vivaciously at the first notes of each. Many requests were consistently shouted from a surprisingly minute number of uninhibited, excitables in the crowd and the Corea group faithfully granted each wish.

The bassist appeared more popular individually than keyboardist and bandleader Corea himself. A dedicated following at the threshold of the stage r itself to la name and ch

Corea ma his synthi keyboard distorting m flatting the frequency keyboard n responded t whining, squ

Each i thanked bidding the in much casual way

After th instrumenta word was left the attitude fulfilled reward performers' effort whi succeeded

BATES SUMMER THE GRADUATE PRO

Work with a company of profe directed by David Sumner, fou of Royal Shakespeare Compan

Open to persons holding Bachelo to highly qualified undergraduates

Inquiries to Professor James Bates College, Lewiston, Ma

ntimate Apse

plain unflinchingly satirizes to contemporary theatre critics ature along the way.

fact Due to the limited seating capacity of the intimate apse, place the public is strongly advised to purchase tickets before the o do second week of April Aush. Remember, real Real Inspector Hound tickets can be ors of purchased only at Billings d are Center. All other centers for ct of ticket sales are suspect. , but Performances begin at 8:00 it is a p.m. Chaperones are not dy of required. which

"Pestle!?"

Scurrilous rumors to the contrary, Spring is on its merry way and the Royall Tyler Theatre plans to greet it with a lusty flourish. On April 18th the Department of Communication and Theatre will present Francis Beaumont's The Knight of the Burning Pestle. Never heard of it? You're not alone, but don't be put off by the decidedly classical ring of the title. Though Pestle is laden with "forsootha" and "i'faiths", it is still a frolicksome farce, bumptious and bawdy, a riotous romp for the celebration of spring.

James Wimsatt still hasn't graduated and is directing this cacophonous comedy. He has assembled a comely cast, featuring many if not all of Your Old Favorites, and some others who we're sure you've never heard of. James is the founder of the famous "Stay Loose Directing School." Those who saw his productions of The Fascinating Foundling and Passion, Poison, and Petrifaction will recall that he is blissfully unconcerned with the subtler elements of comedy.

Tickets for this memorable and melodious masterwork will go on sale beginning Friday at the Royall Tyler Theater. Call 656-2094 for reservations. The Knight of the Burning Pestle will be merrily in performance April 18, 20, and 24-26. (That's two weekends of Bacchanalian Bombast -- the management is considering hiring Bedecked Beauties to serve refreshments; more on this anon.)

Don't miss this precious piece, for you're not likely to see it again. Get your garlands out of the garage and go!

APRIL 4 – FRIDAY
MY LITTLE CHICKADEE (1940) – Mae West, W.C. Fields
ABBOTT AND COSTELLO MEET FRANKENSTEIN (1948) – Bela Lugosi, Lon Chaney
101 Votey – 7:30 & 10:00 – $1

APRIL 5 – SATURDAY
A WOMAN UNDER THE INFLUENCE (1974) – Peter Falk, Gena Rowlands
101 Votey – 7:30 – $2

APRIL 7 – MONDAY
CLAIRE'S KNEE (1971) – Directed by Eric Rohmer
101 Votey – 7:30 & 9:30 – Free

Tales From The Ozones
Blow By Blow...Beck Is Back

by Paul Prior

The saga of Jeff Beck begins with the Yardbirds, the legendary names of Page, Clapton, and Beck all graced the group's lead guitar position at one time in the mid-to-late sixties. As each guitarist matured, he left the Yardbirds to form a more progressive sounding group. Clapton went on to Cream, followed by many other interesting ventures. Page formed Led Zeppelin still counted among one of the more progressive groups around. Beck chose to form a fairly accomplished band, consisting of Rod Stewart, Ron Wood, Mick Waller and at times Nicky Hopkins. The history of this band was plagues with ego hassles. Rod Stewart eventually left primarily because Beck didn't want to share the spotlight with anyone else. After two excellent albums, Truth and Beck-Ola, the band was extinct. Beck went through a number of problems, car crack-ups and an inability to get along with any other musicians for any length of time.

Rough and Ready marked a distinct change in the Beck sound. He played funkier and continually turned out licks that kept the fans happy. The music was a fusion of funk and heavy metal. This band stayed together for only two albums though, having exhausted the possibilities of the band's growth. Beck's all time low followed. His abortive experience with Bogart and Appice, thankfully only one album ever surfaced, entitled BBA. Then nothing. Rumors of Beck's addiction to heroin began circulating, though it came as no surprise to anyone who saw him tour with Bogart and Appice.

He made an appearance at London's Rainbow Theatre during the "fairwell concert" of Bowie and his Spiders from Mars, but he stayed out of the spotlight and actually moved towards the stage's shadows. Much like Clapton who went through the same experience during his gig at the Rainbow. And again, like Derek himself he has triumphantly returned from the living dead to produce an excellent album entitled Blow By Blow.

The personnel: Beck on guitars; Phil Chenn on bass, and Richard Bailey, drums and percussion with Max Middleton (from Beck's second group) on keyboards. The songs: Hot and Funky, and a definite change of pace. Beck's leads are amazing and the material is first rate. He co-wrote several of the songs with Middleton; performs two written by Stevie Wonder, and even manages to fit in one by a duo who go by the names of Lennon and McCartney ('She's a Woman').

The music is a combination of jazz and funk with a dash of soul thrown in for good measure. Few guitarists have managed to play with as much emotion or intensity as Beck. 'Cause We've Ended As Lovers' is a fine example of some very soulful licks. Written by the 'Boy Wonder' the song is slow and bluesy but soon changes and turns into funk. Dedicated to Roy Buchanan, no less! Or take a listen to 'Freeway Jam' for a good idea of how one's axe-ter should be used to its fullest extent. Beck plays tastefully on each cut, as do the rest of his band. Special credit is due in the keyboard dept. as well as in the percussion section. Beck has always had strong drummers and Bailey is no exception to the rule.

So Beck fans may rejoice at this release and hope that they can get some tickets for his tour next month. Even if you are not a Beck fan take a listen to the disk, it reveals another side of Beck as well as another chapter in his never-ending saga.

FEATS FANS DEPT: Yup, they're going to be touring this April! In New York on April 19 at the Beacon Theatre. The tour will hit Boston and other East Coast cities. Hopefully they'll be in Montreal, though because the band is still relatively unknown to most people the itinerary will depend on where they can be assured of good attendence. Fans may also look forward to hearing material from their soon to be released fifth album, as well as to the opening act on the bill, Allen Toussaint. Toussaint is best known for his work on albums by Dr. John and also the famous horn arrangements on the Band's Rock of Ages l.p.. So get those feats moving and boogie your speakers away.

The Band With No Hands

by Clarry Net

The UVM Marching Band has already begun preparing for the fall semester's marching program. Plans have been made to march at some soccer games, and practice began last week so the band could be ready in time. Actually, a great deal more than musical preparation is involved because unlike football, soccer rules prohibit the use of hands for playing. An intensive program of learning to walk for sustained periods of time on one's hands [illegible] exercises to increase pedal dexterity will continue through the summer right up to the world's first upside-down halftime show.

Prim Dingaling, band majorette, will be permitted to use her hands to conduct, but in order to be seen in proper perspective she will be suspended from a moving crane upside-down also. Her uniform is perfect for such a position.

Says Kenney Murdy, band president, "I warned them (Bored of Trust-tease) about the stink the band would have to raise if they cut out football. Now we are forced to play with bare feet." Perhaps donations can be gathered for special socks with holes in them to allow for proper toeing of instruments.

When asked about the feasability of the above, Dr. Hubert Schlitz, band director, simply said, "It would have been a lot better if the band could have been kept on its feet, but we'll pull through okay, anyway."

No information has been uncovered in regards to the plans of the twirlers, but it is rumored that the cheerleaders are going to tie their hands behind their backs and wave pom-poms with their ties. All in all it looks like an interesting season ahead.

...Corea & Coryell

(continued from page eight)

the keys, the intricate rhythm changes, different jazz melodies and infinitely inexhaustible scale explorations of Coryell's guitarwork was entrancing and proved almost a sacrifice with the introduction of Chick Corea and the Return of Forever.

The audience seemed best pleased with this second act however, recognizing most of Corea's selections and applauding vivaciously at the first notes of each. Many requests were consistently shouted from a surprisingly minute number of uninhibited, excitables in the crowd and the Corea group faithfully granted each wish.

The bassist appeared more popular individually than keyboardist and bandleader Corea himself. A dedicated following at the threshold of the stage religiously devoted itself to lavishly calling his name and cheering him on.

Corea made extensive use of his synthisized, electronic keyboard instrument, distorting notes by sharping or flatting them in long, sweeping frequency changes. Corea's keyboard melodies called and responded to guitar themes in a whining, squealing tonality.

Each musician graciously thanked the audience in bidding the audience goodnight in much the same personal casual way Coryell treated us.

After three hours of purely instrumental jazz-rock (not a word was sung throughout) I left the hall with a rare attitude...feeling musically fulfilled and financially rewarded from both performers' abysmal effort, an effort which could not have succeeded more effectively.

Doobies'

(Earth News) – The Doobie Brothers, in addition to purchasing an old Bank of America building in San Francisco, have just put down $200,000 for a new custom-designed sound system.

The band's manager, Bruce Cohn, told Billboard magazine, "Our halls keep getting bigger and bigger and the quality of the sound wasn't keeping up." The Doobie system is designed to perfectly blend their four-part vocals, two drum kits, and guitars, and it includes 33 open mikes on the stage. The system also includes a new stage unit which will camouflage their amps and monitors, providing a stage free of clutter.

The Doobies will debut the system when they tour this spring in conjunction with their just released album Stampede on Warner Brothers.

That album, their first in over a year, is the first Doobie L.P. to feature former Steely Dan guitarist Jeff Baxter. Ry Cooder and Dave Payne of Little Feat also appear on the album, and Curtis Mayfield arranged one cut.

The Great Fatsby

(Earth News) – Leslie West's new solo album will be titled The Great Fatsby and will feature songs written by The Rolling Stones, Paul Rodgers of Bad Company, and Tim Hardin, and Gary Wright as well as Leslie's own compositions.

V·Price And Alice

(Earth News) – Horror film star Vincent Price makes a guest appearance on Alice Cooper's newly released album, Welcome to My Nightmare. Vincent is featured doing a one-minute monologue about the poisonous qualities of black widow spiders on a track called "Devil's Food."

Close To The End

Bessemer
Yes
Atlantic Records 00369

In another stunning concept album, Yes explores the limits of contemporary music with its newest album, Bessemer. The entire ten-album set is entirely recorded in plant number 12 of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation's Pittsburg operation.

With the departure of Rick Wakeman, Yes has had to find another Moog player to equal his legendary skill and musicianship. In my opinion, his replacement, Myrouslaw Quqieudtr, the Polish-Aztec virtuoso has definitely filled Wakeman's shoes, and has caused Yes' music to progress to the limits of contemporary musical boundaries.

Well, onto the review. In this album, Yes has recorded the sounds of the average work day, and has combined them with their unique brand of mogg-rock, to produce an album of stunning beauty and depth. Side one of the five album set consists of the sounds of the huge steel mill coming to life as thousands of workmen set up the plant for the day's work. Highlights of the side include the firing of the huge furnace, the bringing in of the day's ore, and the sustained note of the steam whistle which signals the start of a new work day.

Sides two through nine are the emotional core of the album. Quiqieudtr's Mogg combined with the sound of the factory produce sound quality of amazing depth and emotional impact. Needless to say, the bass is strong and powerful, and the highs hang right in there. The sound of the 27 mogg keyboards blend well with the whine and squeal of the huge Bessemer furnace; the namesake of the album. In an interesting innovation, side five features Joe Duowski on Quadra-phase frequency diverter, when Sean Lennon-Taylor became tooo tired to continue the set. Side ten is the Denoument of this staggering masterpiece. With the deep resonant tones of Richard Burton explaining the operation of the huge Bessemer furnace in the background, the band systematically tosses every piece of equipment they own into the maw of the colloral inferno. Here the album ends. Don't let the high price of the album ($34.98) stop you from buying this piece of rock history. The album can be financed through Beeficial finance for those unable to buy it outright.

Disk Review

by Michael Thurston

Dixie Rock
Wet Willie
Capricorn CP-0149

Single-handedly, Capricorn Records founded and promoted a whole new breed of southern music, which the entire music industry has picked up on. What began with updates on traditional plantation and southern blues with The Allman Brothers has expanded to include The Marshall Tucker Band, Lynyrd Skynyrd, The Charlie Daniels Band, and Wet Willie. Wet Willie, though critically and commercially successful, have yet to make the top of the list.

Dixie Rock is a reserved, modest album, and one of Wet Willie's best. Frills which include a tasty chorus of gutsy females add gospel dimensions to traditionally funky Wet Willie numbers. Wet Willie are movin' on up.

Tom Dowd produced Dixie Rock and, much like the artists with whom he works, Dowd is maturing with the movement. Initial releases could often be described as blares of raw energy and double-lead duels. This saturating attack on the listener was so relentless, it made individuality of particular songs something of a novelty. More often, songs faded one into another, creating a total image or sound, rather than a collection of singular tunes. While there were no bad numbers, likewise, there were no standouts, either. In addition, the guts of energy on stage lost immeasurable punch in transition from footlights to vinyl. Dowd has directed Wet Willie to temper the stage sound with acoustics, humor, and multi-layered experiments. Numbers such as "Jailhouse", a straight acoustical number, "He Set Me Free", a devotional performed in the tradition of revival group sings, and "Mama Didn't Raise No Fools", a comic male/female dialogue set to music, are welcome relief, and add depth to a recording group reknowned for southern fried rockers. Dixie Rock, not to mislead anyone, has its share of good ole rock and roll, too. Among the standards are the title tune, "Leona", and "Ain't He a Mess." "She's My Lady" opens the album with a down-beat blues, much like material from the last James Montgomery album. Interesting, indeed, since Tom Dowd was at the helm on production for Monty's High Roller last year.

'Fear not! Despite modification, 'Dixie Rock' is alive and well at the hands of Wet Willie. Mixing in some variety and spice brings long-needed diversity to aid in the transition from footlights to vinyl. The careful attention to development of all the instruments individually has resulted in better recorded quality, and a more honest representation of all the music being put down, whether mellow or madcap. Sure sounds fine. Though it's been said before, this here's 'finger-lickin' good.'

Don Juan Returns

by Neal Klotz

Tales of Power
Carlos Castaneda
Simon & Shuster

(CPS) -- The announcer steps into the spotlight and resurrects one of the great stage nonsense phrases. "I now give you," he says, "a man for whom no introductions are necessary. Here he is -- don Juan?" Don Juan walks onstage, does a few tricks, some requests from the audience and then breaks for a commercial.

As absurd as the situation sounds, many who have read Carlos Castaneda's accounts of his apprenticeship to the Indian mystic don Juan have asked for nothing less than a habeas corpus. "This is all too fantastic to believe," they say. "If this isn't all fiction, produce the body. Where is don Juan?"

Others have been all too enamored with the power described, ready to beat a psychic path to the door of a new pop guru. "This is all too far-out," they say. "Can you teach me how to fly too? How about a spare map to don Juan's place and a letter of introduction?"

The latest, and perhaps last, of Castaneda's books, Tales of Power should spur both the skeptical literati and would-be disciples to their own new flights. For if anything Tales contains more intensely-colored scenes, more fantastical events and more complex advice to the "man of knowledge" than any of the previous three books.

In the beginning Castaneda meets his "ally" in the form of a moth that sprinkles the gold dust of knowledge on him and enables him to finally "see." Then don Juan shows up in Mexico City in a suit and tie, performing acts of power in the concrete world as easily as in his own desert one. Finally, in a flurry of amazing revelations that recap his entire 14-year apprenticeship, Castaneda realized that all his previous conceptions of what don Juan was doing were wrong.

For this reason, Tales of Power is a book that also needs no introduction -- literally.

In the previous three books, The Teachings of Don Juan, A Separate Reality and Journey to Ixtlan Castaneda wrote an introduction explaining to the reader how to understand the narrative. First he saw don Juan's teachings as an introduction to mind-altering plants and drugs, then as an introduction to "seeing" or inducing "states of non-ordinary reality" by the "cessation of the pertinence of my world view." Finally Castaneda thought the key was not the drugs but "membership" in the "sorcerer's explanation" of the world.

But, as don Juan explains in the end, the object was not the drugs, seeing, membership or even the sorcerer's explanation. It was reaching "the totality of oneself," a mystical goal that has little to do with any of these experiences.

Tales of Power didn't need an introduction, because by the time Castaneda had finished, framing the teachings for the reader had become foolish. Each explanation only served to placate the reason by widening its grip on reality -- which is largely unfathomable.

Appropriately, Castaneda shows more than expounds in Tales of Power. The stylistic progression from the often pedantic jargon-slinging of The Teachings to the lyrical reportage of Tales should, in fact, stagger even the most jaded critic. No fiction writer has ever changed his style and tone so completely to fit the increased consciousness of the narrator. This "ring of truth" is perhaps the most potent defense against those who try to box the don Juan books in words like a "primer on shamanism."

In the end, Tales of Power probably won't satisfy either Castaneda's critics or would-be junior sorcerers.

As don Juan notes in the beginning of Tales, "It doesn't matter what one reveals or what one keeps to oneself. Everything we do, everything we are, rests on our personal power. If we have enough of it, one word uttered to us might be sufficient to change the course of our lives. But if we don't have enough personal power, the most significant piece of wisdom can be revealed to us and the revelation won't make a damn bit of difference."

For this reason, Castaneda has remained, in the warrior's way, "inaccessible" to those who demand an introduction to "the body" -- whether of don Juan or of his sorcerer's knowledge.

Castaneda's friends are careful not to give out his phone number or mailing address. "He doesn't want to see mail," said his friend and editor at Simon and Schuster, Michael Korda. "You could send it to me, but I've made it a point not to pass it on."

Yet Castaneda is not a hermit, said Korda. He goes to parties and dinners and visits the UCLA campus, where he first began the don Juan books as a graduate project.

"He doesn't want to be a cult figure, doesn't want to be a guru," said Korda, "but that doesn't mean he's as secretive as all that. What he won't do is mix with things. He doesn't want to be exploited -- even if it's to his advantage."

On Castaneda's future as an author, Korda ventured, "There have been two 'last' don Juan books (Journey to Ixtlan and Tales of Power), so who can tell?"

Even if Castaneda doesn't write another book, those we have are a gift of immeasureable worth. For taken as a whole they provide a path with heart for those tired of going through the same old doors of perception -- drug induced or otherwise -- That leave us still needing introductions to the totality of ourselves.

BATES
SUMMER THEATRE
GRADUATE PROGRAM

Work with a company of proffesional actors directed by David Sumner, founer-member of Royal Shakespeare Company, England

Open to persons holding Bachelor Degrees and to highly qualified undergraduates undergraduates.

Inquiries to Proffesor James Hepburn, Bates College, Lewiston, Maine 04240

TONIGHT
TRY
"THE SAURING INFERNO"
(Sorry ladies, Newman doesn't make housecalls)

CARBUR'S
FAMOUS SINCE 1974

or one of the 90 other unbelievable combinations at CARBUR'S RESTAURANT
Live Entertainment Nightly.
119 St. Paul Street 862-4106

billings bedlam
FRIDAY APRIL 4
7:30p.m. 'til 7:30a.m.
barbershop quartet
chess, backgammon
ping-pong tourney
folk dancing roundhouse wruv-am live
cigarette rolling paper airplanes movies MONTY PYTHON'S FLYING CIRCUS; THE POINT; THE OWL & THE PUSSYCAT midnite dance breakfast special pie eating contest
SPONSORED BY BILLINGS GOVERNING BOARD
FOR MORE INFO CALL X2068

FEATURE

The Cynic Interview: Tony Adams

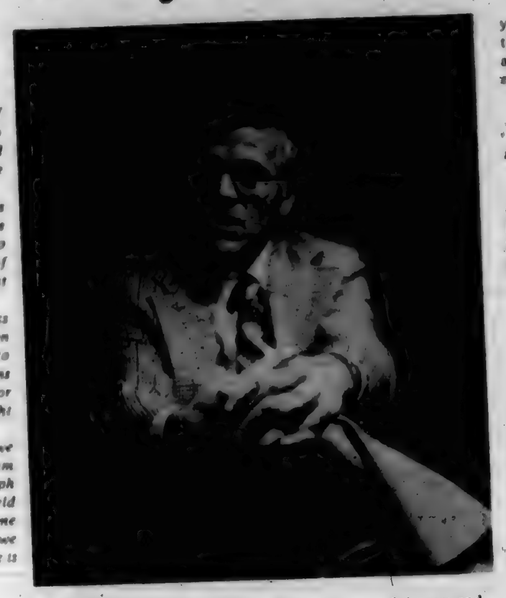
by Norm Robinson, Stephen Tanner and Elliot Freeman

The Cynic Editors have always been a loosely bound set of individuals and that goes for their thinking as well. Ideas to make the Cynic a better newspaper abound at Editorial Board meetings, but seldom do the volunteers on the staff have the time to really develop them.

One of the ideas we've been kicking around has fought its way out and made itself outstanding in this edition of the Cynic, the Tony Adams interview. The idea behind it is to integrate institutions and individuals in the community of Burlington with those of our own microcosmic community at UVM. Tony makes the idea work pretty well.

So Elliot, Norm, and I went down to WCAX-TV two weeks ago on a prematurely warm spring day to talk with the renown sportscaster. We drove down in Elliot's yellow van listening to the New Riders of the Purple Sage and thinking of questions to ask Tony, typically, at the last moment. We stopped for film so I could load my camera and arrived at the station right on time.

We had to wait a few minutes for Tony to arrive so we looked around the newsroom at the teletypes, the program outlines, the wall of telephones, and a gigantic photograph showing 360 degrees of view from the top of Mt. Mansfield (including WCAX's broadcast tower.) We thought of some more questions for Tony while we looked around, but we didn't need them all because Tony had plenty to say, so here is the Cynic Interview with Tony Adams.



Cynic: You went down to the hockey play-offs in Boston?

T.A.: Yes.

Cynic: Why do you think Coach Cross is so successful?

T.A.: I think there are several things involved there. I think he is very careful about who he recruits. Now you can't be one hundred percent certain that the kid you get is going to be a star for you or that he is going to have the right attitude, but you can do this much from talking with coaches that are involved or opposing coaches that know the kid... What kind of attitude does he have?... Is he a wise guy?... Does he work hard? What does he do in tough situations?... you know this kind of thing. I think he does a great job of recruiting the type of kid that will fit into his system and I think that attitude is the number one thing there. I think that is true of Peter Salsburg he would just as soon take a kid that has less ability but a lot more desire and determination and who won't squawk every time you practice for two and a half hours instead of two hours. The type of kid who will "stick his nose in it" as we say, and work hard and not complain is the type of kid that you are looking for and Jimmy does that. Jimmy has a great rapport with the kids they don't walk all over him but by the same token they can joke on a bus trip and so forth and not have the kids jump all over him and take advantage of him. He knows how to handle people.

Cynic: For MVP of the hockey team I nominated Roger Mallette. Do you have a particular choice?

T.A.: I don't know... Vermont is such a team team if you follow what I mean. Timmy O'Connell stands out to be but hockey is such a team sport... you can't do it alone and that is the thing that Coach Cross stresses all the time. You know Michel Lebeau, when the season started, was in the doghouse because he wanted to play his way and the coach was going to make him sit on the bench and had a big argument about it and he turned out in the last five games of the season the best player on the ice... and Michel knows it – that you have to play team hockey if you want to win on that level. Bobby Orr can do it by himself once in a while but few people can. I don't know if I could pick a most valuable player in hockey. In the last twelve games maybe Lebeau was the best hockey player but over the season you can't knock O'Connell's 82 points or whatever he had.

Cynic: I was disappointed that McNamara got pushed out over Rader of New Hampshire. I really felt that over the entire stretch of the year, McNamara was better.

T.A.: Rader had a better reputation when the season started and that influences people when they start voting. But I think New Hampshire's downfall started when Vermont beat them down there... Rader made a mistake; he came out of the net and his coach defended him but I think the coach did that just to protect him.

Cynic: They are talking all the time of getting more Vermont state players into the hockey program. In your opinion how is the high school hockey program progressing?

T.A.: I think I feel the same way that Cross does, that as these programs develop and more kids get involved, which they are right now in the Burlington area, eventually you are going to get a lot more players from Vermont. Chuck Ross is the first to come out of that system to play for him and he thinks he is good. Coach Cross told me the other day that there is a kid up in St. Albans that is only a sophomore that is going to be a good one. But you see it takes time. In other areas these programs have been going for years and years and years and now Vermont is just starting to get to the point where a kid is going in at age seven and going all the way through high school and by the time he has gotten through high school he has X number of skating hours. Plus the summer hockey schools are a big thing... now they have one in Burlington that hockey players are running. These kids in addition to getting ice time in the winter are going to be able to skate two or three weeks in the summer... that helps tremendously. Basketball players have the advantage. They can play basketball in the streets of New York or on a playground all summer long so when basketball season shows up they have had four months of work.

Cynic: Watching the school boy play-offs, it was obvious that the caliber of play is way below what it should be.

T.A.: The thing is that these kids try as hard but the competition isn't there. Like if you were playing in a metropolitan area, there may be forty teams as good as you are or better and if they are better than you are then that makes you better because you have to work harder... success elevates everything. But in Vermont the competition isn't there.

Cynic: Why not?

T.A.: Number one, you don't have the population. Secondly, the climate. In New Jersey those kids who are playing on outdoor courts right now probably have games going on but you can't play out here right now. It is population and it's exposure and it's tradition... like around New Jersey and New York and Pennsylvania, basketball is the big sport. In Vermont it is a high school sport and it starts in November and goes to March and that's about it. It's the competition... if you are playing against guys that are better than you all the time then you are going to be better; you can't help it. That's precisely why when Salsburg first got here he might have been criticized for scheduling some big teams. They said, "he's crazy." But if you are going to upgrade the program you might as well..: but you can't play them every night.

Cynic: Did you grow up in Vermont?

T.A.: I grew up in Manchester, New Hampshire.

Cynic: Where did you graduate from college?

T.A.: St. Anselm's College in Manchester.

Cynic: Did you do any sports there?

T.A.: No. No. I was going to school while I was working at the radio station and did some sports there but they didn't have much of a sports department. We did one sports show a day and when they started to do some play by play, I got into that.

Cynic: You have always had an affinity for sports, right?

T.A.: I have always had a desire to be close to them one way or the other and that was the way I could do it. I wasn't an athlete.

Cynic: Did you find it tough making the transition from radio to television?

T.A.: Yeah... it's quite different. It's been so long ago that I don't realize the problems that we went through..You see in radio, what you do if you don't want to write anything, you just take the wire and read it. Television is much more involved. You can't just sit in front of the camera for fifteen minutes and read because then that's nothing but a glorified radio show. You have to have film; you have to have slides; you have to have pictures; you have to have video tape... all this is involved with the production. It takes a lot of learning and even though I was in radio for so many years, it wasn't easy.

Cynic: Who is your favorite sportscaster?

T.A.: That's a tough one... what sport are you talking about?

Cynic: Hmmm...

T.A.: One of the all time pros in my book is the guy who does the Dodgers baseball... Vince Scully. Part of it is that he has been at it a long time but part of it is also that he does a lot of homework. Whenever he is assigned to something he does research... he gets anecdotes, etc.

Cynic: Are you going to Florida this year for spring training?

T.A.: I am going down next week.

Cynic: Can I come with you?

T.A.: (laughs) No... I am taking my wife.

Cynic: What do you think of high school girl's sports?

T.A.: I think that Vermont has done a fairly decent job with gymnastics and girls' basketball... What angle were you looking for?

Cynic: I don't know... Well is it getting good acceptance?

T.A.: I think it is. Field hockey and girls' basketball has moved tremendously. They changed the girls' basketball rules... now they play boys' rules... they used to play that only the forwards could shoot; the guards couldn't shoot. Did you know that?

Cynic: (laughs) No.

T.A.: (laughs) They changed it a few years ago; seven or eight years ago. And let's face it, why shouldn't the girls have an athletic program and have some pride in it?

Cynic: What about when they start mixing girls and boys in Little League?

T.A.: I don't think they can compete really. How can a girl compete with a guy who is faster?

Cynic: Supposedly people have said that at that age the girls are better co-ordinated.

T.A.: They may be at the very younger age but once they start getting around fourteen there is no comparison.

Cynic: What do you think of the NCAA and NIT play-offs this year?

T.A.: What they did in New York and New England was sort of unbalanced. The New England teams had pretty good records. That wasn't a bad selection thing except I think that UMass should have made the tournament... no doubt about it, they were kept out of it. But in New York State they did not have enough teams with winning records. Syracuse was the only team in that division that had a good record, so people said, and I agree with them, "Why don't you take UMass or Vermont or Providence and send them over to New York and play in that tournament?" By rigidly setting up sections that without the flexability of mixing and matching, so to speak, they hurt themselves.

Cynic: What do you think of Howard Cosell?

T.A.: (laughs) I thought you were going to ask that. I think a lot of things he does are just for affect. Before he started doing Monday night football he used to talk about how greedy the football owners were... he doesn't talk so much now. I mean he does some things well... like when he started out he asked penetrating questions, but now he over does it a little He is a show business-man. And he is always tearing down other sportscasters for being shills for their team. What has he become for pro football? Monday night football to him... he builds it up to be the greatest thing in the world now... he never felt that way before. He is not in the class as just a sportscaster, he is a show business-personality.

Cynic: Do you get recognized much around town?

T.A.: Oh, yeah, all the time. Not only around town but throughout the state and New York and up in Montreal... the station covers a big area.

Cynic: How does that feel?

T.A.: It's nice in a way... other times it can be a pain... usually you try and ride with it unless someone gets real nasty. Most people will just come up and say I know you and shake your hand or ask for an autograph.

Cynic: How tough is it to get into the sportscaster game? Do you need the big break?

T.A.: The way most people get started in the play by play business is to go to work for a radio station. Now you say, "how do you get to go to work for a radio station?" Some people go to radio school but it's not necessary. Some people work at a student station and then you get a job. Once you are into the station, then if a sportscaster gets sick or leaves or something, you are right there and they know you and you ask for the job and that should do it. I don't think that anybody gets into it in the same way.

Cynic: Are you pretty happy right now?

T.A.: Oh yeah, yeah.

Cynic: Or are you looking to take over Monday night football?

T.A. I think that most guys in the business have dreams of that happening to them but it is not very practical. There's an awful lot of competition... not only competition but it is also a little politics too.

Cynic: If you had the chance to do big-time college football or basketball would you jump at it?

T.A.: A qualified yes... depending on where it is and what the situation was; because I have been here so long and am well established. It is a good job and I have security;.. but yeah I probably would... if I had the chance to do Ohio State football or North Carolina basketball... yeah probably.

Cynic: What has been the most momentous screw-up of your entire career?

T.A.: The only one I can think of... the last game of the season two years ago; Dartmouth played at Princeton and I got fogged in at the airport here and couldn't get out. It was really frustrating... I couldn't get down there. I never got to the game. It was just a case of the Burlington airport socked in for several hours... I couldn't get out. It was the only time in twenty years that I have missed a game... the only time!

Cynic: When did you think of the line... GOOD NIGHT GOOD SPORTS?

T.A.: Good night good sports... God I don't remember; it has been so long. I don't know where it started. Some guys used to say good night and good sports. I have just cut it down and I have used it for so long... I don't know where it started. It is just a sign-off thing, that's all... just a way of ending gracefully. I mean what are you going to say... That's it?... so you get a phrase that sticks with you and becomes a part of you.

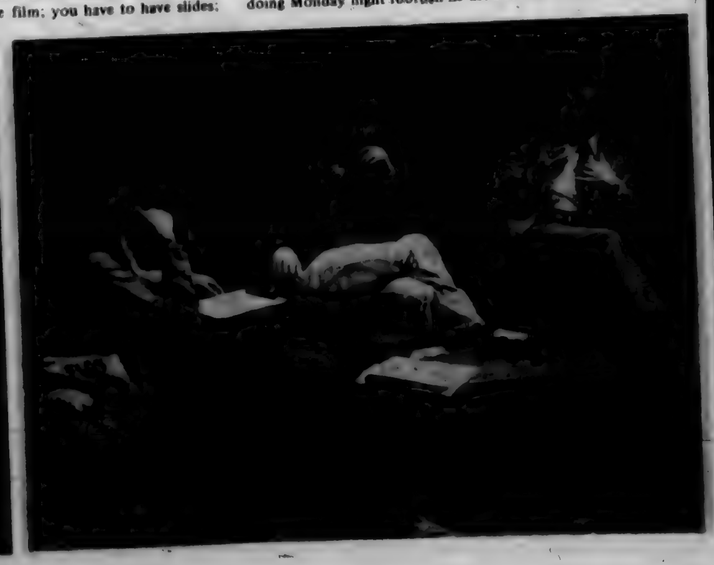


Photo by Steve Tanner

by Scott MacKay

I've always held that if one ponders too he absurdities of modern life, he will ultimately be driv a release, a momentary respite, through one of two avenues – either by laughing or crying. In recent veracity of this credo has been upheld almost dail actions of that venal institution known as governme distant past, I had an inordinate capacity to muster good old fashioned rage at the decisions of the tyrants who simultaneously run and ruin this world however, I prefer the psychic anathestic of laughter rimble over even the most macabre deprivations of m

One minute area of our government's actions fails to evoke these dual sentiments is the way Americans treat drugs. The enforcement of anti–dr this good ole USA constitutes a draconian m hypocrisy, stupidity and downright schizophrenia. I up images of politicians whose minds have been ed alcohol hiring punks like Paul Lawrence to chase d snorting up two roaches in a cornfield. Visions of th the roaches being hauled before some Neanderthal j the nation's biggest pusher, Mr. M.D. is reward Mercedes–Benz and an INC. after his name for in Veliums and Librium are the most prescribed dr country. Reminds one daily that the governm legalize marijuana because "we don't know enough yet the one addicting drug whose deleterious imp human body is well documented – tobacco – rea each year in cigarette taxes. On my last visit (I dam it's my last) to the Correctional Center I met some pot inhalers, but never ran across the President o Tobacco or the Chairman of the R.J. Reynolds C

And everyone knows that the real way to crea our society would be to deprive every American of relies on – booze, pot, ups, downs, cigarett sominex, (TeeVee and sex too?) – every le mind–altering substance there is. For a period of weeks. Luckily, this ultimate prohibition is impos of us would be scurrying for Canada, caves or fall– faster than one can say boycott Gallo wine. The had it all wrong. Instead of trying to disrupt anti-war protests, bombing banks and FBI offices the Justice department, they should have c completely rid America of drugs for a week or t would see some real violence in the streets.

A perceptive article in a recent issue of underscores the blatant hypocrisy of New York Rockefeller drug code. Written by Thomas Powe drives home once again the consequences of the Kafkaesque, police state attitude towards th pleasure through artificial means. He relates Rockefeller's drug law has not done any of the intended to do. It has not dried up heroin in the not scared addicts into treatment. It has not pu pushers in jail to scare the rest out of business. done? Put a lot of poor wretches in jail." Powe inform us that three–quarters of the heroin quantities of an eighth of an ounce or less, and real big, organized crime connected dealer has since this Orwellian nightmare was enacted. Thu destitute and desperate street addicts who interned in such well–known New York resorts

But enough of all this. As I said, I do prefer anyway, people have always used mind deadening drugs. The Volstead Act, we m created far more problems than it ever "solv given the sick meritocracy, the perverted hiera personality, intelligence, money, status, power, – the panoply of items which stomp people in deeper every day, and couple it with human dilemmas of hate, war, love, fear, death, pr destruction – ...and well, I have a feeling dru stay. We all have our security wraps, our in blankets, and our collective vulnerability leads their individual shelters in consciouness alterin Kurt Vonnegut once said, when an individual is anyone he perceives himself to be, and for n necessarily differ from his stinking lot in life. grant one a vacation from the unplayable hand him.

••••••••••••

... Now for something sane...

It appears that Vermont politicians have lengths to obviate an increase in taxes. Conf recession wracked economy and declining Governor Salmon and the legislature have consider a wide range of alternative ways to needed state programs. A wily politician, S asked OPEN SEASON to draw up a list of pa alternatives that would help the state discover revenue. I immediately referred the Go consultant inebriate, Dan Dreg. Mr. Dreg, y some time yearned to present his unique fund state officials. Dan even insured me that hi would "overflow Montpelier's coffers within The Governor dutifully thanked me for my inquired of where he could locate Mr. Dreg.

"No problems, Governor Salmon," I re office hours every day at the Millard F Burlington, and if you just dropped in I'm s more than glad to accommodate you."

"Uh...gee...I don't know" was Salmon's ri keep up my image if I'm going to have a sno bell of defeating Bob Stafford in '76... and I should be seen in the Filimore ...after all, you people said about Phil Hoff and all, so I o when I'm out of state..."

Well, I informed the Governor that it wo hour or so, and besides, Mr. Dreg could probab travel to Montpelier if he was granted a criminal record eradicated. Mr. Dreg hasn't employment, as he has been a delinquent a was thrown out of high school for smoking history, apprehended for urinating in an Filimore (and ending up spending the n recently the luckless Dreg was observed by smoking a bowl of grass outside the Champl strip show booth.

"Well," sighed the Governor, "I'll do Vermont out of this fiscal crisis, even trek I'll help."

So last Wednesday the Governor's limo event of Domino's Pizza, and the artic face–to–face over a drink with Dan Dreg to "Glad to meetcha, Gov'nur" smiled Dreg explain his plan to raise state revenues, fellas have been dead wrong all Governor. I've got an idea that will not only

FEATURE

The Cynic Interview: Tony Adams

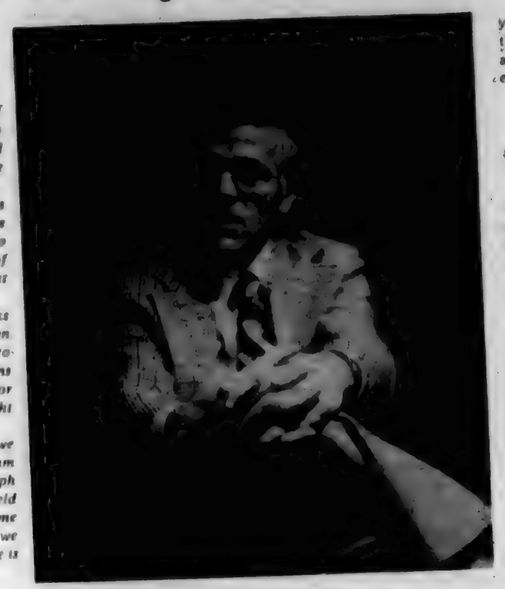
by Norm Robinson, Stephen Tanner and Elliot Freeman

The Cynic Editors have always been a loosely bound set of individuals and that goes for their thinking as well. Ideas to make the Cynic a better newspaper abound at Editorial Board meetings, but seldom do the volunteers on the staff have the time to really develop them.

One of the ideas we've been kicking around has fought its way out and made itself outstanding in this edition of the Cynic: the Tony Adams interview. The idea behind it is to integrate institutions and individuals in the community of Burlington with those of our own microcosmic community at UVM. Tony makes the idea work pretty well.

So Elliot, Norm, and I went down to WCAX-TV two weeks ago on a prematurely warm spring day to talk with the renown sportscaster. We drove down in Elliot's yellow van listening to the New Riders of the Purple Sage and thinking of questions to ask Tony. (typically, at the last moment. We stopped for film so I could load my camera and arrived at the station right on time.

We had to wait a few minutes for Tony to arrive so we looked around the newsroom at the teletypes, the program outlines, the wall of telephones, and a gigantic photograph showing 180 degrees of view from the top of Mt. Mansfield (including WCAX's broadcast tower). We thought of some more questions for Tony while we looked around, but we didn't need them all because Tony had plenty to say, so here is the Cynic Interview with Tony Adams.



Cynic: You went down to the hockey play-offs in Boston?

T.A.: Yes.

Cynic: Why do you think Coach Cross is so successful?

T.A.: I think there are several things involved there. I think he is very careful about who he recruits. Now you can't be one hundred percent certain that the kid you get is going to be a star for you or that he is going to have the right attitude, but you can do this much from talking with coaches that are involved or opposing coaches that know the kid... What kind of attitude does he have?... Is he a wise guy?... Does he work hard?... What does he do in tough situations?... you know this kind of thing. I think he does a great job of recruiting the type of kid that will fit into his system and I think that attitude is the number one thing there. I think that is true of Peter Salsburg. he would just as soon take a kid that has less ability but a lot more desire and determination and who won't squawk every time you practice for two and a half hours instead of two hours. The type of kid who will "stick his nose in it" as we say, and work hard and not complain is the type of kid that you are looking for and Jimmy does that. Jimmy has a great rapport with the kids... they don't walk all over him but by the same token they can joke on a bus trip and so forth and not have the kids jump all over him and take advantage of him. He knows how to handle people.

Cynic: For MVP of the hockey team I nominated Roger Mallette. Do you have a particular choice?

T.A.: I don't know... Vermont is such a team team if you follow what I mean. Timmy O'Connell stands out to be but hockey is such a team sport... you can't do it alone and that is the thing that Coach Cross stresses all the time. You know Michel Lebeau, when the season started, was in the doghouse because he wanted to play his way and the coach was going to make him sit on the bench and had a big argument about it and he turned out in the last five games of the season the best player on the ice... and Michel knows it – that you have to play team hockey if you want to win on that level. Bobby Orr can do it by himself once in a while but few people can. I don't know if I could pick a most valuable player in hockey. In the last twelve games maybe Lebeau was the best hockey player but over the season you can't knock O'Connell's 82 points or whatever he had.

Cynic: I was disappointed that McNamara got pushed out over Roder of New Hampshire. I really felt that over the entire stretch of the year, McNamara was better.

T.A.: Rader had a better reputation when the season started and that influences people when they start voting. But I think New Hampshire's downfall started when Vermont beat them down there... Rader made a mistake, he came out of the net and his coach defended him but I think the coach did that just to protect him.

Cynic: They are talking all the time of getting more Vermont state players into the hockey program. In your opinion how is the high school hockey program progressing?

T.A.: I think I feel the same way that Cross does, that as these programs develop and more kids get involved, which they are right now in the Burlington area, eventually you are going to get a lot more players from Vermont. Chuck Ross is the first to come out of that system to play for him and he thinks he is good. Coach Cross told me the other day that there is a kid up in St. Albans that is only a sophomore that is going to be a good one. But you see it takes time. In other areas these programs have been going for years and years and years and now Vermont is just starting to get to the point where a kid is going in at age seven and going all the way through high school and by the time he has gotten through high school he has X number of skating hours. Plus the summer hockey schools are a big thing... now they have one in Burlington that hockey players are running. These kids in addition to getting ice time in the winter are going to be able to skate two or three weeks in the summer... that helps tremendously. Basketball players have the advantage. They can play basketball in the streets of New York or on a playground all summer long so when basketball season shows up they have had four months of work.

Cynic: Watching the school boy play-offs, it was obvious that the caliber of play is way below what it should be.

T.A.: The thing is that these kids try as hard but the competition isn't there. Like if you were playing in a metropolitan area, there may be forty teams as good as you are or better and if they are better than you are then that makes you better because you have to work harder... success elevates everything. But in Vermont the competition isn't there.

Cynic: Why not?

T.A.: Number one, you don't have the population. Secondly, the climate. In New Jersey those kids who are playing on outdoor courts right now probably have games going on... but you can't play out here right now. It is population and it's exposure and it's tradition... like around New Jersey and New York and Pennsylvania, basketball is the big sport. In Vermont it is a high school sport and it starts in November and goes to March and that's about it. It's the competition... if you are playing against guys that are better than you all the time then you are going to be better; you can't help it. That's precisely why when Salsburg first got here he might have been criticized for scheduling some big teams. They said, "he's crazy." But if you are going to upgrade the program you might as well... but you can't play them every night.

Cynic: Did you grow up in Vermont?

T.A.: I grew up in Manchester, New Hampshire.

Cynic: Where did you graduate from college?

T.A.: St. Anselm's College in Manchester.

Cynic: Did you do any sports there?

T.A.: No. No. I was going to school while I was working at the radio station and did some sports there but they didn't have much of a sports department. We did one sports show a day and when they started to do some play by play, I got into that.

Cynic: You have always had an affinity for sports, right?

T.A.: I have always had a desire to be close to them one way or the other and that was the way I could do it. I wasn't an athlete.

Cynic: Did you find it tough making the transition from radio to television?

T.A.: Yeah... it's quite different. It's been so long ago that I don't realize the problems that we went through. You see in radio, what you do if you don't want to write anything, you just take the wire and read it. Television is much more involved. You can't just sit in front of the camera for fifteen minutes and read because then that's nothing but a glorified radio show. You have to have film; you have to have slides; you have to have pictures; you have to have video tape... all this is involved with the production. It takes a lot of learning and even though I was in radio for so many years, it wasn't easy.

Cynic: Who is your favorite sportscaster?

T.A.: That's a tough one... what sport are you talking about?

Cynic: Hmmm...

T.A.: One of the all time pros in my book is the guy who does the Dodgers baseball... Vince Scully. Part of it is that he has been at it a long time but part of it is also that he does a lot of homework. Whenever he is assigned to something he does research... he gets anecdotes, etc.

Cynic: Are you going to Florida this year for spring training?

T.A.: I am going down next week.

Cynic: Can I come with you?

T.A.: (laughs) No... I am taking my wife.

Cynic: What do you think of high school girl's sports?

T.A.: I think that Vermont has done a fairly decent job with gymnastics and girls' basketball... What angle were you looking for?

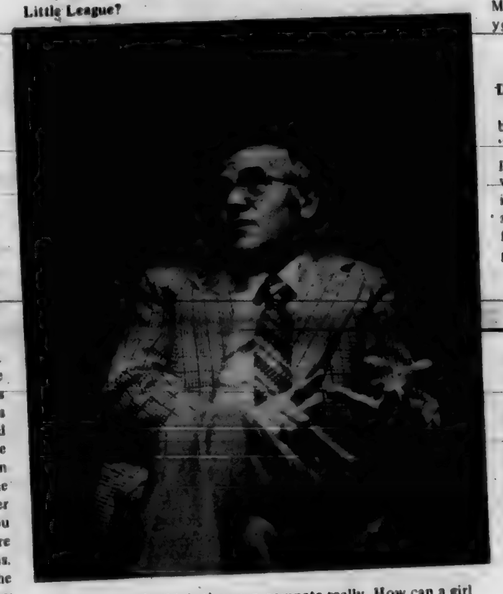
Cynic: I don't know... Well is it getting good acceptance?

T.A.: I think it is. Field hockey and girls' basketball has moved tremendously. They changed the girls' basketball rules... now they play boys' rules... they used to play that only the forwards could shoot; the guards couldn't shoot. Did you know that?

Cynic: (laughs) No.

T.A.: (laughs) They changed it a few years ago; seven or eight years ago. And let's face it, why shouldn't the girls have an athletic program and have some pride in it?

Cynic: What about when they start mixing girls and boys in Little League?



T.A.: I don't think they can compete really. How can a girl compete with a guy who is faster?

Cynic: Supposedly people have said that at that age the girls are better co-ordinated.

T.A.: They may be at the very younger age but once they start getting around fourteen there is no comparison.

Cynic: What do you think of the NCAA and NIT play-offs this year?

T.A.: What they did in New York and New England was sort of unbalanced. The New England teams had pretty good records. That wasn't a bad selection thing except I think that UMass should have made the tournament... no doubt about it, they were kept out of it. But in New York State they did not have enough teams with winning records. Syracuse was the only team in that division that had a good record, so people said, and I agree with them, "Why don't you take UMass or Vermont or Providence and send them over to New York and play in that tournament?" By rigidly setting up sections that without the flexability of mixing and matching, so to speak, they hurt themselves.

Cynic: What do you think of Howard Cosell?

T.A.: (laughs) I thought you were going to ask that. I think a lot of things he does are just for affect. Before he started doing Monday night football he used to talk about how greedy the football owners were... he doesn't talk so much now. I mean he does some things well... like when he started out he asked penetrating questions, but now he over does it a little He is a show business-man. And he is always tearing down other sportscasters for being shills for their team. What has he become for pro football? Monday night football to him... he builds it up to be the greatest thing in the world now... he never felt that way before. He is not in the class as just a sportscaster, he is a show business-personality.

Cynic: Do you get recognized much around town?

T.A.: Oh, yeah, all the time. Not only around town but throughout the state and New York and up in Montreal... the station covers a big area.

Cynic: How does that feel?

T.A.: It's nice in a way... other times it can be a pain... usually you try and ride with it unless someone gets real nasty. Most people will just come up and say I know you and shake your hand or ask for an autograph.

Cynic: How tough is it to get into the sportscaster game? Do you need the big break?

T.A.: The way most people get started in the play by play business is to go to work for a radio station. Now you say, "how do you get to go to work for a radio station?" Some people go to radio school but it's not necessary. Some people work at a student station and then you get a job. Once you are into the station, then if a sportscaster gets sick or leaves or something, you are right there and they know you and you ask for the job and that should do it. I don't think that anybody gets into it in the same way.

Cynic: Are you pretty happy right now?

T.A.: Oh yeah, yeah.

Cynic: Or are you looking to take over Monday night football?

T.A. I think that most g uys in the business have dreams of that happening to them but it is not very practical. There's an awful lot of competition... not only competition but it is also a little politics too.

Cynic: If you had the chance to do big-time college football or basketball would you jump at it?

T.A.: A qualified yes... depending on where it is and what the situation was; because I have been here so long and am well established. It is a good job and I have security... but yeah I probably would... if I had the chance to do Ohio State football or North Carolina basketball... yeah probably.

Cynic: What has been the most momentous screw-up of your entire career?

T.A.: The only one I can think of... the last game of the season two years ago; Dartmouth played at Princeton and I got fogged in at the airport here and couldn't get out. It was really frustrating... I couldn't get down there. I never got to the game. It was just a case of the Burlington airport socked in for several hours... I couldn't get out. It was the only time in twenty years that I have missed a game... the only time!

Cynic: When did you think of the line... GOOD NIGHT GOOD SPORTS?

T.A.: Good night good sports... God I don't remember; it has been so long. I don't know where it started. Some guys used to say good night and good sports. I have just cut it down and I have used it for so long... I don't know where it started. It is just a sign-off thing, that's all... just a way of ending gracefully. I mean what are you going to say... That's it?... so you get a phrase that sticks with you and becomes a part of you.

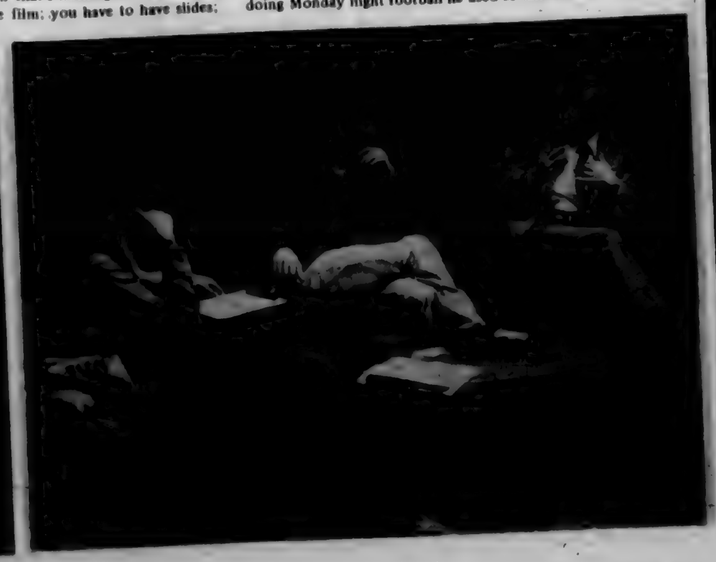


Photo by Steve Tanner

by Scott MacKay

I've always held that if one ponders too hea absurdities of modern life, he will ultimately be drive a release, a momentary respite, through one of two o avenues – either by laughing or crying. In recent t veracity of this credo has been upheld almost dail actions of that venal institution known as governme distant past, I had an inordinate capacity to muster good old fashioned rage at the decisions of the f tyrants who simultaneously run and ruin this worl however, I prefer the psychic anathestic of laughter, visible over even the most macabre deprivations of ma

One minute area of our government's actions t fails to evoke these dual sentiments is the way Americans treat drugs. The enforcement of anti-dru this good ole USA constitutes a draconian m hypocrisy, stupidity and downright schizophrenia. I up images of politicians whose minds have been ad alcohol hiring punks like Paul Lawrence to chase d snorting up two roaches in a cornfield. Visions of th the roaches being hauled before some Neanderthal ju the nation's biggest pusher, Mr. M.D. is rewarde Mercedes-Benz and an INC. after his name for ins Valiums and Libriums are the most prescribed dru country. Reminds one daily that the governme legalize marijuana because "we don't know enough yet the one addicting drug whose deleterious imp human body is well documented – tobacco – rea each year in cigarette taxes. On my last visit (I damn it's my last) to the Correctional Center I met some pot inhalers, but never ran across the President of Tobacco or the Chairman of the R.J. Reynolds C

And everyone knows that the real way to crea our society would be to deprive every American of relies on – booze, pot, ups, downs, cigarett sominex, (TeeVee and sex too?) – every le mind-altering substance there is. For a period of weeks. Luckily, this ultimate prohibition is impos of us would be scurrying for Canada, caves or fall faster than one can say boycott Gallo wine. The had it all wrong. Instead of trying to disrupt anti-war protests, bombing banks and FBI offices the Justice department, they should have c completely rid America of drugs for a week or tw would see some real violence in the streets.

A perceptive article in a recent issue of R underscores the blatant hypocrisy of New York Rockefeller drug code. Written by Thomas Powe drives home once again the consequences of the F Kafkaesque, police state attitude towards th pleasure through artificial means. He relates t Rockefeller's drug law has not done any of the intended to do. It has not dried up heroin in the not scared addicts into treatment. It has not pu pushers in jail to scare the rest out of business. done? Put a lot of poor wretches in jail." Powe inform us that three-quarters of the heroin quantities of an eighth of an ounce or less, and real big, organized crime connected dealer has since this Orwellian nightmare was enacted. Thu destitute and desperate street addicts who interned in such well-known New York resorts

But enough of all this. As I said, I do prefer anyway, people have always used mind deadening drugs. The Volstead Act, we m created far more problems than it ever "solv given the sick meritocracy, the perverted hierar personality, intelligence, money, status, power, the panoply of items which stomp people in deeper every day, and couple it with humar dilemmas of hate, war, love, fear, death, p destruction – ...and well, I have a feeling drug stay. We all have our security wraps, our in blankets, and our collective vulnerability leads their individual shelters in consciousness alteri Kurt Vonnegut once said, when an individual is anyone he perceives himself to be, and for n necessarily differ from his stinking lot in life. grant one a vacation from the unplayable hand him.

••••••••••••

... Now for something sane...

It appears that Vermont politicians have lengths to obviate an increase in taxes. Con recession wracked economy and declining Governor Salmon and the legislature have consider a wide range of alternative ways to needed state programs. A wily politician, S asked OPEN SEASON to draw up a list of pa alternatives that would help the state discover revenue. I immediately referred the Go consultant inebriate, Dan Dreg. Mr. Dreg, some time yearned to present his unique fund state officials. Dan even insured me that hi would "overflow Montpelier's coffers within

The Governor dutifully thanked me for my inquired of where he could locate Mr. Dreg.

"No problems, Governor Salmon," I rep office hours every day at the Millard Burlington, and if you just dropped in I'm more than glad to accommodate you."

"Uh...gee...I don't know" was Salmon's ri keep up my image if I'm going to have a sno hell of defeating Bob Stafford in '76... and I should be seen in the Fillmore ...after all, you people said about Phil Hoff and all, so I o when I'm out of state..."

Well, I informed the Governor that it wo hour or so, and besides, Mr. Dreg could probab travel to Montpelier if he was granted a criminal record eradicated. Mr. Dreg hasn't employment, as he has been a delinquent a been thrown out of high school for smoking lavatory, apprehended for urinating in an Fillmore (and ending up spending the n recently the luckless Dreg was observed by smoking a bowl of grass outside the Champ strip show booth.

"Well," sighed the Governor, "I'll do Vermont out of this fiscal crisis, even trek it'll help."

So last Wednesday the Governor's limo front of Domino's Pizza, and the artic face-to-face over a drink with Dan Dreg to

"Glad to meetcha, Gov'nur" smiled Dreg to outline his plan to raise state revenues, political fellas have been dead wrong all Vermont. I've got an idea that will not only

...ver... he doesn't talk so much now. I ...ngs well... like when he started out he ...lions, but now he over does it a little bit ... And he is always tearing down other ... chills for their team. What has he ...ll? Monday night football to him... he greatest thing in the world now... he ...efore. He is not in the class as just a ... business personality.

...cognized much around town?

... the time. Not only around town but ...nd New York and up in Montreal... the

...t feel?

... way... other times it can be a pain ... with it unless someone gets real nasty ...ome up and say I know you and shake ... autograph.

...is it to get into the sportscaster game? ...eak?

...t people get started in the play by play ...ork for a radio station. Now you say, ...o to work for a radio station?" Some ...ool but it's not necessary. Some people ...on and then you get a job. Once you are ... if a sportscaster gets sick or leaves or ...t there and they know you and you ask ...hould do it. I don't think that anybody ... way.

...tty happy right now?

...one looking to take over Monday night ...

...most guys in the business have dreams of ...em but it is not very practical. There's an ...tion... not only competition but it is also ...

...the chance to do big-time college football ...ou jump at it?

...yes... depending on where it is and what ...ecause I have been here so long and am ... a good job and I have security... but yeah ... if I had the chance to do Ohio State ...arolina basketball... yeah probably ...

...been the most momentous screw-up of ...

...ne I can think of... the last game of the ... Dartmouth played at Princeton and I got ...rt here and couldn't get out. It was really ...n't get down there. I never got to the ...se of the Burlington airport socked in for ...uldn't get out. It was the only time in ...ave missed a game... the only time?

...d you think of the line... GOOD NIGHT ...

...t good sports... God I don't remember, it ... don't know where it started. Some guys ... night and good sports. I have just cut it ...ed it for so long. I don't know where it ... sign-off thing, that's all... just a way of ... I mean what are you going to say. That's ... phrase that sticks with you and becomes a ...

Photo by Steve Tanner

A Cheap Shot...

by Scott MacKay

I've always held that if one ponders too heavily the absurdities of modern life, he will ultimately be driven to seek a release, a momentary respite, through one of two emotional avenues – either by laughing or crying. In recent times, the veracity of this credo has been upheld almost daily by the actions of that venal institution known as government. In the distant past, I had an inordinate capacity to muster up some good old fashioned rage at the decisions of the fools and tyrants who simultaneously run and ruin this world. Of late however, I prefer the psychic anathestic of laughter, and wax risible over even the most macabre deprivations of mankind.

One minute area of our government's actions that never fails to evoke these dual sentiments is the way in which Americans treat drugs. The enforcement of anti-drug laws in this good ole USA constitutes a draconian miasma of hypocrisy, stupidity and downright schizophrenia. It conjures up images of politicians whose minds have been addled with alcohol hiring punks like Paul Lawrence to chase down a kid shorting up two roaches in a cornfield. Visions of the kid with the roaches being hauled before some Neanderthal judge while the nation's biggest pusher, Mr. M.D. is rewarded with a Mercedes-Benz and an INC. after his name for insuring that Valiums and Librioms are the most prescribed drugs in the country. Reminds one daily that the government won't legalize marijuana because "we don't know enough about it", yet the one addicting drug whose deleterious impact on the human body is well documented – tobacco – reaps millions each year in cigarette taxes. On my last visit (I damn sure hope it's my last) to the Correctional Center I met some dangerous pot inhalers, but never ran across the President of American Tobacco or the Chairman of the R.J. Reynolds Corporation.

And everyone knows that the real way to create chaos in our society would be to deprive every American of the drug he relies on – booze, pot, ups, downs, cigarettes, heroin, sominex, (TeeVee and sex too?) – every legal /illegal mind-altering substance there is. For a period of about two weeks. Luckily, this ultimate prohibition is impossible, or all of us would be scurrying for Canada, caves or fall-out shelters faster than one can say boycott Gallo wine. The Weathermen had it all wrong. Instead of trying to disrupt society by anti-war protests, bombing banks and FBI offices or trashing the Justice department, they should have conspired to completely rid America of drugs for a week or two. Then we would see some real violence in the streets.

A perceptive article in a recent issue of Rolling Stone underscores the blatant hypocrisy of New York's infamous Rockefeller drug code. Written by Thomas Powers, the piece drives home once again the consequences of the Empire State's Kafkaesque, police state attitude towards those seeking pleasure through artificial means. He relates that, "so far Rockefeller's drug law has not done any of the things it was intended to do. It has not dried up heroin in the streets. It has not scared addicts into treatment. It has not put enough big pushers in jail to scare the rest out of business. So what has it done? Put a lot of poor wretches in jail." Powers goes on to inform us that three-quarters of the heroin arrests are for quantities of an eighth of an ounce or less, and that only one real big, organized crime connected dealer has been nabbed since this Orwellian nightmare was enacted. Thus it is only the destitute and desperate street addicts who are routinely interned in such well-known New York resorts as Attica.

But enough of all this. As I said, I do prefer to laugh. And anyway, people have always used mind awakening or deadening drugs. The Volstead Act, we must remember, created far more problems than it ever "solved". Further, given the sick meritocracy, the perverted hierarchy of looks, personality, intelligence, money, status, power, ad infinitum, – the panoply of items which stomp people into the ground deeper every day, and couple it with humanity's age-old dilemmas of hate, war, love, fear, death, prejudice, guilt, destruction – ...and well, I have a feeling drugs are here to stay. We all have our security wraps, our individual Linus blankets, and our collective vulnerability leads many to take their individual shelters in consciousness altering delights. As Kurt Vonnegut once said, when an individual is high, he can be anyone he perceives himself to be, and for many, this will necessarily differ from his stinking lot in life. Drugs can often grant one a vacation from the unplayable hand fate has dealt him.

••••••••••••

... Now for something sane...

It appears that Vermont politicians have gone to great lengths to obviate an increase in taxes. Confronted with a recession wracked economy and declining state revenues, Governor Salmon and the legislature have been forced to consider a wide range of alternative ways to finance direly needed state programs. A wily politician, Salmon recently asked OPEN SEASON to draw up a list of palatable, realistic alternatives that would help the state discover new sources of revenue. I immediately referred the Governor to my consultant inebriete, Dan Dreg. Mr. Dreg, you see, has for some time yearned to present his unique fund-raising plan to state officials. Dan even insured me that his sure-fire plan would "overflow Montpelier's coffers within one fiscal year."

The Governor dutifully thanked me for my suggestion and inquired of where he could locate Mr. Dreg.

"No problems, Governor Salmon," I replied, "he holds office hours every day at the Millard Fillmore bar in Burlington, and if you just dropped in I'm sure he would be more than glad to accommodate you."

"Uh...gee...I don't know" was Salmon's riposte, "I have to keep up my image if I'm going to have a snowball's chance in hell of defeating Bob Stafford in '76... and I am not sure if I should be seen in the Fillmore ...after all, you remember what people said about Phil Hoff and all, so I only take a drink when I'm out of state..."

Well, I informed the Governor that it would only take an hour or so, and besides, Mr. Dreg could probably be induced to travel to Montpelier if he was granted amnesty, and his criminal record eradicated. Mr. Dreg hasn't been able to gain employment, as he has been a delinquent all his life, having been thrown out of high school for smoking a Marlboro in the lavatory, apprehended for urinating in an alley outside the Fillmore (and ending up spending the night in jail) and recently the luckless Dreg was observed by the Gendarmes smoking a bowl of grass outside the Champlain Valley Fair's strip show booth.

"Well," sighed the Governor, "I'll do anything to get Vermont out of this fiscal crisis, even trek to the Fillmore if it'll help."

So last Wednesday the Governor's limosine was parked in front of Domino's Pizza, and the articulate lawyer sat face-to-face over a drink with Dan Dreg to hear him out.

"Glad to meetcha, Gov'nur" smiled Dreg as he commenced to outline his plan to raise state revenues, "you know, you political fellas have been dead wrong all these years about Vermont. I've got an idea that will not only raise a fortune in

Open Season

For Dan Dreg had an advertising man's dream that would send Madison Avenue for a whirl. He had formulated brilliant commercials targeted at specific segments of the population.

"First," explained Dreg, "We would have to corner the youth market."

Dreg's ad for the youth population was written along the lines of those ubiquitous "I sure do miss my Genesee" blurbs that punctuate sporting events. First, a panorama of Columbian marijuana fields, replete with ecstatic natives running to and fro flashed on the screen. Then a semi-respectable looking young fellow comes into the foreground and sighing, utters in an unmistakable Vermont accent..."I'm down here in Columbia where they got some of the best marijuana in the world, but I sure do miss my Vermont Green". Fade quickly to the summit of Mt. Mansfield on a sunny spring day, where a bell-bottomed young man and his overall-adorned, seductively sweet looking girlfriend are sharing a bowl and grinning so wide they could swallow a banana sideways. In the background, John Denver croons,"Green Mountain High..."

Naturally, we would also have to appeal to the young jocks of the world. So instead of Walt Frazier doing those "I get high on rebounds" drivel that the public service anti-drug commercials now incorporate, we will change the image by hiring some badass athlete with impeccable credentials. Get a Dick Butkus, a John Havlichek or a mean Joe Green to vault onto the tube and imperiously intone,"I get high on the real thing...Vermont Green." Maybe change the Charles Atlas-Joe Weider muscle building course ads, so that Mac loses the girl when the 98 pound weakling struts down to the beach with a canister full of Vermont Green in his pocket. Hell, Mark Spitz will endorse anything for a buck, and he would be very effective with all those Long Island j.a.p.s.

For the Housewives who now have to put up with white knights pushing Tide and Ajax on soap operas, we could employ a slightly different approach. Show a flustered young housewife manacled to her vacuum cleaner...suddenly, her friendly coffee-klatch counterpart bursts in, and excitedly emits, "Sally, spring cleaning floats by sooo much faster with a few bowls of that great Green Mountain High." Or perhaps a catchy, pithy little jingle, like, "When I just can't cope, I take a toke of that good ole Vermont dope."

With a minimum of imagination, Vermont's legalized marijuana could easily be marketed to the hip, upwardly-mobile NEW YORK and COSMOPOLITAN magazine types, the swinging singles crowd that those apres-ski joints cater to. Pretty soon Derek Sanderson and Hugh Hefner would have to open nightclubs in Stowe, and Amtrak's special ski excursion trains would be jammed months in advance.

Let us not forget our other potential markets either. I'm sure we could garner a real farmer, say a fellow with a name like Clive Osgood from Monkton. Portray him smoking a joy, with his contented cows in the background, telling his old friend Foster Johnson how, "the mornin' milkin' chores are nothin now that we got Vermont Green." And Senior Citizens! Zero in a zoom lens on the Shady Grove Nursing Home front porch, with an elderly couple sitting in their regular rocking chairs. Mabel looks over at husband Elmer and smiles, good-naturedly saying, "Why retire to Florida when we got Vermont Green." Elmer gives Mabel a loving pat on the shoulder while adding, "Mabel doesn't even take Geritol anymore, not since our grandchildren turned us on to Vermont's own country cultivated marijuana."

The possibilities are infinite. Billboards with "Bridge the generation gap with Vermont Green" or the "The family that smokes together stays together" slogans emblazoned across the top, and a picture depicting the wholesome Vermont family doin' up a number underneath.

By this time, Governor Salmon was about to leave the hallowed halls of the Fillmore, as he was scheduled to speak at the Capital City Rotary Club. He thanked Dan Dreg, autographed his hash pipe and informed Mr. Dreg that his plans were a few years ahead of his time. The Governor disclosed that, in his judgment, "political conditions aren't ripe yet for so drastic a change."

A chagrined Mr. Dreg had done all he could to persuade the good Governor, and nonetheless had failed. As he ushered Salmon to the door, Dreg asked the Governor, "Mr. Salmon, why does anyone really want to run against Senator Stafford anyway...I mean, he hasn't done anything..."

••••••••••••

CHEAP SHOTS: We checked out two unconfirmed rumors over vacation, and discovered that no, H.R. Haldeman really didn't ask CBS for his $25,000 interview fee in unmarked tens and twenties wrapped in a brown paper bag...and no, the Burlington police have not moved their target practice range to six inches...Who's the charlatan who thinks he can pen decent restaurant reviews – his Sirloin Saloon piece sounded like C.M.B.'S TBR review, except it wasn't nearly as accurate or as well-written...and, yes dammit, the FREE PRESS's coverage of recent disasters reeks of the National ENQUIRER's sensationalist trash...

Photo by Sherry Grancy

The Perils Of Pepper

THE PERILS OF PEPPER

Your body aches, it's been a long night, one full of action
Full of spontaneous mind action
"My god, is it really morning?" you ask.
Is that lovely bird still next to you?
Looking like a breath of Australian air,
She whines in your ear, "Pretty Pepper"
All you can say is "Yes... beautiful... beautiful"
Full bodied, fully spread, happily endowed Pepper.
You gaze at her and marvel,
What a specimen, what a rare treat
Only the gods could possibly have had better.
Is it her understanding or your finesse,
Or is it mutual?
Don't think about it...

Talkin' about my bird. Her eagle act can bring about near pandemonium – body tight, wings pulled up around her wrestler's neck. Her mind taut, ready for action:

"Pepper, pretty Pepper, beer please, beer please" rattled off in rapid succession. One can only marvel at the incredulous ability of this being to communicate her true essence – yes, spirit – that's the word.

That spirit which only true flight through the heavens of Apt. 1C can bring on; she slashes the air, contorting her body to knife her way in the predestined direction. That direction inevitably leads to her happiest landings: your head or your shoulder or the top of her golden dome. Munchie time.

That's right, I do have a bird, an official Australian bird, the official genus I have no idea of, but in layman's terms, she is labeled a Cocatiel. With the uncanny ability to mimic that which you drill into it, my bird, which is only 10 months old already has her name (or is it his name?) – Pepper – down pat. Then, to add a little vanity, "pretty Pepper", and then "beer please", and "happy hangover." Of course, it's easier for Pepper to whistle than talk so he has a superb cat call, you know the whistle that the fox laid on little red riding hood to catch her attention. Also a couple of bird calls, whipporwhil and bob-white; and the whistle that most people get their dogs with.

The extravaganza at present is to teach Pepper how to whistle the national anthem by '76... so far, she's already got the "O say can you see" part down

Flash! Pretty Pepper escapes!

Under the mysterious guise of my valiant roommate's shoulder, Pepper, a bird of highest acclaim, escaped yesterday. That's right, waking at his usual hour of 12 noon, Bill headed for his 2 p.m. class – two hours waking time is average. Any way, Bill put on his heavy jacket and for some unbelievable reason was unable to detect Pepper on his shoulder. Next thing Bill knew Pepper's wings swatted his ears and it was off to the races as Pepper was now loose in the out of doors, our parking lot. Bill, being blessed with a tongue to make Lenny Bruce sound like Cinderella, was totally speechless, to venture at a commonly used term he was freaked out, fucked up, in the shits, ready for the shits and even a little scared. Pepper was loose, nothin' to stop him from going up, up and out, no less, on cold air which could easily kill him!

As usual, the incredible happened, up to the roof, over to the trees. I guarantee that Bill's frozen face would have stopped the magra. But never did Pepper get out of sight. I have Pepper trained to come on my call when in the house Bill was breaking his larynx in the outside.

Well, not to make a short flash any longer, Pepper landed on a car out of complete exhaustion. Bill stealthily stalked the quarry.

As he moved the parking lot shook as Bill – knees, thighs, hands, mind and soul quivered–

He lurched–

Shoot off the rockets, he grabbed him and with the strength of one who knows he carried screeching and pecking Pepper back to his golden dome in the apartment. Holy, shit, the inevitable had happened and Pepper was alive. Bill'd a lucky bastard, really. I returned home early this morning to hear that gruesome tale and to happily hear a "pretty Pepper" and a small but resounding "thud" on the bottom of the golden dome– thank God, he still works.

"Pepper, pretty Pepper, Beer please, happy hangover, Pepper."

The Pedestal Of Protein

by Sue Morse and Cindy Theall
Living/Learning Nutrition Program

Carbohydrates and fats have been under constant attack as contributors to obesity and heart disease but rarely does one find protein under scrutiny. For some reason, protein has been placed on a pedestal as a nutrient which can do no wrong. Does protein have better nutritional quality than fats and carbohydrates?

Protein is a general term for a specific arrangement of smaller units, the amino acids. There are 20-22 amino acids from which a protein molecule is constructed. Of these 8-10 are essential amino acids, the human body cannot manufacture these units and they must be supplied by food. The most commonly considered essential amino acids are leucine, isoleucine, lysine, methionine, phenylalanine, threonine, tryptophan, and valine. Arginine and histidine are essential for the growing individual and for adults in poor health. We will consider the first eight amino acids.

The importance of the essential amino acids is that their efficiency in the body depends on the presence of all 8 in correct proportions. Some foods contain all 8 amino acids and they are called complete proteins. Meats and animal proteins are sources of complete protein. Incomplete proteins, or foods that are deficient in one or more of the essential amino acids, This lack can effect the total efficiency of the remaining essential amino acids. Plant proteins are sources of imcomplete protein but they differ in their amino acid deficiencies. Hence, plant foods can be matched in a meal to produce complete proteins.

Proteins differ in degree of usage by the body also. Available proteins are ones that the body can digest and utilize. About 90% of animal proteins are available. In vegetable material starchy membranes are sometimes indigestible and the protein is unavailable to the body. Therefore, when matching vegetable proteins one needs to also consider its availability as well as completeness.

Proteins are needed for growth, repair, and maintenance of the body. The small intestine breaks down food proteins into the amino acids and reconstructs new proteins needed within the body. Enzymes, red blood cells, DNA, hormones, antibodies, and much of the body itself are all made of protein. Too little protein can stunt growth, especially if a child is deprived of protein prenatally or in early infancy. The bloated stomachs of African and Indian children result from the protein deficiency disease kwashiorkor in which the lack of protein has upset the fluid maintenance in the tissues.

The recommended daily allowance for proteins is .424 grams protein per pound of body weight or about 68 grams protein for a 162 pound person. This is about 2½ ounces of protein required daily. The average American eats well over this amount. Excess amino acids from excess protein cannot be stored in the body but a part of them is converted to simple sugars and in turn to energy or stored as fat like carbohydrates. The other part of excess amino acids contains nitrogen, called urea, and is excreted by the kidneys. Excessive urea can be a problem for persons with certain kidney ailments.

Protein sources are: most fish, meat, cheese, 20-28%; most nuts, 15-17%; eggs, 13%; breads 8-10%; legumes, 5-8%; most cakes 3-5%; milk, 3.5%; most deep green vegetables, corn, rice, 2-3%; most fruits ½-2% protein. Remember that the animal proteins are complete whereas the plant proteins are incomplete. There is no difference in the quality of protein whether it is from animal or plant sources as long as it is available and complete in the essential amino acids. The American tradition of a meat meal has placed heavy emphasis on meat as sole sources of protein. While meat conveniently provides all essential amino acids as well as other nutrients in one food substance, a person can thrive just as well on a diet of balanced plant proteins.

Another concern over the meat-eating tradition is the amount of fat consumed along with animal protein. In 8 ounces of rib roast there are 45 grams of pure protein (almost daily requirement) but there are also 90 grams of animal fat. The pure protein contains only 180 calories but the fat has a whopping 810 calories. There is some evidence that America as a meat-eating nation has more stomach and intestinal cancer than Japan, a fish and rice nation, perhaps because of the fat consumed with meat.

Protein requirements are consistent and do not increase with increased activity. Protein is not a major energy source; athletes do not need more protein than an average person. Young children, pregnant women, surgical patients, and elderly people may require more than average amounts due to increased need for growth and repair of body cells.

Eating most of the day's protein requirements at the evening meal may cause a protein gap between dawn and late afternoon as most of the protein will have been metabolized by morning. For a short period of time there are complex emergency procedures to give the body the protein it needs during the day. But if protein sources are cut off with self-imposed starvation, the body will literally begin to consume itself.

The main thing to remember about protein is that it is a collection of amino acids, 8-10 of which are essential and must be complete at each meal to ensure total utilization by the body. The protein need not be from a meat source. Sufficient protein must be supplied daily for proper growth and maintenance. Finally, protein should not be put on a pedestal as too much of a good thing can be harmful to your health.

Need A Job?
Try Porno Movies

(CPS) - Wondering what to do to meet rising tuition, room and meal costs? Do what one Columbia University coed did - become an actor in a porno film.

It all began last September when pornography producer Carter Stevens (a stage name) ran an ad in the Columbia Spectator asking for "liberated, good-looking" women wanting to make "very good money." The job was a major role in a porno film at $150 a day.

The woman, a PhD English candidate, said she thought it would be interesting and she was eventually hired by Stevens.

"The film was enormously fun and very interesting," she noted. "The sex turned out to be a very pleasant surprise. All the people that were around me were, in a way, very, very supportive."

"I prefer using college students," said producer Stevens. "I've found that they can handle themselves a little better because they are more intelligent. I need people who can follow directions."

But porno films are definitely not for everyone. "People think it's a 24-hour orgy and you get paid to boot. But that's the first thing I try to get across - that it's very hard work," said Stevens.

"I'm not out to ruin anybody's life," he continued. "When a lady comes to apply for a film I usually try and freak her out. I figure if they rattle here they'll rattle on the set.

"A girl will sit down and say she's got no hang-ups and then you start to question her and you find out she'll only do it missionary every other Friday night, with the lights out, her boyfriend of thirty years, and Montovani on the radio."

Meanwhile the New York Post has quoted industry insiders as saying that dozens of female students are trying to compete with the professional porn actresses, out-of-work models and call girls for roles in the hard core flicks.

The Post reported that acting in the porn circuit is a lucrative business: in one recent hard core flick, the newspaper said, the star was a 20-year-old art student who drew $1000 for just four days of work. Her co-star, also a college student, made $300 working the same set for just two days, the Post said.

Today's Horrorscope

by Claire Voyent

ARIES (MARCH 21-APRIL 19):
Today is your lucky day! However in the morning you will lose all your money. In the afternoon you will lose your love, and in the evening you'll lose your health.

TAURUS (APRIL 20-MAY 20):
Today you will have a maddening affair in the middle of Church Street.

GEMINI (MAY 21-JUNE 20):
Forget it. I'd avoid getting up today.

CANCER (JUNE 21-JULY 22):
Your local American Lung Association has a message for you today.

LEO (JULY 23-AUGUST 22):
Be careful they may reinstitute the Death Penalty.

VIRGO (Aug 23-Sept 22):
Avoid taking tests today especially in: English, math, science, social sciences, engineering, home ec., environmental studies, dental hygiene...

LIBRA (SEPT 23-OCT 22):
Your ship will come in. Check your nautical insurance. Remember the Titanic!

SCORPIO (OCT 23- Nov 21):
Due to the moon's recent conjunction with Saturn in relation to the passing constellation of Aries at right angles with Virgo, which has a grandslam with Libra and Sagittarious who's outer path is passing Neptune I would advise making out a will today.

SAGITTARIUS (NOV 22-DEC 21):
You will soon take a short trip (if there is any stuff available)

CAPRICORN (DEC 22-JAN 19):
Remember the Alamo!

AQUARIUS (JAN 20-FEB 18):
Today, you will finally save the world.

PISCES (FEB 19-MARCH 20):
Aquarians can help show the way. This is no fishy matter, it's your turn next.

WRUV

(A rambling dialogue overheard on the UVM Green)

INEXPERIENCED STUDENT: Say, sir, excuse me. I'm new here this year, AND I'm interested in getting into radio. What's a good station around here.

EXPERIENCED STUDENT: WRUV of course. You see, WRUV is the best station in the world...

IN: What did you say?

EX: WRUV... the best station in the world.

IN: What in the...

EX: Really. I'm mad, but I'm not kidding.

IN: Sure guy, sure. Listen, you seem to be pretty hip, tell me why they're the best.

EX: 'Why?!, you ask? You silly human! Where else can you hear the latest releases and your old favorites, played simultaneously? Where else can you hear a D.J. mispronounce galactopoiesis?

IN: Galactopoi...?

EX: What other radio station serves the campus of the University of Vermont? Who else in their right mind would invite you with open arms to come join their outlandish ranks?

IN: Well, I...

EX: Psssst. I dare to tell you of their secret location. WRUV-FM is on the second floor of Pomeroy Hall, see that big white, ugly building over there? And WRUV-AM is out back in the Pomeroy Annex, which looks like a barn. But you better hussle on over there, 'cause the two of them are looking for a new home together - in fact, I heard someone say that WRUV is planning to move into the old music building behind Waterman.

IN: You don't say? Well listen, thanks for the info. By the way, you sound sort of radio crazy yourself, what's your name?

EX: The Friday Night Boogie Man, what's yours?

Matches May Cause Cancer

(Editor's note: The following article was submitted by Gwen LaCrosse, campus editor of the University of Missouri-Columbia Maneater.)

(CPS) - Maybe it's the match.

Cigarette tobacco has long been cited as a major cause of lung cancer. A University of Missouri-Columbia professor, however, has recently published a report indicating book matches and cigarette lighters may contribute nearly as heavily to the spread of cancer as the tobacco in cigarettes itself.

Dr. Carl Marienfield conducted a year-long study into the possible connection between the inhalation of match fumes and the spread of lung cancer.

Two substances poisonous to humans were found in the match heads. One of the substances, benzopyrene, is the main element in soot.

Marienfield concluded that a definite connection exists between the lighting distance of a cigarette and the percentage of poisonous unburned soot inhaled.

With a pipe very little soot is inhaled, and while the cigar distance is close to the nose, it still is not as close as that of the cigarette, he said.

Cupping the flame while lighting the cigarette also causes greater fume inhalation, he said, because it cuts off air passages.

Philosophy Lectures

The University of Vermont will sponsor a series of six lectures by eminent American philosophers on the philosophy of John Dewey. Each lecture will be devoted to an examination of the relevance of Dewey's thought to work in one area of contemporary philosophy. The speakers and their subjects are as follows:

April 4 Richard Rorty, Princeton University (Metaphysics)

April 9 Charles Frankel, Columbia University (Social Philosophy)

April 18 Joseph Margolis, Temple University (Theory of Knowledge)

April 23 Frederick Olafson, University of California at San Diego (Philosophy of Education)

April 25 Mortimer Kadish, Case Western Reserve University (Aesthetics)

May 2 James Rachels, University of Miami (Ethics)

All lectures, except that of Professor Frankel, will take place at 8:15 p.m. in John Dewey Lounge in the Old Mill Building, University of Vermont. Professor Frankel's lecture will take place at 4:30 p.m. The lectures are free, and the public is invited.

Free 22-Piece Jazz Ensemble Concert

The UVM Modern Jazz Ensemble will present a free concert on Saturday, April 5, at 8 p.m. in the Ira Allen Chapel.

The 22-piece ensemble is made up entirely of UVM students and the program will feature big band sounds from the late 30's up to the jazz-rock sounds of today. Compositions include pieces by Count Basie, Glenn Miller, Woody Herman, and Chicago.

In addition, many other modern tunes that will be performed have been written by the same composers that write for today's big bands like Doc Severson, Don Ellis, and Maynard Ferguson.

The UVM Modern Jazz Ensemble has toured extensively during this school year and this concert will mark their only personal appearance in Burlington this season.

On April 15th, 16th, and 17th, in the Billings North Lounge, the UVM Women's Caucus will sponsor activities to celebrate International Women's Year. Events will include: an Assertiveness Workshop, panels on alternative careers and lifestyles for after graduation, a look at women in sports and discussions of the position of women in other cultures. Further information will be available later. Call the Women's Center, 656-4366, mornings. Jan Eastman.

Woman Sgt. Gets Back

(CPS) - The first woman sergeant-at-arms for the California legislature quickly initiated a dispute with her male co-workers the first day on the job. The subject: nudity.

When Sandra Bouressa entered the sergeant's office in the Capitol basement she noticed that the walls had six "Playboy" centerfolds on them. Rather than protesting, she got into the spirit by returning the next day with a nude male centerfold from "Playgirl Magazine" and put it on the wall with the others.

The male sergeants objected to the male but Sandra held her ground. "The whole thing was ridiculous," she said. "They wanted their six ladies and I couldn't have my picture."

When Bouressa returned to the office for her third day of work, she discovered that all seven centerfolds had been removed by the other sergeants.

Undergrad Puzzled With Indecision

Dayton, Ohio. Willie Nod, an Undergraduate at the University of Dayton was faced yesterday with a perplexing enigma. Leaving his home base, Rooter Hall, Mr. Nod went down to the local shopping center to buy a bottle of wine. When he reached the shopping center he was approached by a group of AFL workers picketing the wine and grape sales. Nod listened to their arguments, mouth agape and shaking his head in acknowledgement. Finally, he was heard to say, "Yeah, I learned all about the prices and that stuff in my economics class." Nod then pondered the different arguments and finally said "I'm not sure, let me take it home and think about it. I'll just buy beer for the time being."

Due to tremendous response . . .
LIPPA'S IS REPEATING BY DEMAND ---

EAR PIERCING CLINIC
FRIDAY- April 11 4 PM to 9 PM
SATURDAY- April 12
10 AM to 4:30 PM
A registered nurse especially trained in ear piercing and using a precision instrument will be at Lippa's to perform the painless procedure.
FREE EAR PIERCING with the purchase of one pair of earrings at $8.95
JOIN LIPPA'S EARRING CLUB
After your 5th earring purchase, we'll average out the cost of your earrings and give you the 6th pair FREE!
Charge Accounts Welcomed
LIPPA'S JEWELERS
46 Church Street Burlington, Vermont
Open Friday Evening

Texas Instruments
The World's Most Wanted Scientific Calculator

OUR PRICE $96.80
Plus $6.90 for local sales tax, shipping/handling charges.
5 day Air Mail/United Parcel Service delivery
Compare with local store prices.
Performs all the functions of higher priced calculators and more for a lot less Thousands sold in hundreds of colleges.
- algebraic keyboard
- accuracy to 13 significant digits
- 12 digit display - 10 digit mantissa, 2 digit exponent
- powers
- roots
- factorials
- logarithmic, trigonometric, hyperbolic functions
- memory storage and recall
- scientific notation
- rechargeable battery pack
1 YEAR TEXAS INSTRUMENTS WARRANTY.
Send certified check or money order for delivery within five days. No COD's please. Slight delay in delivery if personal check accompanies order. Our bank reference: Tower Bank and Trust Co.
BOSTON TECHNICAL, INC.
728 Dedham St., Newton, Mass. 02159
Please ship immediately via Airmail/UPS _____ SR-50(s)
Name _____
Address _____

HAS REOPENED

"Ziggy's" Burlington Shoe repair "Smoke Stack"
BURLINGTON PLACE
"The Mini Mall"
101 Church Street Burlington, Vermont 05401
864-9555
CIGERETTES: 43¢ PACK, $3.89 CARTON
Leather goods Jewelry candles clothing Jokes

APRIL 3, 1975

Boots On The Boardw
by quary wabbit

The asphalt roads are to my rear
I set my boots in two foot gear
They feel some sand beneath the t
The old boardwalk is just ahead.

My boots climb to the old boardw
It's just not like any sidewalk
It is quite long and very wide and protected from the high tide.

The weathered wood echoes the
of moving boots on the ground.
Telephone booths are to the right
And on the left is quite a sight

Yes, on the left is the seashore
with its water, and mighty roar
of waves splashing the sandy beac
The old boardwalk is out of reac

Shoes on pedals are riding by Seagulls' webbed feet are soaring
Tennis sneakers are everywhere
My boots have stopped, only to

The sun has dipped beneath the
The sound of feet has ceased to
The old boardwalk where my bo may now relax its weathered wo

The old boardwalk now to my r
I set my boots in two foot gear.
They feel some sand beneath th
The asphalt roads are now ahea

The Birds

Oh, I know euphemisms
But tell me,
Of anyone g
If you really
I refer you t

Outside our
And many a
Ready to sh
Where bovin
As horny he
Where the t
Learn what
But don't b
You find th

UV

IN: Well, I...

EX: Pssst. I dare to tell you of their secret location — WRUV FM is on the second floor of Pomeroy Hall, see that big white, ugly building over there? And WRUV AM is out back in the Pomeroy Annex, which looks like a barn. But you better hussle on over there 'cause the two of them are looking for a new home together — in fact, I heard someone say that WRUV is planning to move into the old music building behind Waterman.

IN: You don't say? Well listen, thanks for the info. By the way, you sound sort of radio crazy yourself, what's your name?

EX: The Friday Night Boogie Man, what's yours?

...writes, played ... Where else can ...mmmmmmm ... radio station ...mpus of the ...ermont? Who ...t mind would ... open arms to ...eir outlandish

...s Ensemble Concert

... many other ... that will be ... been written ...composers that ...'s big bands like ... Don Ellis, and ... Modern Jazz ... has toured ...ing this school ...oncert will mark ...onal appearance ...is season.

...5th, 16th, and ... Billings North ... Lounge, the UVM Women's Caucus will sponsor activities to celebrate International Women's Year. Events will include: an Assertiveness Workshop, panels on alternative careers and lifestyles for after graduation, a look at women in sports and discussions of the position of women in other cultures. Further information will be available later. Call the Women's Center, 656-4366, mornings. Jan Eastman.

...rgrad Puzzled With Indecision

...n. Willie Nod, ...duate at the ...pton was faced ... a perplexing ... his home base. Mr. Nod went ... local shopping ... bottle of wine. ...ed the shopping ...pproached by a ...AFL workers ...wine and grape ...tened to their arguments, mouth agape and shaking his head in acknowledgement. Finally, he was heard to say, "Yeah, I learned all about the prices and that stuff in my economics class." Nod then pondered the different arguments and finally said "I'm not sure, let me take it home and think about it. I'll just buy beer for the time being."

...oe repair "Smoke Stack"
...ON PLACE
...Mall
...ington, Vermont 05401
...55
...ACK, $3.89 CARTON
...candles clothing Jokes

Food For Thought

Boots On The Boardwalk

by quarry wabbit

The asphalt roads are to my rear
I set my boots in two foot gear.
They feel some sand beneath the tread
The old boardwalk is just ahead.

My boots climb to the old boardwalk
It's just not like any sidewalk.
It is quite long and very wide
and protected from the high tide.

The weathered wood echoes the sound
of moving boots on the ground.
Telephone booths are to the right
And on the left is quite a sight.

Yes, on the left is the seashore
with its water, and mighty roar
of waves splashing the sandy beach
The old boardwalk is out of reach.

Shoes on pedals are riding by
Seagulls' webbed feet are soaring high.
Tennis sneakers are everywhere
My boots have stopped, only to stare.

The sun has dipped beneath the sea
The sound of feet has ceased to be.
The old boardwalk where my boots stood may now relax its weathered wood.

The old boardwalk now to my rear
I set my boots in two foot gear.
They feel some sand beneath the tread
The asphalt roads are now ahead.

Photo by Lew Comenetz

So what of it
Do I love? Am I kind?
Is it me whom you see
Or my body with another body
Observing the differences and similarities
And carefully noting
The way we touch.
I would feel a bit ashamed
To be so attentive
How Absurd, don't you see how it is
And when I laugh too...
Name Withheld

The Esoteric Title Poem

by Quanja Valontav

Driven by Vanity
I go to save a friend again.
A friendship of rescues
We've saved each other many times
Splash! The life preserver's out to keep Quickly tangled but then unloosed
Frees herself then steals away

"We won't keep long if we don't preserve to save!"
She cannot hear
She's too far away,
I try my hap and fly true too
We fly once around the preserving place
Goodbye! Two parting people on their seperate race

Poetik Mootations-Tales From A Vermouth

by Peter Campbell

The Birds, The Bees, and the Cows

Oh, I know of the birds and the bees
-euphemisms winging and stinging.
But tell me, who ever heard
Of anyone getting off on a bee or a bird?
If you really want to learn how
I refer you to the bull and the cow.

Outside our fair city lies many a farm,
And many a farmer willing to do a good turn,
Ready to show what goes on in the barn,
Where bovines shake their udders in pleasure,
As horny henodrines thrust in their leisure,
Where the teenage milkmaids and herdsmans' sons
Learn what to do after the chores are all done
But don't be surprised if after what I related
You find the divine need to be masticated.

Stooping by the Cows on a snowy Evening

Whose cows these are I think I know,
His trailer is in the village though.
He will not see me stooping here to watch his cows bleed in the snow.

My snowmobile is out of gear
And low on gas with no fuel near
Between the coffee and frozen cake,
The lousiest breakfast of the year.

It gives its motor a hardy shake,
As if to ask if there is some mistake.
The only other sound is the rip
Of my butchers' knife at work.

The cows are luscious, fresh, free meat,
But I've got to get back to the jeep,
Before the farmers wake from their sleep
Before the farmers wake from their sleep.

Cow-eyed Coed in the Highlands

With your mammary glands and earth-like hips,
Your celluoid nose and lactile lips,
Your tape-loop laughter and Freudian slips,
Who did they ever think could matriculate you?

With your lower New York accent and your endless dough,
You stand at the corner of sesame street and desolation row,
And look for the place where great minds grow.
Whoever thought they could educate you.

Oh, Cow-eyed coed n the highlands,
Where the crazy-eyed cowboys' hot brands burn,
Their scholastic pencils grind in your plastic urn.

With your diaphragm in the drawer and checkbook in hand,
You drift through the ozone of men barking at your command,
All the ladies from lesbos will get you if they can,
But how could they ever expect to relate to you?

Nobody ever blamed you for the loss of the farm,
But all the ploughboys left the fields for the warmth of your arms,
With their visions and their intellects to sooth your false alarms,
That you find in the night mares of your dream-like charms;
Oh what did they ever think they could wean from you?

Oh, cow-eyed coed in the highlands,
Where the crazy-eyed cowboys' hot brands burn, etc...

Nuclear Power: Breaking Up Is Hard To Do

by John Ghrist

(Editors: This is the first of a two-part series on nuclear power. Part two will deal with public and government efforts to stop the nuclear plant program.)

(CPS) – Nuclear power plants have been hailed by many federal officials as the ultimate answer to the energy problem. Through the use of breeder reactors, more fuel can be created than is used, guaranteeing an inexhaustible supply of energy, both in the short and long term.

On the strength of this primary argument, the US government has pumped more than two-thirds of all federal money spent for energy research and development on the development of nuclear power plants.

The Atomic Energy Commission (AEC) has estimated that nuclear fission reactors would provide between 20–30% of all electrical power used in the US. In his energy plans, President Ford has called for a total of 200 nuclear plants to be built by 1985.

In order to meet Ford's goal, a new nuclear plant must be commissioned about once every three weeks for the next ten years.

Yet opposition to nuclear plants has been around almost as long as the idea for building such plants. Over the last few years, it has spread from environmentalist groups to many scientists, legislators and other citizens.

There are four major problems that are cited by anti-nuclear forces:

(1) Dangers of accidents, failure of safety systems and other operational problems. Nuclear plants produce electrical energy by generating heat through nuclear fission, which is controlled by the insertion and withdrawal of uranium fuel rods in a nuclear reactor. The heat creates steam which powers electrical turbines. If these fuel rods should fail to function for any reason, intense and uncontrolled heat would rage, melt the reactor wall and release radioactive material into the atmosphere.

According to a report commissioned in 1957 by the AEC but never publicized, such an event could cause 50,000 deaths, 100,000 injuries, contaminate an area the size of Pennsylvania and cause billions of dollars in property damage, as well as cause untold other health and genetic problems.

To combat this problem, the AEC designed the Emergency Core Cooling System, which would theoretically flood the reactor chamber and cool things off so the reactor would remain intact. The AEC has pointed to this system as an adequate safety measure. What AEC doesn't like to admit is that in every test ever conducted, the cooling system failed to work even once, according to Friends of the Earth.

Aside from that problem is the possibility of leakage of radioactive materials from the nuclear plants into the surrounding soil and water. At the end of January, 23 of the nation's 53 licensed nuclear power plants were ordered shut down by the new Nuclear Regulatory Commission to search for possible cracks in emergency safety system pipes. This followed earlier shutdowns last fall by the AEC, which found cracks in the pipes used to start up the reactors in eight plants.

(2) What to do with plutonium and other nuclear wastes. Nuclear reactors produce radioactive wastes that cannot be reused, and breeder reactors in particular are a problem because they produce a plutonium isotope that is even more dangerous than plutonium itself.

"Plutonium is a fuel that is toxic beyond human experience," former AEC physicist Donald Geesaman has pointed out, and Frank Pittman, former AEC director of reactor development, has agreed that it is "the most toxic substance known to man."

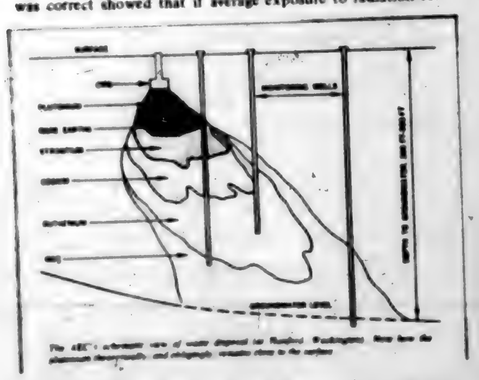
One-millionth of a gram has been shown to cause cancer in laboratory animals, and with a half-life of 24,000 years, plutonium remains radioactive several times longer than man's entire civilization has existed. Plutonium, as well as other fission by-products like strontium-90 and cesium-137, must be isolated from humans for thousands of years.

The three suggested methods of doing this are burial at sea, burial on land and shooting rockets bearing the stuff into the sun. The first idea was popular until it was discovered that there is no material made by man that can withstand the corrosion of seawater for the required thousands of years, and the last idea was considered impractical because of the great expense involved. But now, even land burial has been denounced as an inadequate method of disposal.

At Hanford, WA, the world's largest nuclear dump, it was recently discovered that more than half a million gallons of radioactive liquids have leaked out of the carbon steel and reinforced concrete tanks and ended up in groundwater and the Columbia River.

A 1969 study conducted before the leakages were discovered showed that eating half a pound of duck from the nearby Hanford Reservation would result in an exposure to radioactivity three times the maximum "safe" level set by AEC.

And another study which the AEC only recently admitted was correct showed that if average exposure to radiation for humans ever reached the AEC "safe" level, there would be in excess of "32,000 cases of fatal cancer and leukemia per year, every year."



The AEC's estimate rate of water dispersal for Hanford, Washington. Note how the plutonium disappears, and strontium comes to the surface.

(3) Theft of nuclear materials and terrorism. With such high toxicity, a little plutonium in a reservoir could kill a lot of people. An amount of plutonium the size of a softball could be used to make an atomic bomb equivalent to the one used at Hiroshima.

According to Newsweek, a 20-year-old California student, after only five weeks of studying materials available to the public, was able to design a nuclear device requiring only 15 pounds of plutonium which could be detonated with the force of 1000 tons of TNT.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC), created in January, is expected soon to confirm what was already suspected but which its parent, the AEC, has refused to admit during its existence: that quantities of plutonium and enriched uranium have been missing from processing plant inventories. Theodore Taylor, an expert on nuclear thefts for NRC, speculated recently that the total missing material over the last 30 years of the nuclear age could equal "thousands of kilograms."

(4) Skyrocketing cost and inefficiences. According to a study released in January by the General Accounting Office, the breeder reactor program will cost at least $10 billion, five times what the AEC originally predicted to Congress and twice the figure quoted by the AEC last year.

It is hard irony that despite all the other dangers, the simple cost escalation has the best chance of slowing down or stopping the nuclear plant program. Late last year, the New York Times reported that 112 out of 236 proposed plants had been cancelled because most utility companies have simply been unable to sell enough stocks and bonds in order to meet the rising expected costs for nuclear construction.

Finally, according to figures released last August by the AEC, nuclear generated electricity was available only 68% of the time, and had an average capacity of only 56%, making nuclear power the most expensive and least efficient huge scale method of producing electricity.

Recreation Conflicts In Vermont

Dr. John J. Lindsay, associate professor of recreation management in the school of Natural Resources at the University of Vermont, warns that recreation conflicts are growing in Vermont, and, unless this trend is halted, drastic changes are ahead for the way of life of many Vermonters.

The results of his research have recently been published in a 52-page report titled "Outdoor Recreation Conflict in Vermont." Much of it is based on a study of the results of a survey by eight University students. They talked with 1042 residents, 751 of whom are participants in one or more forms of recreation, and 417 of whom reported some conflict.

"Conflict" is used in its broadest sense in this book. It can be a disagreeable confrontation between property owner and snowmobiler. Or it can be a hiker, seeking a lonely trail and finding more pedestrians on the slopes of Camel's Hump than in downtown Burlington.

"A conflict is anything that interrupts a person's goal, or disrupts his satisfaction over his activity," said Lindsay.

In many of the conflicts, two groups are involved. One is made up of landowners. "Almost ninety percent of Vermont is privately owned. A few years ago the average land holding was more than 100 acres," Lindsay explained. "Now the average is 60-acres, and many of the newer land owners are from out of state, persons who own quarter-acre lots near cities. Many feel the same about their Vermont land as about those building lots – it is theirs, they don't want anyone else on it, and they are often eager to post it."

The other group – and it is possible for a person to belong to both groups – includes each person involved in some form of recreation, and unless he is fortunate enough to own land, he must go either on government land or someone else's property. This is a growing trend. And its demands for land use are growing even faster, due to trends in recreation.

"As little as 10 years ago cross-country skiing, snowmobiling and trail bike riding were insignificant sports in Vermont.

"Today these new activities are popular pastimes, and demand much space, competing for the use of forest and farm land with other traditional activities such as hunting, fishing, hiking, nature observation and camping," Lindsay said.

In the survey, respondents cited snowmobilers as the group most often in conflict with their activities. Homeowners and snowmobilers were found to be the two groups most often in conflict.

Dr. Lindsay quickly points out there is another side to this. Snowmobilers are aware of their public image and are doing something about it. They stress the need for organization. This gives them an opportunity to educate their members, even police them. The club members, too, provide snowmobiling trails for members and post areas where landowners have indicated the snowmobilers are not welcome. Dr. Lindsay strongly favors this route to more laws with resulting enforcement problems.

When discussing ways to avoid conflicts, Dr. Lindsay points out that half of them are accounted for by four causes: discourtesy toward others, safety, trespass and littering. These most common causes could all be reduced or eliminated by a positive change in attitude and behavior on the part of the outdoor recreation users," he said.

"Greater respect for private property, thoughtfulness in asking permission to use private land, being careful with firearms and recreation vehicles, and not spreading trash around the landscape could reduce the incidence of outdoor recreation conflict in Vermont by almost half."

World's Most Complete Hi-Fi & Electronics Center

LAFAYETTE RADIO ELECTRONICS LRE ASSOCIATE STORE

157 Pearl St., Essex Jct.

Sale Prices In Effect Thru Sat., March 22

A WORLD OF SOUND AT DOWN-TO-EARTH SALE PRICES!

LAFAYETTE Criterion PICKERING Garrard

Sale!

Lafayette-Garrard-Pickering-Criterion Stereo System — Save a BUNDLE on Fine Sound

Great system for apartments, smaller setups where high power is not needed. The LR-3004 stereo FM-AM receiver is a fine performer with excellent credentials: tuning meter, stereo light, tape monitor, speaker selector, all the inputs and outputs you need for fine stereo sound from any source. The Garrard SK55 used for fine stereo sound from any source. The Garrard SK55 turntable is a popular model with every feature for fine record play — it comes with a base and installed Pickering P/ATE-1 magnetic cartridge. And the Criterion 333 speakers make any shelf sound great — each has an 8" woofer and 3" tweeter for stirring wide-range sound. And, of course, you get the plugs, cables and wires you need for fast, easy setup!

SAVE 84.75 from individual component prices

• SATISFACTION GUARANTEED • LAFAYETTE HI-FI COMPONENTS GUARANTEED 2 YEARS • CRITERION SPEAKERS GUARANTEED 5 YEARS • 60-DAY EXCHANGE PRIVILEGES

If Bought Separately, $336

YOU SAVE $84.75

$289.95

Sale!

Here's Stereo for '75 from Lafayette — Featuring our new LR-310 Stereo FM-AM Receiver

A fine stereo system for setups where extra power is not needed. The LR-310 puts out 12.5 watts RMS per channel (into 8 ohms from 20-20,000 Hz at 0.8% THD). It has the features you need for truly excellent stereo reproduction: like front/panel tape out, monitor, main and remote speaker outputs for a very sophisticated setup. The Garrard SLX-2 turntable is complete with base and a Pickering P/ATE-1 elliptical stylus stereo cartridge. It plays records quite nicely.

The Criterion 333 acoustic-suspension speaker systems have an 8" woofer and a 3" tweeter for fine full-range sound reproduction. They're walnut-finished and great for shelf mounting. Cables and hookup wire too. Stereo sound, savings and satisfaction is what you get at Lafayette.

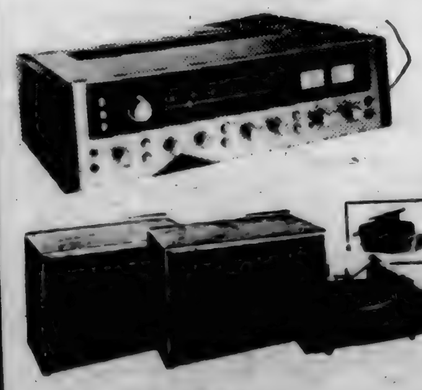
SAVE 57.00 from individual component prices

• SATISFACTION GUARANTEED • LAFAYETTE HI-FI COMPONENTS GUARANTEED 2 YEARS • CRITERION SPEAKERS GUARANTEED 5 YEARS • 60-DAY EXCHANGE PRIVILEGES

If Bought Separately $356

YOU SAVE $57

$299



Sale!

Lafayette-Garrard-Pickering-Criterion Stereo System. Save another BUNDLE on Fine Sound!

The heart of this matched system is our new-for-'75 LR-3500 AM/FM stereo receiver, regularly $299.95 by itself. The specs are fantastic: 67 watts RMS per channel power, both channels driven into 8 ohms from 20 to 20,000 Hz; 0.5% total harmonic distortion; all solid state; phase-lock-loop FM multiplex circuit for maximum stereo separation; FM interstation muter; two tape monitors (for dual recording or tape duplicating); front panel aux input. Convenient left/right channel balance controls; two tuning meters; walnut-finish wood case; 19¼"x5¼"x14½".

TURNTABLE: Garrard Model SLX2: 3-speed, matching wood base; anti-skating and damped tracking controls. With Pickering V-15 P/ATE-1 cartridge: tracking force 4 ± 1 gram; elliptical stylus; Shurematic groove-cleaning brush.

SPEAKERS: 2 Criterion 555's with 10" woofer (4-lb. magnet structure); 5" sealed-back mid-range speaker; 3" air-coupled super tweeter. Rear brilliance control. ¾" sound enclosure; walnut-finish vinyl. 15"x21"x10".

SAVE '109 from individual component prices

• SATISFACTION GUARANTEED • LAFAYETTE HI-FI COMPONENTS GUARANTEED 2 YEARS • CRITERION SPEAKERS GUARANTEED 5 YEARS • 60-DAY EXCHANGE PRIVILEGES

If bought separately '608

YOU SAVE '109

$499

Coupon

Pioneer PL-10 Belt-drive TURN TABLE $79.95 with coupon

Texas Instruments SR-11 electronic slide rule calculator with pi and constant

Original Price - 89.95

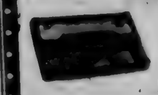
WITH COUPON - 69.95

Coupon

TDK SDC-90 CASSETTES

1-9 Pcs...3.59 each

10 Pcs or more...2.59 each



An Ounce Of P

by Sherry Grantcy

Bill H 365 is currently being discussed in the House Health Committee. If passed, it has revolutionary implications for the future of health care in the United States. It provides for the widespread use of preventive health care measures to detect and prevent the many serious diseases that children are suffering from throughout the State.

An estimate of undetected disease existing in Vermont reveals the following statistics (based on an 1971 HEW memorandum):

- 1,000 Vermont children have undetected epilepsy
- 1,000 Vermont children have cerebral palsy
- 9,300 Vermont children have speech disorders
- 16,000 Vermont children have emotional problems
- 5,200 Vermont children have orthopedic problems
- 5,000 Vermont children have impaired hearing
- 43,000 Vermont children have eye problems

Obviously there is a great need for preventive health care in Vermont. This bill would provide a comprehensive screening facility which would be available to children at key developmental periods of all income levels on a sliding scale basis. Based on the tooth fairy program passed by the Vermont legislature in 1973.

H-365 would allow for either 50% or 75% state assistance for the working poor and lower middle income families.

At present, the EPSDT (Early prevention, screening and diagnosis tests) program has been established in Vermont for Medicaid eligible children. There are many

TOPS · TOPS · TOPS
20% OFF
Spring & Summ
Shirts
Sweaters
Halters
Knit Tops
JoLain
12 Main S
Es
Open
Fri

An Ounce Of Prevention: A Health Screening Program For Children

by Sherry Grantcy

Bill H-365 is currently being discussed in the House Health Committee. If passed, it has revolutionary implications for the future of health care in the United States. It provides for the widespread use of preventive health care measures to detect and prevent the many serious diseases that children are suffering from throughout the State.

An estimate of undetected disease existing in Vermont reveals the following statistics (based on an 1971 HEW memorandum.)

1,000 Vermont children have undetected epilepsy. 1,000 Vermont children have cerebral palsy. 9,300 Vermont children have speech disorders. 16,000 Vermont children have emotional problems. 5,200 Vermont children have orthopedic problems. 5,000 Vermont children have impaired hearing. 43,000 Vermont children have eye problems.

Obviously there is a great need for preventive health care in Vermont. This bill would provide a comprehensive screening facility which would be available to children at key developmental periods of all income levels on a sliding scale basis. Based on the tooth fairy program passed by the Vermont legislature in 1973.

H-365 would allow for either 50% or 75% state assistance for the working poor and lower middle income families.

At present, the EPSDT (Early prevention, screening and diagnosis tests) program has been established in Vermont for Medicaid eligible children. There are many problems with this program as it now functions. The overhead (program development, planning, staff training, clinic space, etc.) is extensive and costly for the limited number of recipients. The outreach is extremely poor. In 1973, 20,755 children were eligible, but only 1,269 were screened.

The average stay on welfare is 18 months. The children of these families are only eligible for the medicaid benefits while their parents are unemployed. Systematic screening is virtually impossible as the transition from welfare to employed occurs sporadically. This system does not generate much enthusiasm for the work incentive since employment means lost Medicaid benefits.

With respect to our current economic crisis, H-365 offers a way to utilize the tax dollar already invested in EPSDT more efficiently. It would provide badly needed health care detection and prevention of disease while strengthening the concept of preventive health care.

This program will cost 1/8 of 1 percent of the total budget. It is difficult to believe that this fraction of the budget constitutes a formidable objection to this bill even during a time of austerity. It is basically a question of priorities. A human waste of the potential of a child should be a basic right rather than on a list of priorities.

Please support this bill by contacting your representative and voicing your opinion. Look for a table in Billings in the near future which will have more information and writing materials.

Health Care Statistics in Vermont

Vermonters spend 11¢ out of every dollar for health care.

Americans spend 8¢ out of every dollar for health care.

A 40% difference

In 1973, the average Vermont family spent $2300 on medical and health services.

97% of health care expenditures are spent on treatment or rehabilitation of acute physical and mental problems.

3% of health expenditures are for prevention and early detection of disease.

money spent on health care ≠ HEALTHY CHILDREN

SUPPORT H-365

VPIRG: Capital Watch

Lobby Disclosure

by Peter Cobb, VPIRG staff

VPIRG is supporting a bill, H.14, which will help dilute the influence of powerful special interests in the law making process in Vermont. Introduced by Rep. Madelaine Kunin (D-Burlington) H.14 requires that lobbyists disclose their expenditures and sources of income. The bill would cover legislative lobbyists as well as lobbyists who promote or oppose administrative regulations in the executive branch.

If passed names of lobbyist and their employers would be published in the House and Senate Journals in mid-January and this list would be updated every two weeks during the session. In addition, lobbyist and their employers would be required to file quarterly financial statements on fees received and funds spent on legislators.

Opponents of the bill are arguing that it is not needed in Vermont since the climate of state government is generally open and honest. They are also complaining that it would be difficult for them to comply with sections of the law requiring lobbyists to estimate how much of their salary pays for lobbying work, since they have many other duties to perform as well.

Vermont is a very small state and many of the more serious problems associated with big-time lobbying do not happen here. Although it is unlikely that actual under-the-table cash payments are made in Vermont, well-financed lobbyists often entertain the state's lawmakers. While no legislator consciously changes one's vote simply because a lobbyist brought him or her to dinner, the effect of the money spent creates an atmosphere that makes it easier for the well-heeled lobbyist to make a point.

The mere fact that many highly paid special interest lobbyists are able to spend a casual evening with a legislator gives them an unfair advantage over the average citizen. H.14 creates a little bit of distance between lobbyist and legislator.

Undoubtedly lobbyists play a crucial role in the formulation and passage of legislation and administrative regulations. In the past the nature of special interests represented by the lobbyist has not always been clear to the legislators. Lobbyists have a legitimate role to play as sources of information for legislators and other governmental officials who often lack vital information. But public disclosure of lobbying expenditures will help governmental officials to objectively weigh the information they receive.

VPIRG: Capital Watch

Hearing Aids

by Peter Cobb, VPIRG Staff

S. 133, introduced by Senator Alden and Senator Howland of Windsor County, would prevent unscrupulous hearing aid dealers from using high pressure sales tactics and misrepresentation to sell hearing aids to persons who do not need them. The bill requires that a written statement of clearance be made by a doctor or audiologist before a hearing aid can be sold. It also provides for a 30-day money back guarantee and a receipt that itemizes services and goods.

Approximately 3,000 hearing aids are sold in Vermont annually, by 30 Vermont and 19 out-of-state dealers. While most dealers are honest businessmen, there is a serious problem with the fast-talking salesman who sells hearing aids to persons who may be completely deaf, who may have compacted wax, or who may need prompt medical attention.

Requiring medical or clinical audiological clearance would result in establishing the necessity of the hearing aid. The effectiveness of the hearing aid would be assured by the 30-day money back guarantee and the safety of using the hearing aid would be established by a professional examination. Many doctors find that hearing loss is sometimes a symptom of serious illness and infections which hearing aids would only cover up or aggravate.

The high cost of hearing aids would also go down. In Minnesota, where a similar law is in effect, hearing aids are selling for $100 to $200 (compared to $300 and $400 in Vermont) because expensive testing and advertising costs are eliminated.

Dealers are arguing that licensing, rather than professional clearance, is the best method to protect the consumer. Licensing, however, would not control consumer abuse. Dealer licensure laws in 39 other states are weak and ineffective, providing no standards for testing, calibration of equipment or training for dealers.

Dealers are also arguing that the bill will drive them out of business and that the bill will prevent many hearing impaired individuals for whom hearing aids are not recommended, from buying them. First only the unscrupulous dealers who sell unnecessary hearing aids will be driven out of business. In addition, the bill will allow any individual, after seeing a doctor or an audiologist, to get a hearing aid, if they so desire.

At present, the bill is being considered by the Senate General and Military Committee. Write to your senator in support of S. 133 as soon as possible since the bill will be sent to the Senate floor for a vote during the week of March 28th.

Survey Results on Local Price Rises

The Vermont Public Interest Research Group has released a retail food survey for the Burlington area. Coordinated by Bill Ross and Bill Stickney, both seniors at UVM, the survey compares the prices of 31 food items at 16 area grocery stores. The survey conducted on March 15, shows a 33% rise in prices compared to a similar survey done in March 1973. The thirty-one items could be purchased in 1973 for only $21.68 while by 1975 the cost jumped to $28.76.

"Interestingly enough," said Peter Cobb, VPIRG staff advisor for the project, "the stores that were most expensive in 1973 were still the highest priced stores two years later." According to the VPIRG survey, two P&C stores on Shelburne Rd and North Ave. in Burlington were the lowest priced stores while the three most expensive stores were all Grand Unions.

Price rises over the two years were greatest in sugar related foods. In 1973 five lbs of sugar could be purchased for $.77 while by March 1975 the same five lbs. of sugar costs nearly $2.50. Dairy products also increased between 30 and 40% as milk jumped from $.53 for a half gallon to $.74. Meat prices surprisingly remained unchanged. The average price of hamburger actually dropped $.07 over the two years.

Copies of the survey can be obtained from the VPIRG office at 49 North Prospect Street.

TOTAL PRICE STORE RANKING	1976 RANK	1975 TOTAL PRICE	1973 RANK
P&C, Shelburne Rd.	1	26.85
P&C, North Ave. Burl.	2	27.57
Country Store, Winooski	3	27.98	11
Country Dollar, Essex	4	28.12	1
Grand Union, Essex Jct.	5	28.33	5
A&P, Essex Jct.	6	28.36	6
Martin's, Shelburne Rd.	7	28.80	3
Martin's, Dorset St.	8	28.80	2
First Nat'l, Williston Rd.	9	28.85	8
Grand Union, Susie Wilson Rd.	10	28.94
Colodbey's, North Ave., Burlington	11	29.12
Grand Union, Winooski	12	29.21	12
Grand Union, Hinesburg Rd.	13	29.25	13
Grand Union, Downtown Burlington	14	29.39	15
Grand Union, Shelburne Rd.	15	29.57	16
Grand Union, North Ave.	16	29.88	9

TOPS · TOPS · TOPS
20% OFF
Spring & Summer Tops
Shirts
Sweaters
Halters
Knit Tops
JoLaine's
12 Main Street at 5 Corners
Essex Junction
Open daily 9:30-5:30
Friday to 9:00PM

Appalachian
THE GAP
9 Mechanics Lane
India Imports
Leather Goods
Silver Jewelry
Baskets
Frye Boots
Levis
Landlubbers

BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE
Retail outlet
FANTASTIC SELECTION OF BEERS, ALES, AND AMERICAN & IMPORTED WINES AT GREAT SAVINGS

DAVE'S AUTOMOTIVE
ROUTE 2, WILLISTON
862-7686
FOREIGN CAR SPECIALIST
INCLUDING THE FINEST IN SEMPERIT RADIAL TIRES
VW BUG BRAKE JOB $49.95
VW Beetle Exhaust Complete $29.95
COMPLETE VW ELECTRONIC FUEL INJECTION DIAGNOSTIC SERVICE

Where Is The Light At The End Of The Tunnel?

by David Ross, Coordinator
Vietnam Veterans Against the War
Winter Soldier Organization

The rapidly improving situation in Cambodia clearly demonstrates the utter failure of the "Nixon-Rockefeller-Ford-Kissinger Doctrine" of using "Asians to fight Asians" as a strategy for propping up and continuing U.S. imperialism in S.E. Asia. Like "Vietnamization," the policy of "Khmerization" has only succeeded in temporarily prolonging the war at an additional cost of tens of thousands of pointlessly sacrificed human lives.

Ford's statement that he is willing to see Lon Nol step down clearly underlines the fact that Lon Nol is, and always has been, a puppet of the American Government. Let us not forget that it was a CIA coup in 1970 that brought Lon Nol and his band of traitors to power against the will of the great majority of the Cambodian people. From the date of this coup, the Cambodian people have rallied with ever increasing determination behind their legitimate and chosen leader—Prince Norodom Sihanouck.

Despite an all out American invasion, saturation bombings and billions in aid, GRUNK (the legitimate Cambodian Government) has liberated 160,000 of Cambodia's 185,000 square kilometers and over five sevenths of the population. Lon Nol is rapidly running out of troops: convicts, teachers, and even eleven year old orphans have been rushed to the front on threat of summery execution — they do not fight well. The Khmer Rouge have large reserves and volunteers have been turned away due to the manpower requirements of re-establishing the rural economy. Almost daily new victories are scored by the liberation forces. Clearly, these events would be impossible without the overwhelming support of the great majority of the Cambodian people. All that remains of the Penom Penh puppet regime is the capitol and a handful of towns. Cut off from each other and under seige, these too will soon fall – despite the Administration's efforts to forestall the inevitable.

Despite the fact that over 60 countries have recognized GRUNK and its head of state, Sihanouck, Ford and Kissinger tell us they don't even know who to negotiate with! And they expect the American public to be gullable enough to buy this!! Even more pathetic, Pete McCloskey (R Ca), a phoney self proclaimed liberal who was a member of the recent Congressional "fact finding mission" to Indochina has reiterated the Administration's call for more aid because "we don't even know who to negotiate with." Confronted by an activist, McCloskey said he had never heard of GRUNK and asked how to spell Sihanouck's name, excitedly noting "This will definitely be transmitted!" Obviously, the Congressional "fact finding" delegates only found those "facts" presented them by embassy staffs during their carefully orchestrated tours.

After decades of lies and Watergating, nothing has changed. The Gallop Poll shows that 78% of the American people are opposed to further support of U.S. imperialism in Indochina, but then the opinion of the American people has always been something to manipulate – not respect – by our "leaders."

Perhaps the biggest current lie is the bloodbath argument. The bloodbath is happening right now – led and organized by U.S. advisors and paid for by the hard earned, inflation riddled dollars of American workers. Sihanouck has made it quite clear that there is nothing to negotiate, and that Lon Nol and his corrupt associates are welcome to leave Cambodia on the next flight out, laying open the path for a peaceful transfer of power back to the legitimate representatives of the Khmer people.

But Rockey–Ford–Kissinger would greatly prefer to see GRUNK forced into the position of taking Penom Penh by massive ground assault. This would unavoidably result in the needless deaths of thousands of helpless civilians caught in the crossfire. These cynical mutants we are forced to call "leaders" can then point their bloody fingers at Congress and smugly say "Bloodbath – we told you so!" This would doubtlessly leave them in a better position to extort further funds for Vietnam which, only temporarily, is in a somewhat better position. (Dare we even think of the possible consequences of sending in the Marines to evacuate the embassy as the capitol actually falls?)

The question is no longer whether or not the U.S. puppets in Asia can hold out against the wrath of their own countrymen, but only a question of for how long and at what increasingly tragic cost. Perhaps the greatest question for the American people at this time is how much longer we are willing to allow the racist arrogance of our unelected "leaders" to continue the real bloodbath to save face, protect their egos, and "make the world safe for U.S. imperialism".

The situation in Indochina is not deteriorating as the Administration and media would plead with us to believe – it is improving dramatically every day. The Indochinese have always made the wise distinction of seeing that there are clear differences between the American people and their government. Just as the Peace Agreements were a great victory for Americans, as well as Indochinese, so will the restoration of power to the legitimate representatives of the Indochinese also be a great victory for all freedom and justice loving peoples. As our Bicentennial approaches, we should be taking a good look at the parallels between our own revolution and revolutions being waged throughout the world against dictatorships that our government has created to serve the interest of big business. We should celebrate their victories. Implement the Peace Agreements/End All Aid to Thieu and Lon Nol!

but what happens after graduation?

SECOND ANNUAL

STUDENT-ALUMNI CAREER DAY

APRIL 12, SATURDAY

LIVING-LEARNING CENTER

All classes are urged to participate

CONCERNED ABOUT YOUR FUTURE? HERE'S A CHANCE TO EXPLORE CAREER OPPORTUNITIES IN ELEVEN BROAD AREAS:

-Allied Health Sciences
-Agriculture
-Business Administration
-Civil Service in Vermont
-Education
-Engineering
-Hotel and Restaurant Management
-Insurance
-Journalism
-Photography
-Social Welfare

Details on Alumni Guests and Program in next week's Vermont Cynic

SPONSORED BY THE ALUMNI ASSOCIATION, PLACEMENT OFFICE, and CLASS OF 1975

S.A. Films Pres

This week the schedule of S.A. Films opens on Friday night with two old films. First there is Abbott and Costello Meet Frankenstein. This film was made in 1948 and stars Bela Lugosi and Lon Chaney. Generally acknowledged to be Abbott and Costello's classic, this excellent spoof of horror films features the Wolfman and Dracula as well as the title monster. Lugosi dominates the film in a nostalgic reprise of his blood-sucking Count. Then there is My Little Chickadee, made in 1940 and starring W.C. Fields, Mae West, Joseph Calleia and Margaret Hamilton. The pairing of Mae West and W.C. Fields seems like the answer to a connoisseur's impossible dream; and Fields proves equal to the occasion. "What symmetrical digits!" he explains, kissing Mae's hand. Miss West holds her own with this account of their first meeting. "I was in a tight spot, but I managed to wiggle out of it." Her high point in this Western farce comes when she fills in for a schoolteacher, and Fields appears in no less than four card games. The films will be shown at 7:30 and 10:00 p.m. in 101 Votey, with both shows being presented at each time. Admission is $1.

On Saturday night S.A. Films has the rare distinction of presenting the Vermont premier of the John Cassavetes' film A Woman Under the Influence. This is a very special showing and the contract with the distributor allows only one showing, which will be at 7:30 in 101 Votey. Admission is $2. For those of you who are not familiar with the film, it was released in 1974 and is nominated for two Academy Awards this year. Gena Rowlands is one of the candidates for Best Actress, and John Cassavetes is up for Best Director. The Academy Awards will be announced very soon, so if you want to see the film before the Oscars are given out, this may be your only chance.

The film tells the story of a woman who is cracking under the pressures of modern life. As one reviewer has remarked, "we are beginning, finally, to understand that people crack up and break down not as the result of extraordinary pressures but because of the ordinary ones of daily life

the ones that without out Woman Under an astonishing poignant portrayal of and out psychological commonplace
Gena Rowland are simply leading roles
once again
among the subtle and human behav
any art form."
Christian Sci
the film "a searing beauti
Its troubled the influence including love devotion society's defi her own inn and just
But mostly fabulous ener energy half-and misu everyone
Gena Rowla
truly great Because th
showing,
people will tickets To door these early, on Th
to 4 and Fri
in the Bill
tickets will come, first
On Mo
French film with one of the series.
film was Rohmer an series of the series
Afternoon
Maud's ordered three ch meets vaca result nea
He grasps develop glamourou that which Hollis
Review
masterpie each vie and sav actors ar perform be show p.m. in is free

1928
NOT JUST A YEA
A LIFETIME

The best in J
in the rom 1928 Jewelry at fro

MAG

...inction of seeing that there are clear the American people and their
...ow Agreements were a great victory
Indochinese, so will the restoration representatives of the Indochinese for all freedom and justice loving
...nal approaches, we should be taking
...ds between our own revolution and
...d throughout the world against
...overnment was ...
We should celebrate their victories
...greements and All Aid to Thieu and

...AY

...HANCE

...gement

...LASS OF 1975

S.A. Films Presents

This week the schedule of S.A. Films opens on Friday night with two old films. First there is Abbott and Costello Meet Frankenstein. This film was made in 1948 and stars Bela Lugosi and Lon Chaney. Generally acknowledged to be Abbott and Costello's classic, this excellent spoof of horror films features the Wolfman and Dracula as well as the title monster. Lugosi dominates the film in a nostalgic reprise of his blood-sucking Count. Then there is My Little Chickadee, made in 1940 and starring W.C. Fields, Mae West, Joseph Calleia and Margaret Hamilton. The pairing of Mae West and W. C. Fields seems like the answer to a connoisseur's impossible dream, and Fields proves equal to the occasion. "What symmetrical digits!" he explains, kissing Mae's hand. Miss West holds her own with this account of their first meeting. "I was in a tight spot, but I managed to wiggle out of it." Her high point in this Western farce comes when she fills in for a schoolteacher, and Fields appears in no less than four card games. The films will be shown at 7:30 and 10:00 p.m. in 101 Votey, with both shows being presented at each time. Admission is $1.

On Saturday night S.A. Films has the rare distinction of presenting the Vermont premier of the John Cassavetes' film A Woman Under the Influence. This is a very special showing and the contract with the distributor allows only one showing, which will be at 7:30 in 101 Votey. Admission is $2. For those of you who are not familiar with the film, it was released in 1974 and is nominated for two Academy Awards this year. Gena Rowlands is one of the candidates for Best Actress, and John Cassavetes is up for Best Director. The Academy Awards will be announced very soon, so if you want to see the film before the Oscars are given out, this may be your only chance.

The film tells the story of a woman who is cracking under the pressures of modern life. As one reviewer has remarked, "we are beginning, finally, to understand that people crack up and break down not as the result of extraordinary pressures but because of the ordinary ones of daily life — the ones that pile up almost without our noticing them. A Woman Under the Influence is an astonishing true, sensitive, poignant — and even funny — portrayal of how we fall into and out of — hard psychological times in this new commonplace of modern life. Gena Rowlands and Peter Falk are simply wonderful in the leading roles. John Cassavetes once again proves that he is among the most profound and subtle and alive students of human behavior operating in any art form." David Stentt in Christian Science Monitor calls the film "a bitterly truthful, searing beautiful work of art. Its troubled heroine is under the influence of many things, including love for her husband, devotion to her family, society's definition of neurosis, her own inner contradictions, and just possibly the moon. But mostly she is swayed by a fabulous energy for loving, an energy half-understood by her and misunderstood by everyone else. Gena Rowlands emerges as a truly great movie personality." Because there is only one showing, only about 250 people will be able to purchase tickets. To avoid a rush at the door these tickets will be sold early, on Thursday from 1:30 to 4 and Friday from 12 to 2, in the Billings Lobby. The tickets will be sold on a first come, first served basis.

On Monday night the French film series continues with one of the best films of the series, Claire's Knee. This film was directed by Eric Rohmer and was one of his series of moral tales. Others in the series include Chloe in the Afternoon and My Night at Maud's. A bachelor's well ordered existence is upset by three charming women he meets vacationing in a summer resort near the Swiss border. He grasps the opportunity to develop a preference for the glamourous counterfeit over that which is gloriously real. Hollis Alpert in Saturday Review said "Claire's Knee is a masterpiece! The kind of film each viewer should discover and savor for himself. The actors are perfect in that they perform perfectly and are cast with precision!" The film will be shown at 7:30 and 9:30 p.m. in 101 Votey. Admission is free.

Protest Against Watergate Speakers

(EARTH NEWS) — The movement to stop the Watergate conspirators from cashing in on their notoriety by speaking on college campuses is picking up steam across the country. And even former Nixon "mouthpiece" Ron Ziegler is facing his share of protests.

Following numerous complaints, the student government at Michigan State University has withdrawn its $1250 offer to Ziegler to speak on campus. And if the administration goes ahead with its part of the original offer to pay Ziegler $2500, the student government has voted to call for massive picketing and a boycott of the talk. Similarly, a $3000 offer was withdrawn by Boston University's student government recently, after increasing protests from students and faculty members.

At the same time, former Nixon attorney John Dean has decided to continue his controversial speaking tour, despite protests at practically every campus he visits. Some 50 people in two different protest groups demonstrated outside Dean's recent speech at Cleveland State University, and movements are mushrooming to stop Dean's appearances at such campuses as Georgetown University and the University of Maryland. Dean stands to make close to $200,000 on his speaking tour.

At Michigan State, the student government's resolution explained, "It's unfair that Ziegler should continue to get rich as a result of his participation in an attack on the American ... on behalf of special interests."

Bad News And More Bad News

(CPS) — The good news for the college grad seeking employment is that this year's job outlook will only be a little worse than last year's. The bad news is that last year's opportunities were the worst since World War II.

Just how bad the job market is depends on two factors: your chosen field and your expectations.

Most surveys agree that chemical, mechanical and electrical engineers (in that order) will have the least trouble finding jobs in their fields, and that professionals in accounting, sales, and computer systems remain in demand by job recruiters.

All other areas, according to a survey of 701 employment organizations taken by the College Placement Council (CPC), show declines in anticipated hiring: Sciences, mathematics and other technical openings are down 12%; business is down 11%, other non-technical openings are down 3% and unclassified jobs down 6%.

Hiring by state and federal governments is, however, expected to be about the same as last year. In its fall newsletter the Civil Service Commission said that last year more than 12,000 liberal arts and other "generalists" candidates were hired out of a total 22,600 new jobs and that hiring should increase to 23,000 in 1975 although budget cutbacks could reduce that number.

Women and minorities will continue to have an employment edge in white collar jobs, according to a 1974-75 national recruiting trend survey by Michigan State University's placement services. The MSU survey found that the 220 businesses, industries, governmental agencies and educational institutions which responded will emphasize hiring of women and minorities.

Elementary and secondary level school teachers should again feel the job pinch. Last September, 221,000 beginning teachers were competing for only 118,000 jobs, according to the New York Times.

AN ENCOURAGING WORD

Nevertheless in the depths of gloomy predictions, an occasional encouraging report is heard. After conducting a nationwide study of white-collar job opportunities, Frank S. Endicott indicated that "It's much too soon for college seniors to assume that there are not going to be any jobs for them when they graduate."

His survey found that women with bachelor degrees will find seven per cent more openings this year than last, and men with bachelor degrees will find roughly one per cent more.

The placement director at the University of Wisconsin agreed with the Endicott report. He said, "There are a lot more jobs than students think... A good percentage of new graduates, especially liberal arts graduates, get depressed by what they read and hear, so they just back off... and don't even sample the job market. Or they take the first job that comes along and don't push for what they should be looking for."

Despite the fact that those with graduate degrees are among the worst affected group (17% fewer openings), the job shortage may be driving students into grad schools. Liberal arts graduates have found the need for more training or retraining to prepare for areas in which there may be better employment opportunities in the future.

WHY GET A DEGREE?

In light of the fact that a college degree can't insure a graduate a white collar job of his choice, educators have taken another look at the purpose of education.

Many counselors have advised liberal arts majors to take a computer science course or acconting course. A University of Michigan survey reported that 35 out of 42 business and industrial companies said they would be more willing to hire liberal arts graduates who had at least some business-related skills.

At the Association of American Colleges annual meeting in Washington, D. C., educators debated whether colleges should adjust their curricula in order to insure employable skills or whether the traditional liberal arts program should hold fast.

"If we convinced him (the student) to come to college to get a liberal education and to learn, to think and play with his head, we can graduate him feeling satisfied," remarked Arthur Stickgold, assistant professor of sociology at California State University at Los Angeles.

"It is simply false advertising to imply that a BA is a meal ticket — an automatic entry into middle management with unlimited career opportunities."

Terrel Bell, US Commissioner of Education, however, felt that the goal of liberal arts colleges must change.

"Today we in education must recognize that it is our duty to provide students with salable skills. To send young men and women into today's world armed only with Aristotle, Freud and Hemingway is like sending a lamb into the lion's den."

Award Offered For Humane Trap Design

Boston — Everyone knows what's in store for the man who builds a better mousetrap but few are aware that there's a $10,000 award waiting for the person who can invent a humane trap for wild animals.

The search for a humane alternative to the steel-jaw leghold trap, the basic tool of some two million trappers in this country alone, is being conducted in New England under the auspices of the Animal Rescue League of Boston, which will submit all local entries to The American Humane Association, national sponsors of the humane trap competition.

"What we are looking for," explains Dr. Carlton E. Buttrick, league president and an AHA advisory director, "is a trap that will eliminate suffering either by holding the animal uninjured or by killing it instantly." The steel-jaw leg-hold trap, illegal in Massachusetts as of July 1, 1975, is designed to capture an animal and hold it until the trapper arrives to kill it. Hours, or even days unfortunately, may go by before the trapper arrives to checks his line, during which time a beaver, fox or perhaps a raccoon waits in excruciating pain with legs broken or amputated and body mangled. While trapped they are also prey to other animals, freezing temperatures and starvation.

There are other types of traps now available, Dr. Buttrick noted, but most have proven either too inefficient or too expensive to provide the trapper with a practical alternative to the steel-jaw trap. The award-winning trap design would have to be as effective as the steel-jaw trap, as easy for trappers to carry and set, and must cost no more.

Because of the difficulty of designing a single trap that will be equally effective on both large and small animals, the American Humane Association recently modified contest rules to allow payment of $5000 of the $10,000 award to anyone who invents a trap suitable only for small animals or large ones but not both. A person who invents a trap suitable for the full range, from mink to bear, before either of the $5000 prizes have been awarded will, of course, receive the full $10,000. Special awards will also be given at the discretion of AHA's board of directors for traps that represent substantial improvement in certain fields.

All designs submitted must be accompanied by a working model of the trap. Complete details and rules can be obtained from the Animal Rescue League of Boston, P.O. Box 265, Boston 02117.

... The Trek

(continued from page five)

feverish brain to a solemn rendition of Bach's Mass in B Minor. In the distance, Reflection loomed — a pristine jewel in the midst of a burning inferno.

Renewed vigor, hope, even joy.

Yet at 500 yards I could go no further. A feverish brain and an unresponsive body, it seemed, would subdue my as yet undaunted spirit. I cursed the fate that awaited me. I cursed the sun. I cursed myself for my folly. (100 yards to go). But most of all, I cursed those vile buzzards. Distraught, I glanced skyward. There they were. A vertical column, with a horizontal column precisely perpendicular to the vertical — with the end birds on the horizontal precisely equidistant from the center of the vertical.

Cursed fowl! I stammered. They know what they do! In unmitigated frenzy, I began whistling an old bird hunting song that I knew they would find disparaging. I laughed and laughed. What an appropriate — if evanescent — epitaph I chuckled. Have I crossed those buzzards? or have they crossed me? What beautiful irony! What a way to die! in witness to (cough) such beautiful irony! Yes! yes! I croaked, (barely alive), there is a merciful God! He has saved me from an insipid and otherwise useless death and, tormenting agony! Science be damned!! Hallelujah... hallelu... halel... hal... ha...

Live In Rome And Earn Credits

Hartford, Conn. — If you want to learn about Italy this summer and earn college credits at the same time, the Trinity College/Rome Campus may be the place for you to enroll.

The program will run June 14-July 21, with classes being held June 16 — July 19, and is designed as part of the undergraduate program offered on the main campus of Trinity College in Hartford, Connecticut.

This summer, the six-year-old program will offer courses in Etruscan and Roman Art and Archaeology; the Art of Rome (c. 1500-1700); Ethnography of Italy; Painting, Drawing and Design; and Intensive Introductory, Intermediate and Advanced Italian.

A student may earn six transferable semester hours credit for two courses. By special arrangement, some courses may be taken for graduate credit. Courses are taught in English except for those in Italian language and literature.

Faculty members from various institutions have been selected on the basis of exceptional competence in a respective field as well as for congeniality.

The campus is situated on the Aventine, one of the original seven hills of Rome, and overlooks the Tiber and the Circus Maximus. Classrooms and studios are well-equipped. The dining areas are gracious, and living quarters are dormitory style, in a renovated convent, which is surrounded by parks and public gardens. Accommodations are mostly double occupancy, with private baths.

Nearby may be found open air opera performances, the picturesque flea market, small shops, ancient basilicas, the Colosseum and the Forum.

The cost of the program will be $895 which includes tuition for two courses, all books and materials, full room and board, a four-day excursion to Florence and Siena, three half-day tours in the environs of Rome, free entrances to all state monuments, museums and galleries. All travel arrangements, either on a group or individual plan, can be arranged through the program director.

For further information, contact: Dr. Michael R. Campo, Director, Trinity College/Rome Campus, 300 Summit Street, Hartford, Ct 06106. The phone number is (203) 527-3151, Ext. 221.

Tommy III

Tommy
Original Soundtrack (Assorted Artists)
Polydor PD2-9502

This is the third version of Tommy to be released since its introduction by The Who in the sixties. Despite appearances by Elton John, Tina Turner, The Who, Ann Margaret, and Eric Clapton, and irregardless of musical assistance from stellar sidemen such as Fuzzy Samuels, Nickey Hopkins, and Nigel Olsson, Tommy fails miserably as an album, is poorly produced, and to date this year, is probably the rip-off record thus far.

Tommy is the original rock opera, and for that we owe The Who immeasurable debts. Pete Townshend and crew led rock into new directions that were totally unexplored. Providing rock with continuity and plot was novel for a media built on chart records and hit singles.

Forging ahead in ideas and creativity was much of the charm behind The Who's rock opera. This version of Tommy merely treads over old ground, and not very well at that. The original is still the one to beat.

The best in Jewelry and Accessories in the romantic mood from the 1928 Jewelry Co. and the Way - In at the right price from $3- to $12-

MAGRAMS - Way In

CORNELL FOLK FESTIVAL '75

cornell university
barton hall, 8:00pm

FRIDAY-APRIL 18

- ARLO GUTHRIE
- TRACY NELSON & MOTHER EARTH
- JOHNY SHINES
- BRYAN BOWERS
- JIM ROONEY & PARTNERS IN CRIME

SAT.-APRIL 19

- JAY & LYN UNGAR
- DAVID AMRAM
- FURRY LEWIS
- VASSAR CLEMENTS
- TOM PAXTON
- LOUDON WAINWRIGHT

*must be received by april 10

SAT. AFTERNOON
MINI-CONCERTS WORKSHOPS SQUARE DANCE
CRAFTS FAIR

tickets: $6.50

ORDER FORM

IMPORTANT All mail orders must be sent to: P.O. BOX 907 ITHACA, N.Y. 14850

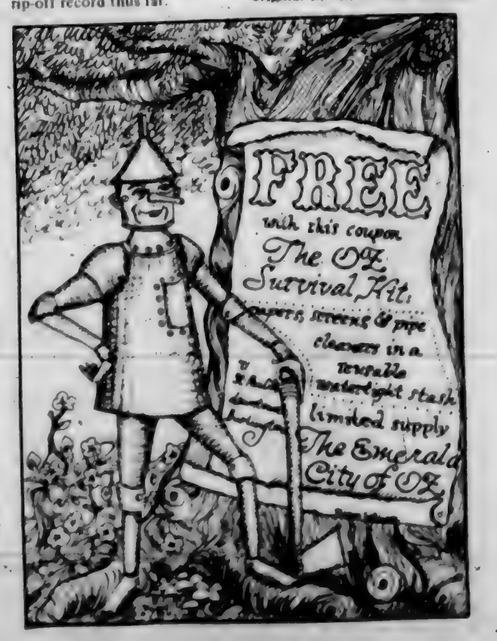
Please send me_____ tickets for the folk festival. Enclosed please find $_____.

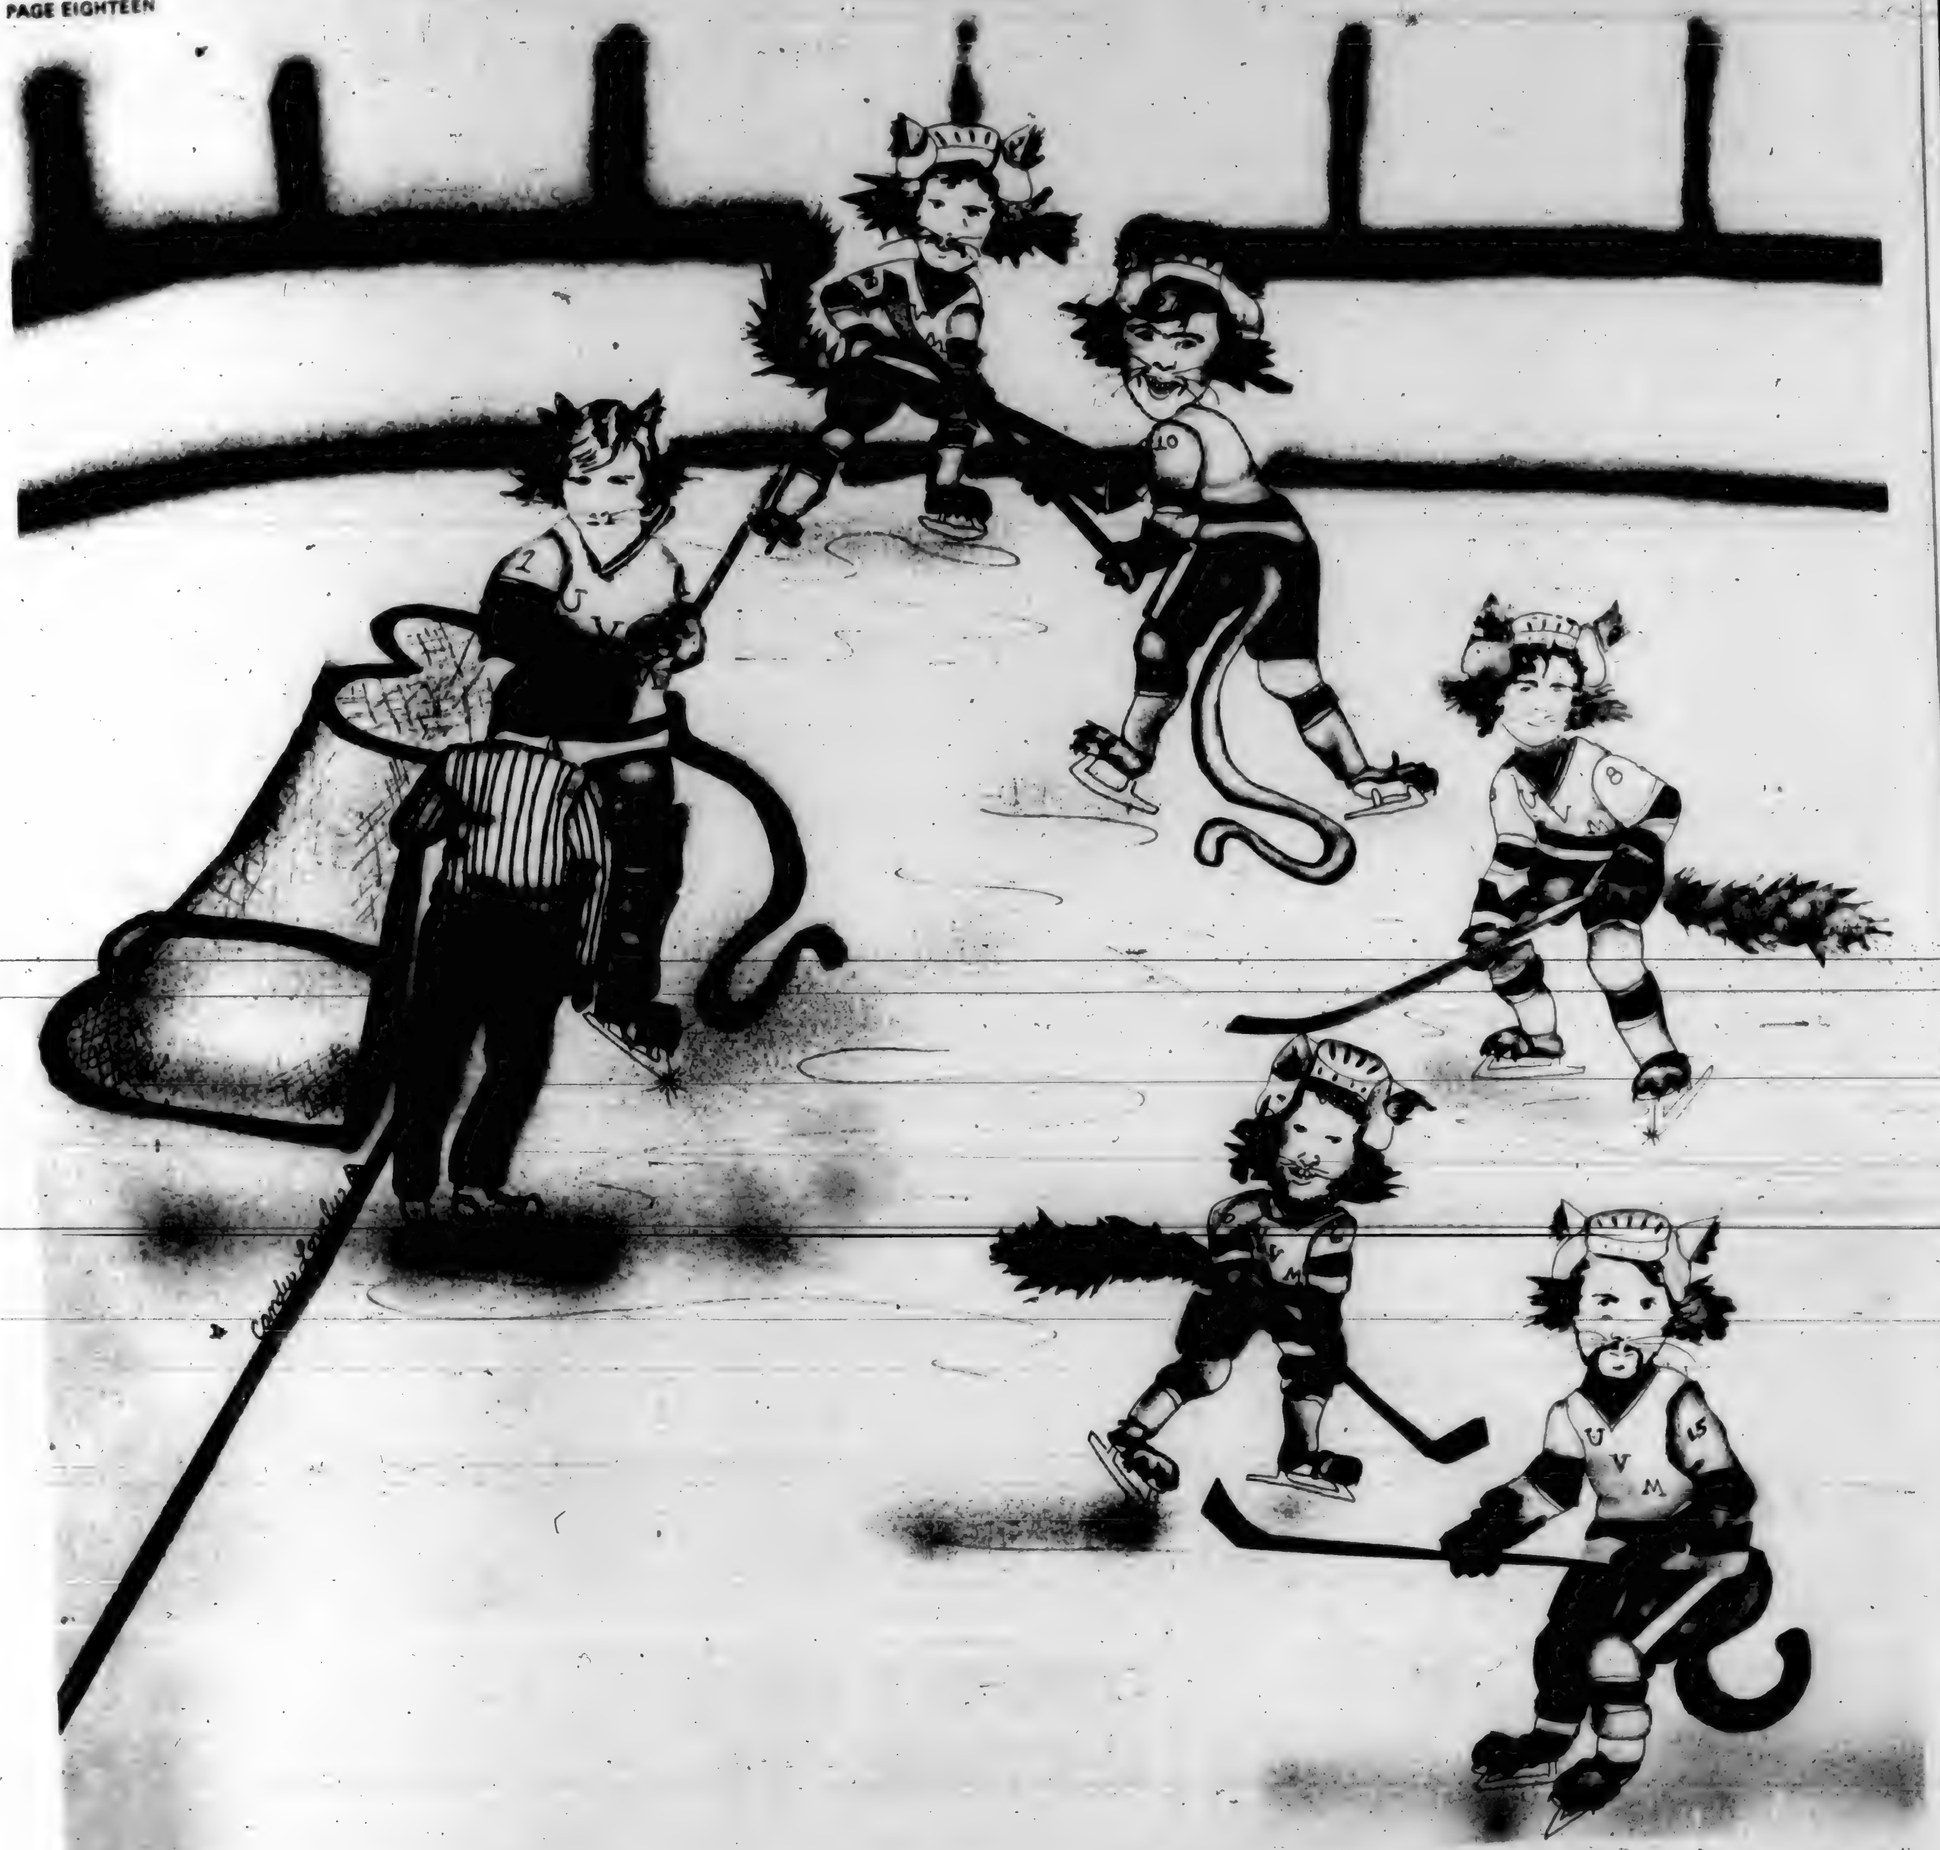
ALL-FESTIVAL TICKET-$6.50 ea.

Make all money orders payable to: Willard Straight Hall.

A self-addressed, stamped envelope must accompany each order.

NAME _____
ADDRESS _____
CITY _____ STATE ____ ZIP ____





Hockey Team's Starters Have Much To Be Proud Of

by Norm Robinson

The first year of Division I hockey has come and gone at the University of Vermont and has left some memorable moments to anyone involved.

Off to a horrendous start (2-7), the Catamounts rebounded to win seven in a row and 10 out of 11 to finish third in the East.

A big factor to Vermont's success were the six starters of the Catamount hockey squad. The "electric line" of Tim O'Connell, Roger Mallette, and Bill Koch, were one of the highest scoring lines in the country, and no wonder! They scored a combined total of 89 goals and 197 points!

O'Connell broke season records of most goals with 41, most assists with 41, and most points with an unbelievable 82. Averaging 2.28 points per game, he became Vermont's all-time leading scorer as a junior with 190 points. He has already surpassed the career records for most goals with 86, most assists with 104, and most points with 190.

A native of Hingham, Massachusetts, Tim is also an All-American, All- New England and was recently named to the ECAC Division I All-Star Team.

Success is nothing new to O'Connell. He was ECAC's Rookie of the Year two years ago, All-East first team last season, in addition to first team All-New England. He was drafted by the Buffalo Sabres in the 8th round after his freeman season.

Roger Mallette, a senior wing from Vaudreuil, Quebec, became UVM's All-time scorer with 160 points in his final season. Roger played the entire '73-'74 season with a broken bone in his wrist and it hindered him throughout this season as well. With 18 goals, and 37 assists for 55 points, Mallette was Vermont's third highest scorer this year.

Although small in size at 5' 7" and 157 pounds, his ability is anything but. Known for his constant hustle and determined forechecking, Roger was a vital cog in the Catamount machine. He will be sorely missed next year.

The third member of the line is Bill Koch. Sixth in All-time scoring, Bill tallied 30 goals and 30 assists before separating his shoulder in the Providence game.

His absense from the two games in Boston Garden had to hurt Vermont's chances. Koch hails from Boxford, Massachusetts, and at 6' 1" and 180 pounds, is a tough man to move from the front of the net. A vastly improved player, Koch scored two, 12, 24 and 30 goals in each of his four years.

The education major will leave a gaping hole in the Catamount line-up.

The defensive tandem of Ken Yeates and Bill McAlduff was steady throughout the year.

Yeates and McAlduff took over the starting position late in the year, due mainly to their defensive abilities. Yeates, a junior from Dorval, Quebec, is known for his tough style of play and crunching checks. Emphasizing defense, Ken still managed to pick up 22 points on 2 goals and 25 assists.

Coach Jim Cross -- the man that made it all happen

At 6 feet, 167 pounds, Ken covers out the opposing center in front of the net and helps the goaltender keep the crease clear. He had to make a big transition this year when he moved from left defense to the right side. The "enforcer" on the Catamount squad, Ken will play a vital role next year.

As a freshman from Lexington, Massachusetts, Bill McAlduff came into his own in the later part of the season. Understandably shaky early in the year, Bill became known for his great defensive play. A big man at six feet, 190 pounds, McAlduff loves to hit and has an uncanny instinct to be at the right place at the right time. Bill picked up 19 points in his first season and can be expected to become a fixture on the squad.

McAlduff was also the starting catcher for UVM's baseball club last fall.

Tom McNamara stepped into the starting role this year after the graduation of goaltender John Kiely. Playing in only eight games last year, McNamara appeared in 33 games this season.

His 902 saves broke Kiely's season mark and .890 save average was one of the highest in the East. A member of the ECAC All-Star Team Tom's goals against average was 3.60 overall, and 3.74 in Division I.

Criticized throughout most of the year, Tom stifled his critics with outstanding performances against Boston University and Cornell. He will be pressed for the starting job next year by Peter Reynolds, the back-up goaltender.

Intramural Basketball

Men's Basketball Tournament

Sixty-two men's basketball teams competed in Intramural Basketball. Winners of each league played in a single elimination tournament to determine the Men's All-Campus Champion. A strong Faculty team was eliminated early in the playoffs by the Cretins. In the semi-finals, SIGMA UN defeated WASTED (57-44) and PRIME CUTS defeated CRETINS (62-40).

And in the FINAL game, PRIME CUTS (Jeff White, Dom Sisto, Mike Fitzmaurice, Boris Funtow, Rochard Moss) defeated SIGMA NU (Gary Gottfried, Glenn Gottfried, Vic Vaughan, Tom Lenci, Tony Segale, Dick Hilmer, Brian Donahue). The score was 57-47.

sports

Vermont Ten

"Without a doubt, this is my strongest team since I've been the varsity coach, and probably one of the best teams ever at UVM. That's how it looks on paper. Now, we have to prove ourselves on the court," said Vermont tennis mentor, Hal Greig. Returning this year is the same team that won the Yankee Conference tennis team title last spring, plus three freshmen who will be making a run for one of the top seven singles spots and the three sets of doubles.

Leading the way will be captain Jay Moorhead, who shared the No. 1 singles with sophomore Kirk Dice, who also returns. Moorhead also will team up with Rich Hilmer to form Vermont's No. 1 doubles team. They won the Yankee Conference doubles title (No.1 seed) last spring. Dice will join up with junior Tom Lenci to form the No. 2 doubles corps, which won the No. 2 YanCon doubles seed last year. Lenci and Hilmer are also expected to be battling it out for the No. 3 singles slot, behind Dice and Moorhead. The are Shelburne's Tim Beal and Koerner, an members of th squad last fall fit right into doubles rotatio He is an extra player," says G

"The sin strength at all real battle sha 2, while the traditionally now appears strength," ad coach. Vermo

1975 VARS

SCHEDULE

April 5 — Sat
April 12 Sat
April 18 Fri
April 22 Tue
April 23 We
April 25-26
April 29 Tue
April 30 We

B TEAM SCHE

April 5 Wed
April 28 Mo

Winooski

by Ken Bartlett

The Eighth Annual Winooski Raft Race will be held Saturday, April 19, starting at the Old Power Dam at Bolton Falls (about 9 miles from Richmond Village) and ending approximately one mile upstream from the Jonesville Bridge. The total distance is six miles.

There are three divisions that rafts may be entered Male, Female, and mixed. This last class must have at least 2 members on the raft of the opposite sex. Trophies will also be awarded for the raft with the most unusual design and the crew that brings in the most litter.

To sign up for the raft race, entry blanks may be picked up at the Billings Desk. Earlier this week, they had run out of entry blanks, but more are being printed and should again be available at Billings by late Thursday or Friday. The Race is limited to the first 100 completed entry blanks that are received along with a $25.00 check. $20.00 of this money is just a deposit and will be returned to the raft captain after the race is completed and all litter is packed up (including the raft) and ready to leave.

The Eighth Winooski Raft Race is co-sponsored by the Outing Club, SA, and the Inter-residence Association (IRA). It is being funded through three sources: $500.00 from the registration fees, $300.00 from IRA, and $800.00 from the SA Outing Club. The bud yet, and any will be retur club for nex

In recent has become parking developed this time the parki accommodat same way number of annually o possibility in nearby a

B

Thir basketball Intramur winners o in a wi tournamen WOMEN' CHAMPIO DAVIS (23-13) GAME, Gale Han Marlene H defeated (Kathy Johnson, Sally Ya Mimi Am Ann Gr Nutter, score was

Ra

Mary

SIZZLING ST
THE BEST STE
GREAT SEAFOO
Salad Bar Included with
Baked Stuffed Shrimp
Baked Filet of Sole
Fried Scallops
Surf and Turf, a combinati baked stuffed shrimp and
steak
Golden Brown Fried Chick
8 oz. Choice Sirloin Strip
12 oz. Choice Sirloin Strip
10 oz. Choice Top Butt Si
Steak
8 oz. Chopped Sirloin Stea
1216 WILLISTON
SO. BURLINGTON, V

sports

Vermont Tennis Outlook

"Without a doubt, this is my strongest team since I've been the varsity coach, and probably one of the best teams ever at UVM. That's how it looks on paper. Now, we have to prove ourselves on the court," said Vermont tennis mentor, Hal Greig. Returning this year is the same team that won the Yankee Conference tennis team title last spring, plus three freshmen who will be making a run for one of the top seven singles spots and the three sets of doubles.

Leading the way will be captain Jay Moorhead, who shared the No. 1 singles with sophomore Kirk Dice, who also returns. Moorhead also will team up with Rich Hilmer to form Vermont's No. 1 doubles team. They won the Yankee Conference doubles title (No.1 seed) last spring. Dice will join up with junior Tom Lenci to form the No. 2 doubles corps, which won the No. 2 YanCon doubles seed last year. Lenci and Hilmer are also expected to be battling it out for the No. 3 singles slot, behind Dice and Moorhead. The top freshmen are Shelburne's John Koerner, Tim Beal and Scott Turban. Koerner and Beal were members of the varsity soccer squad last fall. "Koerner could fit right into the singles and doubles rotation right away. He is an extremely intelligent player," says Greig.

"The singles lineup has strength at all positions, with a real battle shaping up for No. 7, while the doubles crew, traditionally our weakness, now appears to be a real strength," adds the Vermont coach. Vermont's showing in the doubles competition last spring (winning the top two flights) won the Catamounts the YanCon crown.

"My only concern is the lack of practice time, since the courts only became available March 17. That only gives us five days to prepare for our first match at Middlebury, April 5," said Greig.

The Yankee Conference championships will be held at UVM, April 25 and 26, and again this year, it probably will be Vermont, Massachusetts and Connecticut battling for the crown.

1975 VARSITY TENNIS SCHEDULE

April 5 – Sat.	Middlebury A
April 12 – Sat.	Massachusetts H
April 18 – Fri.	New Hampshire H
April 22 – Tues.	Plattsburgh H
April 23 – Wed.	Middlebury H
April 25-26	Yankee Conference H
April 29 – Tues.	St. Lawrence A
April 30 – Weds.	St. Michael's A

B TEAM SCHEDULE

April 5 – Wed.	Middlebury A
April 28 – Mon.	Middlebury H

Lacrosse Club Splits Four Over Spring Break

This past Friday, the UVM Lacrosse Club embarked on a week long spring trip to New York. After leaving caravan style from Patrick Gym, the team members struggled to lose the coach. With much effort, this mission was finally accomplished, leaving each car to their own vices for the remainder of the trip. When the entire crew finally rolled into Sienna College in Albany, the Sienna Lacrosse team graciously put the entire team up in their dorm rooms.

Curt Duane was the first to score as the Cats faced Sienna in a scrimmage on Saturday. In their first time this year outside, the UVMers emerged with an 8-5 victory. The day's activities did not end with the final whistle, an extensive team meeting was held that night to analyze the team's play. After another informal scrimmage on Sunday, the boys packed their bags and prepared to leave for Long Island.

Quite specific directions were given on how to get to the Island, but somehow no one managed to follow them, and stragglers were pulling in until dusk. The team was staying at Dowling College in Islip, New York. The spacious student apartments were large enough to house four team members. While the accomodations couldn't have been better, the weather was a different story. Monday brought torrential rains for UVM's scrimmage with Suffolk Community College. Suffolk is one of the better Community Colleges on Long Island and the Cats played well, holding a 2-2 tie at the half. The second half spelled disaster for the UVM squad with the final score being 7-2, on a field that could best be described as a mud bath.

Co-captain Tom Murphy, practicing for the spring trip.

SPS Photo: Mike Durkin

Double practice sessions were the order of the day for Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, and although the rain ceased, thirty degree temperatures and forty mile per hour winds reminded the team of Burlington. Despite the cold weather and the efforts of a Dowling College player to sabotoge the player's spirits during a team meeting at the Lion's Den, the weeks practices were quite productive. On Friday, the team had their chance for revenge against their week long roommates from Dowling College. Putting together one of their weaker performances of the year the Catamounts managed to let victory slip from their grasp and suffered defeat by a score of 9-6.

Saturday held new hope for the UVM squad as they faced North Country Community College. It was a different Vermont team on the field on Saturday. The Cats jumped to a six to nothing lead at the end of the first half. The Vermont squad managed to score two more goals in the second half and suppressed a strong North Country comeback and gained their first real victory of the season, 8-6.

An outstanding performance was put in by Mark Stevenson in goal. The leading scorers in the game were Spike Jenkins with four, George Varga with three, and co-captain Jeff Davis with one.

The UVM Lacrosse Club returned to Burlington for practices this week and will host Castleton College this Saturday at 4:00 p.m. The Club will then make the big trek to St. Michaels for a game at 2:00 p.m. on Monday. The entire week of lacrosse helped solidify the UVM team and the Cats are ready to roll through this year's season.

Winooski Raft Race

by Ken Bartlett

The Eighth Annual Winooski Raft Race will be held Saturday, April 19, starting at the Old Power Dam at Bolton Falls (about 9 miles from Richmond Village) and ending approximately one mile upstream from the Jonesville Bridge. The total distance is six miles.

There are three divisions that rafts may be entered: Male, Female, and mixed. This last class must have at least 2 members on the raft of the opposite sex. Trophies will also be awarded for the raft with the most unusual design and the crew that brings in the most litter.

To sign up for the raft race, entry blanks may be picked up at the Billings Desk. Earlier this week, they had run out of entry blanks, but more are being printed and should again be available at Billings by late Thursday or Friday. The Race is limited to the first 100 completed entry blanks that are received along with a $25.00 check. $20.00 of this money is just a deposit and will be returned to the raft captain after the race is completed and all litter is packed up (including the raft) and ready to leave.

The Eighth Winooski Raft Race is co-sponsored by the Outing Club, SA, and the Inter-residence Association (IRA). It is being funded through three sources: $500.00 from the registration fees, $300.00 from IRA, and $800.00 from the SA Outing Club. The budget isn't finalized yet, and any money in surplus will be returned to the outing club for next year's race.

In recent years, as the race has become more popular, a parking problem has developed. Arrangements at this time are being made with the participating towns to accommodate in a reasonable, sane way the incredible number of cars that descend annually on these towns. One possibility is providing parking in nearby areas and provide bus service to the infamous railroad tressle in North Duxbury.

Finally, all entry blanks should be addressed to the Inter-residence Association, 109 Harris Hall, UVM. Please make checks payable to the Winooski Raft Race. For special problems, the following people may be contacted: Rich Warner 2082, Dave Mainer 863-4132, and Ken Bartlett 4260.

Date:

APRIL 19

limited to first 100 entries

Nine Skiers Named To All-East Team

Nine University of Vermont skiers, the most ever, were named to the All-East team recently, it was announced by Philip "Brud" Folger, Jr., ski coach at the University of Maine and president of the Eastern Intercollegiate Ski Association.

Of the nine named, six were selected for first-team honors. The complete team follows:

FIRST TEAM ALL-EAST

Vermont – Dick Erdman (Sr., East Dorset, Alpine), David Dodge (Sr., St. Johnsbury, Alpine), Joe Lamb (Soph., Lake Placid, N.Y. Nordic), Petter Kongsli (Sr., Oslo, Norway, Nordic), Stan Dunklee (Jr., Brattleboro, Nordic) and Trygve Rolseth (Soph., Oslo, Norway, Nordic).

Middlebury – Peter Kenney and John Jacobs, Alpine.

Dartmouth – Peter Anderson, Alpine.

New Hampshire – Scott Cushing, Alpine; Bob Treadwell and Roy Weaver, Nordic.

SECOND TEAM

Vermont – Doug Bruce (Fr., Corning, N.Y., Alpine), Billy Rathbone (Jr., So. Burlington, Alpine) and Morten Garrud (Soph., Oslo, Norway, Nordic).

Middlebury – David Gavett, Alpine, Tom Folton, Nordic, and Craig Ward, Nordic.

New Hampshire – Dick Andross and Dan Grover, Alpine.

Dartmouth – Jim Crawford, Nordic, Christian Burggrav, Nordic and Lurent Gadein, Alpine.

Williams – Barry James, Nordic.

Coach of the Year honors was awarded to New Hampshire's Terry Aldrich.

White Mountain Ski Huts

by Douglas George

Anyone who hikes in the mountains of New England probably is acquainted with the Appalachian Mountain Club. Those who are not and who do appreciate the outdoors should take the time to familiarize themselves with the activities and concerns of the oldest club of its kind in the country. Founded in 1876, the AMC is a non-profit charitable organization, dedicated to the protection and recreational enhancement of the mountain country of the Northeast. In recent years the Club has reaffirmed its interests, and is greatly concerned with such issues as conservation, preservation, Backcountry recreation, trail maintenance, and environmental education. Its efforts in the past have endowed it with a public trust of deep significance. Today, the membership of over 29,000 persons is world-wide.

(continued on page twenty)

Intramural Results

Basketball

Thirteen women's basketball teams competed in Intramural Basketball. The winners of each league played in a single elimination tournament to determine the WOMEN'S ALL CAMPUS CHAMPION.

DAVIS defeated KIDS (23-13) and in the FINAL GAME, DAVIS (Mary Dee, Gale Hance, Arlene Averill, Marlene Ballou, D. G. Blair) defeated JEANNE MANCE (Kathy Zagroba, Merry Johnson, Sharon Farquharson, Sally Yates, Sue Sheridan, Mimi Amos, Connie Angulo, Ann Greenbaum, Louise Nutter, Evan Preston). The score was 31-8.

Racquetball

"A" TOURNAMENT

Mary Dee/Nancy Goss (INDEP.) defeated Karen Taylor/Christen Copp (INDEP.) 15-12, 15-12.

"B" TOURNAMENT

Barbara Goldberg/Barbara Laferty (L/L) defeated Jane Griffith/Cindy Hayes (L/L) 31-14.

"C" TOURNAMENT - Sally Becker/Mary Ann Kinney (COOL) defeated Lynn Barton/Barbara Marticelli (SIMP) 15-13, 16-14.

Squash

Men's Intramural Squash Tournament Winners

"A" Tournament:

Robert Revers (MED. '78) Champion

"B" Tournament

Steve Bradley (Indep) Champion

"C" Tournament

Howard Nadworny (MED. '78) Champion

Unit Winner For All Campus Championship

MED. '78

Wrestling

In a poorly attended wrestling intramural tournament, the Green Mountain Wrestling Club won its second victory in as many years. Below are the team and individual scores.

TEAM SCORES: 1st place – Green Mountain Wrestling Club, 50; 2nd place – Marsh, 36; 3rd place – Delta Psi, 31; 4th place – tie – Simpson and Chittenden, 16.

CHAMPIONS: 130 lbs. Edward VonTurkovich (Green Mountain Wrestling Club), 137 lbs. – Joe Kaspereck (Simpson); 152 lbs. – Bruce Carpenter (Green Mountain Wrestling Club); 167 lbs. Michael Paquette (Delta Psi); 167 lbs. – John Collins (Delta Psi); 177 lbs. – Bob Buriss (Marsh); 191 lbs. – Steve Kirkbaumer (Chittenden); Hwt. – Tony Kurnick (Marsh).

Summer in europe
65 DAY ADVANCE PAYMENT REQUIRED
U.S. GOVT APPROVED
TWA PANAM TRANSAVIA
707 707 707
CHARTERS LESS THAN 1/2 REG ECONOMY FARE
uni travel charters
● CALL TOLL FREE 1-800 325-4867 ●

CLASSIFIED

House to Sublet for summer – walking distance from campus, 5 bedroom. Great Bargain! Rent – $275/month; call 862-2889.

Lost – months ago small gold moon & star pendant with amethest stone – Tremendous sentimental value – reward. Please contact Betsy x-4261.

Wanted: a high calibre writer. Maybe even two or three. To write stories and articles to explode before the faces of blockheaded readers. Fact or fiction preferable. Tanner 658-4911.

Male student looking for nice apt. to share for April 1st. Would like own room. Call George, 863-2172.

House to sublet – mid-May til Sept. 1 – 3 large bedrooms, porch, large carpeted living room, fully furnished, 2 blocks from campus. $255/month. Call 864-7604.

Room & board in exchange for housekeeping and childcare, starting this summer or next fall. 5 mm. from University. Call Kit Ayer, 862-4210.

Sofa-bed in usable condition urgently needed. Unable to pay but willing to take it off your hands. Call after 6 p.m., 862-1905.

SIZZLING STEAK
THE BEST STEAKS! GREAT SEAFOOD TOO!
Salad Bar Included with Dinner

Baked Stuffed Shrimp	4.95
Baked Filet of Sole	3.95
Fried Scallops	3.75
Surf and Turf, a combination of baked stuffed shrimp and tenderloin steak	6.75
Golden Brown Fried Chicken	3.75
8 oz. Choice Sirloin Strip Steak	3.99
12 oz. Choice Sirloin Strip Steak	4.99
10 oz. Choice Top Butt Sirloin Steak	5.99
8 oz. Chopped Sirloin Steak	2.99

1216 WILLISTON ROAD
SO. BURLINGTON, VERMONT

Diamond wedding ensembles – created for the girl who can't say "NO."
You are invited to open a Charge Account at Preston's.
A family of jewelers in Vermont since 1944.
F.J. PRESTON & SON INC.
17 Upper Church Street
Member American Gem Society

ATALA 208 19" to 25" frames.
quick release wheels, Weiman brakes,
Simplex prestige derailleurs $140.00

COMPLETE BIKE OVERHAUL completely repacking all bearings on bike. Cleaning & adjusting derailleurs + brakes. Truing wheels 17.00 — 17.00

KURLEY KABLE
Set coiling of long plastic coated — 2.75

BIKE TUNE-UP
Clean + adjust derailleurs + brakes, adjust hubs, bottom bracket + head set. Tighten all nuts + bolts. — 6.95

PLETSHER CARRIER
A rear carrier for your bike. Great for books, tennis rackets, etc. — 4.95

the Ski Rack BIKE SHOP
85 Main St. Burlington
658-3313
HOURS
Mon-Wed 9:30-6:00
Thurs.-Fri 9:30-9:00PM
Sat 9:00-5:00

roud Of

nural Basketball

PRIME CUTS defeated CRUISSANT 40-
PRIME CUTS (Jeff White, Dom Sisti, Mike Lamoureux, Bobby Perrino, Richard Mosse) defeated SIGMA NU (Gary Gottfried, Glenn Gottfried, Vic Vaughan, Don Lenci, Tony Segale, Dick Hilmer, Brian Donahue). The score was

Track Team Prepares For Season

Track team off and running

SPS Photo: Rich Rollins

Despite the overall lack of depth, Ed Kusiak's track team should produce several individuals who could challenge for top honors in the Yankee Conference Championships. May 3, at Vermont, and the tri-meet with New Hampshire and Massachusetts and the duo meet at Maine. "We don't have the total numbers like Massachusetts and Connecticut, but we have a few youngsters (Mike Bilsza, Peter Weith, Jeff Lindgren and Mike Berry) who could surprise," said Kusiak, completing his first year as the head track and field coach.

The outdoor team will be led by co-captains Mike Berry and Tom Harrington, the same duo that captained the indoor team. Berry is the current record-holder in the 880 (1:54.6), while Harrington has anchored both the 440 relay (43.9) and the one-mile relay (3:28.2) teams, both UVM records.

Another sprinter who should provide some sparks is Jeff Berk (220 and 440), while two-event record-holder, Peter Weith, is one of the best middle distance runners in the YanCon. Weith set UVM records in the 1000 (2:14.3) and the mile run (4:14.3) last winter.

In the field events, veteran Mike Bilsza, is considered one of the top field event performers in New England. Bilsza recently finished second in the 35 lb. weight throw at the Conference meet at Rhode Island. Bilsza will have plenty of competition in the hammer and shot from seniors John Partridge and Boris Funtow. Sophomore Jeff Lindgren, holder of the school mark in the high jump (6'8"), set last spring, will lead the high jump contingent. Joining Lindgren will be senior Steve Lynch, Rich Fisher and young Mike McLane.

The hurdle crew of Jim Kauffman, John Looney and Craig Iverson should also be formidable, while Mark Iverson hopes to clear the 14' mark this spring in the pole vaulty.

Vermont kicks off its spring season, April 12, with the first annual Alumni Track Meet, scheduled for Post Field and the Gardner-Collins Cage.

1975 VARSITY OUTDOOR TRACK SCHEDULE

April 12 – ALUMNI TRACK MEET – Post Field, 1 p.m:
April 16 – at New Hampshire, with Massachusetts – Durham, N.H., 1 p.m.
April 19 – at Boston College, Relays – Chestnut Hill, Mass.
April 23 – VERMONT STATE MEET – Post Field, 1 p.m.
April 26 – at Maine – Orono, Me., 1 p.m.
May 3 – YANKEE CONFERENCE OUTDOOR CHAMPIONSHIPS – Post Field, 11 a.m.
May 17 – at New Englands
May 24 – at ICAAAA's

THE SPORTS SCENE

by Norm Robinson

With the baseball season just around the corner, it's time for yours truly to go out on a limb and predict the division standings.

It promises to be a dog fight in each division in both the National, and the American League.

In the National League East, the Philadelphia Phillies look like the best bet with Pittsburgh close behind. The infield of Willie Montanez, Dave Cash, Larry Bowa, and Mike Schmidt may be the best in either league. Tug McGraw will strengthen the bullpen and the starting staff is led by Jim Lonborg and Steve Carlton. A healthy Greg Luzinski may make the difference for the Phils this year.

If the Phillies fade, the Pirates may make it big. The power is still there with Willie Stargell, Richie Hebner, Al Oliver, and Richie Zisk. The only weak spot appears to be in the pitching department. Other than Ken Brett and Jerry Reuss, the remainder of the starting staff is questionable. Dock Ellis is still doubtful after elbow trouble.

The St. Louis Cardinals have a sensational outfield, the catching is first rate and their infield is strong. The pitching is suspect, however. Lynn McGlother looks like a comer but the big question mark is whether 39-year old Bob Gibson can come back.

New York has little or no power and weak bullpen and can't expect anything higher than fourth place. Dave Kingman will help, but not enough.

Neither Chicago nor Montreal is a threat and both have too many problems. They'll fight it out for fifth place.

In the national league West, the Los Angeles Dodgers look like repeaters. Their strengths are speed, power, pitching, and hitting and their only possible weakness is defense. If Tommy John can come back the Dodgers should repeat easily.

Cincinnati will attempt to dethrone L. A., but they'll probably have to settle for second place. Pitching is a question mark for the Reds and that will keep them out of the winner's circle.

Even with the loss of Hank Aaron, the Braves look good. The acquisition of Dave May from Milwaukee will help an already strong hitting club. Good defense and speed are assets but the pitching will have to hold up if the Braves are to have any chance.

Houston is weak in the pitching department and can't hope for anything more than third place. The Padres, who hail from San Diego, need a bullpen and much more hitting. They were last in the National League in batting with a .229 average. Youth is a strong point for the Padres, but they don't have the consistency to win big.

San Francisco scares no one. The outfield is strong but pitching and depth are the weak points.

Perhaps the best race of them all will be in the American League East. Baltimore has licked their power shortage with acquisition of Lee May from Houston and Ken Singleton from Montreal. The only weak spot in the Oriole lineup was catching and that was settled when Dave Duncan came from Cleveland.

The Yankees could make things close but their defense and lack of left-handed pitching could stop them. Bobby Bonds has to help and Jim "Catfish" Hunter will solidify the starting pitching.

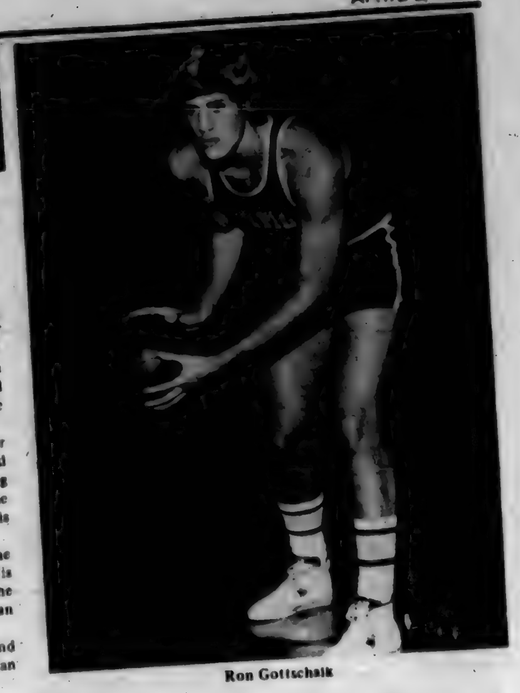
In Boston, youth is the name of the game, and that makes them questionable. If everything jells, they could have an outside shot but it's doubtful. Rick Wise, Carlton Fisk, and Doug Griffin will all have to come back from injuries and the pitching will have to be better. Third place appears the best bet.

Milwaukee is coming on, but the best they can expect is third. Pitching is a weak spot for the Brewers.

Frank Robinson has a tough year ahead in Cleveland, and Detroit is in for a lean year. Neither team has enough to even dream of a pennant.

In the West, Oakland is going to find it tough this year. The loss of Catfish Hunter has to hurt and second base is still up in

(continued on page twenty-one)



Ron Gottschalk

Hoop Co-captains Named

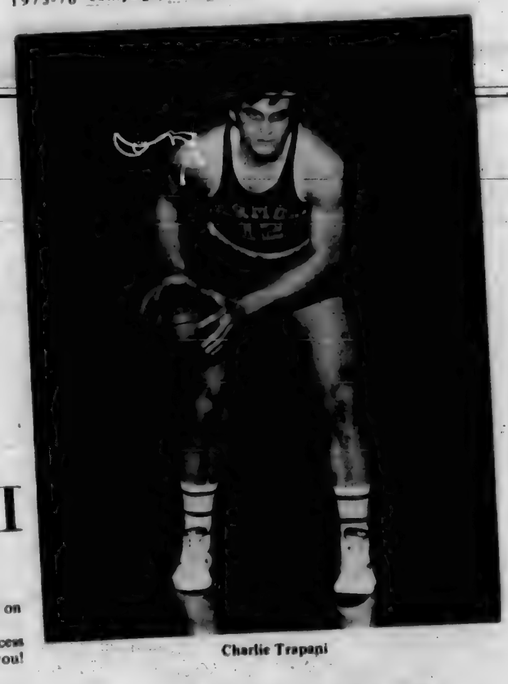
Vermont's two postmen, All-Yankee Conference selectee, Ron Gottschalk (Freeport, N.Y.), and last year's MVP, Charlie Trapani (Oakland, N.H.), were elected co-captains of the 1975-76 University of Vermont basketball team.

Gottschalk and Trapani will succeed Joe Greco (Whitehall, N.Y.), who captained the club the last two seasons.

Gottschalk, a 6-7 sophomore, was a first-team All-Yankee Conference pick, leading the Catamounts in scoring and rebounding, averaging 14.2 points and eight rebounds for the 26-game schedule. He was also elected this year's MVP, as selected by the players.

His fellow co-captain for the 1975-76 campaign, Charlie Trapani, was last year's MVP and, ironically, lost his starting post position to Gottschalk when the 1974-75 season opened, however, the 6-6 Trapani sustained a serious knee injury in the third game of the season (at Columbia) and missed the entire year. The injury cost him this year, but he will have three more years at varsity basketball at Vermont since his injury came when it did. Two years ago, as a freshman, Trapani averaged 9.2 points and seven rebounds a game.

Vermont etched out a 16-10 record this year, its best record since the 1946-47 season and second-best season ever. The Catamounts also recorded its best Yankee Conference mark ever, 8-4, good enough for third place.



Charlie Trapani

...Ski Huts In The White Mountains

(continued from page nineteen)

From a simple start in 1888, the AMC has built and operates a total of nine rustic huts, or hostelries, located along the ridgepole of the White Mountains in New Hampshire. These huts are spaced a comfortable summer day's hike apart, connected by many miles of scenic trails. During the summer season, friendly high school and college students pack up food and supplies, and maintain the huts for the use of the hiking public. Two hearty all-you-can-eat meals are served each day, and mattresses and blankets are provided.

Hut Systems headquarters is located at Pinkham Notch Camp, on Rte. 16, 11 miles south of Gorham N.H. This facility is open year round and is the center for climbing, hiking, skiing, and mountain rescue.

In the past, the huts have been operated from early June through early September.

Recently, however, an increasing demand for the fall and winter use of several AMC huts has been so significant as to make it feasible to operate a number of facilities during these seasons on a caretaker basis. Presently, the AMC has two huts, Carter Notch and Zealand Falls, operating to accomodate cross-country skiers, snowshoers, and winter hikers. Operating on a "caretaker" basis means that trekkers bring their own food, but are welcome to use the hut stoves and cooking and eating utensils. Since blankets are NOT provided during the winter season, caretaker hut users must bring WINTER weight down sleeping bags, as well as adequate warm clothing. A wood stove helps to warm things up, but it still might get pretty chilly inside!

To partially recover operating expenses, and pay the caretaker's wages, the AMC must charge a fee of six dollars per person per night for lodging and use of all utilities. Reservations are necessary and may be obtained by calling or writing, Reservations Secretary, AMC Pinkham Notch Camp, Gorham, NH, 03581, 466-3994. Additional trails information is also available from that address.

THE FAN SPEAKS OUT

The sports page is going to add a new dimension in the upcoming weeks, and if it is a success, it will continue.

We're going to let you – the readers – voice your opinions, complaints, or wishes in a new feature, "The Fans Speak Out."

Your letters on any sports subject, whether it is campus, state, national, or international, will be printed so your views can be heard.

If you've got a complaint, complain about it. If you disagree with someone, let us know. If you've got a question, ask it, and we will do our best to answer it.

Here is your chance to improve the Cynic and the type and quality of sports that go in. Don't pass it by.

The issue of April 4 will be the first with "The Fan Speaks Out". Just mail or drop your letters off at the Cynic office, lower Billings, by noon on Monday each week.

You will make this a success or failure! Let's hear from you!

UVM Swimmers To Be Honored

Recently named captain of the 1975-76 University of Vermont swim team was Paul "Buzz" Jones, while recipient of UVM's Top Swimmer Award was freshman Ron Kirkwood, one of the top freestyle performers in New England.

Jones, of Troy, N.Y., has been "one of our top swimmers the last three years," said Les Leggett, Vermont's head swim coach. A New England ranked swimmer, "he gives us the strength we need in the first relay in the butterfly", added Leggett. He is a junior.

Kirkwood became the first freshman ever to win the Vermont Swimming Award, annually presented to the swimmer who "has shown the most dedication team loyalty and point contribution". Kirkwood, a native of Thornwood, N.Y., was also a first-team All-Yankee Conference performer, registering the best time of all YanCon swimmers in the 100-yard freestyle (48.16). He also had the second-best time (1:47.8) in the 200 yard freestyle.

Vermont's AquaCats was 5-4 in dual competition this year and finished eighth in the New Englands.

Pants Plus
12 N. Winooski Ave. 864-0181
10% OFF WITH UVM ID.

EXXON
Ralph's Exxon
on Route 7 Shelburne Road and Interstate 189
Complete Auto Service
Expert Tune up and Repairs
All Work Fully Guaranteed
Free pickup and delivery
Phone: 862-9200

LITTLE PROFESSOR BOOK CENTER®
40 Church St. Burlington
Essex Jct. Shopping Center Essex Junction
Largest Paperback Selection in Vermont
Complete Study Notes
Small presses & some far-out reading

VALUABLE COUPON
SPECIAL TO STUDENTS AND FACULTY MEMBERS
(prescriptions excluded)
10% DISCOUNT
ON YOUR PURCHASES AT
CAMPUS PHARMACY
ACROSS FROM
The Medical Center

Thre

Super center Tim O'Conn

All-star defenseman John

Faculty And Stu Exchange

The National Student Exchange and the Faculty Exchange Center are cooperating in their effort to encourage exchanges of students and professors among colleges in this country and overseas. The N.S.E. operates at the present at 33 colleges and universities in 26 states and Puerto Rico, while the Faculty Exchange Center has members this year from colleges in 45 states and Washington, D.C. and in 16 foreign countries where the

Ron Gottschalk

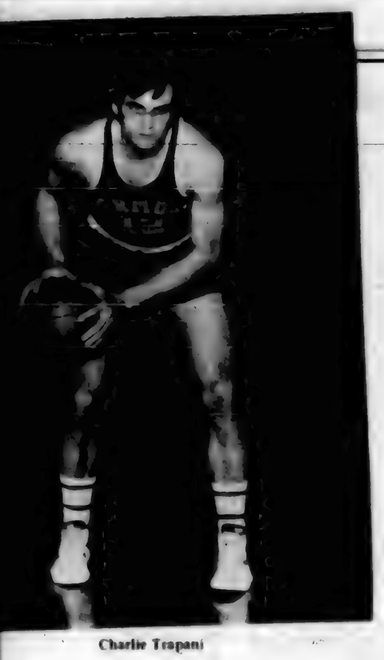
Co-captains Named

...an postmen ...conference ...Gottschalk ...) and fast ...arlie Trapani ...were elected ...the ...-75-76 ...f Vermont ...m.

...d Trapani will ...co (Whitehall, ...ained the club ...ons.

...lk, a 6-7 ...a first-team ...ference pick, ...atamounts in ...rebounding, ...unts and eight ...the 26-game ...so also elected ...as selected by ...captain for the ...paign, Charlie Trapani, was last year's MVP and, ironically, lost his starting post position to Gottschalk when the 1974-75 season opened, however, the 6-6 Trapani sustained a serious knee injury in the third game of the season (at Columbia) and missed the entire year. The injury cost him this year, but he will have three more years at varsity basketball at Vermont since his injury came when it did. Two years ago, as a freshman, Trapani averaged 9.2 points and seven rebounds a game.

Vermont etched out a 16-10 record this year, its best record since the 1946-47 season and second-best season ever. The Catamounts also recorded its best Yankee Conference mark ever, 8-4, good enough for third place.



Charlie Trapani

...rs To Be Honored

...n coach. A New ...nked swimmer "he ...strength we need in ...ay in the butterfly" ...gett. He is a junior ...vd became the first ever to win the Swimming Award, presented to the ...who "has shown the ...ication team loyalty ...nt contribution" ...vd, a native of Thornwood, NY, was also a first-team All Yankee Conference performer, registering the best time of all Yankee swimmers in the 100-yard freestyle (48.16). He also had the second-best time (1:47.8) in the 200 yard freestyle.

Vermont's Aquatats was 5-4 in dual competition this year and finished eighth in the New Englands.

...UABLE COUPON
...TO STUDENTS
...CULTY MEMBERS
...scriptions excluded)
...ISCOUNT
...UR PURCHASES AT
...US PHARMACY
...CROSS FROM
...e Medical Center

Three Skaters On ECAC: All-Star Team

Super center Tim O'Connell

All-star defenseman John Glynne

by Norm Robinson

The University of Vermont hockey team will be represented by three members in the Eastern Collegate Athletic Conference Division I All-Star Team.

All-American and All-New England center Tim O'Connell, sophomore defenseman John Glynne and sophomore goaltender Tom McNamara were named to the 14-man squad.

O'Connell who broke a number of Vermont scoring marks finished the season with 41 goals and 41 assists for a record 82 points. Tim finished first in the national in goal scoring and third in total points.

Glynne sat out most of last season but tallied 4 goals and 38 assists in becoming one of the best defensemen in the East.

Tom McNamara was undoubtedly the best goalie in the Division during the final weeks of the season. His goals against average was a solid 3.60 overall and 3.74 in Division I.

Playing behind John Kiely last year, Tom got very little playing time and has made the big transition to Division I hockey. He appeared in 33 games with 902 saves and an .890 save average.

All three stars will return next year as the Catamounts attempt to better their 24-12-0 mark this season.

Star goalie Tom McNamara

...The Sports Scene

(continued from page twenty)

the air. The A's are still strong, however, and should repeat. Jackson, Bando, and Rudi will supply the power, and Vida Blue, and Ken Holtzman anchor a good pitching staff.

Texas may make it this year. The one trouble spot appears to be the need for one more starter and more depth in the bullpen.

The Angels have one of the best pitching staffs in the majors, but need a little more hitting to make it big. Speed is a big asset.

Kansas City has plenty of hitting and defense, but their pitching is weak, especially in the bullpen. Other than Steve Busby the starting staff is in tough shape.

Neither Chicago or Minnesota has enough to make it even close.

Well, there it is. Barring injuries, which always play a vital role, it looks like Los Angeles, Philadelphia, Oakland and Baltimore in the playoffs.

The Orioles and the Dodgers are good bets to make it to the World Series and from there, who knows? Only time will tell.

Faculty And Student Exchange Center

The National Student Exchange and the Faculty Exchange Center are cooperating in their effort to encourage exchanges of students and professors among colleges in this country and overseas. The N.S.E. operates at the present at 33 colleges and universities in 26 states and Puerto Rico, while the Faculty Exchange Center has members this year from colleges in 45 states and Washington, D.C. and in 16 foreign countries where the language of instruction is English.

This program combines travel with study and teaching in different geographical and cultured settings. For more information, interested students may write to National Student Exchange, Indiana University at Fort Wayne, Fort Wayne, Indiana 46805; interested faculty members communicate with Faculty Exchange Center, P.O. Box 1866, Lancaster, Pa. 17603.

Jobs, Jobs, Who's Got A Job?

(CPS) - In an effort to help students find jobs amidst a sagging economy one New York college paper has begun offering free help wanted ads to businesses.

The CW Post Pioneer has carried over 400 ads during the last two weeks in the start of what it hopes will become a national "Jobs for College Students" campaign. The editor of the Pioneer explained that local papers cooperated with the effort by providing publicity for the free want ads offer.

"College students need as much help as they can get to find jobs," the college editor said, adding that he hoped other papers would pick up the idea.

For information on the "Jobs for College Students" program, contact the CW Post Pioneer, Greenvale, NY 11548.

African Studies And Culture In Africa

The American Forum for International Study in cooperation with the University of Massachusetts (Amherst) will conduct three summer programs in African Studies and Culture in Africa during July and August, 1975.

"In July, Kenya and Tanzania will be the sites for a program on the "Ecology and Culture of East Africa." Beginning at the University of Nairobi, the program will proceed to Arusha, Ngorongoro, Olduvai, Serengeti, Mombasa, and Dar es Salaam.

"From July 20–August 15, the Institute of African studies of the University of Ibadan will host "African Studies in Nigeria". Sites visited will include Lagos, Ife, Abeokuta, Oyo, and for the first time, Kano, Muslim center in northern Nigeria.

"In August, the highly acclaimed Comparative Cross African Societies will be repeated. The program will visit Senegal, Dahomey, Nigeria, Ethiopia, Kenya, and Tanzania.

"All Forum programs are accredited by the Center for International Education, University of Massachusetts. Six credits may be earned. All programs are interracial and open to college faculty, staff, and students, and public and private school teachers.

"Costs range from $1,550 for the Nigerian program to $2,120 for the Cross African program. Some scholarship assistance will be available. Included in the cost of the program is round trip jet transportation on KLM scheduled flights, all educational and field work costs, room and board.

"The American Forum is a non-profit, educational organization that has pioneered African Studies summer programs in Africa since 1968. More than 1200 teachers and students have participated in the 21 previous Forum programs.

"Further information can be had from the American Forum, 503 The Arcade, Cleveland, Ohio 44224 or call (216) 621-4949."

Scandinavian Seminar

Scandinavian Seminar, which for more than 25 years has offered a unique living and learning program in Denmark, Finland, Norway and Sweden, is now offering a new three-week coeducational program in sports, gymnastics and body awareness. In Denmark, geared to college students and others who are actively interested in physical fitness. A maximum of 50 American students will be accepted into the program, in which also Danish and other Scandinavian students will participate.

The program is organized in cooperation with the Gerlev School for Athletics, located approximately one hour from Copenhagen. This school has a large indoor swimming pool, several well-equipped gymnasiums, and an outdoor sports arena with tracks and soccer field.

The daily program will include four hours of physical activities and two hours of theory. All students participate in gymnastics. In addition, students may choose among a wide variety of physical exercises and sports. The theoretical part of the program will consist of lectures and discussions in English on such topics as: health and nutrition, body awareness and fitness, etc.

The total price of the three-week program, including round-trip transportation New York-Copenhagen, local transportation to the school, board and room, (double accommodation), insurance, and all program activities is $825, subject to modifications due to changes in currency exchange and/or travel costs. The deadline for applications is April 1, 1975.

For further information please write to: SCANDINAVIAN SEMINAR, 100 East 85th Street, New York, N.Y. 10028

PFG -Schedule

PATRICK FORBUSH GUTTERSON RECREATION SCHEDULE
WEEKEND OF APRIL 4, 5, 6

FRIDAY, APRIL 4
- GYM – Faculty-Staff 7–10:30 p.m.
- POOL – Faculty-Staff 7–10:30 p.m. (7–8 under 15 years)
- TENNIS – Faculty-Staff 7–10:30 (7–8 under 15 years)
- TRACK – Faculty-Staff 8–10:30 p.m.

SATURDAY, APRIL 5
- GYM – Students none (Blues Festival)
- POOL – Students 1–5 p.m.
- TENNIS – Students 1–5 and 7–10 p.m.
- TRACK – Students 1–5 p.m.

SUNDAY, APRIL 6
- GYM – Students 1–5 p.m.
- POOL – Students 1–5 p.m.
- TENNIS – Students 1–5 p.m.
- TRACK – Students 1–5 p.m.

HANDBALL AND SQUASH COURTS: By appointment only. Call 656-3069. All recreation may be superseded by varsity activities or special events.

POOL USAGE – Because of dwindling funds in our budget and only slight use of the pool between the hours of 4 to 6 in the afternoons, this afternoon recreation swim period has been cancelled.

MONDAY through THURSDAY
- POOL – Students 8:30–10:30 p.m.
- All other facilities – Students 7–8 p.m.

ANNUAL SPRING SALE
Eastern Mountain Sports, Inc.
100 DORSET ST.-SOUTH BURLINGTON-PHONE 864-0473 SPECIALISTS IN QUALITY, LIGHTWEIGHT CAMPING, MOUNTAINEERING EQUIPMENT AND X-COUNTRY SKI EQUIPMENT
CROSS COUNTRY SKIS
CROSS COUNTRY BOOTS
CROSS COUNTRY POLES
GLOVES AND MITTENS
FOAM PADS
PACKS
ACCESSORIES
SLEEPING BAGS
BOOTS
DOWN PARKAS TENTS
CLOTHING
RENTAL EQUIPMENT
APRIL 2,3,4,5
EVERYTHING REDUCED 5% ON SATURDAY
OPEN 9 am-9 pm MON-SAT

VERMONT PREMIERE

"A bitterly truthful, searingly beautiful work of art. Its troubled heroine is under the influence of many things, including love for her husband, devotion to her family, society's definition of neurosis, her own inner contradictions, and just possibly the moon. But mostly she is swayed by a fabulous energy for loving, an energy half-understood by her and misunderstood by everyone else. Playing her, Gena Rowlands emerges as a truly great movie personality."
— David Sterritt, CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

"We are beginning, finally, to understand that people crack up and break down not as the result of extraordinary pressures but because of the ordinary ones of daily life — the ones that pile up almost without our noticing them. A Woman Under The Influence is an astonishing true, sensitive, poignant — and even funny — portrayal of how we fall into — and out of — hard psychological times in this new commonplace of modern life. It is therefore a film of enormous 'relevance' and importance. Gena Rowlands and Peter Falk are simply wonderful in the leading roles. John Cassavetes once again proves that he is among the most profound and subtle and alive students of human behavior operating in any art form. I cannot imagine any adult American with the slightest awareness or concern about the way we live now who will not see something of him or herself, their friends and relatives in this lovely and exciting movie. Nothing I have seen this year has stirred my emotions or raised my consciousness more than A Woman Under The Influence."
— Richard Schickel

"An intensely involving emotional experience. The acting of the two primaries, Gena Rowlands and Peter Falk is of a virtuoso nature. Both deserve the highest accolades. Cassavetes emerges as one of those rare cinematic creatures — a film artist with a conscience and a love for humanity." — Hollis Alpert, SATURDAY REVIEW

"Heavyweight fare. May devastate you emotionally, but it will leave you with a purer, cleaner vision of why life is really worth living. Peter Falk is marvelous. The character is brought brilliantly to life." — Jack Brenchard, CRAWDADDY

"A mesmerizing, powerful, emotional look at love, marriage, compromise and madness. Gena Rowlands and Peter Falk pack such truth and honesty into their performances that the result is shattering." — Jacobs Allen, L.A. FREE PRESS

"Vibrates minute by minute from the impact of its emotional truths." PARENTS

"The Best Picture of the Year" Pat Collins, CBS-TV

PETER FALK / GENA ROWLANDS
JOHN CASSAVETES
A WOMAN UNDER THE INFLUENCE
R RESTRICTED
Produced by SAM SHAW • Written and Directed by JOHN CASSAVETES

"A Woman Under The Influence solidly establishes John Cassavetes as America's major 'woman's director', in the finest sense. While this term was once applicable to the George Cukors who fashioned lovely, enigmatic performances from lovely enigmatic women like Garbo, I'm using the term here more as it would apply to Ingmar Bergman. For Cassavetes, like Bergman, is interested not in surfaces but in depth; not in mystery but in the torment and isolation beneath the pose . . . it is his newest and most potent film . . . complex and often brilliant. It's a nightmarish pas de deux . . . Gena Rowland's portrait the most breathtaking screen performance I can remember . . . Peter Falk's enactment perfect. Cassavetes has painted an American Tragedy." — Marjorie Rosen, Ms. (February 1975 issue)

"Gena Rowlands is superb. A film by Cassavetes is wedded to reality, to people and place and language of life as experienced by most people. No elite has a place in his movies. Unforgettable." — Frances Taylor, U.I. PRESS

"For two-and-a-half hours I was spellbound, depressed, crying and at the conclusion, emotionally drained and shaken. Gena Rowlands' characterization of a woman trying to maintain a gasp on reality despite a feeling of worthlessness, is magnificent. Peter Falk is marvelous." — Steve and Judy Clemente, WHBI-FM

"Gena Rowlands unleashes an extraordinary characterization." — Nora Sayre, N.Y. TIMES

"An award-gathering performance by Gena Rowlands. As the wife (she) takes what may be one of the year's most complex parts — and far from its most sympathetic one — and makes it not only crystal clear but so powerfully moving that you want to stand up and scream. A Woman Under The Influence (is) one of the most original, moving and enlightening dissections of marriage yet made." — THE INDEPENDENT FILM JOURNAL

"A beautifully acted drama . . . Gena Rowlands, an actress of incredible emotional genuineness and depth, whose portrayal of the leading character lends truth to everything around her." — Howard Kissel, WOMEN'S WEAR

"Gena Rowlands delivers the performance of her career in 'A Woman Under The Influence.'" — PLAYBOY

"Gena Rowlands' electrifying performance . . . exquisite." — Jack Brenchard, CRAWDADDY

"A mammoth intimate work. Gena Rowlands was blazingly good . . . incredibly powerful gift." — John Crittenden, BERGEN RECORD

S.A. FILMS & FACE INTERNATIONAL INC.

presents

A WOMAN UNDER THE INFLUENCE

101 VOTEY — 7:30 PM ONLY — SATURDAY APRIL 5

TICKETS: $2.00 ON SALE IN BILLINGS

THURSDAY FROM 1:30 - 4:00

FRIDAY FROM 12:00 - 2:00

Due to contractual agreement, there may be only one showing of this film.

In order to get seats, be sure to buy tickets at Billings.

VERMONT CYNIC

'Tis a Privilege to Live in Vermont

FOUNDED IN 1883

VOLUME XCIII NUMBER 12

APRIL 10, 1975

S.A. Presidential Candidates

And Now Folks,

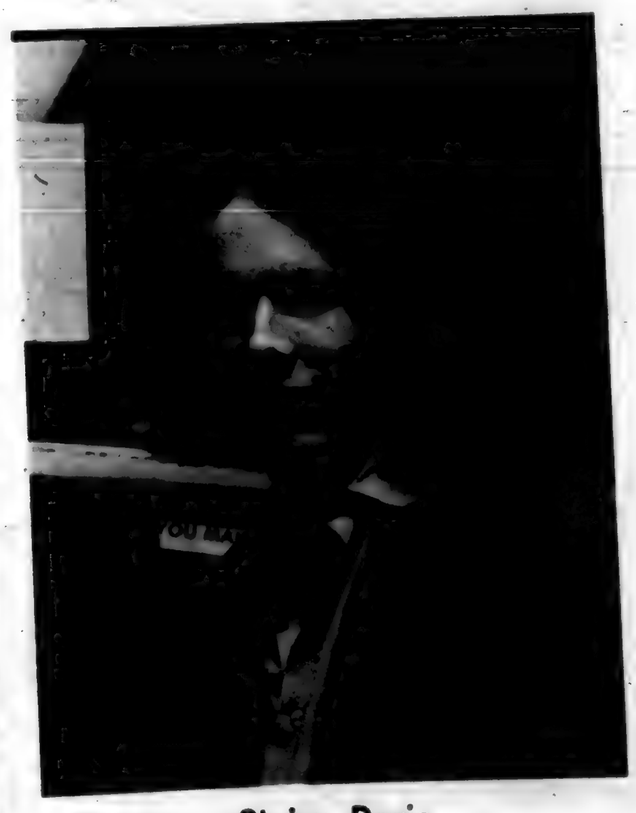
For The Next Act–

May We Present...

Ken Bartlett

Soon To Be Ex- S.A. President Peter Mac Ausland

Dallas Sacher



Staige Davis

Bruce Maddern

David Schwartz

SPS Photo: Lew Comerwitz

calendar annoucements

Two new exhibits have opened at the Fleming Museum and remain on view through May 9. They are entitled Clarence Schmidt: Reconstructed Shrines and Architectural Environment" and "John George Brown (1831-1913): A Reappraisal.

A display of scenery and costume design is exhibited in the Craftsbury Room of the Royall Tyler Theatre through Friday, April 18.

Tickets are now on sale daily from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Royall Tyler Theatre for the upcoming performance of "The Knight of the Burning Pestle" (April 18-20,24-26 at the Theatre). Call 656-2094 for details and ticket reservations.

A photo display of rural farms is on view in Billings' main lobby through Friday, sponsored by the Sociology Dept.

THURSDAY, APRIL 10

4:40 p.m., meeting of the UVM faculty with the Faculty Senate, Johnson Auditorium (Room 101), Votey Bldg.

2:00-4:00 p.m. Professor Thomas Settle, Brooklyn Poly History Department, will lead an informal discussion on "The Impact of Galileo's Science in the Renaissance." Memorial Lounge, Waterman.

6:30-7:30 p.m. Registration of visiting scholars, and reception for all, Alliot Hall, St. Michael's.

7 p.m., Interversity Christian Fellowship is having a fellowship meeting. We'll be voting on the Constitution and candidates for next year's exec. It's important that you come! B 162 L/L.

7:30 p.m. in Rowell 103, the Plant and Soil Science Society is sponsoring a talk by Mr. John Maill, an experienced Vermont beekeeper. Mr Mailloux's talk will include slides and an informal question-answer session afterwards.

7:30 p.m. Professor John Olin, Fordham Department of History, will talk on "The Concept of Pilgramage in the Writings of Ignatius Loyola." Alliot Hall, St. Michael's.

8:00 p.m., SA Films presents the musical "Royal Wedding." 101 Votey Bldg. Admission free.

7:30 p.m., Third World Organizations presents an African dance workshop instructed by Monta Jones. Registration is at 1:15 p.m. fee is $2.

8 p.m., The UVM Synchronized Swim Team presents a show "Catalina Cuisine," at the Forbush Natatorium, Patrick Gym. Tickets should be obtained in advance from the Gym or from Southwick. Admission is 50 cents for children and students with I.D., $1 for adults. The show will be repeated April 11 and 12.

8 p.m., "The Real Inspector Hound," a satirical whodunit mystery, Billings Center Apse.

8:45 p.m., St. Michael's Chorale, directed by William Tortolano, singing medieval and Renaissance music. The Chapel, St. Michael's.

FRIDAY, APRIL 11

9:30 a.m., The Culturally Different Child, a symposium series sponsored by the Cross Cultural Alternative Education Committee, College of Education and Social Services, presents Dr. Phyllis Harrison-Ross, pediatrician, psychologist and author, who will conduct a workshop at E-214 Given Bldg. The topic: "Growing Up Black."

10:00-12:00 a.m., Interested students and faculty are invited to an informal discussion with the four visiting Lecturers, Professors Settle, Olin, Louis Martze of Yale's English Department, and Walter Davis of Notre Dame's English Department. About 11:00, Professor Ralph Preston, St. Michael's Mathematics Department, will talk on Renaissance ships, using both slides and models. Klein Student Center, St. Michael's.

2:00-4:00 p.m. Interested students and faculty are invited to an informal discussion with the four visiting lecturers in the Faculty Lounge, Waterman, UVM.

4 p.m., "Friday at Four" presents Robert Caswell who will read his own poetry at the Royall Tyler Theatre. Admission is free, coffee will be served.

5:30-7:00 p.m., Reception for visiting scholars and all interested people at the Marble Court, Fleming Museum, UVM. Late registration. A display of medieval and Renaissance-style art done by Vermont craftsmen of the last two centuries, and collected by Professors Stan Yarian, Religion, UVM; Christie Fengler, Art History, UVM; and the Rev. Dan Daley, Mt. St. Mary's, Burlington.

7:30-9:00 p.m., Renaissance banquet, featuring roast suckling pig and other delights. Over coffee, after the main meal, the UVM Baroque Ensemble will play Renaissance music. Main Dining Room, Living/Learning Center, UVM. Please reserve a place for this event by sending your name and $5.00 to Professor James Howe, English, UVM.

7:30 p.m., an open poetry reading with R. Tinker Greene will be held at the Church Street Center, 135 Church St.

7:30 and 10 p.m., SA Films presents "The Harder They Come," 101 Votey Bldg. Admission is $1.

8 p.m., Synchronized Swim Team presents "Catalina Cuisine" at the pool; details under 8 p.m. on April 10.

8 p.m., Fleming Museum gallery talk with Prof. Lowell Bloss, Hobart and William Smith Colleges, "Early Buddhist Art."

8 p.m., performance of "The Real Inspectator Hound," at Billings Center Apse.

9:00 p.m., Professor Settle will talk on "The Relationship Between the Artistic and Technological Traditions in 16th Century Tuscany." 115 Commons, Living/Learning, UVM.

SATURDAY, APRIL 12

9:30 a.m., beginning of a two-Saturday workshop at the Church Street Center – "Beginning Spinning on a Drop Spindle," with Nancy Edwards. Details and registration by calling 656-4221.

11:00 a.m., Professor Walter Davis will talk on "Sir Thomas Browne's Urne Buriall: Descent into Death and the Underworld." Alliot Lounge, St. Michael's.

Noon, roughly, Medieval/Renaissance Fair. East Green, behind the library, UVM. Medieval plays, minstrels, jugglers, combats, booths selling crafts and food.

1-4 p.m., Women Against Rape is holding a training session at 77 Archibald St., Burlington (in Onion River Co-op offices). Any woman interested in being trained to answer the 24-hour hotline, or any woman who would like to know more about the group, is invited to attend this training session. For more information, call 863-1386.

3:00 p.m., Professor Louis Martz will talk on "Paradise Lost and the Idea of Pilgrimage." 105 Cook, UVM.

The Fair will continue throughout the afternoon. In case of rain, an alternative site will be announced.

Student-Alumni Career Day, at Living/Learning Center. See story in this issue; contact the Alumni Office, Alumni House, Ext. 2010, for more details. The program is jointly sponsored by the UVM Alumni Association and the Office of Career Planning and Placement.

7:30 and 9:30 p.m., SA Films presents "Long Day's Journey Into Night" with Katherine Hepburn in 101 Votey Bldg. Admission is free.

8 p.m., The UVM Synchronized Swim Team presents its last performance of "Catalina Cuisine" at Patrick Gym. Tickets can be obtained at the Gym and should be purchased in advance.

8 p.m., "The Real Inspector Hound" continues through Sunday at Billings' Apse.

8 p.m., The UVM Band performs in Ira Allen Chapel, sponsored by the Music Department.

SUNDAY, APRIL 13

4 p.m., the UVM Choir sings in Ira Allen Chapel. Admission is free, and the public is invited.

6:00 p.m. Ethnic Dinner, sponsored by the Anthropology Club. Room 115 C, L/L C.

6 p.m., Church Street Center's Legislative study group meets at the Center (135 Church St.)

7 p.m., St. Anselm's Chapel presents Prof. David Bucke, geology, who will discuss the relationship between his academic discipline and his religious participation, at St. Anselm's. Second in a series.

8 p.m., concluding performance of "The Real Inspector Hound," at Billings Center Apse.

MONDAY, APRIL 14

11 a.m. to 1 p.m., E.Y. Harburg, lyricist, will speak to a class in American musical theatre, at Royall Tyler. Visitors welcome.

2 p.m., Alice D. Outwater meets with those who haven't been in school for a while at the Counseling and Testing Center.

4:10 p.m., Dr. David Barrington, curator of UVM's Pringle Herbarium, speaks in a Biology seminar, on "Tropical Botany in Southern Florida, A Spring Vacation Field Trip" in 105 Marsh Life Sciences Bldg. Coffee is served in Room 107 at 3:55.

5 p.m., VPIRG meets in Conference Rm. C, Billings.

7 p.m., The Living/Learning Nutrition class meets for an hour of exercises and counseling in healthier eating habits in 115 Commons, L/L. Repeated Wednesdays.

7:30 p.m., The Burlington Scottish Dancers sponsor a night of instruction in square and contra dancing with Scottish music and footwork. Come at 8:15 if you're an intermediate or advanced dancer or 7:30 if beginning for fun, fitness and fellowship at 107 Perkins Geology Bldg.

7:30 and 9:30 p.m., SA Films presents the French classic, "Rules of the Game," in 101 Votey Bldg. Admission Free.

TUESDAY, APRIL 15

9:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m., Religion Dept. hosts a "Healing Workshop" at the Unitarian Church. Opening the session is Dr. John Parks, a bio-psychosynthesist. Come for any or all of the program.

11 a.m., Prof. John E. Kritzer of UVM's Physics Dept. speaks on "Nonequilibrium Thermodynamics Applied to the Red Cell Membrane" in A-531 Cook Bldg. Coffee is served in A-429 at 10:30 a.m.

12 noon, Alice D. Outwater leads a study habits workshop at the Counseling and Testing Center.

12:15 p.m., The Music Dept. sponsors a student recital at Ira Allen Chapel.

7:30 p.m., In celebration of International Women's Year the Women's Caucus of UVM presents a panel discussion. Prof. Martha Kent speaks on "Women and Achievement", Prof. Mary Deming discusses "Women and Occupations," Prof. Virginia Clark presents "Women and Language" and Prof. Irene Diamond will discuss "Women and Politics", reception following. All are held in Billings North Lounge. Profs. Kent, Deming, Clark and Diamond are members of UVM's departments of psychology, sociology, English and political science, respectively.

2 p.m., Learn to deal with tension- a group meets at the Counseling and Testing Center with Alan Ross and Alice D. Outwater.

3-5 p.m., lyricist E.Y. Harburg will speak to a class in American musical theatre, at Royall Tyler Theatre. Sit in and listen to the views of Mr. Hurburg, whose credits include "Wizard of Oz".

4:30 p.m., The Geography Dept. and Asian Cultural Exchange present Prof. Robert E. Huke of Dartmouth who will speak on "The Impact of the Green Revolution on Agriculture in the Philippines". Slides wil also be shown in Room 109, Old Mill.

7 p.m., The Intervarsity Christian Fellowship is holding a series of Bible studies on the book of Colossians every Tuesday evening. All are welcome to attend at 205 So. Prospect St., Apt. 2

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 16

Today is Honors Day, a time for recognition of UVM's outstanding students and achievers. Classes are suspended from 3 p.m. onward so that colleges and schools may observe the ceremonies. See story this issue.

9:30 p.m., The Women's Caucus of UVM presents a discussion of problem areas identifying decisions which affect certain options in life. At 1:30 p.m. a panel with guests discusses the topic of "Realities of Life 5 to 10 Years After Graduation". All in North Lounge, Billings.

12 noon, The Counseling and Testing Center presents a relaxation and meditation hour at the Center.

12:15 p.m., The Lunch Bunch Film Series features "Twentieth Century Art" this week. Admission is free and public at the Church Street Center.

4 p.m., "Tertulia" is an informal gathering of any students, faculty and staff interested in speaking Spanish, no matter what your level of speaking ability. Meet at the Hispanic Apts., third floor Bldg. D, L/L.

7 p.m. L/L Nutrition Program holds an hour of nutrition counseling and exercises in 115 Commons, L/L. Repeated from Monday.

7:30 p.m., The silent German film, "Der muede Tod", is shown in 104 Old Mill.

7:30 p.m., The Outing Club meets in 305 Votey Bldg.

8 p.m., The Women of UVM Book Discussion Group will meet at the home of Sissel Newcombe, 1263 Spear St., to discuss "Bring Me a Unicorn" by Anne Morrow Lindbergh.

8 p.m., The Music Dept. presents the UVM student orchestra in Ira Allen Chapel.

THURSDAY, APRIL 17

9:30 a.m., A panel discussion on "Women in Sports" will precede a program at 1:30 on "Does Female Always Equal Passive?" - an assertiveness workshop. Prof. Martha Kent will also discuss "Humiliation as Social Control". At 2:15 a discussion of Prof. Kent's talk follows. An assertiveness training workshop with Dr. Kay Frances Schmucker and Alice D. Outwater of Counseling and Testing begins at 2:30. All are held in Billings' North Lounge, and sponsored by UVM's Women's Caucus.

11 a.m., The Grounds Dept. holds an open house. See story this issue.

12 noon, The Non-Academic Employees Council meets in Memorial Lounge, Waterman Bldg. Prof. Sam Feitelberg, special assistant to President Andrews, is the special guest who will discuss labor unions. NAEC meetings are open to all interested employees.

VERMONT CYNIC

S.A. PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES – It's that time of the year, days get longer, skirts get shorter and S.A. Presidential Candidates voice their views ..... Page Five

FOOD DAY – Not just another Earth Day, Food Day examines food industry, nations eating habits, Saga plans special meal ..... Page Four

TUITION INCREASE – University combats rising costs – Trustees approve tuition hikes ..... Page Four

MEDIEVAL FAIR – Fun and Games – Medieval style. Renaissance Department lets it all hang out ..... Page Eight

SAGA INCREASE – SAGA announces a rise in Board Rates ..... Page Twelve

CYNIC INTERVIEW WITH PETER MacAUSLAND – An in-depth conversation with the departing head of Student state ..... Page Ten

NEWS: Margo Howland, John MacDonald, Peter Sherwin, Jerry Well, Dave Ryan, Peter Duquette.
FEATURE: Paul Ajamian, Paul Cain, Carol Dufault, Mike Henry, Pam Hogarth, Andy Hunt, Sue Perkins.
ARTS: Dave Mandel, Larry Seiden, Mark Serulnick, Jay Williams.
COLUMNISTS: Peter Cobb, Elliot Freeman, Ken Markovitz, Sue Perkins, Stephen Rice, Larry Seiden, Scott Skinner, Peter Campbell.
PRODUCTION: Rick Barney, Elly Clay, Sarah Clay, Beth Cohen, John Lunde, Barb Tarshis
SPORTS: Randy Briggs, Don Rose, Richard Rottkov, Pat Taves.
ADVERTISING: Katherine Bowers, Stephen Lee Brown, Sherry Grancey, Debbie Powell.
BUSINESS MANAGER: Nancy Shanik.

Opinions expressed in editorials, cartoons, or columns in the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the University administration, faculty, or staff, or the State of Vermont. Opinions expressed by the columnists do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the majority of the members of the CYNIC Editorial Board.

Published yearly during the college year by the students of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College. Editorial and Business offices in the Billings Center, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone: 658-4911. Deadline for notices is one week prior to date of publication.

Founded in 1883. Subscription rate $8.00 per year, single copy ten cents.

IRA Elections

April 16 In Dining Halls

Gay Switchboard 656-4173

The Gay Student Union now has a telephone for information and counselling. It will be staffed two nights a week from seven to ten p.m. Tuesday nights will be staffed by a man, while Thursday nights will be staffed by a woman. Whether you are Gay, straight, bisexual, or undecided, feel free to call and talk if you want to discuss homosexuality, or find out about upcoming Gay events. The switchboard will operate from next Tuesday (April 15) through the rest of the semester. Also, the Gay Student Union has a desk on the North Lounge balcony in Billings Center (the third floor). The bulletin board is kept posted with information about local and New England Gay events, Gay books can be borrowed by request, and copies of several Gay publications are left out for all to read. If you want to join the GSU or help us in any way, don't be afraid to call us.

That's 656-4173, Tuesdays and Thursdays, 7–10 p.m.

UVM Band Concert

It seems very inappropriate to say "spring is here" but it must be since once again it is time for the UVM Band's Spring Concert. Maybe we should call it a winter concert and save the spring one for next year.

This year the music will cover a broad spectrum of styles, moods and forms. There is the startlingly fast Shostakovich piece, Folk Festival, along with the slow and melodious Serenade for Band by Persichetti. Other selections include works by Delibes, Hanson, Rimsky-Korsakov, Holst and Erickson. While it may be true that this music has little relation to the Beach Boys and other rock groups, it still is excellent music to listen to of another variety from what you are probably accustomed to. The price certainly cannot be beat, the concert is free and open to the public.

Every "spring" semester the UVM Concert Band rehearses two or three times a week for this opportunity to present some fine music to the Burlington people and of course the UVM students. Dr. Herbert Schultz, the director, has put all his years of musical experience, including fifteen as band director here, into perfecting and molding the band into a fine-tuned musical organism.

To share in our music come to Ira Allen Chapel, Saturday night, April 12th at 8:00 p.m. Come alone or bring a date or a friend, they will really thank you for it.

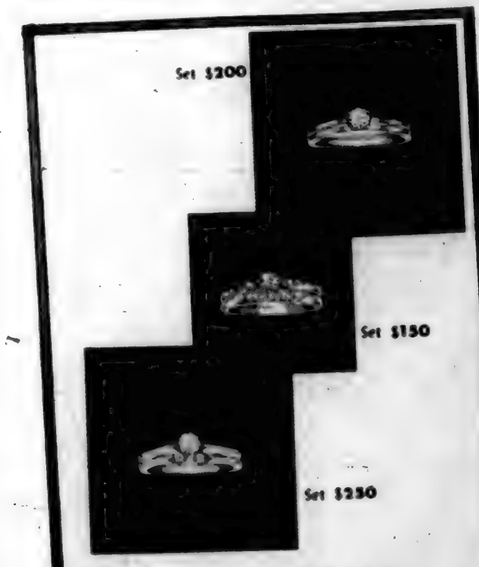
Sociology In L/L

A group of students interested in sociology have been working with the sociology department to construct a program in the Living and Learning Center for next year.

The program will consist of biweekly seminars in various themes of sociology. In conjunction with the seminars field trips and films will probably be used. The purpose of the seminars is to give each member of the program a look at the different themes of sociology, so that he or she will develop an interest in that theme or a related theme. At the end of the first semester, an accredited course will be drawn up by the students and the sociology department, to be taught during the second semester. The course may be a full group participation course or students may elect to have their own independent study project for the second semester.

Any person interested in this type of program should have an "honest" interest in sociology. Ten or more are currently enrolled in it for next semester.

If you are interested or have any question please contact Jay Bigman x4250 or call the Sociology Department and ask for Fred Schmidt (x3236).



Femininity is the Keynote

of two matched sets with a delightful aura of youth and charm. Simply and beautifully executed, they have a feminine air in the daintiness of their designs, yet are wonderfully and beautifully effective on the hand.

You are invited to open a Charge Account at Preston's

A family of jewelers in Vermont since 1844

F.J. PRESTON & SON INC.
17 Upper Church Street
Member American Gem Society

WARNING:
The Ivory Tower is about to collapse.

It's your last year of college. Why think about life insurance now? Because, the older you get the more it costs. And next year, it's all up to you. Find out about CollegeMaster.

Call the Fidelity Union CollegeMaster® Field Associate in your area:
863-4546
130 CHURCH STREET
BURLINGTON

CollegeMaster.

UNIVERSITY YEAR FOR ACTION (U.Y.A.)
APPLICATIONS NOW BEING ACCEPTED!
AVAILABLE AT: The Office of Volunteer Programs
Mansfield House
656-2062
STOP IN FOR INFORMATION AND U.Y.A. PRELIMINARY INTERVIEWS

Food Plan

The UVM Trustees finally approved the pricing and structure of next year's Food Plan.

To quote one of the Trustees, "The new Food Plan has many fine features, but our ability to explain it to parents and students isn't one of them."

We certainly didn't do a very good job of explaining the plan a year ago. Many students, and, indirectly, parents found out the base plan didn't cover a whole semester's worth of meals. Hence – many panic S.O.S. calls home for more money. The base plan wasn't intended to cover the entire semester for the avgrage eater but we didn't get that word across very well.

Enough of the past – what are we going to do this time?
(1) A new meal plan brochure will be issued to all returning students with the room choosing info. It explains the plan more clearly than last year's booklet.
(2) A let... students' ... at specific... plan. The ... the base ... enough co... eater.
(3) The ... contract ... provision ... holders ... coupons ... room and ... This shou... students ... scholarshi...
If an... communic... helpful, ... know (ex...
Each ... should be ... for next ... this year. ... However, ... the 'follo... for next ... Features ... Plan.
(1) ... contain ...

Anthro Ethnic

Exotic Foods, wine, music...the Anthropology Club will be holding its Spring Ethnic Dinner on Sunday April 13, at 6:00 p.m. in Room 115 Commons, L/L.

Everyone is welcome! Admission is one main course dish, or bread, or beverage, or ... kind of ... you'd li... sure ... Anthro... (x3884) ... you will ... A...

Learn About T...

The Plant and Soil Science Society is sponsoring an informal talk on Beekeeping by John Mailloux of Green Mountain Honey Farms, Jerrisburg, Vermont. Mr. Mailloux will discuss his ... experie... Vermo... some ... questio... This w... 103 ... Thursd...

St. Anselm's

This week we will have the second of four Sunday night presentations. Dave Bucke of the Geology department will speak on the relationship of his teaching vocation and his membership in the Church. Things will begin at 7:00 p.m. at St. Anselm's Chapel, and there will be dessert served and a discussion following. All are invited.

As things get busy and close to the panic stage, remember St. Anselm's is a place for people to study, to read, to sit and be quiet. So, ... feel fr... need t... Servic... Holy ... Prayer... Holy ... Rosa... Prayer... Prayer... Progr... Enqu... Confe... Retr...

Cunningha...

MASS SCHEDULE
Monday – Friday: 4:15 p.m.
Tuesday: 10:00 p.m.
WEEKEND MASS SCHEDULE: Saturday: 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.; Sunday: 9:00 and 11:30 a.m. and 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.

VARIETY SHOW
Come and see the great talent on the UVM campus! Place: Southwick Auditorium; Date: Saturday, April 19th; Time: 7:30 p.m.; Tickets: Only $.50 to cover expenses.

FAITH COMMUNITY
Every other Wednesday evening at the Newman Center. An evening experience of ...

Healing S... To Be

The Dept. of Religion in conjunction with the various members of the contemporary therapeutic community, will attempt to come to a clearer understanding of the Healing process, and the essense of Health itself. Is Healing that which enables man to cope successfully in a daily struggle in a hostile environment or is it a making whole; of man's renewal of connection to a greater unity that fills his like with "inspiration" and completeness. The bringing together of Orthodoxy Medicine, faith healers, Bio-energetics, Dance therapist... d Massage cannot ...

AMERICA'S GREATEST MUSICAL EVENT
NEWPORT JAZZ FESTIVAL NEW YORK
JUNE 27-JULY 6

NDIDATES - It's that time of the to get shorter and S.A. Presidential Page Five

another Earth Day. Food Day nations eating habits. Saga plans.
Page Four

University combats rising costs - kes.
Page Four

un and Games - Medieval style.
ets it all hang out
Page Eight

A announces a rise in Board Rates
Page Twelve

TH PETER MacAUSLAND - An
th the departing head of Student
Page Ten

PRODUCTION: Rick Barney, Elly Clay, Sarah Clay, Beth Cohen, John Lunde, Barb Tarabi.

SPORTS: Randy Briggs, Don Rose, Richard Rottkov, Pat Towe.

ADVERTISING: Katherine Bowers, Stephen Lee Brown, Sherry Grancoy, Debbie Powell.

BUSINESS MANAGER: Nancy Shanik.

...ressed in editorials, cartoons, or ...YNIC do not necessarily reflect the ...niversity administration, faculty, or ...of Vermont. Opinions expressed by ... not necessarily reflect the opinion ...of the members of the CYNIC

...ly during the college year by the ...University of Vermont and State ...ge. Editorial and Business offices in ...r, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone ...ne for notices is one week prior to ...

...1882. Subscription rate $8.00 per ...ten cents.

Elections

...In Dining Halls

...board 656-4173

...Union ...e for ...lling. It ...ghts a ...n p.m. ...staffed ...turday ... by a ...e Gay, ...51, or ...call and ...discuss ...nd out ...events. ...operate ...pril 15) ...of the semester. Also, the Gay Student Union has a desk on the North Lounge balcony in Billings Center (the third floor). The bulletin board is kept posted with information about local and New England Gay events. Gay books can be borrowed by request, and copies of several Gay publications are left out for all to read. If you want to join the GSU or help us in any way, don't be afraid to call us.

That's 656-4173, Tuesdays and Thursdays, 7-10 p.m.

Band Concert

...very ...spring is ...since once ...the UVM ...91. Maybe ...a winter ...spring ...

...music will ...strum of ...ows. There ...ly fast ...se. Folk ...the slow ...made for ...ril. Other ...works by ...erson, ...Holst and ...ly be true ...has little ...Boys and ...it still is ...stem to of ...what you are probably accustomed to. The price certainly cannot be beat, the concert is free and open to the public.

Every "spring" semester the UVM Concert Band rehearses two or three times a week for this opportunity to present some fine music to the Burlington people and of course the UVM students. Dr. Herbert Schultz, the director, has put all his years of musical experience, including fifteen as band director here, into perfecting and molding the band into a fine-tuned musical organism.

To share in our music come to Ira Allen Chapel, Saturday night, April 12th at 8:00 p.m. Come alone or bring a date or a friend, they will ...ly thank you for it.

...ON (U.Y.A.)

...CCEPTED!

...rams

...INARY INTERVIEWS

Food Plan For 1975-76

The UVM Trustees finally approved the pricing and structure of next year's Food Plan.

To quote one of the Trustees, "The new Food Plan has many fine features, but our ability to explain it to parents and students isn't one of them."

We certainly didn't do a very good job of explaining the plan a year ago. Many students, and, indirectly, parents found out the base plan didn't cover a whole semester's worth of meals. Hence - many panic S.O.S. calls home for more money. The base plan wasn't intended to cover the entire semester for the average eater but we didn't get that word across very well.

Enough of the past - what are we going to do this time?

(1) A new meal plan brochure will be issued to all returning students with the room choosing info. It explains the plan more clearly than last year's booklet.

(2) A letter to all incoming students' parents will be aimed at specifically explaining the plan. The letter will show how the base may not contain enough coupons for the heavy eater.

(3) The room and board contracts will contain a provision allowing all base plan holders to have additional coupons billed along with the room and base plan amounts. This should prove helpful for students who will be seeking scholarships and loans.

If anyone has ideas about communicating that would be helpful, please let Fred Smith know (ext. 3155).

Each returning student should be able to plan better for next year - based upon this year's actual experience. However, please keep in mind the following when planning for next year.

Features of the 75/76 Meal Plan

(1) The Base Plan will contain 680 coupons (4 books of 170 each).

(2) The Base Plan will cost $330.00 (or 48.5 cents per coupon).

(3) Extra Coupons will cost 30 cents per coupon and can be purchased in various increments.

(4) The regular meals will have new coupon values: Breakfast - 3 coupons, Lunch - 4 coupons, Dinner - 6 coupons.

(5) A coupon will be worth 40 cents in the snackbars and grocery stores.

(6) The Stores will carry a substantial line of non-food items.

Other programatic features include:

The "White Mouse" and "Redstone Station" restaurants will continue.

Simpson Dining Hall will be carpeted and renovated.

"Waiters" will be renovated to help provide faster service.

Waterman will re-open for breakfast.

Anthro Ethnic Dinner

Exotic Foods, wine, music, the Anthropology Club will be holding its Spring Ethnic Dinner on Sunday April 13, at 6:00 p.m. in Room 115 Commons, L/LC.

Everyone is welcome! Admission is: one main course dish, or bread, or beverage, or salad or desert - whatever you'd like to bring. Please be sure to contact the Anthropology Department (x3884) and let us know what you will bring.

After dinner, Randy Gellerman will speak and show slides on her field work experience in Vietnam.

Summer Session

Now is the time to start making plans for attending UVM's Summer Session. Specific Information on courses, workshops, faculty and costs can be obtained at the Summer Session Office in Grasse Mount or by cally 656-2085. Watch the Cynic for additional information.

Learn About The Bees

The Plant and Soil Science Society is sponsoring an informal talk on Beekeeping by John Mailloux of Green Mountain Honey Farms, Ferrisburg, Vermont. Mr. Mailloux will discuss his experiences as an experienced Vermont Beekeeper, show some slides and answer any questions on how to keep bees. This will take place in Room 103 Rowell at 7:30 on Thursday, April 10.

St. Anselm's Chapel

This week we will have the second of four Sunday night presentations. Dave Bucke of the Geology department will speak on the relationship of his teaching vocation and his membership in the Church. Things will begin at 7:00 p.m. at St. Anselm's Chapel and there will be dessert served and a discussion following. All are invited.

As things get busy and close to the panic stage, remember St. Anselm's is a place for people to study, to read, to sit and be quiet. So, feel free to use this spot if you need to.

Services:

Sunday morning: 9:10 Holy Eucharist; 5:00 Evening Prayer.

Tuesday night: 10 p.m. Holy Eucharist in Commons Room.

Monday-Friday: Morning Prayer at 7:15 a.m.; Evening Prayer at 5:00 p.m.

Programs:

Monday: 7:15 p.m., Enquirer's Class; 2:00 p.m., Confirmation Class.

Friday-Saturday evenings: Retreat at Mission Farm.

Med Schools Together

The University of Vermont College of Medicine will join with the Dartmouth Medical School in developing joint teaching programs for medical students utilizing a two-way closed circuit television link between Burlington and Hanover, N.H.

Project director will be Dr. Arthur Naitove, associate professor of surgery at Dartmouth, who has received a $50,000 grant from the National Fund for Medical Education for this work.

The project will use INTERACT, the New Hampshire/Vermont Interactive Television Network which provides specialty medical services and consultation between the two schools as well as among eight other medical and educational institutions in the two-state area. Interactive television offers two-way communication, with participants at the various broadcast sites actively engaged in the program.

Dr. Naitove said the potential of this type of teaching program is great at a time when medical education costs are rising rapidly, and schools are finding it difficult to meet the demands for more faculty to provide an increasing number of medical students with instruction in all of the modern scientific disciplines and clinical specialties.

"Thus," he said, "the possibilities of efficient low cost utilization of the talents and expertise of faculty members at one school to teach the students at another through the medium of interactive television, without the added costs and time for travel between the two, is an attractive concept."

Vet Interest Program

The Living Learning Center had recently accepted the proposal for the Veterinary Interest Program for the 1975-76 year.

The program will consist of a group of students currently enrolled in the pre-veterinary curriculum. They will have the opportunity to explore many topics of the veterinary sciences and acquire a greater knowledge of the career alternatives to veterinary medicine.

Those students interested in participating in the program should contact Paul Burditch 656-2080 or Mike Rauch 656-2083 as soon as possible.

No Room At At The UVM Inn...Again!

Dean of Students Keith Miser advised Trustees at the April meeting that the University is anticipating the shortage of from 300 to 1000 places in the residence halls next fall.

This will be true, he said, even with the expected return to the system of Redstone and Converse Halls, and the availability of additional units at Trinity thanks to cooperation of that college's officials.

The major reason, he advised, is that fewer students than average are leaving the halls, while more are seeking to enter the system.

Thus the outlook once again will be for "tripling up in doubles and probably using some lounge areas also for housing.

Time To Review Journals

During the past few months, academic departments have examined listings of periodical titles received by the Bailey and Physics and Chemistry libraries and have recommended, canceling subscriptions to many journals. At the same time, the library staff examined the general periodical collection and the duplicated journal titles in Bailey and the Dana Medical Library. A preliminary listing of all journal subscriptions proposed for cancellation is now ready for examination. All interested UVM students, faculty and staff are urged to examine this listing of journal titles and make recommendations on any titles for which retention can be justified.

Anyone wishing to examine this listing should do so before Friday, April 18. The listing of journals is available for review in Bailey Library, the Physics and Chemistry Library and the Dana Meducal Library.

Gowns

As previously announced a limited number of master's and doctorial gowns will be available for sale at the UVM Bookstore AS IS on Monday April 14.

Free "America"

To all interested members of the UVM community: Pick up your free copy of America, The Student Travel Guide, courtesy of the UVM Student Association, at Billings Center.

The Exchange

by Andrea Lehtonen
Alice D. Outwater Counseling & Testing

As we opened THE EXCHANGE mail this week, we found a charming letter from a satisfied freshman in Harris-Millis who describes herself as outgoing. She feels it is definitely the spot for freshmen, says the 'upperclassman have more insights and wordly experience from which I can benefit. older friends have helped me understand the different social phenomena - dating behavior, changing relevancy of the Greek organizations, etc.' She muses that all dorms have their drawbacks but she can't begin to express her satisfaction at being in Harris-Millis. Hurrah! We KNEW some of you loved it there! Thanks for coming out of the woodwork.

Now for the parking - we got some helpful answers to our request. A favorite faculty member of ours would like to see a few (1 or 2) short-term parking spaces in Waterman Parking lot for those doing quickie business. Hasn't anyone suggested this before - it seems so simple and obvious? We're looking into it. No more fifteen minutes of driving about for a five minute errand.

Unhappy students in the Chittenden-Buckham-Wilks area do NOT appreciate faculty using their lot. Apparently Security has said it's OK, but the students feel infringed upon, and he brings the Parking Handbook to his support. It is NOT FACULTY PARKING AREA. I'm with you students-myself! Another complaint is about the parking tickets which are considered too high by this respondent, and the matter of holding back grades if they are unable to pay. I'll look into the reasoning behind this. I remember going into the bookstore to buy Christmas cards on sale proudly saving $2.00 and came out to find a $20.00 parking ticket on my windshield! I can still feel the sinking sensation I had at that discovery.

And now to 'turn to Spring!' An old fashioned faculty friend says he loves this UVM campus and has enjoyed watching the trees and bushes grow over the years. He feels strengthened as he strolls its pathways twice a day. And as he does, he picks up one stray piece of paper - our fantasies have let loose! How fine the campus would look if every student did this too - 8,000 of you - why there wouldn't be a scrap of paper left on the ground. We'll close on this one. We all count mightily; we all can make a difference.

Keep the comments coming on THE EXCHANGE blanks or call X2968.

Greek Spirit Lives At Tri-Delt

After 82 years at UVM, Tri-Delta sorority continues to live on and enjoy Greek spirit. Tri-Delta was founded at Boston University in 1888; a short five years later, in February 1893, Eta chapter was founded here at UVM (the seventh chapter of Delta Delta Delta.) In September of '74, last semester, this chapter celebrated the initiation of its 1000th member. Tri-Delta National sent a gift of $500 to be presented to Bailey Library in honor of this occasion.

As a sorority we enjoy sisterhood, scholarship, partying as well as working at school and community services. This year after working for SAGA at the football games and waitressing at the Friends of UVM Hockey banquet, we were able to give out a scholarship of $450. The winner, soon to be announced, is now in the running for a National Tri-Delt scholarship.

In November the pledges waitressed at the Retired Seniors Volunteer Program (RSVP) banquet. Then around Christmas time the sisters of Tri-Delta armed with coloring books, crayons, and puzzles, went up to the children's ward at the hospital to entertain for an evening. Again on Valentine's Day Tri-Delts, with the help of some rushees, created 'heart' mobiles and brought them to the hospital children to decorate their rooms.

Of course we have other activities for amusement - take that exciting annual Powder Puff Hockey Game with Pi Phi sorority... we may not win the Stanley Cup but we get A for effort (and Awful bruised bodies!)

One of the greatest happenings for Delta Delta Delta this year was our 34 pledges which makes our house the largest it's been since back in 1893 when Eta chapter was founded!

Free Folk & Bluegrass Festival

On Saturday, April 26, there will be a one day folk festival sponsored by the SA Concert Bureau and IRA in conjunction with the Red Square Affair. This festival is free and will take place on the CBW Green (behind Bailey Library). There will be various workshops plus a contra dance called by Jerry Jenkins from 10 until 12:30 p.m. The concert will start at 1 and end around 6 p.m.

The music presented will include traditional folk music, bluegrass, blues and ballads among others. Performers appearing will be Bottle Hill, a bluegrass band from New York, Saul Broudy, a harmonica and guitar player from Pennsylvania who has appeared as a backup artist on many albums, and Jerry Jenkins and band, a contra dance group. Tentatively appearing will be Jay and Lynn Unger, playing an array of stringed instruments, who have also appeared on a number of recordings and, Utah Phillips with Rosalie Sorrells, two musicians who are very well known in folk circles for their bawdy ballads and labor songs.

Utah Phillips has played at UVM a number of times previously.

This day should prove to be one of good music and good times for all. Bring yourself and bring your friends for a great day of free music!

Watch for further information on additional artists in the CYNIC and around campus. For information call Wayne at 3307 or Barbara at 3001.

Wanted: OVP Treasurer

The Office of Volunteer Programs is the link between the University and the surrounding community. It works with over seventy agencies and/or projects aiding in the volunteer placement of students, staff and community members. What it offers for both the community and the student is enrichment and a helping hand; also for the student it opens avenues to alternatives - to the classroom, to the use of leisure time, to the total learning experience. It is a resource library, a place to air new ideas and a supportive atmosphere towards an education outside of the University.

Great opportunity to use your accounting to help others!!! Duties are handling purchase vouchers, budgeting, simple bookkeeping, and being the liaison in financial matters between OVP and the Student Association. The job requires about 6 hours a week and could be a Work Study Project if the applicant qualifies or academic credit might be arranged.

For more information call or leave a message for Pat Garvan at OVP, Ext. 2062.

Pre-Vets

There will be a very important meeting of the Pre Veterinary Club on Tuesday, April 15 at 7:00 p.m. in 111 Rowell Hall. Discussion will center on the future of the club and election of new officers will be made. All members must attend.

Persons interested in animal related fields are also urged to come.

Cunningham Newman Center

MASS SCHEDULE: Monday - Friday: 4:15 p.m.; Tuesday: 10:00 p.m.

WEEKEND MASS SCHEDULE: Saturday: 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.; Sunday: 9:00 and 11:30 a.m. and 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.

VARIETY SHOW: Come and see the great talent on the UVM campus! Place: Southwick Auditorium; Date: Saturday, April 19th; Time: 7:30 p.m.; Tickets: Only $.50 to cover expenses.

FAITH COMMUNITY: Every other Wednesday evening at the Newman Center. An evening experience of prayer and dialogue with young people in our worshipping community who are of, or beyond, graduate school age. Interested?

LEAP WEEKEND: The last Leap of the school year will be held the weekend of April 11, 12 & 13. If you are interested in a weekend of building Christian Community, please call the Newman Center for more information. (862-8403).

A MORE MEANINGFUL LIFE SERIES: Exposition and exploration of the Catholic faith. Especially for non-Catholics interested in the Catholic traditions, and for Catholics interested in deepening their religious understanding. Each Monday at 8:30 p.m.

FARMWORKERS ARE ACTIVE: Are you interested in this cause? Many of our college community are active these days in boycotting and picketing for the Farm Workers. For more information on meetings and events please contact Fr. Crowley at the Newman Center.

Hillel

There will be a Sunday Brunch, April 13, at 11 a.m. The topic of discussion following the Brunch will be current events.

Anyone interested in Summer School or any other activities in Israel, contact Prof. H. Kahn, German Dept. Waterman, for information.

Healing Symposium To Be Held

The Dept. of Religion in conjunction with the various members of the contemporary therapeutic community, will attempt to come to a clearer understanding of the Healing process, and the essense of Health itself. Is Healing that which enables man to cope successfully in a daily struggle in a hostile environment or is it a making-whole of man's renewal of connection to a greater unity that fills his like with "inspiration" and completeness. The bringing together of Orthodoxy Medicine, faith healers, Bio-energetics, Dance therapies and Massage cannot be anything but intensely interesting and fruitful for all members of the University especially those who plan to become healers themselves.

The Symposium will start at 9:30 a.m. and last all day. Beginning with a talk by Dr. John Porkh, a Bio-psychosynthesis, to be followed by discussion. The afternoon will be dedicated to workshops and a final "bringing it together" discussion. Please come and share your views and experience the way of others in a day dedicated to understanding a process that is of essential importance for us all.

Time To Run Preview

Much enthusiasm greeted the area preview showing of the movie Time to Run. The crowd filled both theaters at the Cinema I and II on the April 1 showing. The movie has been long awaited by the Christian body, for response to the film has been strongly positive throughout the country.

The film is extremely unique. It is the only recent full length film that presents the gospel in a modern framework. Most viewers found a clear message in an enjoyable and entertaining movie.

The setting is California. The plot involves a militant ecologist son pitted against a father who heads a nuclear reaction plant. The son's publicized militancy breaks an already tenuous paternal relationship. The mother and the girlfriend, a Jesus person, seek to help the family and to bring understanding of the priorities and values of life. Though the frame of the plot may not be one that is common to UVM, the substance of the movie is applicable to us. It involves our coming to grips with family strife, romantic relationships, and spiritual realities.

The show is extremely worthwhile. Advanced discount tickets will be on sale on campus very soon. The movie runs from April 23-29. More information will be available in next week's CYNIC, or by calling 863-2633.

AMERICA'S GREATEST MUSICAL EVENT
NEWPORT JAZZ FESTIVAL NEW YORK
JUNE 27-JULY 6

The following artists will appear (listed in alphabetical order): Cannonball Adderley, Gato Barbieri, Count Basie, George Benson, Tuhsi Blake, Art Blakey, Ruby Braff, George Barnes, Dave Brubeck, Milt Buckner, Jaki Byard, Candido, Benny Carter, Dorothy Love Coleman, Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis, Miles Davis, Dorothy Donegan, Thomas A. Dorsey, Eleanor Ellington, Maynard Ferguson, Tiger French, Chet Baker, Dizzy Gillespie, Roland Hanna, Barry Harris, Woody Herman, Freddie Hubbard, Bobbi Humphrey, Illinois Jacquet, Harry James, Keith Jarrett, Claude Jones, Elvin Jones, Clark Lewis & John Blackwood, Johnny Lytle, Ramsey Lewis, Jon Lucien, Harold Mabern, Chuck Mangione, Herbie Mann, Sadao Watanabe, Charles Mingus, Thelonious Monk, Mona Middleton, Joe Newman, Oregon, Marian McPartland, Max Roach, Sonny Rollins, The Saxophone Supporters, Mike Stern, Tabackin, McCoy Tyner, Sarah Vaughan, Cedar Walton, Bill Watrous, JC White Singers, Randy Weston, Teddy Wilson.

If you're not already on the mailing list, write for full-color detailed program information to: Newport Jazz Festival, P.O. Box 1166, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10023.

We're looking for certain majors to become Lieutenants.

Mechanical and civil engineering majors . . . aerospace and aeronautical engineering majors . . . majors in electronics . . . computer science . . . mathematics.

The Air Force needs people . . . many with the above academic majors. And AFROTC has several different programs where you can fit . . . 4 year, 3 year, or 2 year programs. Some of fering full scholarships. All offering $100 a month allowance during the last two years of the program. Flying opportunities. And all leading to an Air Force officers commission, plus advanced education.

If you'd like to cash in on these Air Force benefits, start by looking into the Air Force ROTC.

Dept of Aerospace Studies
St. Michael's College. Telephone 655-2000 Ext. 381

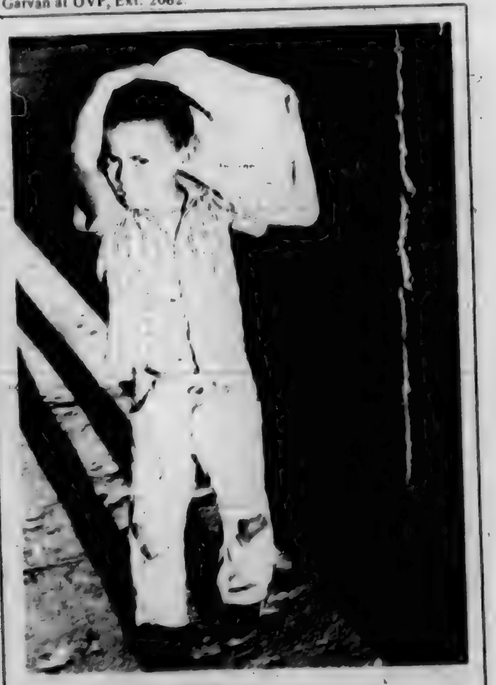
Put it all together in Air Force ROTC.

UNIVERSITY STORE ROTC UNIVERSITY

Love

EAU DE LOVE
Love Cosmetics

UNIVERSITY STORE
ON THE CAMPUS



Club "...OS DIAS, PADRE EDWARDO DUBRISKI, S.S. ...ranslated: "What's an Edmundite Priest like you doing in a place like Caracas, Venezuela?"

For free information contact:

Edmundite Admissions Office
Enders Island
Mystic, Connecticut 06355

news

Former Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Dayan To Speak At UVM

General Moshe Dayan

General Moshe Dayan, former Israeli Defense Minister, will discuss the Middle East and World Powers on Friday, April 18 at 8 p.m. on the University of Vermont campus at the Patrick Gymnasium. His speech is expected to focus upon the failure of Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's shuttle diplomacy as well as general prospects for peace in the area.

Dayan has been an important figure in Israel since its founding in 1948. Born May 20, 1915 on a kibbutz at Degania, Palestine, he began his military career at the age of twelve standing sentry duty against marauding Bedouins. At fourteen he began training in the Jewish militia.

During World War II he was involved in espionage and scouting for the British in their invasion of Syria. It was here that Dayan lost his left eye and gained the black patch which has since become his symbol. While looking through a pair of field glasses, he was hit by a bullet shattering the casing and driving fragments of glass and metal into his eye.

Dayan began his service in the Israeli war for independence in 1948 in command of the defense of Jewish settlements in the Jordan Valley. Later he was appointed commander of the Jerusalem front. General Dayan appeared first as more of a soldier when he negotiated a local cease fire agreement with Arab commanders. He also participated in the 1949 cease fire talks between Israel and Jordan.

From 1953 to 1958 he was the Israeli Army's Chief of Staff and he led the Israeli attack on the Sinai Peninsula in 1956.

He was first elected to the Knesset (Israel's Parliament) in 1959 and served as Minister of Agriculture. In 1967 he became Minister of Defense and led Israel's forces in the Six Day War. He served in this capacity until shortly after the 1973 Yom Kippur War. In its aftermath many Israeli's blamed Dayan for the fact that Israel was surprised by the Arab attack. Yet, a recently released blue ribbon report on the war apparently cleared Dayan, and he is now seen as one of the most important challengers of the Rabin government and a potential contender for Prime Minister.

Dayan's appearance is sponsored by Student Association Speakers Bureau and is free to UVM students. Admission for the public is one dollar. According to SA Speakers Chairperson, Dick Cassidy, a crowd in excess of available seating is expected and tickets both for students and the public will be available beginning April 9 in Billings Center. Individuals who wish to insure their admission are urged to pick up their tickets as early as possible. No mail orders or phone reservations can be accepted.

Students are reminded that while admission is free to all who have paid the Student Activities fee, no one will be admitted without a ticket. Since tickets may not be available at the door, you should be sure to get tickets early at Billings. Students need only present their valid UVM picture ID to receive tickets.

Faculty, staff, graduate and part-time students will be required to pay the general admission fee of one dollar since they have not paid the Student Activities fee.

There will be a limit of two tickets per ID.

Glum Trustees Vote Tuition Hike

Room & Board Rate Increases To Add Another $317 To UVM Bill

by Margo Howland

The University of Vermont Board of Trustees approved tuition hikes of $150 for in-state and $280 for out-of-state students, and a $500 "tuition differential" for the Medical College, at their meeting Saturday morning, April 5.

The action, which came towards the end of the two-day session, was a significant step in the University's struggle to combat rising costs and maintain academic quality in the face of level funding from the state.

Those struggles took on an ominous intensity last fall when the University was forced to make cuts of some $1.4 million in the proposed budget, following an impoundment of $300,000 less than last year.

The cuts eliminated a number of existing and proposed academic programs, including the Experimental Program, and ended the 77-year history of football at UVM. The two-year nursing program, also scheduled to be phased out, was saved at the eleventh hour by the overwhelming protests from the community and around the state.

In-state tuition, which has stayed level at $950 per academic year since 1972, will rise to $1,100 effective in September. Out-of-state tuition, which was $2,650, will be $2,930. Room rates will rise from $585 to $736 per year, and the SAGA base meal plan, containing more meals, will rise from $494 to $660 per year.

In addition to the tuition increase for all the colleges at UVM, the College of Medicine will receive a $500 "tuition differential." This will cause resident tuition rate for medical students to jump from $950 to $1600 in one year.

Trustees also approved a resolution for the University to "recover full cost" of educating its medical students by renegotiating the medical compact it has with other New England states. Under the compact agreement, students from four other New England states (excluding Connecticut) pay in-state tuition at the University of Vermont College of Medicine while their home states subsidize the cost by an additional $5000. Attempts are currently underway to renegotiate the $5000 compact fee to $8,500 or more. The full cost of educating a medical student is expected to run as high as $10,000 per year. In addition to the tuition and the compact fee, the cost per student is supplemented by a Federal capitation grant of $1500, but its continued existence is uncertain at best.

While none of the trustees voted against the increased tuition, room and board rates, they were clearly unhappy about the situation. Trustee Daniel Burke vented his displeasure by uttering a soft "Boo" when the unanimous vote was announced.

Trustee Paul Low said earlier that the University was in danger of becoming a school "for the very rich and the very poor." Academic Vice President Dr. Alfred B. Rollins expressed concern with the academic quality of the institution if further cuts were to be made. Rollins noted the resignation of Dr. John Kice Chairman of the Chemistry Department, who has accepted the department chairmanship at another school. "Here is an example of the situation we may be facing continually...he is leaving primarily not for personal gain, but because the other University can furnish him substantial support for scientific research that he wouldn't possibly receive here," Rollins said.

The resignations of Kice, Dr. Harold Milm, of the College of Agriculture, and Dr. John Maeck, professor of obstetrics and gynecology, were accepted "with regret".

The trustees accepted a deficit "not to exceed $700,000" for fiscal year 1976. That figure was revised upwards from an earlier $683,000 deficit figure recommended by the trustee's Ad Hoc Committee on the Budget and Financial Planning March 26.

The Chairman of the Ad Hoc Committee, Luther F. Hackett, when presenting the recommendation, declared "These are stopgap measures. They are not viable solutions and not acceptable long-term solutions."

The Administration and the Board of Trustees are desperately hoping that the $100,000 appropriation increase approved by the House Appropriations Committee will pass the Legislature. President Andrews asked "for a moment of silence and prayer" that the Senate also add to the amount the House added. He was not smiling when he said it.

Saturday's meeting of the Board of Trustees was not entirely dismal. The trustees accepted a resolution appointing former Senator George D. Aiken a University professor and will bestow the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws to Mrs. Aiken at Commencement. The title of Doctor of Letters will be granted to Paul DeMund Evans and George Vincent Kidder the title of Doctor of Humane Letters will be granted to Grace M. Buttolph and David Samuel Offensend, and the title of Doctor of Science will be granted to Alexander Gensjaw and Carlos Grandy Otis.

Robert Babcock, chairman of the Presidential Search Committee, reported on the progress of the search and read a list of qualifications an acceptable candidate should have. As Babcock read the list, the Trustees began to smile and glance towards UVM President Dr. Edward Andrews, who was looking both pleased and a little embarrassed.

One Trustee chuckled "Boardman won't stop looking until they find someone who can walk from to Burlington to Plattsburg — in summer."

Nuclear Power Regulation Bill Passes

Vermont Sets National Precedent

by Peter Cobb

Vermont's Governor Thomas Salmon has reluctantly signed into law the toughest state nuclear power control measure in the nation. The measure, passed over strong utility lobbying efforts, gives the Vermont Legislature the final decision on whether to construct any more atomic power plants in the state.

Initially introduced to the 1974 General Assembly, the bill was unable to generate sufficient support during its first try. During the 1974 session the bill was held in committee until the last week of the session, and failed on a House vote. By the 1975 session, however, voters throughout the state had expressed strong support for the legislation. March 4th, Town Meeting Day, saw four Vermont communities reject nuclear power. Barnet, Vermont, a small farm community in the Northeast Kingdom, voted against nuclear power 190-2. According to a poll conducted by Senator William Doyle during Town Meeting Day 53 percent of the people answering his survey favored giving the legislature control over nuclear power.

The bill faced stiff lobbying efforts by all the major electric companies in Vermont, as well as the wrath of the state's largest newspaper, the Burlington Free Press. The Free Press called the bill "an intrusion on the power of the executive branch." It added, in an April 2 lead editorial that "nuclear plant construction is outside the competence and authority of the Legislature" and urged the Governor to veto the bill.

Governor Salmon had originally opposed the bill arguing that such decision ought to be made by the executive branch of the government since it is better equipped to handle the complex questions surrounding nuclear power plant construction.

Lobbyist for the utility interests repeatedly insisted that the average legislator could not fairly judge the merits of nuclear power. Both houses of the General Assembly overwhelmingly disagreed as the legislation breezed through the House on a 106-39 vote and passed the Senate on an equally impressive 22-8 vote.

Vermont Public Interest Research Group director Scott Skinner called the vote a major victory for VPIRG and the environmental movement in the state. According to Sarah Hutchinson, VPIRG's UVM nuclear power co-director, "The bill took two years and a lot of work." She said that students from all six VPIRG member schools worked with Vermonters from all over the state gearing up a lobbying effort in support of the legislation.

David Barney, co-director of the UVM nuclear effort, called the passage of H.127 VPIRG's biggest victory. He cited the bill's national implications and said that its importance was evident considering the April New York Times coverage of the bill as well as the comments on the legislation by Walter Cronkite during the CBS evening news on April 2. "We have been receiving calls from all over the country inquiring about the bill," he said. "Some people just congratulate us while other callers want to know how we did it, so that they can do the same in their state."

Before signing the bill the Governor said that he had considered declining to sign because of his convictions that the executive branch should have the veto power and not the legislative branch. He decided to sign, however, citing "overwhelming numbers" of Vermonters who support the bill. "The Governor of the state of Vermont is bypassed," he said, "I've accepted that." The Governor was quick to add that no Vermonter should view the bill as a nuclear moritorium.

James Griffin, president of the Central Vermont Public Service Corporation, Vermont's largest electric company, disagreed with the Governor in an interview on WCAX's "You Can Quote Me." Griffin argued that the bill will act as a moritorium against nuclear power construction in Vermont. Asked, in an earlier interview, if the power industry would mount a court challenge to the law, Griffin

(continued on page twelve)

If You Are Still Looking For The Infirmary...Stop! We Found It

by Jerry Weil

As of Mar. 24, Wasson Infirmary which houses the University Health Services has moved to 284 East Avenue. Although not as conveniently located as the Old Wasson Infirmary on the corner of Prospect and Main Street, the new infirmary is better equiped to handle growing numbers of students, seeking medical care.

Dr. Richard W. Amidon, Director of University Health Services has expressed satisfaction with the move. According to Dr. Amidon, the Old Infirmary could not satisfactorily handle the 125 to 175 students which visit the infirmary each day. "Students were sitting on floors and hanging from chandeliers," says Dr. Amidon of the Old Infirmary.

In the new infirmary there is more space for patients, doctors, and staff. Whereas the old infirmary had eight beds, the new one now has eighteen, three of which can be used as isolation beds. The new infirmary also has two minor surgery rooms which will enable students to obtain sutures and minor surgery without the cost of going to the hospital.

A generous gift in memory of his father, by Dr. Maruin, former UVM graduate and past President of the Board of Trustees, will be used to furnish the new infirmary with a lounge and a cafeteria. It is quite apparent that the New Wasson Infirmary resembles a small hospital and is able to cater to student needs.

Of great concern to Dr. Amidon and his staff is whether the University will approve the allocation of funds for an X-Ray machine, developer and operational equipment. If the approval comes through from President Andrews, the Wasson Infirmary would be able to save students the greater cost and inconvenience of going to the hospital for X-Rays. According to Dr. Amidon, a large demand for X-Rays arises from questions of fractures and pneumonia, two areas that the Wasson Infirmary would be able to handle. It does seem that X-Ray treatment at the infirmary would be highly beneficial to students.

In an attempt to make the University Health Services more workable for students, a Student Advisory Committee has been formed. Additional members are needed for the committee to be more effective. Students interested in working with top notch medical personnel as members of the committee should contact Rachel Begnoche at the New Wasson Infirmary.

FOOD DAY ~ APRIL 17

Food Day is coming to Burlington, Vermont on April 17, 1975. This nationally recognized day, which was introduced to the public by the Center for Science in the Public Interest, will focus on world hunger, food prices, nutrition, and alternatives to current food utilization. Just as Earth Day was five years ago, Food Day is eliciting a boundless number of national and local activities that will hopefully bring about an awareness and an understanding of the food crisis, the food industry's responsibilities and involvements, the need to improve the nation's eating habits, and the problems and possible solutions connected with eliminating hunger in the U.S. and abroad.

Reflecting on the importance of this occasion, Robinson (environmental) Hall has organized a Food Day fair, to be held in the North Lounge of Billings Center on April 17, 1975 from 10:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. The residents of Robinson will be presenting a series of booths to include:

(1) Grains and Seeds (examples of different grains and seeds and their uses and how flour is milled from the time the wheat berries are picked till the time you take a bit of some supermarket bread)

(2) World Food Crisis (responsibilities of the U.S. to other countries in the fight to eliminate hunger – possible solutions)

(3) Natural, Edible Wild Foods (examples of a variety of natural edibles in Vermont, including recipes and a maple sugar display)

(4) Pet and Baby Foods (alternatives to commercial jarred baby foods and canned dog foods)

(5) Breadmaking (a sequential demonstration of breadmaking including a bit of audience participation)

(6) Vending Machines (a nutritional comparison of vending machine food found on the UVM campus and healthier alternatives to that food)

(7) Organic Gardening (a presentation on the basic principles of practical organic gardening for the home gardener)

(8) Alternatives to Meat (An illustrated explanation of the "Diet for a Small Planet" approach to being a vegetarian or semi-vegetarian)

(9) Terrible Ten (a presentation of the ten foods, cited by the Center for Science in the Public Interest, in being either contributors to bad health or products sold by giant monopolizing companies in their attempts to control the market, these "terrible" items include: Wonder bread, Bacon, Sugar, Gerber Baby Food Desserts, Frute Brute, Breakfast Squares, Prime Grade Beef, Non-union Table Grapes, Pringles (pseudo-potato chips), and Coca-Cola)

(10) Nutrition and Outdoor Sports & Hiking (examples of foods you can make yourself for those far-off treks in the mountains, instead of the usual plastic-covered-vacuum-packed- freeze-dried-de-moisturized commercial trekking foods)

FINAL MENU – FOOD DAY

Breakfast juices – orange juice milk coffee various teas honey natural jams and peanut butter natural hot cereal wholewheat pancakes granola fried eggs fresh fruit
bran muffins
cottage cheese
whey butter (an all vegetable product) paro (a coffee substitute – caffine free)

Lunch
Black bean soup
spinach salad
cole slaw with sesame seeds bean sprout salad
cottage cheese
relish tray
seasonal fruit plate
whole wheat macaroni and cheese delux grilled cheese sandwich (cheese, green peppers, tomatoes, onions) soybean casserole squash – fresh lettuce greens – cooked whole wheat bread
fresh fruit
yogurt egg custard sherbert
paro & coffee various teas milk

Dinner – Buffet
potato soup
carrot and raisin salad continental bean salad tossed salad
cottage cheese
relish tray
fondue with whole wheat bread sweet and sour vegetables over brown rice vegetable cheese bake cheese platter whey butter milk whey butter paro & coffee
various teas
broccoli
succotash (lima beans and corn) sesame seeds
sunflower seeds pumpkin seeds raisins corn bread applesauce cake
yogurt bar (with fresh fruit, raisins, honey & other ingredients)

Other groups and organizations that will present booths in the fair include VPIRG, A Church group (on World Responsibility to other nations during this food crisis), Bread and Law Task Force, Mother Nature's Health Food Store, Living-Learning Nutrition program, a UFW exhibit, and a VICI presentation (on agricultural self-sufficiency in Vermont).

At Robinson the idea came to us to include Saga in the Food Day plans. It seemed the most obvious and direct facility through which to present the purpose of Food Day, it being a source of foods for nearly 2500 students and important in determining the kinds of foods we eat as students.

We see Saga's part in the Food Day campaign as a way to expose students to current alternatives in their food consumption, stressing nutrition, economics, and the "efficiency" of the foods we eat – speaking both of personal health and in view of the world food situation.

Our plans include not only a change from the traditional menu on April 17th, but information about these concepts and an explanation of the changes students will see and experience. Students will encounter varying types of foods and perhaps some foods they may never have seen before. It is our hope to expose people to a new way of thinking about the food they eat, while at the same time, giving them a chance to try it out themselves.

Statement by Ken Bartl

Room 254 Bldg D L/L, ext. 4260

I am running for SA President because I believe in the fundamental importance of Student Government.

Please consider the following three reasons why I view myself the best qualified individual representing and responding to the students of UVM.

Practical programming experience is highly desirable for the SA President. Why? Social programming affects more students then any other aspect of SA. I am currently co-chairman of the Winooski Raft Race and have held similar positions with my affiliations with IRA, including working on the Coordinating Committee. The chief programming committee on this campus. The needs for campus wide events continues to be felt and I will continue to work in this direction, initiating other all campus events, such as a Cultural Week, for example.

However, programming is only one aspect of an effective SA.

A substantial number of students are involved with clubs and organizations. The insight and experience through Lacrosse club's development and my serving as its president has convinced me that recognition/funding of SA organizations must be a definitive, two stage procedure for organizations: the first strictly for SA recognition, the second for funding.

The programm... management... integral to... an effective...

Further... amend the... committee... members of... committee... coordina... continue a... altogether... committe... successful t... no reason t...

As fo... proposals, however, th... to predict... candidate... one's e... accomplish...

During... president, ... to move in... sponsoring... as Fresh... Guest W... Dinner, an... Program...

my two y... preside... progress... work t... ultimately... impact... Vermon... experien... familia... vouche... universit...

Fin... experie... workin... commun... SA nee... offer. T...

Interview...

by Randy Jansen

One of the five S.A. Presidential candidates running for office is Ken Bartlett. A sophmore, he has a double major in Biology and English. His hometown is in Peterborough, N.H.

When asked by the Cynic what qualities he had which would be useful as S.A. President, Bartlett replied he had two qualifications: programming and experience. He feels the coordination of these two areas are important. "I think I offer a balance which is essential to an effective student leader at UVM."

Bartlett feels programming is a "highly desirable aspect" for UVM's student government. Programming "affect more students" involving such activities as films concerts, etc. "That is important" he added, these activities form a "key part to S.A. in the minds of many students." Bartlett favors a two step approach in recognizing S.A. organizations. Funding the organization would be the second stage.

Ba... a pers... is cu... This, h... range ... emphas... organi... rather ... accom... this p... what ... that's ... hard ... credi... prese... Lacro... becau... of int... influe... Coord... includ... univer... I.R.A. ... Bartl... "int... effor... fundi... Pro... Lead... (cont...

on Hike
17 To UVM Bill

the Letters will be granted to Grace M Buttolph and David Samuel Offensend; and the title of Doctor of Science will be granted to Alexander Gendhoy and Carlos Grandy Otis.

Robert Babcock, chairman of the Presidential Search Committee, reported on the progress of the search and read a list of qualifications an acceptable candidate should have. As Babcock read the list, the Trustees began to smile and glance towards UVM President Dr. Edward Andrews, who was looking both pleased and a little embarrassed.

One Trustee chuckled "Boardman won't stop looking until they find someone who can walk from to Burlington to Plattsburg in summer."

ion Bill Passes
onal Precedent

to a ... Vermonters from all over the ...nator ... state gearing up a lobbying ...own ... effort in support of the ...urvey ... legislation.

...tatute ... David Barney, co-director ...iff ... of the UVM nuclear effort, ...the ... called the passage of H.127 ...ons in ... VPIRG's biggest victory. He ...wrath ... cited the bill's national ...gest ... implications and said that its ...n Ever ... importance was evident ...ed the ... considering the April New ...power ... York Times coverage of the bill ...h." It ... as well as the comments on the ...lead ... legislation by Walter Cronkite ...plant ... during the CBS evening news ...the ... on April 2. "We have been ...tty of ... receiving calls from all over the ...ed the ... country inquiring about the ... bill," he said. "Some people ...n had ... just congratulate us while other ...he bill ... callers want to know how we ...decision ... did it, so that they can do the ...by the ... same in their state."

...of the ... Before signing the bill the ...better ... Governor said that he had ...le the ... considered declaring to sign ...unding ... because of his convictions that ...plant" ... the executive branch should ... have the veto power and not ... the legislative branch. He ...utility ... decided to sign, however, citing ...insisted ... "overwhelming numbers" of ...gislator ... Vermonters who support the ...dge the ... bill. "The Governor of the ...t Both ... state of Vermont is bypassed," ...General ... he said; "I've accepted that." ...mingly ... The Governor was quick to add ...islation ... that no Vermonter should view ...ssed on ... the bill as a nuclear ...quality ... moratorium.

James Griffin, president of the Central Vermont Public Service Corporation, Vermont's largest electric company, disagreed with the Governor in an interview on WCAX's "You Can Quote Me." Griffin argued that the bill will act as a moratorium against nuclear power construction in Vermont. Asked in an earlier interview if the power industry would mount a court challenge to the law, Griffin ...had with ... (continued on page twelve)

...nd organizations that will present booths in ... VPIRG. A Church group (on World ...other nations during this food crises, Bread ...orce, Mother Nature's Health Food Store, ...utrition program, a UFW exhibit, and a VICI ... agricultural self-sufficiency in Vermont).

... the idea came to us to include Saga in the ... it seemed the most obvious and direct facility ... present the purpose of Food Day, it being a ... for nearly 2500 students and important in ...nds of foods we eat as students.

... part in the Food Day campaign as a way to ...te to current alternatives in their food ... stressing nutrition, economics, and the ...he foods we eat – speaking both of personal ... of the world food situation.

...clude not only a change from the traditional ...17th, but information about these concepts ...me of the changes students will see and ...nts will encounter varying types of foods and ...ods they may never have seen before. It is our ... people to a new way of thinking about the ...hile at the same time, giving them a chance to ...ves.

Statement by

Ken Bartlett

Room 264 Bldg. D L/L, ext. 4260

I am running for SA President because I believe in the fundamental importance of Student Government.

Please consider the following three reasons why I view myself the best qualified individual representing and responding to the students of UVM.

Practical programming experience is highly desirable for the SA President. Why? Social programming affects more students than any other aspect of SA. I am currently co-chairman of the Winooski Raft Race and have held similar positions with my affiliations with IRA, including working on the Coordinating Committee. The chief programming committee on this campus. The needs for campus wide events continues to be felt and I will continue to work in this direction, initiating other all-campus events, such as a Cultural Week, for example.

However, programming is only one aspect of an effective SA.

A substantial number of students are involved with clubs and organizations. The insight and experience through Lacrosse club's development and my serving as its president has convinced me that recognition/funding of SA organizations must be a definitive, two-stage procedure for organizations; the first strictly for recognition, the second for funding.

The balance of programming and club management are two elements integral to the development of an effective student leader.

Furthermore, I would amend the Special affairs committee to either include members of the coordinating committee or request that the coordinating committee continue as a separate entity altogether. This particular committee has been quite successful this year and there is no reason to remove it.

As for specific goals, proposals, etc. I could go on, however, the most reliable way to predict how effective an SA candidate will be is to examine one's experiences and accomplishments.

During my term as IRA president, IRA has continued to move in a positive direction, sponsoring such diverse events as Freshman Orientation, Guess Who's Coming to Dinner, and the Free Breakfast Program. Futhermore, through my two years as Lacrosse Club president, the club has progressively continued to work toward its goals, ultimately making a substantial impact in spring sports in Vermont. Through these experiences, I have become familiar with the financial voucher system of the university.

Finally, dedication and experience of constantly working with people sharing a common goal is what I believe SA needs and what I have to offer. Thank you.

Interview...

by Randy Jansen

One of the five S.A. Presidential candidates running for office is Ken Bartlett. A sophmore, he has a double major in Biology and English. His hometown is in Peterborough, N.H.

When asked by the Cynic what qualities he had which would be useful as S.A. President, Bartlett replied he had two qualifications; programming and experience. He feels the coordination of these two areas are important, "I think I offer a balance which is essential to an effective student leader at UVM."

Bartlett feels programming is a "highly desirable aspect". for UVM's student government. Programming "affect more, students" involving such activities as films concerts, etc. "That is important" he added, these activities form a "key part to S.A. in the minds of many students." Bartlett favors a two step approach in recognizing S.A. organizations. Funding the organization would be the second stage.

Bartlett feels experience is a "positive indicator" to judge a person for S.A. President. He is currently IRA President. This, he feels, gives him a wide range of experience. He emphasizes that it is what the organization accomplishes rather than what the leader accomplishes. In reference to this point Bartlett said, "It's what has come out of IRA that's good. I've worked my hardest to work IRA's credibility up." He is at present, President of the Lacrosse club, but will resign because of a possible conflict of interests. Bartlett was also influential in establishing the Coordinating Committee which includes various aspects of the university community, S.A., I.R.A., Greek Forum, etc. Bartlett favors a greater "intergrated approach to campus wide coordination efforts."

Bartlett sees the fundamental problem of S.A. President as leadership. Leadership would be especially (continued on page twelve)

Statement by

Staige Davis

As a candidate for President, I am excited about the possibilities of the new student government. Potentially, it could spark more input and involve more students than any previous SA. The thought of contributing to the success of this new system is to a large extent responsible for my decision to run.

I feel that I possess some basic qualities which are often overlooked, but most essential for the job. I am committed to listening, communicating, and working with others. I am a Junior from Grand Isle, Vermont, majoring in Environmental Studies. I have been active on the Student Activities Coordinating Council and the S.A. Concert Bureau. I will join the newly formed Student Activities Advisory Board and, as with most of the other candidates, I was involved with the formulation of the student government proposals.

The present SA organization has an effective programming talent, yet realistic feedback is unavailable. Each year, the SA spends $140,000, much of which is not affected by student opinion. I would sponsor forums to help organizations account for their policies and programs and allow students to voice their opinions. I would also promote a questionaire for S.A. Concerts, Films, and Speakers to tap student tastes and provide guidelines for SA programming. This could be accomplished in conjunction with the registrar's mailing of fall course schedules at summer's end.

I believe that SA could better serve the students through more effective publicity. I have suggested to the editor of the Cynic that the paper and its readers might benefit from a fully removable and easily readable calendar of weekly events. This page would attract advertisers and be a more accessible guide to activities at UVM and in town.

UVM is also in need of two services, present at other universities but currently lacking here. A Student Sex Information Service, essential to a college community, might provide:

1. Wholesale non-prescription contraception.

2. A resource and referral service for sexuality, birthcontrol, V.D., pregnancy, or abortion.

3. A clearing house of information for students seeking the least expensive, highest quality medical care available.

4. Telephone referrals.

Planned Parenthood has expressed an interest in training volunteers for this much needed service.

Another area of concern to many is the off-campus housing search. An SA Housing Bureau would be invaluable in alleviating the sometimes awesome task. Specifically, this service would:

1. List up-to-date apartments and houses (including summer sub-lets)

2. Monitor tenant rights, apartment conditions, and price fluctuations.

3. Record and publicize complaints.

Hopefully this will bring together prospective tenants and landlords and eliminate potential problems.

With cooperation, these and other programs can be easily accomplished. To this end, I support Vice-Presidential candidate, Paul Ajamian. In my opinion, he is the most qualified to handle the duties of the office.

I believe I can provide flexibility, coordination, and leadership for an organization that will be worthy of student support. Finally, there is a chance to gain greater influence in administrative decisions through initiative and a firm committment. I am asking for your support.

Interview...

by Kathy Stiassni

The upcoming elections for S.A. president mark the beginning of a new era for UVM's student government.

An environmental studies major, Staige has also been an active member of the S.A. Concert Bureau, the Student Activities Coordinating Council, and the recently formed Student Activities Board. "As a result of my experience with S.A. organizations I feel that I'm as qualified or more qualified than anyone to communicate with the administration and students," says Davis.

Staige feels the S.A. is an effective programming and social organization: If elected he plans to send out a mailing with the Orientation packets to (continued on page twelve)

Statement by

David Schwartz

The University of Vermont is facing troubled times as is the entire World Community. In these times of turmoil we, the students of this University, have no organization through which we can unite to solve the problems. We have no where to go.

I, David Schwartz, am a candidate for the office of Student Association President. I am a sophomore, political science major. The reason for my seeking this position is to reinstate student government at UVM; not just reinstate it, but make it work.

Several weeks ago a campus-wide referendum was held concerning several different government proposals. The proposal that was overwhelmingly supported in the referendum basically called for a committee system combined with Town Meetings. I authored that proposal. My proposal was in no way a perfect plan. Some problems with it are currently being "ironed out", but it is a move in the direction of reestablishing student voice at the University of Vermont. It is a move to unite students into a force capable of dealing with our concerns.

It is true that in the past the Student Association Senate did not provide a vehicle for student action. The new Student Senate has a committee to be chaired by the SA Vice President which will meet on a frequent regular basis with administrators and faculty specifically to get action.

I am currently a member of the Presidential Search Committee to seek a successor to President Andrews. During the University financial crisis I served on the Student Task Force for Economic Affairs. I have found through my work on these groups that the administration does listen to students. The problem in the past has been a lack of communication between faculty, administration, and students. The faculty and administration have never had the opportunity to listen. The new Student Association Senate will be listened to.

The Vice Presidential job, as I mentioned, will be very important in the new government. I have chosen Frank Cioffi, a sophomore, political science major, from St. Albans Vt., as my running mate. He has the determination needed in getting the job done and knows how to work through the state and university bureaucracy effectively. He is a big man for a big job.

I present you with no specific programs. My only concern is to get a government operating. My concern is to provide you with a way to take action on your desires. It is you who I represent and it is your programs which I will implement. My job is not to act on what I want but to listen to the students at the University of Vermont and get what you want done. If elected you will get what you want.

I ask that we make SA work. I believe that as President, with Frank Cioffi as Vice President, and with you we can make it happen.

Interview...

One of the five SA presidential candidates is David Schwartz, a sophomore living in Simpson Hall. His past experience with SA includes being an SA Senator from Simpson Hall before the SA dissolved. He is also one of the two student representatives on the Presidential Search Committee, a board set up recently to discuss and help to decide who to choose as President of the university when President Andrews resigns next year. Last term, he worked on the Student Task Force on Economic Affairs, a group that was instrumental in at least being able to retain the Two-year Nursing program.

When asked what he would like to do as SA president, he said the most important factor involved is to simply get the SA running again. He said that past presidents have promised to do this or that and never carry their ideals through. David has no set plan of objectives that he is seeking to put into effect. Rather, his plan is to listen to the ideas and wants of the students more in order to decide what has to be done. This can only be done with better communication and David sees the SA as having to be a more student interested and operated body than it has been in the past.

When asked whether student government, in any form, was a rather inefficient (continued on page twelve)

Statement by

Dallas Sacher

Dallas Sacher - President
Eric Swanson - Vice-President

We are non-politicians (in the true sense of the word). We are cowboys interested in having a good time, yet we are undoubtedly the finest "politicians" of the century. It upsets us that the students are apathetic and isolated. Some of the things we like are long hair, short hair, sunshine (in the cool sense of the word), love, laughs, smiles and pretty pictures.

Our platform:

1. The administration will be fired (we are sorry that they will lose their jobs, but their salaries are forcing an overly high tuition and many students are financially pressed) and their position will be taken by students from the business administration school. They will receive credit for their work? (For example, the student acting as President should get 15 credits). The corporation operating the bookstore and food services will be replaced by business administration students, who will operate them on a non-profit basis.

2. Students will receive free beer once a month to be dispensed at Waterman. The beer will be subsidized by the SA activities fee.

3. The creation of a student lobby to press for the legalization of marijuana, so the marijuana can also be dispensed once a month.

4. The dispensing of free Kool-Aid once a week.

5. The creation of a student committee to oversee the faculty.

6. The reduction of the normal course load from 5 to 4.

7. The removal of all speed control dips.

8. There will be a student run bar in the basement of Coolidge Hall as well as the first floor Buckham.

Peace good fortune, and happy trails to all our opponents and fans.

Interview...

by David Ryan

During a recent interview, S.A. candidate, Dallas Sacher, proposed an alternative to traditional student government. An attempt at organization of students through S.A. sponsored parties is seen to be the key to effective student government.

Sacher, a sophomore, feels that the answer to student apathy is S.A. sponsored parties complete with band and beer. "We need an energetic, public figure to get the entire student body together. I'm an educator, not a politician. Other candidates lack imagination, they're black and white while I see myself as "in color."

Through the attraction of campus parties Sacher feels that he can organize the students in order to achieve their goals. He feels that if you can't get students excited to get things done there's no point in a student government. "I'm not interested in power, but what students want, the goals of students. We've got to raise the consciousness of the students through a common denominator, rallies. It's a basic grass roots effort.

He feels that he is not a figurehead but an educator to help students find the channels and open them up. "I'll be available in Billings. The president isn't some supernatural guy, he's just a normal dude."

By being available Sacher feels that he can find out what students want. The use of rallys for student action is integral to this concept. "There's no reason to keep trying the old structure. If we give this a try and it works, it will be the most representative effective government we've had."

Sacher feels that tuition rates and the hiring and firing of faculty are the most important issues. They are the issues that affect the students directly. He feels that students can have it any way they want.

"Instead of the traditional concept of Administration, faculty, and students, I see it as only students. It should be geared to student interest, after all man, they're the ones that pay the bills."

Statement by

Bruce Maddern

Declaration of Candidacy – SA President – Bruce Maddern

The Student Association can work if people are willing to put in the time to make it work. I have had a lot of experience in student affairs and I think I can make it work.

I am presently chairman of the Student Task Force on Financial Affairs which dealt with the budget crunch last semester. We helped save two year nursing and we asked for the liquidation of the football program due to our financial problems. I am also a resident assistant in Austin Hall.

I have been CYNIC news editor and reporter, student representative to the Arts and Sciences Curriculum Committee, and SA senator. I am a junior Zoology major from Cheshire, Connecticut.

I have stressed several things in my campaign. First, that I have experience, not only in student government and student affairs but in administrative and faculty dealings. Second and most importantly, I have the time. I have 13 credits to obtain before graduating and I am done with requirements for my major. Of course I will take the minimum 12 hours to be a full time student. Third I think SA can work for the students.

My platform consists of many issues, they are:

1) Communication – it has been sadly lacking in student government. One reason the Senate failed, and with it SA, was that students never knew what was happening with their Student Association.

2) Student Input – it is time we had a student representative on the Board of Trustees. We also should have representation on academic and administrative committees. Finally imput into faculty and administrative hiring, firing, and tenure.

3) Faculty Unionization – I do not think it will be of any benefit to students and probably will be of some detriment.

4) Student Union – We need one as Billings cannot fill our needs.

5) University Planning – we have yet to look to the future. We have to or else we could not face another round of severe budget cuts.

6) President's role – the position will be greatly changed with the new structure. He will still be the leader and figurehead for the SA but now he will have a much greater sense of responsibility to the legislative branch and committee structure. He must be more responsive to them. He must also be more responsive to students and to student's needs. Communication is essential.

In closing, the Student Association can work if students want it to. I do.

Interview...

by Peter Duquette

Communication, and a trend towards centralization are the points stressed by Bruce Maddern in his campaign for S.A. president. On the first point, Bruce says, "Maybe one of the reasons students are apathetic is because they don't know what's going on; I would stress communication to make student government work."

In his opinion, experience is also an important qualification for S.A. President. As a freshmen, Bruce was a Freshman Senator to the S.A. and participated in R.A. for the past two years, and has recently participated in the Student Task Force for Financial Affairs, a student group which advised the administration during the budget cutting process. The major accomplishments of the Task Force were a strong recommendation to retain the two year nursing program, and the raising of new revenue by suggesting the raising of the application fee.

The first point Bruce stresses is greater communication between the S.A. and its constituents, a step which will bring the student in closer contact with its representative body. "The S.A. is not simply a financial institution which hands out money. It is an organization of students where they will be heard socially, politically and by faculty and administration." The move towards centralization is also an important issue in his campaign. Bruce cites as an example the break-off of the I.R.A. from the S.A. as an example for the need for centralization. This centralization, Bruce believes, will make the S.A. more responsive to the needs and opinions of the student body.

Bruce also stresses what the S.A. could do. He is distressed by the fact that because of the re-organization of the S.A. Senate, the S.A. has not been meeting the needs of the students since February.

Bruce has mixed feelings about one feature of the new S.A. Town Meeting System. Under this procedure, the standing committees of the S.A. (for example, The Student Action Committee, the Alumni Committee) will meet regularly to discuss and propose measures which come under their jurisdiction. When needed, (at least once a month) the president will call a town meeting, open to the entire student body, in which every student will have an equal voice, an opportunity to air the view, and the right to vote on measures which come before the meeting. Bruce hopes the system will work but it is his view that a town meeting tends to be unproductive, by getting bogged down by too many people. Also, appropriations to student groups could become unfair. For example, a club or organization could request an unusually high appropriation (continued on page twelve)

editorials and opinions

VERMONT CYNIC
Founded In 1883

Editor-in-Chief . . . . . Randy Jensen
Assistant Editor . . . . . Wyatt Kash
Managing Editor . . . . . Mark E. Valle
News Editor . . . . . Mark Sawyer
Feature Editor . . . . . Stephen W. Turner
Arts Editor . . . . . Robert DeNike
Sports Editor . . . . . Norm Robinson
Copy Editor . . . . . Sari Bell
Advertising Manager . . . . . Debbie Powell

Cynic Endorses Candidate Davis

The Cynic Editorial Board has overwhelmingly decided to endorse Staige Davis for S.A. President. Davis is an active member of the SA Concert Bureau and the Student Activities Coordinating Council, and has shown himself to be concerned and productive in these positions. Both positions are valuable basis for experience; a necessary qualification for S.A. President.

Davis' program would provide many benefits for students in terms of greater input in student government and more services. His proposal to seek student opinion on films and concerts would provide an opportunity for the students to have a say in this choice of entertainment at UVM. Davis also proposes a Sex Information Service for UVM; a service sorely needed at the University.

Above all, we feel that Staige would provide the leadership necessary to enable SA to become an organization dedicated to the interests and needs of students. His rapport with students will undoubtedly prove to be a valuable asset in dealing with students.

Staige Davis is, in our opinion, the candidate most qualified to become our next S.A. President. We urge all students to become familiar with the candidates and vote in next week's S.A. Presidential elections.

R.J.

Radio Personality Val Carter Dies

Colchester – Val Carter, a prominent radio personality and morning host at Station WDOT, died Saturday evening, April 5 at Fanny Allen Hospital following a massive heart attack.

Carter, 54, was stricken with chest pains Thursday during his 6 a.m. – 10 a.m. broadcast, but stayed for the duration of the show. The radio audience was apparently unaware of the illness, according to station owner William Hunter.

Carter was admitted to Fanny Allen Hospital at 11 a.m. Thursday and suffered a heart attack Friday morning, according to reports.

Carter was the original owner and founder of Station WDOT, managing the station from 1954–1960. When WJOY opened in 1946, Carter served as production manager.

After managing a Florida radio station, which he co owned with Kevin Shivers of Washington and Walter Cronkite of CBS, Carter spent some time at WEAV in Plattsburgh, then returned to WDOT in 1970.

Funeral services were held Wednesday at Christ the King Roman Catholic Church in Burlington. Burial will follow later in Carter's homefown of Ithaca, New York.

He is survived by his wife, Bernice; a son, Michael A. Carter of Baltimore, Maryland; two daughters, Miss Linda Lee Carter of Williston, and Miss Jeanne M. Carter of Burlington; a brother, Arthur Cicchetti, of Ithaca, New York; and four sisters, Mrs. Esther Chordash, Mrs. Rudolph (Louisa) Mesicci and Mrs. Mina Bortz, of Ithaca, and Mrs. John (Mathilda) McGraw, of Syracuse, New York.

Val Carter SPS Photo: Wynn Gold

Donate Blood
9-11 AM
12:00 - 2 PM
Call 864-4541
for further information

Towle Family Thanks UVM

To All the UVM Family

The extremely difficult times for us following the loss of our beloved Andy have been leavened and helped so much by the generous and heartfelt condolences we have received in so many, many ways from the students, teachers and officials of our UVM community.

Words cannot possibly express the good feelings you have generated within us at a time when it was seemingly impossible.

The Memorial Mass at the Newman Chapel was beautiful as testified to by our daughter, Katherine (UVM '77) and son, Michael (Notre Dame '78). Our thanks and prayers go out to Father Holland and Father Rags and the students who took part in the celebration. Our son and brother could have only approved highly the community spirit shown and which he always loved so much and strived for at UVM.

God bless you all and may you always work together for the betterment of a University which we hold so dear.

Sincerely,
Dr. & Mrs. William H. Towle
Katherine, Michael & Betsy Towle

Critic Afraid Of Flying

To the Editor:

I cannot allow David Mandell's critique of Erica Jong's Fear of Flying to pass in acquiescence. His juvenile evaluation of this relevant work diminishes the intellectual comradery which 'should' prevail at the university. Fear of Flying is not a definitive feminist statement yet Mandell cowers behind defensive cliches and fails to point out the more serious implications of the book. I myself found Jong's expose of one woman's consciousness entirely more stimulating than the shallow creatures most Western male writers have consistently depicted. Furthermore, I believe Mandell fails to understand Jong's intricate unmasking of the Freudian and the Existential positions, a major facet of the work. If any criticism can be waged against Fear of Flying it is that the book has become so immensely popular in its relevance that we are sure to see more paltry imitations in the near future-however Jong cannot be discredited as a trend-setter. As for Mandell, wake up out of your Victorian slumber, bro, and join the rest of us in the age of liberation.

James Reardon '75

Frank Coffi For Vice President

To the Editor:

The University of Vermont is facing troubled times as is the entire world community. In these times of turmoil, we the students of the University of Vermont have no organization through which we can unite to solve the problems. We have no where to go. It is with the hope of forming a student government to deal with the problems and needs of the University community that I, Frank Cioffi, have decided to seek the office of Student Association Vice President.

I am a sophmore, Political Science major, from St. Albans Vermont, and like the majority of students here at UVM, I have never participated in Student Government. Having witnessed a series of crises in which student input was taken as a token gesture, receiving little and losing a lot, I feel it is time we all get involved. We have lost our football team; nearly lost our two year nursing program; we are faced with tuition and room and board increases; and to top it all off, we lost our only representative voice, or should I say whisper, the SA Senate.

We need a student government in which all the students of the University will have the opportunity to determine what action the SA Senate would take rather than leaving these decisions to be made by an elite few, as in the past. We need a student government that is issue oriented. Unlike the old SA Senate that was primarily concerned with handing out money to various clubs and organizations, our new government should concern itself with issues relevant to student interests-whether they be preventing a tunnel from being built or getting better concerts.

I am willing to get involved and I hope you are too. I hope you will remember me and my running mate Dave Schwartz on April 15 and 16. Feel free to call, write, or drop by and offer you opinions. My campus address is 214 Simpson Hall, telephone number 656-3302.

Thanks,
Frank Cioffi

Support For Staige Davis

To the Editor

We are writing this letter to voice our support for Staige Davis for Student Association President.

Having worked closely with Staige in his present position as assistant director of the Concert Bureau, we have found Staige to be an able administrator of a tough and sometimes unpopular office. He has also shown his ability to work successfully with a diverse group of people and their ideas. We think these traits are most essential in making an effective Student Association President.

We believe Staige Davis will make a fine S.A. President because he can bring new ideas to the organization, and most importantly he will be able to work with others to develop the S.A. into the viable organization we think it can become.

Sincerely,
Sig Heller, Former SA President
Donald Adler, SA Films Director
David Hurwitz, SA Concert Bureau Chairman

Pig Out All Across The Campus

To the Editor

It has long been noted that remarkable similarities exist between homosapien and the terrestial creature known as pig. Of late, behavioral resemblances have come to our attention. "Pig out Pig out all across the campus the cry goes out." The uniqueness shared by man and pig is reflected in their identical insulin structure. Furthermore humans feed pigs food which they have pigged on, so that the pig may pig out on it, with the intention of the human pigging out of the pig.

In the international barnyard, Americans notably consume resources and excrete with volumenity. Ironically Americans envision their international adversaries as swine. "All around there's lots of piggies leading piggy lives."

Signed
Weasled Out
and Coon Work

letters to the editor

Some Inconsequentiaal Issues

To the Editor

I feel that it is time to just mention a few things that probably pass through many people's minds but which "seem" a bit inconsequential, but nevertheless... First of all, on the subject of paper and its usefulness and misusefulness, there seems to be a slight overabundance of paper cups appearing around and about the dining halls (notably Wright Dining Hall) lately and, unless you take a liking to reusing reusable paper cups, there is no reason why we should allow this to occur, reflecting on the fact that we, in this age of over-ample technological plenty, have at the discretion of our dining hall attendants, fully operating dishwashers. Thus, to lessen the load of paper containers we relentlessly send to the local landfills every day, it is suggested that people take one glass for beverages and then go back for more sumptuous, succulent liquid, in order to leave glasses for upcoming eaters, thereby eliminating the need for paper cups. The basic problem (as explained by a dining hall authority in Wright) is that there is a mass rush of people with growling stomachs and faint feelings of hunger that come to eat in a very small span of time (from 5:00 to 5:30), thus, the glasses are all in active use by the time the 5:45 crowd whips around. So take your choice, in the fight towards a less bulkier garbage and a resource-conserving society, either learn the art of suppressing gastrointestinal desires or take fewer glasses!

Along the same lines, if you really believe that society can take steps towards less wasteful behavior, then bring a non-disposable intact receptacle or mug for sipping things in the Den, in other words, whenever you have the urge for a cup of coffee, tea, soda, or milk in Billings people will be more than obliged if you disregard the provided cups and just fill up your own mugs (word now has it that you can also get FIVE CENTS taken off the cost of the beverage you buy if you use your own cup). Don't feel inhibited to even bring along a couple of permanent knives, spoons, and forks, as well, if you feel a tinge of guilt after disposing of a sturdy, shining, white, petroleum-based plastic utensil.

To take issue with cats and fleas would be a touchy if not writhingly dangerous area, but I must say that all of you persons who seem to delight in revving your cars for extended 30 minute sessions at a time, in the Redstone parking lot, do present problems of many dimensions. In terms of pollution, you top the list when it comes to air and noise. Warming up a car for a few minutes is a reasonable inclination on five degree below zero days but maintaining a steady foot on the accelerator in a state of perpetual inertia for an immeasurable amount of time is no excuse. So, if you please, cut your revving times in half or in quarter or if there is some other problem – treat yourself to a bit of homedown Vermont car tuning.

Thank you,
Donna Blum

V.P. Candidate Speaks Out

To the Editor:

At the outset of this year's SA Presidential Campaign I was extremely excited to learn that my friend Staige Davis was running for the new government's top position. When asked to run along with him as Vice President, I could not let the opportunity pass. I had planned right along to campaign vigorously on his behalf, and running for V.P. seemed to be a natural way to do this.

I am running as an individual, however, and feel that I can offer my very best to the job. I am currently a Resident Assistant in Chittenden Hall, and through it have gained a broad knowledge of University operation. My extra-curricular activities are fairly diverse, although politically I cannot claim much experience. I like to think that my ability to deal with others, both students and adults, will be an asset that will outweigh my minimal political exposure. I would greatly appreciate your support.

Sincerely,
Paul C. Ajamian
Vice Presidential Candidate for SA

Plea For Letters

To the Editor

A tolerable isolation at best, prison is a very lonely experience. I am seeking escape in the guise of letters. Those wishing to help please address your letters to

Bill - 88579
P.O. Box 57
Marion, Ohio
43302

"P.S." Thank you

Schwartz: Chases That Paper Lion Govt.

To the Editor:

When I first came to UVM and became acquainted with SA I wasn't terribly impressed. I have been exposed to several school governments (even having served in one) and they all seemed to have one major point in common, namely hard campaigning yet laissez-faire politics. Not once did I see an official who really worked to make the student government as viable as it could have been. UVM has had such a paper lion government for several years and it's about time it changed.

I have known David Schwartz during his entire term of the SA Senate and to put it simply Dave is a doer. He had an excellent attendance record and was responsible for much lobbying. This was not just during the first part of the year but throughout the whole term. He has showed consistently good politics and shows great potential for future political work. His running mate Frank Cioffi reflects the same level-headed "go-gettingness." He has many contacts in all areas of the university and always has time to listen to ideas and suggestions from fellow students. In short both men's attitudes compliment each other nicely. Together they offer to be an active and effective team whose primary goal isn't just to get elected. When it comes time to vote, there's no question in my mind but that they are the best suited to serve us, the student community at UVM.

Sincerely,
Lewis R.G. Grindley '78

The Cynic welcomes and encourages articles, columns, and letters from all interested students, faculty, and members of the community. All material must be submitted no later than Monday noon before the Thursday of publication. Material must be signed, names will be withheld upon request. If you are interested in writing or perhaps curious about how things are done, stop in – we are downstairs at Billings Center – or call 658-4911.

Candidates For

The Vermont Public Interest Research has announced that students representing UV Board of Trustees will be chosen during the elections for the Student Association on Ap student-run research and advocacy orga representatives from each of the six membe full-time staff who, together with interested broad social change in Vermont.

The VPIRG student Board of Trustee policy decisions for the student lobby organ the hiring and firing of staff. UVM, VPIRG sends six voting trustees to the board. Thi include David Barney, Randy Baker, N Nathalie Worthington, Tom Joslin, John Ki David Barney, presently a VPIRG truste re-election. Barney, along with Sarah Hut Joslin coordinated VPIRG's nuclear power Wildlife Management, Barney believes tha place its resources behind supporting far Vermont. He would like VPIRG to work for of a self-sufficient farm system in Vermont.

Randy Baker, a UVM Sophomore, is with VPIRG and the Vermont Bikeways C promote bicycle paths and trails throughout also worked on a VPIRG bicycle chain-surv in bicycle and environmental legislation.

Sarah Hutchinson, also a UVM S direct VPIRG's successful anti-nuclear pow from the student's work was H 12, a bill th Assembly approval before any new nuclea be built in Vermont. Hutchinson is espe keeping VPIRG involved in environmental i

Natalie Worthington, a Sophomore a for VPIRG since her Freshman year. Dir conservation project, she wrote and conservation puppet show that was geared

VPIRG Capital W

The Vermont Legislature is entering 1975 session with adjournment expected 19. A number of bills have reached a crit not taken quickly they will not pass. Th that citizens have to contact their important bills.

H 14 Lobby Disclosures

The House has passed H 14 which wo to disclose sources and amounts of expenditures on legislation. Public disc spent for lobby activities will help gove legislators objectively weigh the informat

Although the opponents of the bi battle to defeat the bill in the House, vote. The only lobby groups to suppo VPIRG and Common Cause.

The bill is now in the Senate Judici passage is possible only if citizens let th they favor letting the public know how spent to influence legislation.

S. 120 Insurance of Newborns

S. 120 requires that all insura business in Vermont cover newborn ch companies do not begin coverage until t weeks old. Most of the more serious pr birth occur within the first few da first day coverage often find themse medical bills that they cannot possibly p

S. 120 passed the Senate on a vot bill is in the House Commerce Commit John Morgan. Prompt action could Legislation by this session.

H. 414 Ten Year Highway Plan

H 414 sets up transportation pro includes the highway construction pro years. At present the bill is in the Committee and should reach the H (Thursday). VPIRG supports the polic but is opposed to Interstate I 93. I 93 costly.

H. 276 Access to Public Documents

This bill guarantees the citizen's ri at cost any public document, with ce are clearly spelled out. The House bill and is now in the Senate.

All Things C

by larry seiden

No apologies.

I cut a fart in Georgia and realize on the end of my nose for so long. All it was ME. The comfort of this knowl pain of time and recognition. Like th through the of' bod, all the bleeding lo nourishment for my severed roots. I helped me get out of this corner. slanted corners I avoided new vision one, it is a dead end, front and re climbing just tuck me head down an little pinpoint crevice. I couldn't see bottom of my firkin' feet. So here neighborhood beerracket in Atlanta right telling me I gotta go up to Stone granite or some other metamorphic sh aways where tourists who get tired of they've repented for the hike to the to Well this cracker type says th mountain who can look into your th wily turkey (it was vacation, why no words down the front of his natty should have been overalls (I didn't boots, but OK). And this egg is sing car to see if his red C'red at Georg burns in my pipe. It did. He tells looks like Jimi Hendrix, even has th go back to two more turkeys and ghost and the mirror that he holds up and Behold You are looking at God dialating eyes and I said I had to see on all my desks.

We lefted on to Peachtree whi Atlanta flows down. Also many of their own southern fried heart, belie Petty. (P.S. Kentucky has no bluegr its interstates) And this bird next tornados never strike Atlanta "be circumvent even its mountaintops li Ballroom, where I had the psych

editorials and opinions

VERMONT CYNIC
Founded In 1883

Editor-in-Chief . . . . . Randy Jensen
Assistant Editor . . . . . Wyatt Eash
Managing Editor . . . . . Mark S. Valle
News Editor . . . . . Mark Sawyer
Feature Editor . . . . . Stephen W. Towner
Arts Editor . . . . . Robert DeNike
Sports Editor . . . . . Norm Robinson
Copy Editor . . . . . Sari Bodi
Advertising Manager . . . . Debbie Powell

Cynic Endorses Candidate Davis

The Cynic Editorial Board has overwhelmingly decided to endorse Staige Davis for S.A. President. Davis is an active member of the SA Concert Bureau and the Student Activities Coordinating Council, and has shown himself to be concerned and productive in these positions. Both positions are valuable basis for experience: a necessary qualification for S.A. President.

Davis' program would provide many benefits for students in terms of greater input in student government and more services. His proposal to seek student opinion on films and concerts would provide an opportunity for the students to have a say in this choice of entertainment at UVM. Davis also proposes a Sex Information Service for UVM; a service sorely needed at the University.

Above all, we feel that Staige would provide the leadership necessary to enable SA to become an organization dedicated to the interests and needs of students. His rapport with students will undoubtedly prove to be a valuable asset in dealing with students.

Staige Davis is, in our opinion, the candidate most qualified to become our next S.A. President. We urge all students to become familiar with the candidates and vote in next week's S.A. Presidential elections.

R.J.

Radio Personality Val Carter Dies

Colchester— Val Carter, a prominent radio personality and morning host at Station WDOT, died Saturday evening, April 5 at Fanny Allen Hospital following a massive heart attack.

Carter, 54, was stricken with chest pains Thursday during his 6 a.m. — 10 a.m. broadcast, but stayed for the duration of the show. The radio audience was apparently unaware of the illness, according to station owner William Hunter.

Carter was admitted to Fanny Allen Hospital at 11 a.m. Thursday and suffered a heart attack Friday morning, according to reports.

Carter was the original owner and founder of Station WDOT, managing the station from 1954—1960. When WJOY opened in 1946, Carter served as production manager.

After managing a Florida radio station, which he co owned with Kevin Shivers of Washington and Walter Cronkite of CBS, Carter spent some time at WEAV in Plattsburgh, then returned to WDOT in 1970.

Funeral services were held Wednesday at Christ the King Roman Catholic Church in Burlington. Burial will follow later in Carter's hometown of Ithaca, New York.

He is survived by his wife, Bernice; a son, Michael A. Carter of Baltimore, Maryland; two daughters, Miss Linda Lee Carter of Williston, and Miss Jeanne M. Carter of Burlington; a brother, Arthur Cicchetti, of Ithaca, New York; and four sisters, Mrs. Esther Chordash, Mrs. Rudolph (Louisa) Mesicci and Mrs. Mina Bortz, of Ithaca, and Mrs. John (Mathilda) McGraw, of Syracuse, New York.

Val Carter

SPS Photo: Wynn Gold

Donate Blood
9-11 AM
12:00 - 2 PM
Call 864-4541
for further information

Towle Family Thanks UVM

To All the UVM Family

The extremely difficult times for us following the loss of our beloved Andy have been leavened and helped so much by the generous and heartfelt condolences we have received in so many, many ways from the students, teachers and officials of our UVM community.

Words cannot possibly express the good feelings you have generated within us at a time when it was seemingly impossible.

The Memorial Mass at the Newman Chapel was beautiful as testified to by our daughter, Katherine (UVM '77) and son, Michael (Notre Dame '78). Our thanks and prayers go out to Father Holland and Father Ragis and the students who took part in the celebration. Our son and brother could have only approved highly the community spirit shown and which he always loved so much and strived for at UVM.

God bless you all and may you always work together for the betterment of a University which we hold so dear.

Sincerely,
Dr. & Mrs. William H. Towle
Katherine, Michael & Betsy Towle

Critic Afraid Of Flying

To the Editor:

I cannot allow David Mandell's critique, of Erica Jong's Fear of Flying to pass in acquiescence. His juvenile evaluation of this relevant work diminishes the intellectual comradery which 'should' prevail at the university. Fear of Flying is not a definitive feminist statement yet Mandell cowers behind defensive cliches and fails to point out the more serious implications of the book. I myself found Jong's expose of one woman's consciousness, entirely more stimulating than the shallow creatures most Western male writers have consistently depicted. Furthermore, I believe Mandell fails to understand Jong's intricate unmasking of the Freudian and the Existential positions, a major facet of the work. If any criticism can be waged against Fear of Flying it is that the book has become so immensely popular in its relevance that we are sure to see more paltry imitations in the near future-however Jong cannot be discredited as a trend-setter. As for Mandell, wake up out of your Victorian slumber, bro, and join the rest of us in the age of liberation.

James Reardon '75

Frank Coffi For Vice President

To the Editor:

The University of Vermont is facing troubled times as is the entire world community. In these times of turmoil, we the students of the University of Vermont have no organization through which we can unite to solve the problems. We have no where to go. It is with the hope of forming a student government to deal with the problems and needs of the University community that I, Frank Cioffi, have decided to seek the office of Student Association Vice President.

I am a sophmore, Political Science major, from St. Albans Vermont, and like the majority of students here at UVM, I have never participated in Student Government. Having witnessed a series of crises in which student input was taken as a token gesture, receiving little and losing a lot, I feel it is time we all get involved. We have lost our football team; nearly lost our two year nursing program; we are faced with tuition and room and board increases; and to top it all off, we lost our only representative voice, or should I say whisper, the SA Senate.

We need a student government in which all the students of the University will have the opportunity to determine what action the SA Senate would take rather than leaving these decisions to be made by an elite few, as in the past. We need a student government that is issue oriented. Unlike the old SA Senate that was primarily concerned with handing out money to various clubs and organizations, our new government should concern itself with issues relevant to student interests-whether they be preventing a tunnel from being built or getting better concerts.

I am willing to get involved and I hope you are too. I hope you will remember me and my running mate Dave Schwartz on April 15 and 16. Feel free to call, write, or drop by and offer you opinions. My campus address is 214 Simpson Hall, telephone number 656-3302.

Thanks,
Frank Cioffi

Support For Staige Davis

To the Editor:

We are writing this letter to voice our support for Staige Davis for Student Association President.

Having worked closely with Staige in his present position as assistant director of the Concert Bureau, we have found Staige to be an able administrator of a tough and sometimes unpopular office. He has also shown his ability to work successfully with a diverse group of people and their ideas. We think these traits are most essential in making an effective Student Association President.

We believe Staige Davis will make a fine S.A. President because he can bring new ideas to the organization, and most importantly he will be able to work with others to develop the S.A. into the viable organization we think it can become.

Sincerely,
Stig Heller, Former SA President
Donald Adler, SA Films Director
David Hurwitz, SA Concert Bureau Chairman.

Pig Out All Across The Campus

To the Editor:

It has long been noted that remarkable similarities exist between homoaapian and the terrestial creature known as pig. Of late, behavioral resemblances have come to our attention. "Pig out Pig out all across the campus the cry goes out." The uniqueness shared by man and pig is reflected in their identical insulin structure. Furthermore humans feed pigs food which they have pigged on, so that the pig may pig out on it, with the intention of the human pigging out of the pig.

In the international barnyard, Americans notably consume resources and excrete with volumenity. Ironically Americans envision their international adversaries as swine. "All around there's lots of piggies leading piggy lives."

Signed
Weaseled Out
and Coon Work

letters to the editor

To the Editor:

Your April Fools' edition once, to read.
'twas a privilege indeed, for

Ed Artuter

Some Inconsequentiaal Issues

To the Editor:

I feel that it is time to just mention a few things that probably pass through many people's minds but which "seem" a bit inconsequential, but nevertheless... First of all, on the subject of paper and its usefulness and misusefulness, there seems to be a slight overabundance of paper cups appearing around and about the dining halls (notably Wright Dining Hall) lately and, unless you take a liking to reusing reusable paper cups, there is no reason why we should allow this to occur, reflecting on the fact that we, in this age of over-ample technological plenty, have at the discretion of our dining hall attendants, fully operating dishwashers. Thus, to lessen the load of paper containers we relentlessly send to the local landfills every day, it is suggested that people take one glass for beverages and then go back for more sumptuous, succulent liquid, in order to leave glasses for upcoming eaters, thereby eliminating the need for paper cups. The basic problem (as explained by a dining hall authority in Wright) is that there is a mass rush of people with growling stomachs and faint feelings of hunger that come to eat in a very small span of time (from 5:00 to 5:30), thus, the glasses are all in active use by the time the 5:45 crowd whips around. So take your choice, in the fight towards a less bulkier garbage and a resource-conserving society, either learn the art of suppressing gastrointestinal desires or take fewer glasses!

Along the same lines, if you really believe that society can take steps towards less wasteful behavior, then bring a non-disposable intact receptacle or mug for sipping things in the Den, in other words, whenever you have the urge for a cup of coffee, tea, soda, or milk in Billings people will be more than obliged if you disregard the provided cups and just fill up your own mugs (word now has it-that you can also get FIVE CENTS taken off the cost of the beverage you buy if you use your own cup). Don't feel inhibited to even bring along a couple of permanent knives, spoons, and forks, as well, if you feel a tinge of guilt after disposing of a sturdy, shining, white, petroleum-based plastic utensil.

To take issue with cars and trucks would be a touchy if not writhingly dangerous area, but I must say that all of you, persons who seem to delight in revving your cars for extended 30 minute sessions at a time, in the Redstone parking lot, do present problems of many dimensions. In terms of pollution, you top the list when it comes to air and noise. Warming up a car for a few minutes is a reasonable inclination on five degree below zero days but maintaining a steady foot on the accelerator in a state of perpetual inertia for an immeasurable amount of time is no excuse. So, if you please, cut your revving times in half or in quarter or if there is some other problem — treat yourself to a bit of homedown Vermont cat napping.

Thank you.
Donna Blum

V.P. Candidate Speaks Out

To the Editor:

At the outset of this year's SA Presidential Campaign I was extremely excited to learn that my friend Staige Davis was running for the new government's top position. When asked to run along with him as Vice President, I could not let the opportunity pass. I had planned right along to campaign vigorously on his behalf, and running for V.P. seemed to be a natural way to do this.

I am running as an individual, however, and feel that I can offer my very best to the job. I am currently a Resident Assistant in Chittenden Hall, and through it have gained a broad knowledge of University operation. My extra-curricular activities are fairly diverse, although politically I cannot claim much experience, I like to think that my ability to deal with others, both students and adults, will be an asset that will outweigh my minimal political exposure. I would greatly appreciate your support.

Sincerely,
Paul C. Ajamian
Vice Presidential Candidate for SA

Plea For Letters

To the Editor:

A tolerable isolation at best, prison is a very lonely experience; I am seeking escape in the guise of letters. Those wishing to help please address your letters to:

Bill - 88579
P.O. Box 57
Marion, Ohio
43302

"P.S." Thank you'

Schwartz: Chases That Paper Lion Govt.

To the Editor:

When I first came to UVM and became acquainted with SA I wasn't terribly impressed. I have been exposed to several school governments (even having served in one) and they all seemed to have one major point in common, namely hard campaigning yet laissez-faire politics. Not once did I see an official who really worked to make the student government as viable as it could have been. UVM has had such a paper lion government for several years and it's about time it changed.

I have known David Schwartz during his entire term of the SA Senate and to put it simply Dave is a doer. He had an excellent attendance record and was responsible for much lobbying. This was not just during the first part of the year but throughout the whole term. He has showed consistently good politics and shows great potential for future political work. His running mate Frank Cioffi reflects the same level-headed "go-gettingness." He has many contacts in all areas of the university and always has time to listen to ideas and suggestions from fellow students. In short both men's attitudes compliment each other nicely. Together they offer to be an active and effective team whose primary goal isn't just to get elected. When it comes time to vote, there's no question in my mind but that they are the best suited to serve us, the student community at UVM.

Sincerely,
Lewis R.G. Grindley '78

The Cynic welcomes and encourages articles, columns, and letters from all interested students, faculty, and members of the community. All material must be submitted no later than Monday noon before the Thursday of publication. Material must be signed, names will be withheld upon request. If you are interested in writing or perhaps curious about how things are done, stop in — we are downstairs at Billings Center — or call 658-4911.

Candidates For

The Vermont Public Interest Research has announced that students representing UV Board of Trustees will be chosen during the elections for the Student Association on Ap student-run research and advocacy organ representatives from each of the six membe full-time staff who together with interested broad social change in Vermont.

The VPIRG student Board of Trustee policy decisions for the student lobby organ
the hiring and firing of staff. UVM's VPIRG sends six voting trustees to the board. Thi include David Barney, Randy Baker, N
Nathalie Worthington, Tom Joslin, John K
David Barney, presently a VPIRG trustee re-election Barney, along with Sarah Hut
Joslin coordinated VPIRG's nuclear power Wildlife Management Barney believes th place its resources behind supporting fa
Vermont. He would like VPIRG to work fo of a self-sufficient farm system in Vermont.

Randi Baker, a UVM Sophomore, t with VPIRG and the Vermont Bikeways promote bicycle paths and trails throughou also worked on a VPIRG bicycle chain surv
in bicycle and environmental legislation.

Sarah Hutchinson, also a UVM S direct VPIRG's successful anti-nuclear pow from the student's work was H 127 a bill Assembly approval before any new nuclea be built in Vermont. Hutchinson is expe keeping VPIRG involved in environmental

Natalie Worthington, a Sophomore a for VPIRG since her Freshman year. Dir conservation project, she wrote and conservation puppet show that was geared

VPIRG Capital W

The Vermont Legislature is entering 1975 session with adjournment expected
19. A number of bills have reached a crit not taken quickly they will not pass. T that citizens have to contact their important bills.

H 14 Lobby Disclosure

The House has passed H 14 which w to disclose sources and amounts of expenditures on legislation. Public disc spent for lobby activities will help gove legislators objectively weigh the informa

Although the opponents of the bi battle to defeat the bill in the House, vote. The only lobby groups to suppo
VPIRG and Common Cause.

The bill is now in the Senate Judici passage is possible only if citizens let th they favor letting the public know how spent to influence legislation.

S. 120 Insurance of Newborns

S. 120 requires that all insura business in Vermont cover newborn ch companies do not begin coverage until weeks old. Most of the more serious p birth occur within the first few d first-day coverage often find themse medical bills that they cannot possibly p

S. 120 passed the Senate on a vo bill is in the House Commerce Commit John Morgan. Prompt action could legislation by this session.

H 414 Ten Year Highway Plan

H 414 sets up transportation pl includes the highway construction pr years. At present the bill is in the Committee and should reach the H
(Thursday). VPIRG supports the polic but is opposed to Interstate I 93. I 9 costly.

H 276 Access to Public Documents

This bill guarantees the citizen's ri at most any public document, with ce are clearly spelled out. The House bill and it is now in the Senate.

All Things C

by larry seiden

No apologies.

I cut a fart in Georgia and realize on the end of my nose for so long. All
It was MI. The comfort of this knowl pain of time and recognition. Like th through the ol' bod, all the bleeding l nourishment for my severed roots. I helped me get out of this corner slanted corners I avoided new vision one, it is a dead end, front and re climbing just fuck me head down an little pinpoint crevice I couldn't see bottom of my fukin' toes (or here neighborhood beerracket in Atlanta right telling me I gotta go up to Ston granite or some other metamorphic sh aways where tourists who get tired of they've repented for the hike to the t

Well this cracker type says th mountain who can look into your th wily turkey (it was vacation, why no words down the front of his natty should have been overalls (I didn't boots, but OK). And this egg is sing car to see if his red C'red as Georg burns in my pipe. It did. He tells looks like Jimi Hendrix, even has th go back to two more turkeys and ghost and the mirror that he holds u and Behold You are looking at God, dialating eyes and I and I had to see on all my desks.

We lefted on to Peachtree wh
Atlanta flows down. Also many o their own southern fried heart, belie Petty. (P.S. Kentucky has no bluegr its interstates) And this bird next tornados never strike Atlanta "be circumvent even its mousetraps li Ballroom, where I had the pock

ters to e editor

's edition once to read deed for Ed Artmter

consequentiaal Issues

ime to you hings that ough many but which sequential irst of all aper and its anefulness
r a slight paper cups and about (notably lately and liking to aper cups
why we to occur
ct that we over-ample have at our dining operating to lessen ntainers we the local way, it is e take one nd then go sumptuous order to upcoming nating the
The basic ned by a in Wright) ass rush of stomachs of hunger very small 5.00 to ues are all time the round So the "right et garbage conserving the art of gastestinal glasses'
e lines, if that society

can take steps towards less wasteful behavior, then bring a non-disposable intact receptacle or mug for sipping things in the Den, in other words whenever you have the urge for a cup of coffee, tea, soda, or "milk" in Billings people will be more than obliged if you disregard the provided cups and just fill up your own mugs (word now has it that you can also get FIVE CENTS taken off the cost of the beverage you buy if you use your own cup). Don't feel inhibited to even bring along a couple of permanent knives, spoons and forks, as well, if you feel a tinge of guilt after disposing of a sturdy, shining, white, petroleum-based plastic utensil.

To take issue with cents and ... would be a touchy if not writhingly dangerous area, but I must say that all of you persons who seem to delight in revving your cars for extended 10 minute sessions at a time, in the Redstone parking lot, do present problems of many dimensions. In terms of pollution, you top the list when it comes to air and noise. Warming up a car for a few minutes is a reasonable inclination on five degree below zero days but maintaining a steady foot on the accelerator in a state of perpetual inertia for an immeasurable amount of time is no excuse. So, if you please, cut your revving times in half or in quarter or if there is some other problem -- treat yourself to a bit of hometown Vermont car tuning.

Thank you,
Donna Blum

Candidate Speaks Out

f this year's npaign I was to learn that Davis was the new op position n along with dent I could unity pass I ht along to asily on his ng for VP utiful way to ning as an er and feel very best to currently a

Resident Assistant in Chittenden Hall, and through it have gained a broad knowledge of University operation. My extra-curricular activities are fairly diverse, although politically I cannot claim much experience. I like to think that my ability to deal with others, both students and adults, will be an asset that will outweigh my minimal political exposure. I would greatly appreciate your support.

Sincerely
Paul C. Ajamian
Vice Presidential Candidate for SA

Plea For Letters

isolation at very lonely eaking escape etters. Those please address

Bill - 88579
P.O. Box 57
Marion, Ohio
43302

"P.S." Thank you!

Chases That Paper Lion Govt.

came to UVM quainted with bly impressed.
ked to several ments (even
one) and they ave one major n, namely hard t laissez-faire
e did I see an lly worked to nt government
ould have been,
th a paper lion
several years
me it changed.
nown David his entire term
r and to put it doors. He had ndance record
sible for much was not just part of the year
ut the whole term. He has showed consistently good politics and shows great potential for future political work. His running mate, Frank Cioffi reflects the same level-headed "go-gettingness." He has many contacts in all areas of the university and always has time to listen to ideas and suggestions from fellow students. In short both men's attitudes compliment each other nicely. Together they offer to be an active and effective team whose primary goal isn't just to get elected. When it comes time to vote, there's no question in my mind but that they are the best suited to serve us, the student community at UVM.

Sincerely,
Lewis R.G. Grundley '78

welcomes and encourages articles, columns, and interested students, faculty, and members of
. All material must be submitted no later than before the Thursday of publication. Material , names will be withheld upon request. If you in writing or perhaps curious about how things in -- we are downstairs at Billings Center -- or Candidates For VPIRG Board of Trustees

The Vermont Public Interest Research Group (VPIRG) has announced that students representing UVM on the VPIRG Board of Trustees will be chosen during the same time as the elections for the Student Association on April 15. VPIRG is a student-run research and advocacy organization. Elected representatives from each of the six member colleges direct a full-time staff who, together with interested students, work for broad social change in Vermont.

The VPIRG student Board of Trustees decides all major policy decisions for the student lobby organization as well as the hiring and firing of staff. UVM, VPIRG's largest member, sends six voting trustees to the board. This years candidates include David Barney, Randy Baker, Sarah Hutchinson, Nathalie Worthington, Tom Joslin, John King, Gary Soodack. David Barney, presently a VPIRG trustee, is running for re-election. Barney, along with Sarah Hutchinson and Tom Joslin coordinated VPIRG's nuclear power efforts. Majoring in Wildlife Management, Barney believes that VPIRG should place its resources behind supporting farming interests in Vermont. He would like VPIRG to work for the establishment of a self-sufficient farm system in Vermont.

Randi Baker, a UVM Sophomore, is presently working with VPIRG and the Vermont Bikeways Coalition helping to promote bicycle paths and trails throughout Vermont. She has also worked on a VPIRG bicycle chain survey and is interested in bicycle and environmental legislation.

Sarah Hutchinson, also a UVM Sophomore, helped direct VPIRG's successful anti-nuclear power effort. Resulting from the student's work was H.127 a bill that requires General Assembly approval before any new nuclear power plants can be built in Vermont. Hutchinson is especially interested in keeping VPIRG involved in environmental issues.

Natalie Worthington, a Sophomore at UVM, has worked for VPIRG since her Freshman year. Director of an energy conservation project, she wrote and directed an energy conservation puppet show that was geared towards the lower elementary, grade level. Worthington is interested in children's health care and would like to see VPIRG work for the passage of H.365 which sets up a comprehensive children's health care screening program. She also would like to see VPIRG continue statewide, as well as national education programs on nuclear power.

Tom Joslin from St. Albans believes that VPIRG ought to continue working in the areas of energy, health and highways. He is especially interested in working towards a more effective bottle law. Joslin believes that Vermont needs a coordinated, statewide network for recycling resources. "I think it is especially important," he said, "that a broad view towards recycling be taken. We must reduce litter and energy consumption."

John King is also a UVM Sophomore. A resident of UVM's environmental Robinson Hall, he has been active on such issues as nuclear power, bottle law and Food Day. John has also worked with Randi Baker and the Vermont Bikeways Coalition. King is most interested in environmental legislation and would like to keep VPIRG actively involved on the environmental front.

Gary Soodact is the only Freshman running for a trustee position. Soodact has been involved with environmental issues since he entered UVM working with VPIRG on the campaign to defeat the nuclear bond issue on the Burlington ballot. Soodact would like VPIRG to continue to lead in environmental activism.

Peter MacAusland, the present Student Association President, is also running for a position on the VPIRG student Board of Trustees. MacAusland has been active not only in student government affairs but has been a leading force behind the opposition to the building of the proposed underpass through Main Street. MacAusland believes that not only is the underpass not needed and too expensive but also students will not use the underpass unless they are forced to by fences and thick shrubs.

VPIRG Capital Watch

Critical Time For Legislation

The Vermont Legislature is entering the last week of the 1975 session with adjournment expected on Saturday, April 19. A number of bills have reached a critical point: if action is not taken quickly they will not pass. This is the last chance that citizens have to contact their legislators on these important bills.

H.14 Lobby Disclosures

The House has passed H.14 which would require lobbyists to disclose sources and amounts of income as well as expenditures on legislation. Public disclosure of the money spent for lobby activities will help government officials and legislators objectively weigh the information that they receive.

Although the opponents of the bill waged an intensive battle to defeat the bill in the House, it passed on a 86-58 vote. The only lobby groups to support the measure were VPIRG and Common Cause.

The bill is now in the Senate Judiciary Committee. Senate passage is possible only if citizens let their senators know that they favor letting the public know how much money is being spent to influence legislation.

S. 120 Insurance of Newborns

S. 120 requires that all insurance companies doing business in Vermont cover newborn children. Presently many companies do not begin coverage until the child is two or three weeks old. Most of the more serious problems associated with birth occur within the first few days. Families without first-day coverage often find themselves faced with huge medical bills that they cannot possibly pay.

S. 120 passed the Senate on a voice vote. At present the bill is in the House Commerce Committee whose chairman is John Morgan. Prompt action could assure passage of the legislation by this session.

H. 414 Ten Year Highway Plan

H. 414 sets up transportation policy for Vermont and includes the highway construction projects for the next ten years. At present the bill is in the House Appropriations Committee and should reach the House floor by today (Thursday). VPIRG supports the policy statement in the bill but is opposed to Interstate I-93. I-93 is unnecessary and too costly.

H. 276 Access to Public Documents

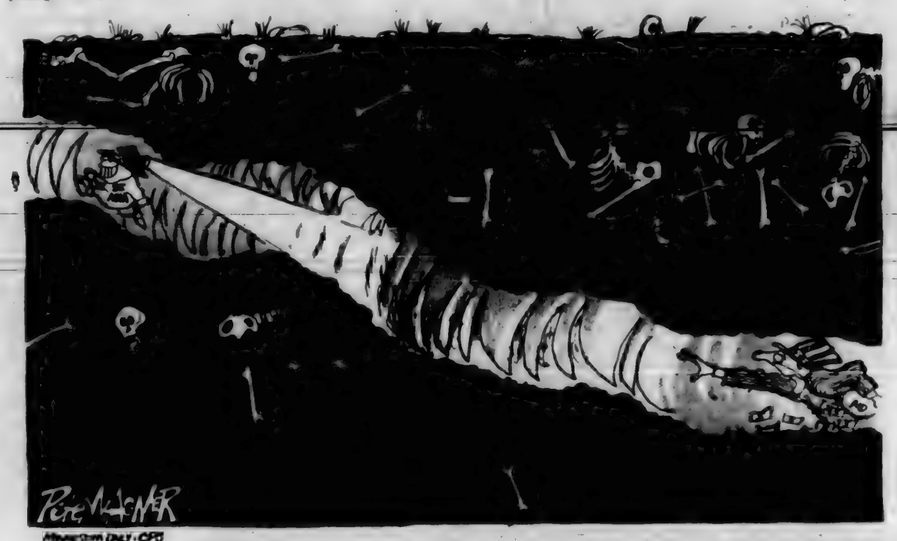
This bill guarantees the citizen's right to see and to copy at cost any public document, with certain exceptions which are clearly spelled out. The House bill passed by a close vote and it is now in the Senate.

S. 133 Hearing Loss and Hearing Aids

This bill requires consumers to see a doctor before buying a hearing aid since hearing loss can be symptomatic of diabetes, syphillis, etc. Many people have been sold extravagently expensive and unnecessary hearing aids, and this bill should help to end this practice. S. 133 should reach the House by the end of the week.

What Can You Do?

VPIRG urges students and other interested citizens to contact their representative or senator on these bills. A letter or a call at this crucial time could make the difference between passage or defeat.



Thoughts And Reflections

by Ken Markowitz

U.C.L.A. won its tenth NCAA championship in twelve years last week with a solid 92-87 win over Kentucky. It was a brilliant, exciting game right down to the wire. Kentucky had brute strength and height, but U.C.L.A. had a certain style, an indefinable polish which enabled them to win. Reporters called it another display of Wooden's magic and let it go at that. The late Boston Globe columnist, George Frazier, had a special term for it, Duende.

Duende...Grace under pressure if you will. Class, but not the Tuborg beer kind. More a way of bearing. The Celtics have it when they fast break down the court in perfect poetic synchrony. The Knicks had it, when under the inspiration of an injured Willis Reed, they beat the Lakers in seven for the championship. They lost it just as easily last year when they failed to vote a retiring Reed a full playoff share.

Duende's a funny thing. You can't legislate it. All kinds of people have it and some never will. It doesn't come with crests and heralds and not necessarily with wealth. It's hard to acquire and easy to lose. Brando had it as Terry Malloy in the film On the Waterfront when he looked at his brother and said, "Charlie, I coulda been somebody. I was a contender. You made me a bum, Charlie, and I ain't no bum." Paul Newman has it. Robert Redford can't make it. Ingrid Bergman will always have it. Raquel Welch will always try.

Sometimes it's apparent in the small things: the walk, the manner, the holding of a drink. Little Mack Herron has it when he hurls his one hundred forty-five pound body at the knees of a rushing two hundred forty pound linebacker. Tiny Holland of wooden shoe and hole in the dike fame, had it when it snubbed its nose at the oil embargo. Every true artist knows what it is. Doing your best the best damn way you know how right down the line and then being proud of what you have done. Knowing you're good. The Swiss watchmaker feels it, as does the woodcarver. Cezanne and Rockwell drew it. Wagner caught a glimpse of it but lost it in bigotry. Most winners have it but defeat is its indicator. The French Grandmaster Napier expressed it best after a brilliant losing effort to World Champion Lasker, "It was my greatest game. Certainly the most exciting and I would not trade it back for anything."

It entails an attitude for playing the game of life as explorers do for the mere wonder and joy of it all. Play up, play up, and play the game as the poem goes but more importantly, play clean. You can find it anywhere in the best and worst of places and it is always a pleasure to behold.

What is this mysterious quality Duende then? A touch of class. A self-made code. A little pride. An honest word. A reach toward the stars. Who's to say? It is all of these and more. Perhaps it is more easily defineable in what it is not. It does not appear in the ugly forms of apathy, cowardice, hate, and corruption. They suck at the marrow of Duende and reduce it to rubble.

Saying for the week: "Somewhere behind me a small fire goes on flaring in the rain, in the desolate ashes. No matter, now, whom it was built for, it keeps its flames, it warms everyone who might wander into its radiance, a tree, a lost animal, the stones, because in the dying world it was set burning." Galway Kinnell The Book of Nightmares

Peter Rebutts Knutstad

by Peter MacAusland

Upon reading "Peter's Project", a column written by Knut Rostad appearing in last week's CYNIC, I find that the column is full of misconceptions, inaccurate facts, and faulty generalization. In the following, I shall set straight my involvement with the underpass and my opposition to it, which Mr. Rostad has cleverly distorted.

Mr. Rostad debates my involvement upon five reasons which I listed in a February letter to the Burlington Free Press. I contend that each reason is valid, though the degree of importance of each varies. The major reason I oppose the underpass is that it is not necessary.

(1) A clear majority of those citizens in Chittenden County, who have addressed themselves to the proposed underpass, have voiced opposition.

Mr. Rostad suggests that I may have based this reason by citizens' opinions expressed through letters-to-the-editor of the Burlington Free Press. Well, I based my contention of public opposition not only by these letters, but also by the opinions of townspeople and students who have expressed their opposition through petitioning and by speaking at related meetings of the Burlington Planning Commission (BPC). Mr. Rostad unjustly criticizes the authors of those letters-to-the-editor. He writes, "Most of them display a general lack of understanding with the proposal itself, the financial arrangements involved, or the history of the project." These authors were expressing their feelings, their valued judgement and their simple opposition to the underpass. Mr. Rostad has no right calling those letters "mediocre". If only Mr. Rostad had reviewed all relevant documents and minutes of meetings relating to the underpass, he would find that of those citizens who spoke up, the majority voiced opposition.

(2) The underpass as a solution to a particular problem requires excessive financial obligations from the State of Vermont.

Mr. Rostad contends that this reason "is completely subjective as it involves individual bias and preference." Indeed, Mr. Rostad is correct in saying that the reason itself is a personal opinion but it is, by no means, based on further personal opinion, as he states. Many people, as taxpayers of Vermont, say that the money is being poorly utilized, that the money could be better spend in human services, in badly needed capital construction projects (i.e. a new Burlington library, UVM gym expansion, etc.) The Institute of Traffic Engineers has recommended guidelines for solving pedestrian-auto conflicts. One important guideline calls for attaining an acceptable maximum level of safety at a minimum cost. The underpass does not necessarily represent a "minimum cost" solution.

(3) Exploration and possible implementation of alternatives have been neglected.

Mr. Rostad displays a lack of knowledge in disputing this reason. I support, as an alternative, on-grade crossings with efficient traffic control systems including pedestrian-actuated lights. The BPC or the District Environmental Commission (DEC) have not even considered the fine details of this alternative. The major component of this alternative is a significant readjustment of the traffic lights at the crossings. The existing traffic lights have been in operation for at least 20 months, almost two full school years, and not once have those lights been adjusted to see if the pedestrian-auto conflict could be minimized. I call this neglect. The existing traffic control systems are so inefficient that they don't even satisfy the major warrant for pedestrian-actuated lights as set forth in the U.S. Department of Transportation Manual on Uniform Traffic Control Devices. Utilizing crossing guards at the crosswalks, as an alternative, was tried but poorly implemented. Town Sheriffs were hired for several days at the crossings. The time was during the first few days of the school year, when many new students were unfamiliar with the

All Things Considered:

by larry seiden

No apologies

I cut a fart in Georgia and realized what has been sitting on the end of my nose for so long. All the ch-ch-changes later, it was ME. The comfort of this knowledge was alleviating the pain of time and recognition. Like the little pewter rat rite through the ol' bod, all the bleeding lonesome tears were only nourishment for my severed roots. I was glad to know this, it helped me get out of this corner. By stuffing myself into slanted corners I avoided new visions. A corner can only fit one, it is a dead end, front and rear. No need to think of climbing just tuck me head down and walk. Right into that little pinpoint crevice. I couldn't see it 'cause all I see is the bottom of my firkin' feet. So here I am sitting in a cozy neighborhood beerracket in Atlanta and this dude's on my right telling me I gotta go up to Stone Mountain (a big chip of granite or some other metamorphic shit, whatever) up the road aways where tourists who get tired of the city get reborn after they've repented for the hike to the top.

Well this cracker type says there's an angel on that mountain who can look into your third eye and I buy him a wily turkey"(it was vication, why not). So he's slobberin' his words down the front of his natty white suit which really should have been overalls (I didn't check for measure on his boots, but OK). And this egg is singing and we go out to my car to see if his red ('red as Georgia kudos (hitters)') hash burns in my pipe. It did. He tells me about this angel who looks like Jimi Hendrix, even has the wings of scarves, and we go back to two more turkeys and he gobbling on about this ghost and the mirror that he holds up to your face and says Lo and Behold You are looking at God, dig. And I stared into his dialating eyes and I said I had to see this. I carve FOXY LADY on all my desks.

We lefted on to Peachtree which is where the blood of Atlanta flows down. Also many of its drivers who, each in they own southern fried heart, believes that he is the Richard Petty. (P.S. Kentucky has no bluegrass just banked curves on its interstates) And this bird next to me is going on how tornados never strike Atlanta "because its deviseness can circumvent even its mousetraps like Alex Cooley's Electric Ballroom, where I had the pockets ripped off my pants previously that evening. When I related the weight of the goose, he said I didn't look like a kadet. I said I wasn't, I was just outrangers but tight around the waist.

On top of Stone Mountain the southern nights are as cold as northern women. I had my comb in my hand in case I saw the mirror and stuck in the elastic waistband of my BVDs were two tickets to a Jim Morrison revival concert and barbecue that I hustled at a transvestite's auction. So the dude is cackling on about the waste of hipness and the legend of the white negro and hoppin' and hollerin' his ass up on this bog rock and says he can't get his rocks off anymo' cause of dope and he grabs me and this should've been the end but flashin' in the sky is a tornado and it comes bustin' through below the mountain. It starts rippin' through house and low rent apartment complexes. Roofs and cars are flying like popups at a Braves game and he's cryin' for his ma (who beat him for doin' his sister) and whew! I could not handle it anymore and screamed in pain OH GOD.

I had never been in a tornado before and we're haulin' ass off this large pebble, I fingered on throwing his bawling body off Stone Mountain and saving him the embarrassment of saying he's wrong. But I look out and see the destruction in the northwest side of town and the electric wires are sparkin' through the boundless noise of death as it passes whirlwind style through the sleeping city. I grabbed his hand as the wail of silence blasts. The killer passes away and nothingness reappears. The trees are tattered and cleaned from their roots. A mystical demonstration of power, not mine I thought. I looked at my friend and I grasped the shredded strip of conclusion that it was mine, all mine. I had the fury, the cavernous hellfires were brewing and I told him he didn't know God. He could not know God. Oh God.

I had it and we all have it and none of us thinks how powerful it is because we hide it, tuck it into another fold and stuff it away for fights with lovers and other souls. God, pain and us, all one.

Let all the children boogie.

Refriction: The only one I open my mouth to is my dentist.

Dixie Rambling

Two Hundredth Anniversary Of Lexington & Concord: Rekindling That Old Revolutionary Spirit

(CPS) -- Two hundred years ago this April 19 Paul Revere and William Dawes set off on their famed midnight rides to warn the peoples of Lexington and Concord that "the British are coming."

As part of its efforts to rekindle that revolutionary spirit and warn people about "today's royalists," the People's Bicentennial Commission (PBC) has announced plans for its commemoration of the Battles of Lexington and Concord with a massive gathering at the Concord battleground Saturday, April 19.

"A new monarchy has grown up in America," warned the PBC in its publicity for the commemoration. "Today's royalists-America's giant corporations- make King George look like a petty tyrant."

The celebration will begin with "Midnight Ride Caravans" set to leave from Boston and surrounding communities at one minute past midnight. The PBC has urged people to adorn their cars "with flags and corporate effigies" and to sound their horns all the way to Concord.

The all-night "Concord Bridge Celebration" will include "ongoing musical and theatrical entertainment, old fashioned oratory, hot soup and bread kitchens, and a host of surprises." The festivities will culminate in a "Rally for Economic Democracy" at 11 a.m. featuring speeches of Tom Paine, Sam Adams and John Hancock and the signing of a "Declaration of Economic Independence."

"On April 19, 1775, the Patriots sent a message to King George," says the PBC. "This April 19, we're going to send a message to Wall Street."

Calling themselves a "nationwide band of patriots dedicated to the ideals of the first American Revolution," the PBC has already sponsored several "alternative" Bicentennial celebrations. During the Boston Oil Party" in 1973 over 20,000 demonstrators gathered and PBC followers dumped empty oil drums off a replica of an eighteenth century ship to commemorate the 200th anniversary of the Boston Tea Party.

The PBC has charged that the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration, the official government bicentennial organization, is corporate-dominated and presents a "Bicentennial with a form, but without substance whatsoever."

The PBC wants to encourage "people who have the guts to stand up for their country and the principles this country was founded on," the PBC told US News and World Report. "People are learning to challenge corruption, abuses of power and concentrations of wealth as people did in the Revolution."

For more information about the Lexington and Concord commemoration, contact The People's Bicentennial Commission, 490 Beacon Street, Boston MA 12115. Telephone (617) 247-1851.

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

B.B. "Blues" King Returns to Queen City

B.B. King brings 'da best o' da Blooz' to downtown Burlington when Silver Keg Productions present him at Memorial Auditorium April 16th at 8 p.m. Tickets are available at Bailey's and the Keg for the price of $5.00 in advance and $6.00 at the door. "Special surprise guests" are also billed to appear.

Pestlemania Prevails At UVM

Last week, in our release on that sprightly comedy, The Knight of the Burning Pestle, we announced with considerable pomp and effluence the long-awaited coming of Spring. So what did we get? The biggest damned snow storm of the year, that's what! Boy, are we embarrassed! But not deterred. We still believe in Spring over here in Royall Tyler Land, and to prove it, we now bring you more on what has got to be the most flagrant, flagitious, flashy and floriferous show of this or any other season.

Public response to last week's article has been overwhelming. Mountains of mail have swamped our already overtaxed business facilities. Swarms of students gather at our box-office clamoring for space at one of the six performances of this melifluous, malapert and, of course, merry merry Masque. (Actually, Pestle is not a Masque; we considered Melodrama to complete the alliteration, but it's not that either.)

Far and away the most common remark currently to be heard at UVM is "Pestle!?" Students and faculty alike are scratching heads trying to figure it out. One aged professor is said to have gone mad defining the word to his anxious classes. What wrangles we have wrought! But don't expect us to give you a definition yet. All we'll say for now is the "Pestle" is both a noun and a questionable verb. We are pleased, however, to reveal the following:

a) That The Knight of the Burning Pestle will be in performance at the Royall Tyler Theatre April 18, 19, and 20 and again on the following weekend, April 24, 25 and 26.

b) That The Knight of the Burning Pestle contains delightful songs, witty turns of phrase, rollicking rambunction, young lovers, old lovers, a giant, a dwarf, suggestive fruits, and foul great lungies.

c) That all further requests for a definition of the word "Pestle" will be thrown in the trash where they belong. (Look it up!)

d) That you had better order your tickets now by dialing 656-2094. If busy, as its current popularity will almost insure, keep trying.

See ya around campus!

(NB: Lest you lack a Lexicon, we provide a short glossary to define certain words in the above, and to speak for the quality of our production.

Flagitious: "Shamefully wicked."

Floriferous: "Flower-bearing."

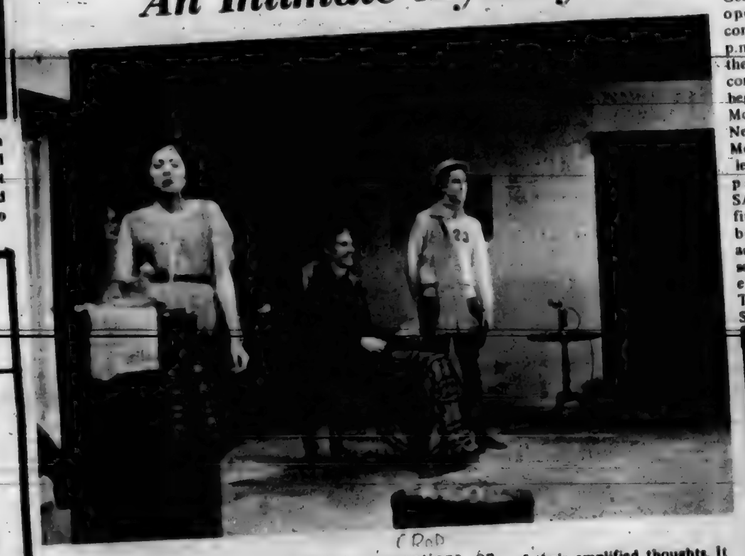
Melifluous: "Sweetly or smoothly flowing."

Malapert: "Bold or saucy; insolent."

Lungie: Archaic; we don't even know what one is.

Lexicon: "Dictionary.")

The Real Inspector Hound... An Intimate Mystery



by P.R.

A strange thought enveloped me as I was leaving Billings center this past Tuesday night. What is parody? The answer came quickly. Parody is the heart and essence of Tom Stoppard's one-act comedy, The Real Inspector Hound. As in his highly acclaimed Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are Dead, Stoppard has created a theatrical piece totally dependent upon the use of parody. It is a parody of our mythical conceptions on theatre and reality, the world of criticism, and of the Agatha Christie-type thriller. As such, The Real Inspector Hound attempts, and I believe, to a surprising extent achieves, an analysis of this relationship between the theatre (illusion) and the world of reality. Here, our two main characters, Moon and Birdboot, both of whom are fittingly critics, are seen by the audience as not only viewing but reviewing an Agatha Christie-type production. As they conceive we listen by way of their amplified thoughts. It is here that the atmospheres of theatres and reality are contrasted, but later when both are inticed to the stage floor this separation is shattered as each world becomes interfused. Just such a juxtaposition is the brilliance of Stoppard's play.

The Real Inspector Hound, now playing and continuing until April 13 in the Apse of Billings Center is skillfully directed by John Milligan and Keith Gaylord who are both quite at home in these comic-absurdist surroundings. Equally effective in the final portrayal of Stoppard's creation is the fine acting ability demonstrated by all. These qualities combined with that of an intimate atmosphere provide a most enjoyable evening. It is by all means worth seeing.

Medieval Fair Rolls Into Town

Patrick Gymnasium will take on the appearance of Medieval England on Saturday April 12, when the Renaissance Studies Program presents its first Medieval Fair. Originally slated to appear on the East Green fates guised in the form of April snows have deemed otherwise but the indoor site will without question be quite appropriate for this occasion. The gymnasium lobby and East section will be transformed into an atmospheric setting for a Medieval community festival, enhanced by the presence of many costumed personnel and featuring performances of Medieval plays, a craft market, Medieval games, music, and other appropriate attractions. The fair has been planned so as to highlight both the cultural beauty and the lighthearted-ness of the period and as a result will bring to the University of Vermont campus a unique form of entertainment and diversion.

Consistent with Medieval tradition the fair will be held to festively celebrate an important community event, for the Medieval members of the University community are turning out to celebrate the coronation of King Timothy Brookes and his Queen, Gayle Gertler. Although the fair will open at 11:30 a.m., the coronation will occur at 12:50 p.m. Homage will be paid to the new royalty following the coronation ceremony and will begin with the procession of a Monk's Choir led by David Newcomb at 1:00 p.m. The Monks singing a litany will lead the celebrants to a 1:15 performance of THE SACRIFICE OF ISAAC, the first Medieval Miracle play to be included in the day's activities. At 2:00 p.m. the second play chosen for the entertainment of King Timothy I and his guests, THE SECOND SHEPHERD'S PLAY, will be performed. Following the 2:00 p.m. performance those who wish may proceed to the Harris/Millis Dining Hall to hear Professor Louis L. Martz of Yale University speak on "Paradise Lost and the Idea of Pilgrimage," another attraction of the Second Annual Vermont Renaissance Symposium which is also hosting the Medieval Fair. Following the lecture, both plays will again be performed at the fair location at 4:10 p.m. The Monk's Choir will return following the final performance of THE SECOND SHEPHERD'S PLAY to conclude the day's events with a singing of the Angelus.

As is the case with any fair, those attending the fair should bring their appetites because authentic Medieval specialities ranging from Muenster bread and cheese, fresh fruit, "English Pheasant," corn bread cookies, to cyder and meade will be served. Either cash or Saga coupons will be accepted in payment. Those attending the fair may wish to forego lunch at their usual dining hall and eat at the fair.

Preceding the coronation and at times when Medieval plays are not being performed a variety of other entertainments will be presented. At 11:30 a.m. the University Madrigal Singers will give a half hour concert. Their performance will be followed by spontaneous presentations from groups of roving bagpipers, singers, recorder artists, lutists, and guitar players. One unique highlight in the musical area, will be Mariella Squire performing selections from her repertory of over 300 Renaissance ballads which have been passed down orally in her family for many generations. At the same time, jugglers, quarterstaff demonstrators, astrologers, a

(continued on page nine)

Vermont Cynic MOVIE GUIDE

Century I & II
DORSET STREET
I Earthquake
II Young Frankenstein

MERRILL'S SHOWCASE I & II
SO. BURLINGTON
I Chinatown Bean
II Lenny

STATE THEATRE
BANK STREET
The Great Waldo Pepper

FLYNN THEATRE
MAIN STREET
Badlands

ESSEX TWIN CINEMA
ESSEX JCT.
I Amarcord
II Towering Inferno

CINEMA I & II
BURLINGTON PLAZA
SHELBURNE ROAD
I Godfather Part II
II The Four Musketeers

call theatres for times
Not Good for bargain nights
or special showings

What could be better than The Three Musketeers?
7 • 9:05 PM
It's all new!
THE 4 MUSKETEERS
OLIVER REED RAQUEL WELCH MICHAEL YORK as D'Artagnan FAYE DUNAWAY as Milady CHARLTON HESTON as Cardinal Richelieu
Bargain Mat. Sat. Sun. 2 P.M.
...it's four for fun and fun for all!
BURLINGTON PLAZA CINEMA 1 & 2
PHONE 862-5070 ANYTIME

audio loop
STEREO TAPES
8-track & cassettes
• over 1000 rock & popular titles
• only $1.99 each
• free brochure
write: AUDIO LOOP CO.
DEPT. 752 P.O. BOX 43355
CLEVELAND, OHIO 44143

SA FILMS PRESENTS
THURSDAY, APRIL 10
ROYAL WEDDING (1951) – Fred Astaire, Jane Powell, Peter Lawford
101 Votey – 7:30 – Free
FRIDAY, APRIL 11
THE HARDER THEY COME – Jimmy Cliff
101 Votey – 7:30 & 10:00 – $ 1
SATURDAY, APRIL 12
LONG DAY'S JOURNEY INTO NIGHT (1962) – Kathryn Hepburn, Jason Robards, Dean Stockwell
101 Votey – 7:30 & 9:30 – Free
MONDAY, APRIL 14
RULES OF THE GAME (1939) – Directed by Jean Renoir
101 Votey – 7:30 & 9:30 – Free

THE SILVER KEG
Presents In Concert
AT MEMORIAL AUDITORIUM
B. B. KING
MEM. AUDITORIUM
TICKETS AVAILABLE AT BAILEY'S MUSIC ROOMS
THE SILVER KEG
WED. APRIL 16
8 PM
$5 in advance
$6 at the door
THIS WEEK AT THE SILVER KEG
APRIL 11-13 OAK
April 14-20 Spoonfeather
(TEN) 10 CENT NITE EVERY WEDNESDAY
Your entertainment dollar buys more at the Silver Keg

Only with Coupon
UVM SPECIAL
Friday and Sunday Night Only
$1 YOUNG FRANKENSTEIN $1
VOID SATURDAY
Century Plaza I & II
Only with Coupon

Badlands Co

Twenty-five-year-old Kit (Martin Sheen) are captured and shackled by the police through the Midwest is written and Edward R. Pressman. The film, which o April 9 at the Flynn Theater in Burlington

Beatles Sooth

(CPS/ZNS) – A Philadelphia institute has been using Beatles' music to treat incorrigible children.

Psychologists at the Eastern Pennsylvania Psychiatric Institute reported that they have successfully employed a number of the Beatles' most popular songs to encourage six chronically disruptive children – ranging in age fr concentra

Book Review

Dan Rather and Gary Paul Gates, Harper and Row, $8.95, 311 pages.

by David Mandell

Several weeks after John Dean's revealing Watergate testimony, former President Nixon held a long awaited news conference. As Mr. Nixon asked for questions, one hand shot up before the beleaguered President could say "expletive deleated." Dan Rather, the CBS newsman, launched into a question beginning with the phrase "With all due respect to your office..." Before Rather could complete his question, the President uttered, "Coming from you that would be most unusual."

Their news conference battles, raging throughout the Watergate controversy made Nixon and Rather a television duo rivaled only by Muhammed Ali and Howard Cosell. Nixon's resignation left a large vacuum for Rather. Like David Frye, he had made an entire reputation around the departed President. It looked tough for Rather as Mr. Nixon pined away in San Clemente. With no more "perfectly clears" to confront matters might lo and saved nice Water rage surpr shark Island the public writer buc misfo backg Psyc aut monst and throug book The riding list co-au direc condi happ Nixo much H R Ehrl prep prisc

40 Church St. Burlington
Essex Jct. Shopping Center Essex Junction
Largest Paper Complete St
Small presse

THE LAST CHAN
147 MA

Into Town

...ther cash or Saga coupons will be accepted in payment. Those attending the fair may wish to forego lunch at their usual dining hall and eat at the fair.

Preceding the coronation and at times when Medieval plays are not being performed a variety of other entertainments will be presented. At 11:30 a.m. the University Madrigal Singers will give a half hour concert. Their performance will be followed by spontaneous presentations from groups of roving bagpipers, singers, recorder artists, lutists, and guitar players. One unique highlight, in the musical area, will be Marcella Squire performing selections from her repertory of over 300 Renaissance ballads which have been passed down orally in her family for many generations. At the same time, jugglers, quarterstaff demonstrators, astrologers, a

(continued on page nine)

...ncert
...DITORIUM
...ING
WED. APRIL 16
8 PM
$5 in advance
$6 at the door
... SILVER KEG
...DAY
...t the Silver Keg
Coupon
...ECIAL
...ay Night Only
...NG
...ENSTEIN
$1
...URDAY
...aza 1& II
Coupon

Badlands Comes To Flynn

Twenty-five-year-old Kit (Martin Sheen) and his 15-year-old girlfriend Holly (Sissy Spacek) are captured and shackled by the police in Badlands. The story of the lovers' bloody ride through the Midwest is written and directed by Terrence Malick for executive producer Edward R. Pressman. The film, which is being distributed by Don-Martin Productions, opened April 9 at the Flynn Theater in Burlington.

Visions Of Old

by Ron Stewart

Visions of the Emerald Beyond is the second offering by the recently reformed Mahavishnu Orchestra. (The first album Apocalypse, featuring the London Symphony Orchestra, was somewhat of a minor disaster.) Faced with the task of overcoming negative comparisons with the original band, John McLaughlin was forced to return to the smaller ensemble that made the earlier Mahavishnu Orchestra so popular. By replacing the London Symphony Orchestra with a string trio and a brass trio, Mahavishnu has regained the tightness that a successful fusion of jazz and rock requires.

One is immediately reminded of the Birds of Fire upon first listening to this disc. All compositions except one were written by McLaughlin which makes the album as a whole very unified but without neglecting the members of the band as singular talents, i.e. solos. Listen particularly to the very fluid Jean-Luc Ponty, the master of the electric violin. Everyone takes a back seat to Ponty's soaring solos, including McLaughlin, always the focal point of the original band.

There is also an attempt at a hit single evident in the Herbie Hancock– like "Can't Stand Your Funk." The best cuts of the album, however, are the last three on side two, "Pegasus," "Opus 1," and "On the Way Home to Earth." Combining some abstract echo-guitar with a polyrhythmic texture, McLaughlin and drummer Michael Walden lay down some tasty stuff. Walden, by the way, throughout the drumming madman Billy Cobham way, for the Orchestra, has certainly come into his own as a drummer. He has vastly improved since the first album as have the rest of the band. Truly a corps of first rate musicians.

McLaughlin has given the public a very satisfying album, featuring the virtuosity of the original band without sacrificing the new direction he desperately sought in Apocalypse. If you were disappointed with Mahavishnu's last effort, don't hesitate to pick up Visions of the Emerald Beyond.

Edsel Peacock Reviews New Rock

by larry seiden

"I'm an alligator, I'm a mama poppa comin' for you." No doubt we need a starman now and I was creamin' in my jeans when I saw Bowie or Kathrine Hepburn on the cover of an album called Young Americans. It had Bowie's name on it and I was sure the masked man of the seventies wouldn't cast us aside. I was waiting for the word and I waited and waited. The Starman said nothing. So I got up and danced.

YOUNG AMERICANS/david bowie – David suffers the same fate as his sixties counterpart, Dylan. The establishment turns on him for his changes. Now Ziggy is playing mainman on Soul Train. John Lennon turns up (again) playing second fiddle (again). Grandiose pretensions aside, Bowie and his black band turn out a sizeable chunk of blue eyed funk. Fascination with an understanding of rock n' roll suicide for five more years. I hope David goes back to England, it's hard to find the cosmic ray in Philadelphia. (C+, Move with the times colors)

WELCOME TO MY NIGHTMARE/alice cooper – Who's foolin' who. It's like being in the eighth grade for six years. Nothing to show except the teachers are older, greyer and yell at you for leaving your GTO, the metalflake chartreuse one, in their parking space. It's not a nightmare, it's a rerun with the wrong characters. (C-, another thud for stagnation colors)

FRAMPTON/peter frampton – The winner of the face that couldn't miss is getting older and wiser. Peter now hears a different drummer than he did with Humble Pie. His style hasn't progressed much over the last three albums but his refreshing voice and well spaced production yields a drifting rock and roll feeling without weighing down the woofers. The zippy two step rhymes are amusing if not catchy. A big improvement for an upcoming star. (B, over the hump of the Camel colors)

CRASH LANDING/jimi hendrix – It's like he never left, so welcome home another exploitation of the name. In this case it's a good deal. Alan Douglas has bought the rights to 700 hours of newly discovered Hendrix tapes. He threw some knockass studio musicians on the tapes and voila a new edge of silk guitars, sparking blues and jazz with ripsaw lightening. Considering the problem of dealing with a departed deity, it is an album that adds to a very well structured collage of inheritance. (all it a souvenir of a legend. (grade was docked a notch for being only 29 minutes long) (B, an old friends colors)

GREATEST HITS/al green – Don't knock success. Since this is the first greatest hits album I'm laying my pen on for this column, I'd like to say there is no such thing as a weak greatest hits album, even if it's Paul Revere and the Raiders. The problem with GH albums is what they leave out, but there are no beefs with this one. It's a million dollars worth of singles. (A, a star's respectability colors)

KATY LIED/steely dan – America's most innovative band has done it again! The studio wizardry of Denny Diaz makes me tremble with awe. Dan has finally come into his own. Their eclectic sound of distinctive jazz riffs, lilting guitars and clear running pianos and fourteen drummers makes this album as clear and ambigious as life itself. (yinyang) Again they stick to the short tunes exercising their instrumental prowess to shade the poetic if slightly deceiving lyrics. Donald Fagan's vocals have found the tone that will silence the controversy of how do you sing a Steely Dan tune. The musical strength carries the flow like a Mercedes glides on backstreet clouds. (A, hittin' full stride colors)

MACON TRACKS/grinderswitch – A Marshall Tucker Band with rock and roll roots or The Allmans with Charlie Daniels on Fiddle. No, this unknown band is Capricorn's hottest property with the Allman's lost in downtown Macon. Grinderswitch leaves no tracks untouched. Every song is excellent (a rarity). Dru Lombar is a damn fine slide player and drummer Rick Burnett has very obvious Motown roots, all that adds up to a solid and southern gem of vinyl. (B+, which I was back in Dixie)

TOM CAT/tom scott & the L.A. express – as fine an electric funk and jazz band as they come but they're all established studio musicians and that leaves this void that I shall call no pizzaz or no color. But it is the best sterile album I've heard in a while. Too much repetition of the obvious. Tom Scott would do well to forget King Curtis for a time and see where the solar stream slips to. (B-, hot dogs need spice colors)

SUICIDE SAL/maggie bell – Maggie weaves scorching lines of blue heat within other people's songs from Leo Sayer to Lennon/McCartney to BadCo. Driven to let go by Jimmy Page's thunderin' electric six, Maggie outdoes herself. Any comparison to Lady Janis will insult both of them. Her strength is knowing when to let the lioness out. When the lioness purrs, Pete Wingfield's keyboards lay a subtle hand on the flowing mane. (B+, colour me hot n' nasty colors)

TWO SIDES OF THE MOON/keith moon – Moonie's a loonie and this is the comedy album of the year. I had my doubts all these years whether Moon could sing and he can't. So instead we have an all star lineup of heavies and golden agers from the fifties doing golden oldies. There's no magic drumming, there is not much except a rejeuvenated version of the Beach Boys "Don't Worry Baby," except Keith sounds like a hammer headed snorkel fish in heat when he sings, but the kids alright. The cover and insert are worth the fiver. Think about his last name, think about the possibilities. (C, too many chefs cookin' colors)

Paul Simon Cleans Up

(Earth News) – Paul Simon was paid $50,000 for his contribution to the music for Warren Beatty's new movie Shampoo, according to the new edition of Rolling Stone. Paul's sole contribution to the film was humming an approximately two-minute tune. That figures out to a salary of $416.66 per second.

Stu Who?

(Earth News) – If you look closely at the cover of John Lennon's newly released "Rock n' Roll" album, you'll notice three figures hurrying by. According to music columnist Ben Edmunds, Lennon says the three are none other than Paul McCartney, George Harrison, and Stu Sutcliffe from the Beatles' pre-Ringo days in Germany.

Beatles Soothe The Savage Child

(CPS/ZNS) – A Philadelphia institute has been using Beatles' music to treat incorrigible children.

Psychologists at the Eastern Pennsylvania Psychiatric Institute reported that they have successfully employed a number of the Beatles' most popular songs to encourage six chronically disruptive children - ranging in age from 5 to 7 - to concentrate on their work.

Dr. Claire Wilson said that the children were selected because of their unusually disruptive behavior. They were placed in a classroom with piped-in Beatle music, and were told that the hit records would continue as long as they did their work.

When disruptions occurred, the Beatles were turned off. The psychologists reported that after a few sessions featuring such hits as "All You Need is Love" and "With A Little Help From My Friends," the children's usual disruptive behavior virtually disappeared.

Book Review: The Palace Guard

Dan Rather and Gary Paul Gates, Harper and Row, $8.95, 311 pages.

by David Mandell

Several weeks after John Dean's (escaping Watergate lefitimony, former President Nixon held a long awaited news conference. As Mr. Nixon asked for questions, one hand shot up before the beleaguered President could say "expletive deleated." Dan Rather, the CBS newsman, launched into a question beginning with the phrase "With all due respect to your office..." Before Rather could complete his question, the President uttered, "Coming from you that would be most unusual."

Their news conference battles, raging throughout the Watergate controversy made Nixon and Rather a television duo rivaled only by Muhammed Ali and Howard Cosell. Nixon's resignation left a large vacuum for Rather. Like David Frye, he had made an entire reputation around the departed President. It looked tough for Rather as Mr. Nixon pined away in San Clemente. With no more "perfectly clears" to confront matters might have gotten rough. But lo and behold, the act of fate saved Rather and made him a nice little bundle of money. Watergate suddenly became the rage of the literary world, surpassing even stories of sharks menacing the Long Island coast. Within weeks of the Watergate "horrors" publicity, scores of would-be writers prepared to make a fast buck on the nation's misfortune. Armed with solid backgrounds in Introduction to Psychology, innumerable authors rushed such monstrosities as Perfectly Clear and Watergate, The True Story through the press.

Among the Watergate era books hurriedly put together is The Palace Guard which is riding high on the best seller list. Rather and his forgotten co-author Gary Gates strive to discuss their dubious conclusion as to why Watergate happened. Their belief is that Nixon isolated himself too much behind the Berlin Wall of H.R. Halderman and John Ehrlichman, who are now preparing for stints in federal prison.

Rather has a good idea but doesn't follow through on it. What evolves is a work filled with much gossip and little substance. This is not to say the book isn't entertaining. The Palace Guard is loaded with stories of how John Ehrlichman spied on the White House secretaries, as well as tales of Nixon's inferiority complex, and Haldeman's obsession with short hair and tucked in shirts. For some unknown reason the public gobbles up Watergate gossip faster than it can be presented. The Palace Guard in fact is a Washingtonian version of Peyton Place. That most likely explains its phenomenal success. Gossip by itself is appealing enough, but when it involves Presidents instead of mothers-in-law it is simply too much to pass up.

The Palace Guard's purpose, in addition to securing some of the Watergate loot for Harper and Row, is to demonstrate how the isolation of Nixon behind the two Teutons Halderman and Ehrlichman led to the Watergate break-in and coverup. Somehow it doesn't ever seem to reach its destination.

Nevertheless, if you enjoy gossip, and would like embarassing stories to tell about the former President, The Palace Guard is your book. The only thing missing is a better name. A more poignant title would have been: Everything You Always Wanted to Know About Richard Nixon But Were Afraid To Ask.

The Great Waldo Pepper

by Jay Williams

"Yes ladies and gentlemen, you see before you the one, the only, the great Waldo Pepper!" Or rather, Robert Redford.

With this his latest film, Director George Roy Hill has obviously poured more than just airplane glue over Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid. He lends us the thought it is OUR priviledge to see Redford act. Even Redford's exposed chest doesn't save this movie from over exposure to Hill's impersonal direction. As Waldo, Redford utilizes Redford stock: Tooth paste, ad smile and hell bent for leather attitude is the composition of Waldo Pepper, a man whose efforts to be a World War I flying ace are frustrated by the end of that war. Almost miraculously our hero survives the war and picks up such odd jobs as barnstorming for a living and hustling Nebraskan farmers' daughters for pleasure. He ultimately lands a job with a local aerial circus and the chance to perform "the outside loop." But first he must find a partner or idiot fool enough to team with him. This brings into play script writer William Goldman's morbid sense of humor. Waldo removes the landing wheels off a fellow barnstormer's plane so it will crash in a nearby pond. We are led to believe it is because Nebraska is Waldo's territory and nobody else can fly there. Well the plane does crash and guess who becomes Waldo's partner?

Truly a movie of revenge and boyish pranks. It is so neatly divided that one could fall asleep in the beginning, wake up in the middle and still know the outcome. Hill and Goldman play cat and mouse with life and death so loosely I wonder if they have any conception as to either of them. Plane crashes seem to turn Hill on and surely enough there are plenty in Pepper. However, if you ignore the casual violence you will be spellbound by the aerial photography. This comes at the end when Waldo, after Federally barred from flying for the death of a woman he coaxed into doing the wing walk, is hired by Paramount Studios to recreate air battles for their latest war flick. What an opportunity to discover an opportunity to display his talent! He loses sight of this when he discovers famous Imperial German ace Ernst Kessler, whom Waldo idolizes and hates in the same vein, will portray a good bad guy in the same movie. They silently feel each other out as gentlemen and martyrs. Then, as expected, they have a fireside chat about who killed who in the war, and prepare for the next day's shooting.

Gallantly they board their respective planes, discarding the parachutes they are politely asked to wear by their director, and take to the skies to fulfill a dream. Soaring over backlot hills at Paramount, they bump and grind to music supplied by Henri Mancini. Totally ignoring the reason they're up there, our duo engages in a real-life battle of grit and determination. Apparently though, they don't wish to live. When Waldo's wheels are incapacitated and Kessler's wings severed, the fighting stops and our heroes salute each other, then sink to their death. Maybe it could stand a little airplane glue. Or send William Goldman back to his soap opera writing.

...Medieval Fair

(continued from page eight)

professional magician, authentic beggars and others will be circulating among the crowd.

The day's schedule will provide ample time to allow the fair's spectators to leisurely browse at a number of booths operated by area craftsmen demonstrating Medieval crafts. The skills to be represented range from pottery, to batik, stained glass window work, tapestry making, and woodcarving among others.

Many additional events will occur throughout the day and the University's first Medieval Fair running on April 12 from 11:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. at Patrick Gymnasium promises to be an event that should not be missed.

LITTLE PROFESSOR BOOK CENTER®
40 Church St. Burlington
Essex Jct. Shopping Center Essex Junction
Largest Paperback Selection in Vermont
Complete Study Notes
Small presses & some far-out reading

THE LAST CHANCE SALOON
Celebrate Spring At Last At The Chance
20¢ ALES Monday-Thursday
OLD TIME MOVIES Every Sunday Night
147 MAIN ST.

FREE
(1) One Good Reason To Skip Classes
Free With A Purchase At The Den, The Hub Or Walter's
A SAGA SUPER★ KITE
★ So what makes it super?
A) We get some free advertising
B) You get a good reason to cut classes.
Offer varies in different units
Only a few hundred available

BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE
Retail outlet
FANTASTIC SELECTION OF BEERS, ALES, AND AMERICAN & IMPORTED WINES AT GREAT SAVINGS

WRUV

T-SHIRTS ARE IN
AND ON SALE FOR JUST $3.00
AT: Boyd's Music Studio, 206 Main Street and Bailey's Music Rooms, 88 Church Street (Supply is Limited)

FEATURE

CYNIC INTERVIEW: PETER 'QUAZY' MACAUSLAND

The CYNIC Interview: Peter MacAusland
by Stephen Tanner

Monday afternoon on St. Patrick's Day this roving reporter climbed the back steps of Billings Center with the quickness of a leprechaun's foot. He stepped through the doorway after two flights up and entered the balcony hallway connecting all the offices above the North Lounge. A sharp left through the door to his left would have taken him right through the back entry to the Student Association President's Office. He turned sharply to enter. Turning back from the door, his forehead smarted from the discovery that it was locked. He walked around the balcony, obnoxiously disturbing the people studying in the North Lounge below. He was humming the UVM school song in a fortissimo soprano. He shot a lurid smile at a girl. She was toiling over a term paper, smoking a cigarette, eating a candy bar, and downing a coke all in one frustrated gulp.

This reporter entered the SA Office and, of course, no one was there. He went to the rear office to set up his tape recorder for an interview (of a profoundly serious nature) with the departing Student Association President, Peter MacAusland. After so doing, he heard activity in the outer office. MacAusland had rushed in, in his usual hurried style, to make a change on the ballot for the referendum. He and the secretary were fiddling with the box when he turned, and caught this reporter cramming down some questions on paper, to appear his usual well-prepared self. MacAusland breezed in, sat down on a chair, put his tennis shoed feet up on a table and said "you ready?"

This reporter casually laid down his pen, folded up the notes and put them in his pocket as if he had been writing a note to himself. He switched on the tape recorder, and this is what the heads picked up:

CYNIC: Peter, you're looking out your window now toward Mount Mansfield. I don't know if you can see it or not...

P.M.: No, too many damn buildings in the way.

CYNIC: Well, would you prefer an office that was a little higher than this one so you could see it? Perhaps one in the attic of Billings Center? You know, if you have to hide from someone.

P.M.: No, it's really more a place to go. I don't like the word "office" I prefer it to be informal. You're sitting at my desk now. I rarely sit at my desk anyway. I've got this nice table here to put my feet up on and there are chairs all over the room.

CYNIC: Does the SA President get any other benefits besides this office? A free season's pass at every ski area in Vermont? A courtesy Edsel Limosine? Or all the water he can drink at the fountains in Waterman Hall?

P.M.: I'd like to say that the rumor that I get a ski pass and a limousine is false. I do get this place here and I'm not embarassed to say that I do get free water in Waterman Hall. As far as any other benefits, SA does employ a full-time secretary and some mornings when I have a meeting it's nice to get that wake-up call. It comes in handy. I also get a free ticket to SA Concert Productions, but other than those, nothing.

CYNIC: You don't have any tape system in your office do you?

P.M.: No comment.

CYNIC: (laughter)

P.M.: When I get really emotionally involved in something and I get suspicious of Waterman I check the parts of my telephone. I take off the covers of the receiver and check for a bug, but I haven't found one yet.

CYNIC: Do you think Ed Andrews does the same thing with his phone?

P.M.: Checks for bugs? No I'm sure not. I've always wanted to bug his office though.

CYNIC: What would you pinpoint as the root of your political ambition? Was it a frustration with what you saw going on around you?

P.M.: It was more my ability to accomplish things. Back in high school three of us started up this Friday night Coffee House. Then my freshman year at UVM people were starting the Round House in the basement of Billings which I eventually ended up running for three years, up until last Spring. So it was my being able to provide other people with entertainment that really brought me to this position.

CYNIC: Would you say that your principal goal at UVM has been to provide entertainment for students?

P.M.: Well, in SA I spend more time making sure that the organization is run well because it provides students with activities. I've spent less time on the political end, though I haven't neglected it.

CYNIC: You mentioned you ran a Coffee House in high school. Had you any other experience?

P.M.: None whatsoever. I ran the Coffee house in high school and ran a paper drive for a four month period. At UVM I was on the Governing Board my freshman year and the Chairman of it my sophmore year. . .

CYNIC: Where are you from originally?

P.M.: Wilton, Connecticut, right outside of New York City.

CYNIC: When will you be graduating?

P.M.: Graduating?

CYNIC: Oh, are you going to graduate?

P.M.: On, I don't plan to graduate for another year or two. I'm on what I like to call the "six-year plan."

CYNIC: Is this an individual design major?

P.M.: Very much so, my major is a Studio Art Major, though I haven't looked at the book of requirements for quite a while so I'm not sure how many credits I need. I do know I need nine credits of history of art because two semesters I just didn't make it through. I'm going to take my time graduating.

CYNIC: What kinds of things were you involved in in high school which prepared you for college? Were you interested in your academic work or were you much more an extra-curricular man?

P.M.: Much more interested in extra-curricular activities. My interest in academics died out, I think in eleventh grade. I was really into math and then in twelfth grade I took Calculus and just bombed it which frustrated me because everyone told me I was going to be a big engineer, you know, big mathematics man. Then I took Calculus again here in my freshman year and I bombed out in that again so I switched over to Art which I am now in.

CYNIC: Were you ever involved in newspaper writing or yearbook publishing?

P.M.: No, I did mainly sports, tennis and basketball. I guess I did a fair amount of partying back then as well.

CYNIC: Do you get outdoors much?

P.M.: Well, before I came to the University I did ski alot, but not anymore.

CYNIC: What other kinds of outdoor activities do you enjoy?

P.M.: I do an extensive amount of walking.

CYNIC: A lot of walking?

P.M.: Yes, and not just to get me where I want to go, but 2-3 hour walks on back roads and streets in Burlington. When you walk you can pick up a lot of neighborhood characteristics that you can't when you're driving through.

CYNIC: Do you usually go out with someone or do you prefer it by yourself?

P.M.: I'm a lone walker. I do a lot of thinking, you know, it kind of clears the head.

CYNIC: On these walks do you often mull over the momentous decisions you will make as president?

P.M.: Yes, there have been times when I have. For instance, this summer I had a really nice walking stick and I was walking out by where the underpass would have been built and I just started beating on the sidewalk with it and saying to myself "I can't let this happen." You know, it's a good way to let out emotion so I don't have to let it out on people.

CYNIC: Do you do any extra-curricular sports?

P.M.: I do play tennis here.

CYNIC: You do. What kind of racket do you use?

P.M.: Bancroft Players Special, 4 5/8 Medium.

CYNIC: Are you right or left handed?

P.M.: Left handed.

CYNIC: Do you find that works out to your advantage?

P.M.: Yes, versus a right hander, right handers don't have a lot of experience playing against left handers.

CYNIC: So there are more right handers on the courts.?

P.M.: Oh sure, we're a distinctive class, left handers.

CYNIC: (laughs) Did you play on the team?

P.M.: Yes, I played number six man, my freshman year. Back then I was a person known to take my time about winning. They called me "duck hunter" because every lob I hit went over the back fence.

CYNIC: Will you be starting practice for this spring pretty soon?

P.M.: This year I won't be playing because a part-time student is ineligible.

Tire Sale!
Fiberglass Belteds

$27 $33 $37

Mobil Premier Belted Whitewall Tires Any Size Listed

■ Charge immediately on your Mobil Credit Card

Mobil

OPEN 24 HOURS

Spillane's Servicenter
A FULL SERVICE MOBIL STATION
811 Williston Road
(863 3994) Next to Gaynes & 1st National (863 3994)

You've been there. Now you can help them.

They've got a long way to go. In a world that isn't easy. But with someone's help, they'll make it. What they need is a friend. Someone to act as confidant and guide. Perhaps, it could be you as a Salesian Priest or Brother.

The Salesians of St. John Bosco were founded in 1859 to serve youth. Unlike other orders whose apostolate has changed with varying conditions, the Salesians always have been — and will be, youth oriented. Today we're helping to prepare youngsters for the world that awaits them tomorrow. Not an easy task but one which we welcome.

And how do we go about it? By following the precepts of our founder, Don Bosco. To crowd out evil with reason, religion and kindness with a method of play, learn and pray. We're trying to build better communities by helping to create better men.

As a Salesian, you are guaranteed the chance to help the young in a wide range of endeavor . . . as guidance counselors, technical and academic teachers, as coaches, psychologists . . . in boys clubs, summer camps . . . as missionaries. And you are given the kind of training you need to achieve your aims.

The Salesian family is a large one (we are the third largest order) but a warm one. A community with an enthusiastic family feeling where not only our talents are shared but our shortcomings, too. If you feel as we do, that service to youth can be an important mission in your life, we welcome your interest.

For more information about Salesian Priests and Brothers, mail this coupon to:
Father Joseph Bisbal, S.D.B. Room 8-

Salesians OF ST. JOHN BOSCO
Box 030, New Rochelle, N.Y. 10802

I am interested in the Priesthood ☐ Brotherhood ☐

Name _____ Age _____
Street Address _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____
Phone _____
Education _____
Your Current Job _____

VALUABLE COUPON

SPECIAL TO STUDENTS
AND FACULTY MEMBERS
(prescriptions excluded)

10% DISCOUNT

ON YOUR PURCHASES AT

CAMPUS PHARMACY
ACROSS FROM
The Medical Center

"Ziggy's" Burlington Shoe repair "Smoke Stack"

BURLINGTON PLACE
"The Mini Mall"
101 Church Street Burlington, Vermont 05401
864-9555

CIGERETTES: 43¢ PACK, $3.89 CARTON
STORE HOURS: Fri. & Sat., April 11th, 12th 8:30AM-10:00PM

Leather goods Jewelry candles clothing Jokes

PRESENTI

Why U.Y.A

"U.Y.A. gave me a chance to put academic training to work – solving problems!"

"I've always liked working with My U.Y.A. year gave me a chance day-care setting, and find out if I w kids a career."

"When I started U.Y.A. I was wo job market. I'm still worried! experience has shown me that I re in the world outside U.V.M."

"I'm now into my first post U.Y. amazing how much more relev theory is having."

